The Prussian policeman not only looks a soldier, he is one—every inch of him. There are reasons, physical and other, which exempt some men from military service, butt he man who has been exempted can never be a policeman. As a matter of fact the great bulk of the Prussian police have served in the army for considerably longer than the compulsory term. A great many members are men who have been non-com. officers in the army, and they possess the virtues and the limitations of their class. The iron military discipline of the German Army has become part of their nature. Amenable only to their superior officers, they recognize no other authority.

The Prussian is attended by policemen and police enactments from the cradle to the grave. In the realms alike of Church and State the arm of the policeman falls heavily on the shoulders of the citizen. It is the policeman who enforces—and that with characteristic severity—the taxes which the law permits the Churches to lay on their nominal members. If a man secedes from the Church he must make an affidavit to that effect and have it countersigned by the police. From time to time he is called upon to satisfy the police as to his formal secession in order to escape the Church levy. When a girl seeks to enter domestic service she must furnish the police with full information regarding herself, and obtain from them a service book, which contains, among other things, a description of her personal appearance, after the manner of police notices of missing criminals in this country. Every time she changes her situation her book must be countersigned by the police.

Nothing, perhaps, throws such a strong light on the position and power of the Prussian policeman as the high place he occupies at public meetings. There he sits, a conspicuous figure on the platform, and if a speaker ventures to make an observation which he regards as objectionable he may in his absolute discretion dissolve the meeting. His word is law.

PENSIONS ROMANCE

Love in a Workhouse Ends in Marriage of the Parties Concerned

Many a romantic union has been brought about by the old age pensions. It was reported at a meeting of the Huntingdon Board of Guardians that a man named Daniel Peacock, who had been in the workhouse since 1897, and would now become entitled to an old age pension, intended to leave in order to marry another inmate, who would also be entitled to a pension. He wrote thanking the board for the kindness he had received, and said he would like a small memento of the happy time he had spent in the workhouse. The chairman said he thought the men and women were kept separate in the workhouse. The master of the workhouse stated that they were kept separate. A hope was expressed that the man would send the board a piece of wedding cake, and it was decided to subscribe to give him a wedding present. Peacock, who is a widower, was formerly a saddler, and while in the workhouse he has assisted the porter in charge of the door. His bride-elect, a widow named Susannah Wright, first entered the workhouse in 1908. The officials are puzzled to know when the courting was done. Peacock had his periodical day's leave and went to give the necessary notice of the marriage. The registrar, who is also clerk to the guardians, promised to marry the couple for nothing.

LONG TRAMP IN VAIN

Man of 98 Who Walked Nearly 3,000 Miles on Vain Errand

The London Telegraph tells the story, which comes from Mobile, Alabama, of a man of ninety-eight who has tramped nearly 5,000 miles on a vain errand. Frank Schrom, the hero of this feat, at the beginning of the year, received a letter from his daughter living in San Francisco asking him to go to them. Schrom had been wealthy, but his business had failed, and he had lost all his possessions. Too proud to ask for assistance, he set out to walk from New Orleans to the Californian city. Arriving there, he found his daughters, who, in the absence of any word from the old man, had come to the conclusion that he was dead, had left the city, and that their whereabouts was uncertain. Schrom, being disappointed and almost heart-broken by his failure, turned his face eastward again and walked back to New Orleans, covering altogether a distance of 2,800 miles. Now he is housed in a home for aged men.

TO PUT DOWN DUELLING

Abbe Lemire has introduced in the Paris Chamber a Bill to make duelling a punishable offence. The penalty varies from imprisonment for six days to five years and fines from $20 to $2,000, according to the gravity of the offence. The severest punishment is for the dueller who kills his man; the lightest for taunting a man for not fighting.

MERCHANT COMBINES

Wonderful Discoveries and Explorations Made by Fearless Mercantile Adventurers of Old

Combinations of merchants are no new thing; in fact, it may be said that to a considerable extent the commercial prosperity of England has been founded upon such combines. The old trading companies exercised a marked influence in laying the foundations of Britain's commercial position.

In addition to the wonderful discoveries made by the fearless adventurers, these great English companies were concerned with some of the most romantic expeditions ever undertaken by man, though the actual objects were prosaic enough—mainly that of finding new customers for English merchandise. The big companies in addition to employing the Cabots employed such men as Martin Frobisher, Cavendish, Hudson, and Chancellor Davis, and penetrated from Europe to Cathay.

Eventually the New World was colonized as a result of the operations of the companies. Those days were indeed the most romantic in the history of commerce. In travelling to unknown parts of the world it was necessary that both merchants and sailors should be intrepid and that their vessels should be of the stoutest.

It was as a result of the workings of the companies that England obtained the sovereignty of the seas and that English-built ships were the finest in existence. Each ship was a powerful man-of-war of its time, as it was necessary at any moment that fighting should be undertaken, not merely against wild natives, but also against the hordes of pirates who infested the seas. Strength alone ruled the far seas, so the ships had to be of the stoutest and provided with guns and ammunition, so as to be ready to fight at any moment.

It was owing to our great merchant vessels that the Spanish Armada was repelled; indeed, out of our fleet there were but thirty-seven vessels of the Royal Navy, while there were a hundred of our merchant ships engaged. All the great companies provided ships, including such as the Levant Company, the Muscovy Company, the Eastland Company, the Virginia Company, etc.

The great companies of merchant adventurers not merely opened out new trade passages, but founded great colonies, and, owing to the splendid quality of their ships, gradually displaced Spain and Holland from pride of place on the seas.

Even now some of the companies exist, though in a modified form. Other new companies sprang up to take the place of the old, the most recent of which, of course, include such concerns as the British South Africa Company.

To this day one of the old companies of merchant-adventurers still lives as a powerful corporation, carrying on much of its work as in the old days. This is the Hudson's Bay Company, formed by Prince Rupert and seventeen noblemen for the purpose of importing into England furs and skins obtained by barter from the Indians of North America. This company, wealthier than ever, still buys skins from the Indians of North America as it did in the old days of the merchant-adventurers, whose glamor remains undimmed.

Easy Deduction.

It was in the hotel dining room.

"That Boston girl at the third table is rather pretty, isn't she?" remarked the great detective.

"Yes," replied his friends. "But how do you know she is from Boston?"

"That's easy," answered the g. d. "She is chewing her ice cream."—Pittsburg Press.

An Amusing Typographical Error.

Professor McCrimmon, of McMaster University, Toronto, went to Orillia recently to address the Canadian Club in that town, and as a result of an amusing experience there, he brought home a good story to add to his already extensive repertoire. On his arrival in the northern town, he found considerable curiosity had been aroused as to the subject of his address, which had been announced as "The Butt of a Nation." What was the butt of a nation? was the question that everyone in the audience was curious to hear answered. Prof. McCrimmon had to confess that he didn't know. He thought he had written "The Birth of a Nation." The mistake was worth the laugh that followed this unexpected denouement.

Rev. Father Morriscy

A Combined Treatment That Really Cures Catarrh.

Canadian weather, with its extreme cold and sudden changes, gives almost every one Catarrh, and makes it hard to cure. Some recommend internal remedies—some external applications.

Father Morriscy used both—tablets to be taken three or four times a day to invigorate the system, purify the blood, and help it throw off the disease, and a soothing, healing, antiseptic salve to be applied inside the nostrils. This combined treatment known as attacking the disease from within and without, soon cures.

"Father Morriscy's No. 26"

Mr. A. C. Thibodeau, General Merchant in Rogersville, N.B., writes on Jan. 22nd last:

"A few words as to the merits of your Catarrh Cure. For the last 10 years I have been troubled with Catarrh of the head and stomach and during that time have tried all kinds of other Remedies with no results, until I tried your Catarrh Cure which I am glad to say has cured me. I highly recommend it to those who are suffering with this disease."

Don't trifle with Catarrh—cure it with Father Morriscy's No. 26.

Hildreth is Coming.

BALTIMORE, May 12.— Sam Hildrteh's great campaigner, King James, winner of the Toronto Cup two years in succession, established a new track record for six furlongs at Pimlico this afternoon by running the distance in 1.12.

Hildreth has the greatest collection of thoroughbreds in his stable that ever raced on this continent, and Torontonians will be given an opportunity of witnessing all of these high-class horses in action at the Woodbine Park this spring, as it has been practically decided to ship to Toronto on Wednesday next.

The club this afternoon refused bookmakers Henry Haines and Gene Austin permission to cut in this afternoon. An investigation of the running of the horse Van Den yesterday developed that these people had laid the horse in their book. The case in question is another evidence that the mutuels should be adopted by the different associations.

About 60 of the poorer class horses will be shipped from here to Montreal to participate in the half-mile meetings in that place.

BOXING.

Greatest Ever.

Billy Delaney, the most famous handler of fighters in this country today, the man who brought both Jeffries and Corbett from oblivion to the top of the pugilistic ladder, picks as the greatest fight he ever saw, the grudge fight between Corbett and Choynski, which took place on a barge in California twenty-two years ago. Delaney's story of the battle is as follows—

"You ask me what the greatest fight I ever saw was, and I'm goin to tell you that barge fight between Corbett and Choynski was the toughest I have ever seen or heard of. These two natives met at a barn in Fairfax, Cal., on May 30, 1889 to battle to a finish with skin-tight gloves. Only a few select were there, and only a few knew of the affair, yet the Sheriff was tipped off in some manner, and after four rounds of fighting the go was stopped, and all hands came back to San Francisco.

"A few days later the thing was fixed up, and they met on a barge on the Straits of Carquines which are between the towns of Martinez and Benecia. It proved to be the toughest battle that ever took place in the West It seems as though every one in the State bet on one or the other of the novices, and novices they were, for it was their maiden fight, and the stakes were satisfaction.

Choynski's friends secured the services of Jack Dempsey, the middleweight champion, to train and second Joe, while the job of handling Jim Corbett fell to me.

"They started fighting like two bull dogs at the call of time, and never once did they give an inch until the battle was over.

"With the murderous little gloves they cut one another into ribbons, but instead of slowing up, the loss of blood seemed only to spur them on and make them more vicious. In the tenth round there was so much blood and both lads were so much cut and bruised that many of the spectators turned away in disgust. In the the fourteenth the referee came over to Jim and asked him if he wasn't willing to have the thing called a draw.

"Not on your life," replied Corbett

"In the eighteenth Joe was bleeding like a stuck pig. His mouth, nose and eyes were pouring forth blood Corbett himself was bleeding from the mouth and nose. Choynski was fading fast, but as both Corbett's hands were broken by this time, he couldn't do much more than bull his way along.

"In the twenty-eighth and last round, with both weak as kittens, Corbett jammed Joe with his left hand flush on the face. The jar stood Joe up stiff; then he fell over on his back dead to the world. He didn't move after hitting the floor. At the count of ten Corbett collapsed completely. I never had up to that time, and never have since, seen no such cleverness endurance, and gameness displayed as I did in that bloody battle."

SOOTHED THE SPIRITS.

A Preliminary to House Building in the Shan States.

House building in the Shan States is not such an easy matter as it looks. Mrs. Leslie Milne, author of "Shans at Home" tells how she arranged for the building of a bamboo house at Namkham, and, though the materials arrived, no progress seemed to be made with the actual construction:

"When I first spoke of house building I had been asked what to me seemed an irrelevant question—namely, the day of the week on which I was born. When I answered that it was late on Saturday night or early on Sunday morning I did not know that my reply was of importance. As time went on and the bamboos lay untouched, looking like long green snakes in the grass, I complained of the delay only to be told that until I could tell them my birthday they were afraid to begin work, as the spirits would be angry if the offerings for the proper day were not made.

"I suggested that the building should begin, I braving the anger of the spirits, but they thought the work too dangerous, as the risk was not only for me, but for the workmen as well. On consulting a wise man a way was found out of the difficulty. He decreed that an extra large offering to content the spirits of both Saturday and Sunday should be made. This was done, and the building commenced next day."

SINGING SANDS.

Peculiar Properties of These Curious Freaks of Nature.

The most notable of those curious freaks of nature, "singing sands," are those of the Hawaiian island of Kauai. When a small quantity of this sand is clapped between the hands it is said to give forth a sound so shrill as actually to resemble a hoot. Put into a bag and violently shaken, the sand emits a noise strangely like the bark of a dog.

Similar sands also occur in the Colorado desert, where also are to be found those curious nonsedentary sands that continually travel hither and thither over the vast plain of clay. Their movements are induced by the winds, and when a strong breeze is blowing the particles of which they are composed give out an audible humming or singing.

Under the microscope these sands show an almost perfectly spherical form, so that they roll upon each other at the slightest impulse, a circumstance that also accounts for the rapidity with which the sands travel over the desert. One theory advanced with respect to the "singing" of these sands is that it is due to an exceedingly thin film of gas that covers the grains. Gathered and removed from the desert, the sands lose their vocal properties.—Exchange.

Are All Persons "In Love" Self-Centered, Petulant and Moody?

Not long ago a certain celebrity, in the course of a speech, exclaimed, "What can be a happier state than to be in love?" No one answered him at the time but in a day or so a number of prominent people began to realize that it was up to them to talk for publication on the subject. The opportunity to say something original was really too good to be wasted. It is very evident from the points of view expressed, that instead of being the ideal state described in verse and prose, love is rather a miserable experience. For instance, a famous authoress says:

"Why is it that we are always rather annoyed to be thrown into the society of people 'in love'? Is is because human nature is churlish and inclined to begrudge lovers their so-called happiness? I do not think so—altogether. We vaguely recognize the irritation, the self-centered petalance of their moods.

"There is the cloud that always threatens to burst and the most rapturous of lovers are continually mindful of this expected downpour. It makes them suspicious and miserable. If the man is late for an appointment, if the girl does not post the promised letter in time—nothing is too small to precipitate the storm. Lovers live in a whirl of misunderstanding and recrimination, and happiness is the last thing they seem to get.

"For every moment of bliss granted to lovers," states another student of human nature, "a hundred tears are possibly shed. Sweethearts, tormented by jealousy, behave as though they would prefer to shut each other up in a cage."

Even a recently engaged women admits that, though she believes herself to be in a state generally of ecstatic bliss, there are moment when anything seems better than the nerve strain of the highly exalted condition she was in.

"Although I am very, very happy," she says, "and I should be very sorry to separate from my sweetheart, yet there are times when I find his continual attentions somewhat irksome. It is difficult to always keep up the strain of appearing entirely absorbed in one man, however much one may care for him, and we often have tiffs owing to the demands we make upon one another's moods."

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up and make them strong and well. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has always helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases.

PRICES OF HOGS

Slightly Higher in Canada Than the States, Tariff Experts Say

As the result of a thorough investigation into the prices of hogs in Canada and the United States by a Board of Tariff Experts, under the direction of the United States Tariff Board at Washington, whose report was embodied in Senate document No. 849, and presented to Congress by President Taft in March last, the following statement was made: "Prices of swine are slightly higher in Canada than in the United tates. In our Eastern border States—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York—they range from $10.00 to $11.50 per head; and in the Central border States the range is about the same. In the Western border States the range of prices is from $10.40 to $11.10 per head. In the great agricultural States of Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, prices of swine vary little from those already quoted. In Eastern Canada the range of swine prices is from $10 to $13 per head, and in Western Canada from $12 to $13. The highest American price is $11.80 per head in Wisconsin, as against the highest Canadian price of $13 a head, which is quoted for Quebec, Manitoba and Saskatchewan."

Not long after the issuing of the above statement the Canadian authority published the following table of hog prices, which prove the same contention as that held by the United States Tariff Board:

CELEBRATED BACHELORS

Excuses Some Famous Men Had for Not Getting Married

Among authors we have Pope, Goldsmith, Lamb, and Macaulay. The feeble health of "the wasp of Twickenham" stood, no doubt, in the way of his marrying. Goldsmith had not the same excuse, but in his case it was quite as well that he passed through life as a bachelor. A single man who habitually spends twice as much as he has is never likely to make a wise and prudent husband, even though he has the rare fortune to fall in with a model of feminine sagacity. Lamb, "that frail, good man," as Wordsworth calls him, was a bachelor, not from choice but from affection. The singular loyalty with which he devoted himself to his sister in circumstances of melancholy interest prevented his marrying a girl whom, it appears, he truly loved. Lord Macaulay, though he had warm domestic affections, was never married. He rested content with the loving sympathy of his sister Hannah, the wife of Sir Charles Trevelyan, whose children were to him as his own.

Handel, Reynolds, Turner, Sir Isaac Newton, and Cavendish, were among the men illustrious in art or science who remained bachelors.

SAVED THE KAISER'S LIFE

It is not generally known that General Sir Archibald Hunter, whose marriage recently aroused so much interest, was the means of saving the German Emperor from an accident which might have been attended with fatal results, when His Majesty was paying a visit to Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny a few years ago. At that time General Hunter was in command of the troops in Scotland, and was present in that capacity on the station platform to welcome the Emperor. Lord Rosebery's carriage was waiting, and the Emperor had just taken his seat in it when one of the horses commenced to plunge violently, and in another instant the pair would have bolted. Like a flash, however, General Hunter reached the animal and dealt it a smashing blow on the nose that quickly quieted it. Another pair of horses were soon secured, and Hunter received the hearty thanks of the Kaiser for the smart way he grappled with he situation.

The Border Mounted Rifles

Lord Minto, late Viceroy of India, who was commanding officer of the old Border Mounted Rifles for some years, was entertained by his former comrades. The corps, composed mainly of landowners and farmers, was disbanded in 192 after an existence of twenty years.

Compensation.

Poetic justice, raw and strong,
That is the kind you draw
When you are guilty of a wrong
That is not against the law.
Suppose your temper you mislay
And rave and throw a fit
About the food, that very day
The hired girl may quit.

You take advantage of a chap
Who isn't over bright,
And coax him gently in a trap
That robs him left and right.
And as you lead him to the deep,
To push him o'er the brim,
He gives his arm a careless sweep
And drags you in with him.

You scold a boy who by mistake
May step upon your corn;
His little heart begins to ache
As he receives your scorn.
When something rough to him you do
At almost nothing riled,
He may, when you are out of view,
Make faces at your child.

Evict the widow from her cot
Because the rent is due;
Doubt not that fate at once will plot
To get it back on you.
It may take years to right the wrong,
But later, by and by,
As swift the seasons roll along,
Your cat or dog may die.

Walking a Wire to Eternity.

A curious feature of the walls of Jerusalem is a stone block as big around as a flour barrel which extends out from that part above which stood Solomon's temple to a distance of perhaps 15 feet. This block or pillar hangs right over the rocky Valley of Jehosophat, with the Mount of Olives rising up its opposite side. According to the belief of the Mohammedans it will be upon this pillar that Mohammet will sit at the day of judgment and Christ will have his seat on the opposite side of the valley. There will be a fine wire stretched from the pillar across to the mountain and upon this wire all mankind must walk on its way to eternity. As the people of the various religions go those who believe in Mohammedanism will be upheld by the angels and will reach safely the opposite side, whence they will ascend to heaven. The others will drop down into the valley and perish.

THE KING'S DAUGHTER.

The Future Princess Royal was 14 on April 25.

Sir Richard Holmes, librarian at Windsor Castle from 1870 to 1906, has contributed to "Everybody's Weekly" an article on the Princess Mary, the only daughter of the King and Queen Sir Richard is an old man, and remembers what the Duchess of Teck looked like in her girlhood, and he says that Princess Mary is very like her grandmother. She has the same features the same physical qualities, and the same cast of mind.

Frank and open in countenance, high-spirited, and affectionate in disposition Princess Mary will, when she leaves the school room and comes out in the social world, take all hearts by storm. She is so natural, so jolly, and so brimming over with energy and the joy of life.

The Princess was fourteen years old on the twenty-fifth of April. She has been brought up very quietly and naturally at York Cottage, with periods of sojourn at Marlborough House and Buckingham Palace, and longer and perhaps more enjoyable visits to Scotland, for the royal children have always delighted in being at Abergeldie. Her early life has been fortunately not very eventful, but it has been exceedingly bright and happy, and singularly free from illness. The Princess is endowed with a robust constitution, and the manner of her upbringing has been such as to ensure a continuance of all the blessings which result to the possessor of robust physical health. Her Royal Highness is very fond of outdoor life, and was taught to ride and drive at a very early age. She made her debut in the hunting field three years ago.

Of course immense care has been taken with the cultivation of her mind Her Royal Highness has been brought up to speak in French and German, as well as in her native tongue. This is a practice generally followed with the children, not only of the British Royal Family, but with the children of all reigning European sovereigns. Like her brother, she has always been specially well instructed in the glorious history of the land and Empire over which her father rules. "But I doubt," says Sir Richard Holmes, "if the Princess can be characterized truthfully as a studious little lady, or as one who is specially devoted to books."

Photography is one of the Princess' accomplishments, in which art she has found an expert instructor in her aunt Princess Victoria.

The Princess is being carefully trained by Queen Mary in the household arts. She has been taught cooking, and has also been instructed to do various kinds of needle work. She is an associate of the London Needlework Guild, and sends it some of her work every year.

Sir Richard mentions that Her Royal Highness opened an account in the Post-Office Savings Bank.

Her Royal Highness is, of course, being carefully trained for the important social duties which in a few years she will have to perform. She has acted already as hostess on several occasions at children's parties at Buckingham Palace, and a most charming hostess she makes. At these gatherings she has had, of course, the aid of her mother in welcoming her little guests, but it is understood the Princess was the hostess for the occasion. The Princess is far from being a spoilt child, and has had to conform to a strict discipline exercised over her by her governesses. The results of her manner of bringing up must indeed, concludes the writer, be gratifying to their Majesties, the unceasing interest of whose lives is the welfare and happiness of their children.

A Pageant of Empire.

Coronation year, when thousands of visitors from all parts of the Empire will be in London, is to be made the occasion for some of those public or semi-public events at which a large number of people who do not personally know one another combine to have a good time by the aid of some moderate money payment. Foremost amongst these social gatherings will be the Pageant of the Empire at the Crystal Palace. Over five thousand people are going to have the fun of taking an active part in the pageant and historical female characters will be assumed by women of all ranks from duchesses downwards. Some of them are having their costumes made at their own expense, and quite regardless of the cost provided that they secure accuracy and beauty, so that it will be a delightful show of the finest fashions of past times. Mr Frank Lascelles, who conducted the Champlain Tercentenary pageants at Quebec with such splendid success, is the director of the Crystal Palace Pageant, and can be relied upon to make it a wonderfully interesting and artistic show. Canada Australia, South Africa, all the colonies are putting up handsome and extensive buildings in which to show for th their special part in the living pageant of the Empire of to-day. Then there is to be a great fancy dress ball to further the scheme of a national Shakespearean theatre. It is to be held in the Albert Hall, under the patronage of the King and Queen. A number of distinguished hostesses are organizing quadrilles to be danced by persons in the costumes of particular plays, for instance—the Duchess of Wellington is arranging "A Midsummer Night's Dream" quadrille; Lady Ailington, "Antony and Clopatra," and Lady Wemyss, "Henry VII."

The Choice of Colors.

It is predicted that this season in Coronation year is to be one of color in dress. If the fashion is taken up it will mean all sorts of possibilities for the woman of artistic taste in color, and all sorts of pitfalls for her whose color sense is weak.

There is a group of old maxims on colors in dress which still hold good though the woman with a definite test in color can sometimes afford to disregard them. They recommend that in the evening one should dress to suit one's complexion; in out-door garments to match one's hair, while the frock for indoor wear should be chosen with regard to the effect on the eyes. One has only to try a few experiments to be assured of the excellence of this advice. For a street toilette the general effect is the point to be considered, and when the custume tones with the hair this one of the of well considered distinction. When in evening dress, at a dance or opera one is usually observed from some distnace, and the gown should be one that brings out the fairness or modifies any defects in the complexion. The house frock, being worn for more intimate occasions, can most effectively bring out the color in the wearer's eyes.

PRICES IN THE STATES

Consumable Commodities That Have Dropped in Price Since April, 1910

There has been a decided recession in the various markets for consumable commodities in the United States since a year ago, when the great body of consumers in different parts of the republic protested against the high cost of living in the form of anti-meat-eating leagues and by many petitions to the Government at Washington. The Pioneer Press, of St Paul, Minnesota, recently published the following table which shows prices of various commodities in April, 1910, and April, 1911:

	1910. April,	1911. April,
Navy beans, per bush	$2.55	$2.25
Cornmeal, per bush..	2.10	1.50
Lard, per lb.	.18	.12½-.13
Cheese	.17½	.13
Salmon, per doz. 2-lb. cans	1.65	2.00
Rolled oats, per 100 lbs.	2.50	1.90
Ham (whole)	.16½	.12½
Bacon	.18½	.14
Flour (best) per bbl.	6.00	5.00
Eggs	.23	.15-.16
Butter (best grades)	.33-.35	.28
Chickens	.24	.18
Sirloin steak	.22	.20
Porterhouse	.26	.24

The Pioneer Press concludes by saying: "Butcher, grocer and consumer express gratification at the showing that the month of April makes in comparison to the same month in 1910. The dealers, especially, express themselves as well pleased with the 'drop,' because more goods will be sold and business will be better than for some time."

A SALMON'S LEAP

Jumped Into Boat 15 Inches Above the Waterline

A curious thing happened at Dunfallandy, Pitlochry, during the night recently. The Tummel was in high flood, and Mr. Stewart Fergusson's oversman went down early in the morning to see to the safety of one of the boats, riding in the river at the end of a long rope, and about 15 feet from the bank. There had been a lot of rain during the night, and the boat had about nine to ten inches of water in her, in the middle of which floated a fine, almost clean, calmon of about 20 lbs. It was still alive, though much exhausted, as the water had become quite deoxygenized. It had leaped into the boat during the night. The sides of the boat are quite 15 inches above the water line. The salmon soon revived and swam away, after being put into some clean water.

BROKE WIFE'S ARM TO CRIPPLE HER

A Russian Judge Punished a Tartar For Cruelty to His Wife Dionora

A remarkable light has been thrown upon Tartar marriage customs by a case which has been disposed of by the St. Petersburg courts. Abul Schabal had lived in St. Petersburg five years when his father called him home for the purpose of marrying him to a neighbor's daughter. This neighbor, a Tartar, named Mullah, had two daughters—Mariaka, who was very pretty, and Dionoro, who was not noted for her good looks. Abul Schabal bargained with Mullah. The latter wanted three hundred roubles for Mariaka and one hundred for Dionoro. Finally a bargain was struck. Abul Schabal would be permitted to marry Mariaka for one hundred and fifty roubles. Now a Tartar never sees his bride until after the wedding. Abdul had seen the Mullah girls when they were children, and knew that one was pretty and the other plain. After the wedding he discovered that he had been tricked. He had been married to the plain Dionoro instead of to the pretty Mariaka. He ordered his bride to go back to her father, but she refused to go. It was only when he used the knout as an argument that she consented. But her father would not receive her back, and she returned. In order to secure a separation the Tartar beat his wife until her body was black and blue. Still Mullah would not take his daughter back. As a last resort, the Tartar resolved to cripple his wife. It is a belief among the Tartars that when a wife becomes a cripple her husband can receive another woman in the house. Abdul Schabal therefore broke his wife's arm. But he found that this custom of crippling wives was not recognized by Russian judges. His wife took an action against him for having made her a cripple, claiming 150 roubles damage. Abdul Schabal was sentenced to three months' imprisonment and ordered to pay the damages claimed.

ROMANTIC OLD LADY

Mrs. Betts, Even at the Age of Ninety, Would Not Yield to Misfortune

A romantic personality is removed from North-East London by the death, at the age of ninety-five, of Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald Betts, of Lauriston Road, who was at the same time a retailer of cat's meat and claimant to the title and estates of the Knight of Glin, of Glin Castle, County Limerick. Mrs. Betts, who was the daughter of Thomas Fitzgerald, M.D., of Glin Castle and Trinity College, Dublin, contracted a marriage which her relations did not approve, and her little savings were lost in the Liberator crash. The spirit of the warlike Geraldines, one of whose numerous Irish titles she claimed, possessed Mrs. Betts, for she declined to bend her head before misfortune. She went into business as a purveyor of cat's meat and dog's meat, and for years her aristocratic voice might be heard calling her wares in the streets of North-East London. Even when health was failing her, Mrs. Fitzgerald Betts did not yield. She refused to seek an old-age pension, pursued her calling in a bath-chair pushed by an old family retainer, and, withal, maintained the family dignity despite all attempts by either customers or fellow-traders at familiarity. It is understood that the "Lady of Glin" has disposed in a will of the property she did not possess, one of the clauses providing a soup kitchen for the poor of South Hackney. Mrs. Betts was associated in her early days with Florence Nightingale, and in the East End the part she played during the smallpox epidemic of 1864 is still remembered.

"FAKING UP" OLD BIRDS

Dealers Use Potash and Other Chemicals for the Purpose

According to a Paris contemporary, one of the inspectors under the French Department of Agriculture has discovered a new system of fraud perpetrated in the markets by some of the wholesale dealers. The plan is to sell old and barely eatable partridges for young birds. The young birds carry at the tip of the wing some white spots, which disappear as the birds increase in age. To sell the veteran birds as young the dealers have impressed the services of the chemist—and what is it that the chemist is unable to do?—so with the judicious application of potash, or some other chemical, the old birds are given the appearance of youth. For the chemist's embellishment the consumer has to pay about fifteen pence more than he would for the birds in a state of nature unadorned.

A ROSEBERY ROMANCE

To those who love romance, the romantic and unusual episode in the life of one of Lord Rosebery's ancestors will appeal. It occurred in the eighteenth century, when the young Lord Dalmeny was a young man. He fell in love with a very pretty girl, and eventually a secret marriage was contracted. The pair spent their honeymoon on the Continent, and the bride becoming seriously ill, confessed that she was the wife of the Rector of Thorpe, from whom she had run away. Dying shortly afterwards, her husband had her body embalmed with a view to bringing it to England for burial. However, the Customs House officials opened the case in which the grim burden was packed, and it was only to avoid a far more serious tragedy that the truth was made known. The body was eventually buried at Thorpe in the presence of both "husbands."

A STRANGE COLONY

The Colonia Cosme, on the Paraguay above Asuncion, is one of the most curious in the world. The members of the colony make or grow everything they want, and import nothing. The workmen have seven hours' work a day, and earn, not money, but time. Their wages are hours and half-hours. These they sometimes save up till they have a week in hand, and then go off on an excursion. If a man wants a chair or table, he pays for it in hours of work, which are deducted from the balance to his credit.

Three men went off up the river in a canoe for a three weeks' holiday. They sold their canoe at Asuncion for a pound, and came home overland in ten days, lodged in the best houses in the villages on the way, and yet had some money in hand at the end.

CENSUS OF SWISS ANIMALS

Everything Was Counted Except the Cats and Dogs

While England and Germany have been taking a census of all their people, Switzerland has been taking a census of all its animals. The numbering of the beasts which took place recently included even the bees, only the number of hives, of course, being taken in this case. All animals, with the exception of cats and dogs, have had to be included in the census, the exception in favor of dogs being explained by the fact that they are generally used to pull light carts, and are thus registered already. Owners of horned cattle were obliged to state the number of their cows, calves, oxen, and bulls, and how many they possessed of each particular breed.

FURTHER INVESTIGATION OF TAX LOT SALES

A Lot of Witnesses Who Had "Nothing to do With the Case"—Only Knew What They Read in the Papers—Mr. Corby Explained His Connection With the Matter—Had no Interest in it Except the City's Interest—Had no Political Object in View—Sir Mackenize Bowell's Testimony—His Opinion Was the Trustees Had no Right to Dabble in Lots

The tax lot sale investigation was continued on Saturday afternoon before Judge Deroche. Mr. Mikel, K. C., appeared on behalf of the city, Mr. O'Flynn for Mr. Price, Mr. W. S. Morden, K.C., for Mr. Marsh, Mr. Carnew for The Intelligencer Publishing Company and Mr. E. J. Butler for Mr. Burrell. During the session a number of witnesses were examined.

KNEW NOTHING OF CASE.

Ald. Marshall was examined by Mr. Mikel. He testified that he knew nothing more about the sale of lots during the year 1911 than what he saw in the newspapers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Carnew—Witness was at a meeting of the Council when the matter of the lot sales was brought up, but he could not tell the date. He was not a member of the Tax Sale Committee. The first time he heard the matter discussed was at a public meeting he attended.. He never interviewed Mr. Burrell or any person else about the sale of lots.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

Mr. Mikel examined Ald. Parks.—Witness was a member of the Council last year and this. He knew nothing about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price, except what he saw in the newspapers. He heard of one party who bought a lot for $150 when he understood that lots could be secured for $1 if a house was erected upon it.

To Mr. Carnew—The party he referred to was Mr. S. Modeland. Witness was present at a public meeting and heard the tax sale of lots discussed. Heard Mr. Price make an explanation to the Council in reference to the sale of lots. Voted for an investigation as a member of the Council.

Mr. Carnew asked the witness to give a reason for the basis of his vote being given for an investigation.

Messrs. Morden and O'Flynn objected to the question.

Judge Deroche—A man should be allowed to express his opinion, but not everything he may possibly have heard.

Witness said there was so much said about the matter in the Council, and Messrs. Price and Marsh had asked to have the matter settled, and he voted for an investigation.

STILL ANOTHER.

Ald. Canning was examined by Mr. Mikel—Personally he knew nothing about the sale of lots. All he knew was what he had heard on the streets and read in the newspaper.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness was present at the Council meeting when Messrs. Marsh and Price were heard in reference to the matter. Both gentlemen said they wanted the matter settled.

Examined by Mr. O'Flynnn—Heard a letter read in the Council from Mr. Price asking for the matter to be investigated.

AND ONE MORE.

Ex-Ald. Wallace examined by Mr. Mikel—Witness was a member of the Council last year. He knew nothing about the matter of the sale of lots by Messrs. Marsh and Price to their relatives.

To Mr. Carnew—He knew the city had lots for sale. Thought the men must have had a cast iron nerve to buy lots in the vicinity of where some lots were bought.

To Mr. O'Flynn—He did not think it was a good investment to buy lots. The only lot he bought was on Victoria Avenue some time ago.

ALD. ADAMS ALSO.

Ald. Adams, examined by Mr. Mikel—Witness was a member of the Council last year and this. Knew nothing about the sale of lots in question. He sent some people to Mr Price to see about lots. His opinion was that the people who bought from Mr Price paid too much for them. He had sold lots on Pine Street since these lots were sold at a lower price. He was simply comparing the price of the lots sold by Mr. Price and what he was able to secure for lots.

To Mr. Carnew—He had been in the real estate business for 15 years There was an active sale of land in the vicinity of the G. T. R. station. A lot sold for $25 he did not think it was too much. Lots in that vicinity were, in his opinion, worth about $150. Under conditions if they were sold for $25 they would, in his opinion, be sold too cheap.

To Mr. O'Flynn—The lots he referred to as worth $150 were on Pine Street and McDonald Street. He was aware that efforts were made to sell city lots. He believed there was a by-law under which lots could be sold for the taxes against them.

To Mr. Morden—He sent Mr. N. Patterson to Mr. Price to see about lots, also a Mrs. Willoughby. Some parties were willing to pay a good price for lots. These were parties who came here from York and other places who desired to secure lots.

G. I. THOMAS.

Mr. G. I. Thomas, examined by Mr. Mikel—Said he was a member of the Council last year. He knew nothing of the sales of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price except what he saw in the papers. He had no conversation with Messrs. Price and Marsh in reference to the sale of lots

To Mr. Carnew. No person ever asked him about procuring lots, and he never sent any person to Mr. Price or Mr. Marsh to buy lots.

Ald. Sills, examined by Mr. Mikel—He is a member of the City Council. Had no personal knowledge about the sale of lots and had not discussed the matter with either Mr. Price or Mr. Marsh.

To Mr. O'Flynn—He knew there was a Tax Committee and was aware of the fact that the city was desirous of selling lots.

D. J. FAIRFIELD.

Mr. D. J. Fairfield, examined by Mr. Mikel—Said all he knew about the sale of lots was what he had read in the newspapers.

To Mr. Carnew—He did not know any of the parties who purchased lots.

To Mr. O'Flynn—Witness was an auctioneer and also a valuator of land. He had not sold a lot in the city for years.

ALD. ST. CHARLES.

Ald. St. Charles, examined by Mr. Mikel—Witness is a member of the Council this year. He knew nothing of the sales and had never spoken to Messrs. Marsh and Price about the matter.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness was present at the City Council when Messrs. Price and Marsh were there, but had had no conversation with them about the matter of sale of lots.

MR. H. CORBY.

Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.P., was examined by Mr. Mikel—Personally he knew very little about the sale of these lots. Last fall the Property Owners' Association was formed and he was Vice-President. Hearing rumors about the sale of lots, he instructed Mr. Carnew to go to the Registry Office to make a search, and he did so. He thought there was grounds for an investigation and the Association asked the Council to have such. Through a search it was ascertained that lots had been sold to Mr. Marsh's mother-in-law and to Mr. Price's son-in-law. Had conversation with Mr. Phillips about the sale of certain lots and he had an unsolicited letter from Mr. H. Burrell. Two letters were written by Mr. Burrell, but they were virtually the same. All the interest witness had in this matter was the city's interest at heart.

To Mr. Butler—The letter he received from Mr. Burrell was after Mr. Carnew had made a search at the Registry Office.

To Mr. Carnew—Could not tell the date when instructions were given for a search in the Registry Office. Witness saw a letter written by Mr. A. Robinson. The search was made after that letter was written. As an officer of the Association he was interested in having a search made.

To Mr. Mikel—Had no conversation with Mr. Ford; did not know the gentleman.

To Mr. Morden—The Property Owners' Association was first organized in reference to the paving of Front Street ,and this matter of the sale of lots came up afterwards. The Association was still in existence. The letter written by Mr. Burrell explains itself. The Property Owners' Association had no other interest in the matter except to see the city's interest was protected.

To Mr. O'Flynn—He knew there was an effort made to sell lots in the city. Witness never made a remark, to his recollection, that Mr. Marsh was becoming too popular. He never remembered saying that something should be done with Mr. Marsh. After he came home from a trip he became interested in the matter of the lots. He handed Mr. Burrell's letter to Sir M. Bowell, but did not authorize its publication. Witness asked Mr. Burrell about the publication of the first letter, but he did not want it published. Mr. Burrell wrote a second letter, which was published. This letter was changed by Mr. Burrell a little from the first letter. Witness wanted fair play in this matter and nothing else. The only conversation he had with Mr. Burrell was over the telephone, and Sir M. Bowell was present at the time. If he had known that any statement in the letter was incorrect he would certainly not have had the same published. He handed the letter to Sir M. Bowell and he could not say that he asked that the letter be published. He had discussed this matter with Sir M. Bowell and others. There was no politics in this matter as far as he was concerned.

To Mr. Carnew—He heard Mr. Solmes and others make a statement about lots at a meeting of the Property Owners' Association.

To Mr. Butler—Mr. Phillips was also at the Property Owners' Association and spoke about lots being sold.

ALD. LOTT.

Ald. Lott, examined by Mr. Mikel—He was a member of the Council and all he knew about the sale of lots to relative of Messrs. Marsh and Price was what he saw in the papers.

SIR M. BOWELL.

Sir M. Bowell was examined by Mr. Mikel—All he knew about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price was what was obtained at the Registry Office. From information obtained at the Registry Office, and from Mr. Burrell's letter which was published, articles in reference to the matter appeared in The Intelligencer. He had a brief conversation with Mr. Price in reference to the matter and Mr. Phillips' name was mentioned. Never had a conversation with Messrs. Marsh, Burrell or Ford in reference to the matter.

To Mr. O'Flynn—Sir M. Bowell said he wrote the most of the articles concerning the sale of the tax lots in The Intelligencer. He had conversed with Messrs. Phillips, Solmes, Corby and Johnson about the sale of lots. He was aware the city had lots for sale and the city was no doubt losing taxes by not having them assessed. He bought two lots and had erected houses on them. He was under the impression that there was something not altogether right in the procedure of the sale of certain lots. He held that, as trustees of the city, Mr. Marsh and Mr. Price should not dabble in property belonging to the city. His opinion was that, as such trustees, they had no right to do so. He did not prepare any article for The Globe.

Mr. O'Flynn—Did not Mr. Price ask you to examine the books as to dates of sales.

Sir M. Bowell—Do not remember what he said, but did I not go.

To Mr. Carnew—My son made me a member of the Property Owners' Association by paying the membership fee. The only meeting he attended was a public meeting. He had a conversation with Mr. Corby about Mr. Burrell's first letter. The letter was changed and he (witness) understood from Mr. Corby that it could be published. The question of politics never entered his head until that gentleman (pointing to Mr. Marsh) introduced it.

ALD. CLARKE.

Alderman Clarke was examined by Mr. Mikel—He was a member of the City Council, but knew nothing personally about the sale of these lots. What he knew was published in the paper. He had a conversation with Mr. Price and the latter showed witness a letter from Mr. Burrell about the lots. The Treasurer showed witness a book containing the sale of lots. A letter written on Sept. 2nd witness was shown about some records of sales

Ex-Ald. Carlaw was examined by Mr. Mikel—He was a member of the Council last year, but personally he knew nothing about the sale of lots. All he knew about the matter was what he had read.

To Mr. Carnew—Never had a conversation with Mr. Price about the sale of lots.

Mr. W. K. Kerr, examined by Mr. Mikel, said he was an engineer of the G. T. R. He bought a lot on Bleecker Avenue on the west side He paid $30 for it. He bought the lot from Mr. Price. The lot was purchased in September. He asked Mr. Price about lots that could be secured, as he was told for $1, but Mr. Price said there were no such lots. Never had a conversation with Mr. Marsh about lots.

To Mr. Carnew—Mr. Price never mentioned to witness the name of any other person that lots could be procured from. He procured the lot about a month before he got the deed. Mr. S. Cooper was with witness when he bought the lot and Mr. Cooper bought a lot. The latter also asked about the $1 lots. No person that he was aware of procured a lot for $1. Mr. Price said there were no such lots.

To Mr. O'Flynn—Mr. Price was anxious to sell witness a lot. He had not yet built upon the lot he purchased.

Mr. F. D. Diamond was examined by Mr. Mikel—Witness testified he was tax collector of the city and was in the same office with Mr. Price. Never heard a conversation about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price. The first he knew about it was from reading the papers. Witness presented a detailed state-

CORNERED BY A BALL AND GORED

Stockyards Hand Caught in a Corner of Pen and Badly Injured

DETROIT, May 15.—Cornered by a ferocious bull at the Detroit stockyards Tauley Lacheit, of the Michigan Central stockyards, was so soriously injured that he was taken to St. Mary's hospital in a critical condition

There it was discovered that his spine was broken, one leg fractured his shoulder dislocated, and whole body badly bruised. There are indications of severe internal injurise which make his recovery very doubtful.

Lacheit and a boy named Geo, Dimmic, of Wyandotte, were in the pen with the bull, which was owned by the Sullivan Packing Co., of Detroit when the animal suddenly dashed upon them. Dimmick ran for the fence and vaulted over it in time to save himself. Lacheit was trapped in a corner and savagely attacked by the infuriated animal, which weighed 1800 pounds.

When rescuers arrived they found Lacheit on the ground with the bull goring and trampling upon him. The animal was driven away and its victim carried from the pen.

Body Found In Water.

New York, May 15.—The body of a policeman in full uniform was found floating in the East River Saturday. It is supposed to be that of Patrolman James J. Judge, who disappeared on Dec. 3, the day he had been assigned to report for strike duty.

The body found was so badly decomposed that it was impossible to tell without an autopsy if it had suffered violence before death or not.

HAS STOOD THE TEST

Recently the New York Herald printed the following significant statement regarding advertising in general and newspaper advertising in particular:

"Based on a long study of the advertising situation by Fred W. Haines, Vice-President and General Manager of the Regal Motor Car Company, the Detroit concern has decided to confine its advertising in future to daily newspapers. Mr. Haines is firmly convinced that the newspaper which reaches the home is the most forceful medium, because it bring the prospective user and the agent of a car together.

"'Drive home the telling talk through the newspapers,' says Mr. Haines, 'and immediately the prospective buyer seeks out the local agent, looks over the car, has a demonstration and buys, seven out of ten. The most tremendous business enterprises in the country are the great department stores. Their sales are made entirely through the newspapers. What is good for one great business must be good for another.'"

Newspaper advertising has stood the test as no other form of advertising has. Experts of all sorts, anxious only for results and after the most impartial investigation, have declared that by far the largest and most permanent return for money expended came from newspaper advertising. The modern, up-to-date respectable newspaper takes the utmost pains to print the truth and only the truth. Newspaper readers have come to realize and appreciate this, and advertising statements in a newspaper are not only better read, but carry a force and conviction wanting in other forms of advertising.

WHAT THE AMERICAN FARMER WANTS

President Taft has been telling the American farmers how the proposed reciprocity agreement will benefit them. Not only is it certain that free wheat will not cost the American farmers a cent, but it will directly benefit them, says the Monetary Times. The American mills want more hard wheat in order to regain the lost export trade of their millers. They desire Canadian wheat to become part of a North American crop to be shipped to Liverpool at the will of the American grain operator. This will mean better prices in Liverpool and better prices in Minneapolis and Chicago. In the meantime the Canadian farmer will have his prices graded by the American operator.

"The average Western Canada farmer," says an American paper, "does not raise enough potatoes for his own consumption, to say nothing of supplying the markets. The same is true of other vegetables, hay and fruits. Even now Western Canada imports immense quantities of these products, notwithstanding the tariff. The reciprocity agreement puts them on the free list, and the demand for United States products will greatly increase." We are also told that while Ontario is now supplying considerable dairy products to Western Canada, under the proposed agreement they can be more advantageously obtained from Minnesota, Dakota and other neighboring States. The same is true of poultry and eggs.

This is how the Moline Daily Dispatch, of Illinois, blasts the Canadian farmer's hopes for remunerative markets in the United States: "At present our inports of agricultural products from Canada are so comparatively small as to be lost in the immense volume of domestic products. The case will not be greatly altered if the proposed agreement be enacted into law. Now if, as the impossible result of the reciprocity treaty, Canada were to cease to export to all other countries and turn that trade to the United States, our increased consumption of Canada exports, of which agricultural products would be only a part, would only amount to $2 per capita of our population."

The American farmer desires to grip Canada's home markets, which are not even properly supplied by the Canadian farmer, and in addition to obtain a strong foothold now for the sake of the future, when our home markets will be extremely valuable.

HOLLOWAY STREET PARSONAGE BURGLARY

James Emerson on Trial Before Police Magistrate Masson

James Emerson was this morning brought up before Magistrate Masson and the charge preferred against him was that of house-breaking and theft. Through his counsel, Mr. Carnew, the accused pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by His Worship. Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, represented the Crown.

Rev. B. Greatrix, being called, detailed the breaking into the parsonage in connection with Holloway St. Church, whic his situated on Hillside Street and is inhabited by him. On the evening of April 24th, during the absence of the members of the household the parsonage was burglarized. An entrance was effected by breaking a pane of glass in the cellar window and then raising the window. The cash box produced was taken. It contained in money a $5 bill, two or three $1 bills, two shinplasters and some silver. There were also in the box a mortgage, some notes and other valuable papers. He had not seen the papers since, the cash box being empty of its contents when found. A small pocket book was also taken out, and a handbag which hung on the knob of the door of his study, where the cash box was taken. He knew the accused, and Mrs. Emerson once did some work about the parsonage. Plumbers and a carpenter had been working about the parsonage some five or six weeks ago.

The contention of the accused is that while working about Judge Fraleck's premises some days ago he found the cash box in question and took it home. It contained then, it is alleged, some papers which since were destroyed. He denies emphatically being in any way connected with the burglary.

The case was continued at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

THE WALLS WERE STARTED TODAY

Work Fairly Begun on the Y. M. C. A. Building—Some Interesting Details

Excavators, blasters, masons, and carpenters are in possession of the Y.M.C.A. lot on Campbell Street. It looks like a regular beehive. Charlie Foster is sweating to keep ahead of the other trades. Messrs. Walsh & Soule, the blasting contractors, are going down six feet in the rock to provide a space sixteen feet by twenty feet for the big boilers. They have also laid a nine-inch tile drain from the street back to where the swimming pool will be located. The Messrs. Woodley Bros. are to-day laying the rear foundation wall.

The basement of the building will provide on the west side three bowling alleys. Next the sidewalk will be located a large game room for the seniors, the Association vault, the public lavatories and the fuel room, adjoining which on the east side, will be located the boiler room. In the rear part of the basemtnt, which will be higher, will be located the dressing rooms as well as the beautiful swimming pool.

MADAME DIME WAS KNOCKED OUT OF TIME

Had to Surrender the Clock That She Had Taken For Rent

Mrs. Ada Dime was to-day before the Magistrate, accused with appropriating to her own use a clock the property of Oscar Spafford. It appears that the latter party occupied a house belonging to Mrs. Dime and she elleged that Spafford was moving out without paying up the rent, and she took the clock. The case was settled without evidence being taken, and Mrs. Dime will have to give up the clock and collect the rent, if any is due, by another process of law.

ESCAPED DEATH BUT BROKE HER LEG

Indian Woman Jumped from a Train—Her Narrow Escape from Death

A fatal accident was this morning narrowly averted at the G. T. R. station. Mrs. A. Mongo, who is a member of the Mowhawk band, was at the station, inteding to take the east bound train for Shannonville. She boarded the west bound train, and as it was pulling out she discovered her mistake and jumped. Those who saw the affair were certain the woman went under the train, but she fell down beside the platform. The fall was sufficient to break her right leg near the ankle. The unfortunate woman was taken to the hospital, where her injuries were attended to by Dr. Mather.

CURRENT COMMENT

If there is any law against auto scorching in this city it ought to be enforced.

The "patient dint and powder shock" necessitated by the making of sewer connections, have put Front Street into such a condition that it would be absurd to put down permanent pavement before next year.

There is a city by-law which forbids automobiles being driven around Victoria Park, but it is being violated every day. Last evening one with four passengers, all residents of the city, went around the park. Why is not the by-law enforced?

In a little more than six years, January, 1905, to April, 1911, Great Britain has loaned Canada at least $890,805,626. These figures are the best possible reply to the complaint sometimes heard that Great Britain is not taking sufficient financial interest in Canada. Its entire railroad system, for instance, has been financed practically from first to last by the British investor.

The centenary of Tecumseh, the Indian warrior, who gave his life for the British cause in Canada, is very near, and the appropriate suggestion has been made that this event should be marked with the erection of a suitable monument. As Capt. Joseph Brant and others of the Indian allies of the British have been honored in like manner, the suggestion is one will meet with general approval.

It is expected that in Manitoba, Sackatchewan and Alberta, 9,000,000 acres will this year be sown in wheat That will probably produce about 175,000,000 bushels. But even if we exported every bushel of that to the United Kingdom we should be many millions sort of supplying the demand But every year Canada is producing more wheat, and Britain is increasing her demand.

The Cleveland health department is trying to enlist the children in the warfare against the house fly. If all the school children could be induced to take part in the crusade, our little winged friend would soon disappear. The children used to be taught that it was cruel to harm even a fly, but, when they learn that the fly is the source of typhoid and many other diseases, it will not be difficult to enlist their sympathies for the purpose of extermination.

A comparison has been made of the number of divorces in Great Britain and in the United States. During the last 15 years over 200,000 married persons in England and Wales have been separated by legal process, either in courts of summary jurisdiction or in the high court, and it is setimated that in addition at least 50,000 persons have during the same period esparated by private agreement, making a grand total of 250,000 persons who have been legally separated—i. e., divorced without the power of remarriage. In the same period there were 568 absolute divorces granted in Great Britain, while in the United States, in the same period, there were no less than 945,625 absolute divorces. These statistics show the relative degree in which the sanctity of marriage is held in the respective countries.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

The afternoon boat from Dover carried Mr. Ellis to Calais. The Channel was not kind and, being a bad sailor, his state on arriving alongside the French pier was anything but a happy one. He walked slowly to the door of the buffet, where a crowd of more fortunately-constituted travellers was snatching a hasty luncheon, but shook his head sadly and turned away to the Paris express. Selecting a first-class carriage, he took his seat in it and made himself as comfortable as his terribly upset interior would permit.

At Amiens he was somewhat recovered, and was able to enjoy a cup of tea and by the time the train drew up in the Gare du Nord he was practically himself again; and hailing a porter, he had his bag conveyed to a cab and gave instructions to the cocher to drive to the Rue Scribe.

"Yes, M'sieur Guelfo is still within" was the reply to his inquiry, and the next minute he found himself in the presence of the great financier, his more or less master, within his luxuriously furnished sanctum.

"Well, Ellis, this is all right. I like despatch, as you know; nothing like it in business."

"No, you're right, and I thought from the wording of your wire you had got hold of something good, so I put everything else aside and started at once. And now, what is it?"

"Ah, my boy, what is it, do you think?" and the great man smiled contentedly as he leant back in his comfortable padded office-chair and rubbed his hands.

"Heaven only knows!" exclaimed Ellis. "You seme to come across the bonanzas somehow or other. It appears to me things drop at your feet for you to pick up while other poor devils have to go groping about for a living. What is it now? Tell me. Remember, I have been kept on thorns ever since nine o'clock this morning and have suffered such a shaking-up in that accursed steamer that I'm nothing more than an empty skin bag at present."

"A little choppy, eh?" asked Guelfo putting off answering Ellis for the enjoyment of teasing him.

"Choppy! But there, for goodness' sake let me try to forget it if I can. It was too horrible. You ought to have something good to make up for it."

"And perhaps I have," said Guelfo rising quietly and going to the door, which he opened suddenly.

"Only as a matter of precaution," he said, crossing the room to the big iron safe from which he took a small bundle of papers, "though I think it is hardly needed now. I have weeded and filtered my staff; there is only a reliable deposit left. What do you think of that, eh?" placing a letter before Ellis.

"Good heavens, man!" gasped the stockbroker, turning pale, "why this is the very letter Vipan showed us."

"The very same."

"How did you get it?"

"My dear Ellis, in this matter you will find it by far the best plan to take things on trust and ask no questions," said the other quietly.

"What do you mean?"

"What I say. There is the letter: it is my property."

"Is it? I am not so sure on that point. I rather fancy in law it belongs to Vipan's representative."

"Well, for all practical purposes, I am he."

"And the half of the leaf that went with that letter?"

"There it is," said Guelfo, exhibiting the faded and dried piece of Nature between the folds of a piece of soft tissue paper, but not suffering it to leave his hands.

"Then you have all that is needful, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"But, how did you get it?"

"My dear Ellis, remember what I said. I am sure it will be better for both of us if you do. Vipan may have entrusted it to my care. It may have been given to me by his servant. The police may have handed it to me, or it may—well, there are thousands of channels," and he shrugged his shoulders.

"Don't speak of channels to-day; it is a painful subject," interrupted Ellis with a sickly smile.

"Ah, that's better! You think of what is to be done, not of what has been done."

"And what is that?"

"Well, in the first place, you and I are going out to Peru straight away We shall hunt up this compatriot of mine, Balbi, buy him out of the affair obtain the necessary concessions, and then come back to England and float the 'Queen of the Cordilleras.' And if we don't make our pile we are not what I fancy we are."

"And I'm to be in it?"

"Of course you are, on terms. You and I will work this show together You mentioned it to me first of anyone and I'm not ungrateful. I don't think you have ever found me that."

"Certainly not. You have never been. Still, I should have liked to have known a little more about it if you could have seen your way."

"But I can't," replied Guelfo, slowly. "If you have any qualms of conscience, or doubt as to carrying the game through, say so at once and no harm will be done. If not I will offer you a share in this 'spec.'—for it is a spec. at present—in return for your help. Remember, this Ellis, the kernel of the affair"— slapping with his hand Balbi's letter lying on the table between them—"is mine, mine, and I can take what steps I please. Think it over, man. I don't want to rush you. Only, whatever decision you come to ,stick to it. I've got a little matter I must see to before I shut the office. I'll give orders no one shall bother you," said the financier, rising and locking the papers away in the safe and then taking down his hat

"Thanks, I don't know that it requires much thought, but I'll just go over the matter quietly and give you my decision on your return."

"Right you are, my dear fellow. So long!" And Guelfo left the office, closing the door carefully behind him

Henry Ellis was not a thoroughly hardened individual, and for a City man he was moderately honest. He would not rob a fellow-creature openly; his standard of morality forbade that. But the ways of the City, or, in other words, "business," had told upon him, and if a good thing came his way without being too particular as to the nature of that good thing, he was quick to snap at it. His association with Guelfo had not improved him, save financially. It had blunted his early ideals and had taught him

Watch That Bald Spot

Old, middle-aged and young men, should keep a sharp lookout for thinnig out of hair right on the top of the head.

If your hair has already started to fall; if you have dandruff and your scalp itches at times, your hope lies in Parisian Sage, a really scientific hair preparation.

In Parisian Sage there is one ingredient that supplies nourishment to the hair root one that kills the dandruff germs, and another that puts life and lustre into the hair. But most marvellous of all is one ingredient that makes it possible for the others to penetrate into the scalp, get to the root of the hair and do their duty.

This wonderful agent keeps the other ingredients to soak in and get right down to the hair root where the hair worries and scalp ailments begin. This is why J. V. Doyle guarantees Parisian Sage to grow new hair (if the hair root is not dead), to stop itching scalp or money back.

A large bottle of Parisian Sage costs 50c. at J. V. Doyle's and druggists evehywhere, or by mail, charges prepaid from Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, nt. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every palkage.

SUFFRAGE MAY PASS

Asquith Colleagues Expected to Lend It Support.

Lloyd-George and Others May Prevail on the Premier to Let Measure to Give Votes to Women Go Through to the Lords—If Upper Chamber Rejects It Suffragette Hostility Will Be Directed Against the Peers.

London, May 15.—It is by no means certain that the necessary facilities for the further progress of the woman's suffrage bill during the present session of Parliament will be refused by the Government.

It is reported that, in view of the impressively large majority by which the second reading was carried, Mr. Lloyd-George and other members of the Cabinet who favor this measure are of the opinion that the two or three days necessary for the completion of its remaining stages in the House of Commons ought not to be denied, and they will, it is expected, press this view upon the Prime Minister, who is the most formidable opponent of the bill in the ranks of the Government.

Although Mr. Asquith is naturally reluctant to do anything toward facilitating the progress of the bill, it is thought that he may recognize the tactical advantage of passing it on to the House of Lords, where it would, in all probability, be rejected. By that means the active hostility of the militant suffragists in the constituencies would be deflected from the Government and turned upon the Lords. The obvious advantages of such a transfer of antagonism, from the Ministerial point of view, may quite conceivably tempt Mr. Asquith to grant the necessary facilities and allow the bill to be sent to the Upper House in time for it to be dealt with there before the present session closes.

NATIONALISTS MAKE HAY.

Monk and Bourassa Plan a Campaign In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—It is announced that the Nationalists, headed by F. D. Monk, M.P., and Henri Bourassa, M.P.P., aided by other younger men, will begin a political campaign in this province, these demonstrations taking place between seed time and harvest. The dates will be announced later on, and it is quite likely that those gentlemen will then state their attitude on the reciprocity question. Although Mr. Bourassa published some time since a series of articles in Le Devoir favoring, if anything, the measure, he has since seen new light and will now take the field against the ratification of the pact.

It is also announced from Ottawa that Mr. Monk and his followers, who were elected as Conservatives, but who have declined to attend the party caucus, will throw in their lot with Mr. Borden against reciprocity when Parliament reassembles, and when the final vote will be taken on the measure, previous to dissolution.

Will Fight Payment.

Toronto, May 15.—Some, at least, of the shareholders of the ill-starred Farmers' Bank are preparing to fight rather than submit to the double liability call issued a few days ago by G. T. Clarkson, liquidator.

An initial step has been taken in the securing of an opinion from Sir Robert Bannatyne Finlay, eminent in the legal profession of Great Britain, as to whether the call might be successfully resisted. William Laidlaw, K.C., who has been prominent as a representative of the shareholders in Halton County, will present that opinion when the case comes up in the courts.

It is claimed that the bank was never from the beginning established on a legitimate basis as deceitful prospectuses were issued at the outset, the Minister of Finance was deceived when a charter was secured, false and lying affidavits were issued, and that funds were recklessly dissipated in wild speculation.

Redistribution In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—Local politicians on both sides of the party fence, are giving a good deal of attention just now to the redistribution bill, which Sir Lomer Gouin has promised to bring down at the fall session of the Quebec Legislature.

It is generally understood that the new measure, which will be brought down by the Government at the next and last session of the present Legislature will give at least fourteen and very likely fifteen members to the island of Montreal, including one for Jacques Cartier.

Taking Stringent Precautions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Militia orders this year aim at the man who conveys typhoid around with him, though himself apparently well. They state that "no officer, non-commissioned officer or man of the miltia, permanent or active, who has suffered from typhoid fever, within twelve months" will be allowed to proceed to Petawawa camp unless it has been satisfactorily proved that he is not a "carrier."

No Anti-Chinese Policy.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—The Novoe Vremya in its editorial of yesterday denies the rumors published here that negotiations have been going on between Russia and Japan for a common anti-Chinese policy. The paper will say, however, that the Japanese and Russian Governments are negotiating for two conventions, one for the mutual extradition of criminals and the other for the mutual registration of patents.

New Labor Party.

Montreal, May 15.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Montreal National Trades and Labor Council Saturday, it was decided to organize a political labor party in connection with the council, and to place labor candidates in several constituencies in eastern Canada.

The new labor party will be conducted on lines similar to that of the British Labor party.

Arrest of Express Messenger at Plattsburg, N.Y., Discloses System by Which Opium Has Been Brought From China to Canada and Thence to United States—Depots for Large Supplies Said to Be In Montreal.

Montreal, May 15.—Following the arrest of an express messenger in Plattsburg, N.Y., the story of the smuggling of large quantities of opium from China to Canada and thence into the United States has been laid bare. Working on information received from New York and Boston, the authorities here instituted search proceedings and discovered small quantities of the drug on the premises of twelve people here, two of whom are whites and ten Celestials. Letters and cheques of an incriminating character were also found. The authorities state that they have a clear case against the twelve persons, but refuse to divulge their names. They are now awaiting developments from the arrest of the messenger at Plattsburg to secure information, which will incriminate a large number of people here and lead to the location of large quantities of opium which are known to be hidden here.

The discovery of the plot came through the great increase noticed in the traffic in the drug in New York, which lead to an investigation, as the result of which it was ascertained that the dealers were accustomed to make out cheques for considerable amounts payable to persons, both Chinese and whites, in Montreal. The cheques were traced here and the men engaged in the business in this city located.

Conductors and express messengers on the various trains running between Canadian and American cities were the agents to carry the goods across the border.

The business has proved a lucrative one, as while the drug is purchasable here at $12 per pound, in New York, so great is the demand and so stringent the laws that $50 a pound is obtained for it.

While no exact estimate of the amount of the drug smuggled is obtainable, the authorities place it at not less than $100,000.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Dr. D'Alton McCarthy died at Orangeville yesterday.

The conciliation board has given up the attempt to settle the strike of the western coal miners.

The charcoal plant at Sault Ste. Marie was damaged by fire, and Berford, Que., also suffered a heavy loss.

Gordon Campbell had his arm badly crushed Saturday afternoon by the wheel of the city road roller passing over the member.

Lightning struck the McDonald Tent Co.'s warehouse in Winnipeg shortly after midnight Saturday, setting it on fire and causing about $8,000 damages.

A dinghy with the hat on the seat was found near Fisherman's Island, Toronto, belonging to John Hayden, a sailor. Mait Ackroyd was successful in bringing up the body.

Cecille Desmart of Montreal died Saturday as the result of injuries received when run over by a heavy wagon. The carter who ran over the child whipped up his horse and dashed off.

The four-year-old daughter of Percy Buchanan, of Iron Springs, Alta., is dead of burns received by her dress catching fire from coals in the ashes in the back yard at their home on a farm.

The Berlin Board of Health has accepted the plans submitted by Architect Cowan for the erection of the diphtheria and scarlet fever isolation hospitals, and also for a smallpox shack.

W. H. Greenwood, managing editor of The Toronto World, left for London to attend the coronation and to be present at the wedding of his brother, Hamar Greenwood, M.P., which is to occur during the festivities in London.

May Continue Competitions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Although nothing definite has been arranged, there is every probability that the next competition for the Earl Grey musical and dramatic trophies will be held in Ottawa under the active patronage of his riyal highness the Duke of Connaught.

The duke has already evinced great interest in the annual competition started by Earl Grey five years ago. He, like Earl Grey, has done something in amateur theatricals himself and it is said that on at least one occasion the two of them years ago had speaking parts in the same play.

It is the intention of the duke to have the competitions continued when he becomes Governor-General. The first two competitions were held in Ottawa and then they went to Montreal, Toronto, and Winnipeg. The choice for the next lies between Ottawa, Halifax and Vancouver.

Strike at Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 15.—Four hundred builders' laborers went out on strike Saturday forenoon, demanding 28 cents an hour, which the contractors refused to pay. The men have been getting 25 cents per hour. The agreement at the latter figure expired on May 1 and negotiations have been in progress since.

All buildings in course of erection are tied up and operations may be given a serious setback here this summer as a result. So great is the number of men out that labor hall was unable to accominodate them, and some of the locals held open air meetings on Cartier square.

His Hands Badly Burned.

PLEASANT SUPRISE FOR REV. B. GREATRIX

The Worthy Pastor of Holloway St. Honored by His Sunday School Class

On Friday evening the popular pastor of Holloway St. church was surprised by a visit from about forty members of his Sunday school class, their object being to present him with a handsome library chair as a mark of their appreciation. The following address was read:

Dear Mr. Greatrix:—

We have met in your home on former happy occasions and this evening we have come as a class to express to you in some small measure our deep and lasting esteem of your zeal and faithfulness as our teacher for the past three years.

Under your earnest teaching of the Word each Sabbath new light has been shed on its beautiful and profound truths and diffusing through the busy days has imparted an influence on our lives that has ennobled and elevated our Christian characters. The keynote and watchword of many a lesson drawn by you in the past has been "Consecration" and knowing well that it has not only been preached but exemplified, we trust that we will strive with greater zeal to labor for the Master and attain something of that high standard of Christian living as portrayed to us by your teaching.

To those of us who have known sorrow and affliction we have found in you a sympathizing friend, ever ready to respand, and your words of comfort and hope have brought healing and balm to many an aching heart.

We ask that you accept this chair as a token of our esteem and deeply regret that you are soon to leave us. We trust that in your new sphere God will bless you abundantly. May His choicest gifts be yours and that you may be successful in your new field is our prayerful and earnest wish.

"'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But you do more—deserve it."

Signed on behalf of the class,
Josephine Walters,
Lulu Leavens,
Catherine Beal.

Belleville, May 12, 1911.

Mr. Greatrix, though completely surprised, made a most feeling reply, thanking the ladies. He said he feared he could not lay claim to all the many good things said about him, but he was glad he had been a help to them and a consoling friend, and, though leaving soon would always be pleased to return and look into their familiar faces, at the same time urging them to continue in their good work for God and humanity. Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable time was spent.

DEATH LIST

FRANK SHELDON.

Mr. Frank Sheldon, who was well known in the city, passed away this morning at his late residence on Front Street. Deceased had been in failing health for some months. Mr. Sheldon, who was in his 38th year, was born in Sivinden, Eng., being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheldon, who are living at Derby, Eng. For the past six years the deceased had lived in Belleville, and followed the occupation of a carter. He married Miss Alice M. McNellis, of this city. The widow and a son named Frank by his first wife, survives.

COMING BY AUGUST 15

The Canadian Northern Likely to be Opened to Belleville by That Date

Consruction work on the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway is progressing rapidly in this and othre sections where the road is being built. In the city the raising of the grade west of the river is going on, as is also the work of preparing for the erection of the piers in the river for the bridge. A second coffer dam has been sunk and the filling in of the sides was completed to-day.

The erecting of the superstructure on the bridge at Trenton will be commenced this week and grading on the line is also being actively pushed forward. It is possible that the line from Toronto to Trenton will be opened for traffic by the 1st of June.

The bridge at Port Hope has been completed.

Mr. Giroux, who has a large contract on the line of construction east of the city, is pushing forward the work in a vigorous manner. Many men and a number teams from Cobourg have arrived to assist in construction work at that point.

The Toronto World says:—"The construction work and equipment departments of the Canadian Northern are working under high pressure to get the Toronto-Ottwa line opened to Belleville by August 15th. The people from Whitby, Oshawa, down, are all anxiously awaiting the new service. A new country will be opened up to trade with Toronto."

And, it may be added, it will not be long after that date when the line will be opened to Deseronto.

The Port Hope Guide of Saturday says:—

The last girder of the new Canadian Northern Railway viaduct at Port Hope dropped gently into place Friday morning. The east and west sections are now connected, and it will be but a short time before the rails are completed form Port Hope station to the Union Station at Toronto.

The steel work here has progressed very satisfactorily—not a man being injured seriously on the whole job. Some of the bracing beams have still to be placed, and the entire structure has to be riveted in place by numerous bolts, which will be taken out as the riveting proceeds. The ties are laid and the rails on, so that the work trains may go over the structure.

The Guide had the honor of being the first foot passenger over the new structure.

Two steam shovels are now at work on the cuttings east of the station, and a one track section is expected to be through in about two weeks.

Several trains are steadily drawing gravel and balasting is proceeding rapidly west of Port Hope.

The Grand Trunk work train is busy filling in the settled part of the viaduct embankment begun last fall.

Engineers have been running lines in and through Port Hope. The C. P. R., G. T. R., C. N. R., and even the men on the job, profess not to know what is doing or when anything is to be constructed.

A Lively Meeting at Wolfe Island.

Kingston, May 15.—The reciprocity question was threshed out at a meeting held in the town hall on Wolfe Island, Saturday night, at which Thos. Fawcett, vice-president of the Conservative Association for the county, presided. Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac, and Andrew Broder, M.P. for Dundas, strongly opposed the agreement, while addresses in support of the pact were given by D. D. Rogers, ex-M.P. for Frontenac, and Grant Grimshaw. There was a free-for-all discussion, and the meeting was one of the liveliest ever held on Wolfe Island, the chairman having to call for order on many occasions.

COMPRESSED AIR MAY SOON REPLACE POSTMEN

Letters Soon to "Shoot the Chutes" in Business District—Postal Service Changes--Moccasin Telegraph from Far North-Switch Makers Embarass the Ladies—Crop of New Towns—Fire Brigade's Busiest Year

(From our own Correspondent.)

MONTREAL, May 13.—A significant notice of an important resolution was allowed to slip by without comment a few days ago when the Postmaster General announced at Ottawa that employees of the postal service were to be reclassified. Briefly Mr. Lemieux proposes to rearrange the service in such a way that mail will be on the move almost every moment from the time it is posted to the time that it is delivered. The waste seconds, minutes and even hours when a letter is at rest, either in the corner post box awaiting collection, in a sack at the post-office waiting to be sorted out, or in a pigeon hole awaiting delivery, will be reduced to a minimum.

According to Mr. Lemieux's statement, sveeral classes of post-office employees are to be abolished, and an increase of pay is to be granted to the others. In Montreal it is noticed that the uniformed force, the men who walk the city with the pouches and bags full of mail on their backs, is to be decreased. Until the reason was discovered there was considerable objection on the part of citizens. Now, it appears, the Government has in hand plans calling for the installation of the tube system of letter delivery and collection. Drop a note into the tube in your office and, presto, it is whisked off to the post office, where it is sorted immediately with others of its kind, and shot into another tube which whisks it off to the sub-post office nearest the address on the envelope. If it is for the out of town mail it, of course, has to wait for the fast growing obsolete train service.

The Moccasin Telegraph.

The regular mail and telegraph service was badly beaten the other day in heralding the sad news of the death of Inspector Fitzgerald of the Royal North West Mounted Police, and his three companions, all of whom were frozen to death on the Dawson—Fort McPherson trail. Well over a month before the official despatch announcing the fate of these gallant officers was sent out from Regina, Charle Pearson, a constable stationed at Athabaska Landing, ninety miles north of Edmonton, had heard from the Indians that "Fitz" was dead. The Peel River Indians had told the Fort Good Hope Indians; they had told the Dog Ribs; the Dog Ribs had told the Slaveys; the Slaveys had told the Crees and so the story had gone—nearly two thousand miles from well within the arctic circle to civilization. Pearson wrote the news to Forbes Sutherland, an old comrade of Fitzgerald during the early days in the north, and there had been time for an exchange of two letters between Montreal and Athabaska Landing before the Commissioner of Police at Regina had received a telegram from Dawson on the subject. This is not the first time by any means that the rapidity with which news travelling by snowshoe and dog train has surprised civilization.

The Hair Makers Strike.

Fashionable women who have delayed ordering their spring and summer supply of puffs, rats and other mysterious paraphernalia with which woman's natural supply of hair is augmented, face an embarrasing state of affairs. The reason for this is the strike of the workers engaged in the making of switches, tansformations, and similar aids to the hair-dressers' art. These employees demand an advance in wages and claim that at the rates they are now paid they are not even able to equip themselves with a fair supply of artificial curls which they turn out in such numbers for their more fortunate sisters. As this city is the Canadian centre of the artificial hair market, the dearth in the supply of women's most widely used aids to nature is likely to cause general distress unless the indignation of the feminine public puts an early end to the present contest. Impracticable persons of the male sex have suggested that the present difficulty might be met by using last season's styles, but the horror with which this proposal was received is convincing evidence that if there is anything more useless than a last year's bird's nest it must be last year's rats and curls.

ment of lots sold in city for some years. As there were some further dates needed, Mr. Diamond was handed back the statement to fill in same.

Ald. Chowa, examined by Mr. Mikel—Witness was a member of the Council last year and this. He knew nothing of the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price.

To Mr. Carnew—He had a conversation with Mr. Price in the latter's office in the early part of the year. This was after the matter had become public. He had also had a conversation with Mr. Marsh on the street, being of a general character, about the sale, but nothing specially.

Ald. Gibson was examined by Mr. Mikel.—He knew nothing whatever about the sale of these lots and could offer no suggestion as to where information could be secured.

Mr. Jas. Knox, examined by Mr. Mikel—Said he heard of the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price through the papers. He knew nothing whatever about the sale of any lots.

Mr. John Barber, examined by Mr. Mikel, stated that he knew Messrs. Marsh and Price. All he knew about the sale of lots was what he saw in the newspapers. Never had a conversation with Messrs. Marsh and Price about the sale of lots.

Mr. A. Calcutt was examined by Mr. Mikel: He purchased two lots from Mr. Price on the west side of Alice Street. He paid $75 each for the lots. He went to Mr. Price's house to enquire about lots. Mr. Price had a map and he showed witness where lots were for sale. He was told that Mr. Price had lots for sale and that was the reason he went to his house. Witness never went to the city building to see about lots. Mr. Skinner told witness about Mr. Price having lots for sale. The deed was sent to him afterwards by mail.

To Mr. Carnew—Did not know Mr. Price was the City Treasurer when he (witness) made the purchase. Mr. Skinner went to Mr. Price's house with witness. Mrs. Price was in the room when witness first went in but left after. A plan was shown witness Mr. Price pointed out tw oor three lots and he bought two. Did not ask Mr. Price that night about a deed. Mr. Price told witness Mrs Price owned the lots. Witness had no dealings with Mrs. Price. Some time after he went to Mr. Price's office and paid him $150 and received a receipt. The receipt was dated the 4th day of October. The deed was mailed to his address at the station post office. He did not sign for the deed.

To Judge Deroche—Witness knew Mr. Skinner had bought a lot on Bleecker Avenue.

Mr. F. S. Wallbridge was examined by Mr. Mikel—He knew nothing about the sale to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price when they were taking place. He could not offer any suggestion to get out the facts of the case.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness had a number of lots in the city and had been able to sell some recently which he had held for years. He had no lots in the vicinity of Bleecker Avenue or Alice Street.

Mr. A. Robinson was examined by Mr. Mikel—He was a member of the Council last year. Last December he heard of the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price. His first intimation about the matter was from a gentleman upon the street. The party told witness he ought to look into the matter. He went to see Mr. Price about the matter and gave witness some information from his book and wrote a letter to the Ontario on the 19th of December. Witness read the letter he wrote in the paper. He had no further knowledge about the matter. Had no conversation with Mr. Marsh about the matter.

To Mr. Carnew—This was the first he had to do in this matter when he obtained information from Mr. Price upon which he based his communication to the paper. He made no enquiries personally about the relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price. He was of the opinion that Mr. Price told him that Mr. Davidson was his son-in-law and Mrs. Smith was the mother-in-law of Mr. Marsh. Never heard about there being $1 lots for sale in the city.

To Mr. Morden—Anyone could, no doubt, have obtained the same information from Mr. Price had they so desired.

The enquiry was adjourned until Saturday afternoon next, the 20th inst.

HOME WEDDING AT POUCHER'S MILLS

On Wednesday evening, May 10th, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mott, Poucher's Mills, when their youngest daughter, Miss Ada Florella was united in marriage to Mr. Albert G. Langabeer, of Michigan.

Promptly at eight o'clock the bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father and took her place beneath a large white bell suspended from an arch of evergreens and silver.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white silk mull, trimmed with lace and insertion, wearing the customary bridal veil, and carrying a bouquet of white carnations and smilax. Two little flower girls, Miss Gladys Pope, niece of the groom, and Miss Theda Mott niece of the bride, looked very dainty dressed in pale blue silk and carrying baskets of white flowers. Rev. Mr. Kemp, of Canifton, was the officiating clergyman.

After the ceremony and congratulations, about sixty guests sat down to a delightful supper.

The numerous pretty, and valuable presents denote the esteem in which the bride was held by her friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold watch and chain.

Their many friends unite in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Langabeer a happy and prosperous wedded life.

A FREE LIBRARY FOR THE BLIND

Of the public libraries, one of the most interesting and most deserving of public support is the Canadian Free Library for the Blind, which was established at the Village of Markham in 1906. It is now proposed to move the institution to Toronto, in order that it may be more easy of access and to improve its usefulness by placing some hundreds of additional volumes on its shelves. An effort will also be made to install a press for the manufacture of tactile books, in order that some of the gems of Canadian literature which have never been reproduced in raised letters, may be enjoyed by the blind.

The library has also a department of free instruction in the art of reading tactile print. A book printed for the blind costs several dollars, while the same work can be owned and enjoyed by a seeing person by the outlay of a few cents.

This Library is established under the Ontario Public Libraries Act. It is under Government inspection, and its accounts are carefully audited. Subscriptions towards its endowment fund are solicited. Remittances may addressed to E. W. Hermon, treasurer 37, Balmuto St., Toronto, and will be gratefully received and asknowledged.

RAILWAY RUMORS AT TORONTO

All indications go to show that North Toronto will be the centre of the transcontinental passenger business in and out of the city. The Canadian Northern are to-day busy joining their Parry Sound line and their Toronto-Ottawa line (which will be running in a few weeks) with a sort cut-off from a point in Scarboro two miles east of the York and Scarboro town line. In other words, the Canadian Northern proposes to connect up these two lines on the upper level outside of the city of Toronto, and bring them both into North Toronto on a line adjoining and parallel with the Canadian Pacific. This means that they propose to abandon the Don Valley as regards passenger business and as regards through freight.

What the Grand Trunk will do in this respect is not yet known, but all the indications go to show that the Grand Trunk, too, must go up to NorthToronto with its transcontinental business if it wishes to handle it most expeditiously; and the chances, therefore, are that it too, will have a cut-off line from Scarboro Junction to West Toronto, a good deal of which will be parallel with the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern across the northern portion of the city.—World.

BAY OF QUINTE HAS BEST APPLES

In the report of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, on the Horticultural Societies, W. Jeffers Diamond, Belleville, who visited Picton, praises the work of W. T. The Bay of Quinte can show the best apples of any place, place, I think, in Ontario, and they have a most enthusiastic man as a secretary. HE HAD TO PAY $3.50 FOR DRUNK

A young man from Shannonville was this morning before the Magistrate, charged with being drunk and in charge of a vehicle. The offence was proven and he had to pay $3.50. During the proceedings it was learned that the accused is but 18 years of age and a companion who was with him at the time is of the same age. Both had procured liquor in the city and it is probable that the parties from whom it was procured will be summoned.

A Household Necessity

Father Morrisey's Liniment Should be in Every Home

How seldom a week passes without some member of the family suffering from a sore throat, chest or back, a burn or a cut, a sprain, strain or ache!

Such troubles will come, but there is no need of suffering much from them. Keep a bottle of Father Morrisey's Liniment in the house, use it freely, and the pain has little chance.

During his lifetime Father Morrisey prescribed this Liniment regularly, and it proved very effective in relieving all sorts of pains and aches. In Rheumatism it is valuable as a "rub", when "Father Morrisey's No. 7" Tablets are taken internally. Similarly, applied freely to throat and chest it helps "Father Morrisey's No. 10" (Lung Tonic) to quickly break up and drive away a sore throat, cold in the chest, or cough.

Taken all around it is one of the best family liniments in existence. Price 25c per bottle. At your dealer's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 22

Sold and guaranteed in Belleville by J. V. Doyle.

Raising the Ready-to-Wear Standard

When you buy a suit which bears the Sovereign Brand label, you secure certain advantages not possible to special order or custom clothes, no matter what the price.

Every part of a Sovereign Brand Suit is made by a specialist who devotes his entire time and study to making that particular part. There's no "trying-on" stage—no bolstering up of defects to make up for deficient knowledge of the general-purpose tailor—not a cent paid until you get a satisfactory fit—and finally you pay less than you do for a custom or special measure suit. Not because Sovereign Brand Clothes are worth less, but because the highly-developed Sanford organization has eliminated the wasteful economic system of the custom-tailor.

Think over these reasons for a moment, then go and see the Sanford dealer in your town. Ask to see his Spring and Summer range of Sovereign Brand Clothes. You'll find your size all ready waiting for you to try on.

COUNCIL ONCE MORE HAD A PROLONGED SESSION

They Had Much Talk and a Good Deal of Business--Sitting Lasted Until 1.15 This Morning—Board of Education Ask $35,000 for a School in Northern Part of the City—Mr. Parsons Heard as to Oiling the Streets—Site Granted to the Allard Co—Similar Treatment and Guarantee of Bonds for the Marsh & Henthorn Co.—City Assessor Kerr Presents His Report--A Lot of Other Business Transacted

The City Council is certainly making a record for late sessions. It was nearly 1.30 this morning when a motion to adjourn was made, and then some of the members appeared to be loth to leave the building.

During the five hours' session, while much business was transacted, considerable time was occupied in hearing a deputation from the Board of Education asking the Council to pass a debenture by-law for $35,000 to buy property and erect a second new school in the northern part of the city, and hearing others who desired to address the Council. The request of the Board of Education was referred to the Executive Committee. The Council granted a site for the Allard Platinum & Gold Mining Co., passed a recommendation to procure a site and guarantee bonds for the Marsh & Henthorne industry and many other recommendations. Mr. J. G. Lindsay, City Engineer, made a request for an increase to his salary of $300 per annum. This was referred to the Executive Committee.

The members present were: Mayor Ackerman, Ald. Woodley, Canning, Gibson, Riggs, Adams, Marshall, St. Charles, Chown, Parks, McGie, Caldwell, Vermilyea, Panter, Bogle, Flagler, Bleecker, Lott, Clarke and Sills

After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting and confirming same it was decided to listen to those who desired to address the Council.

STREET OILING.

Mr. Parson, of Toronto, addressed the Council in reference to supplying road oil for use on the streets of Belleville. Watering, he claimed, had been used to such an extent on roads generally as to injure them. It is claiemd that oil prolongs the life of the road by hardening it. He claimed that it was a much cheaper plan to oil streets than it was to keep them continually sprinkled with water. The speaker showed samples of oil which his firm supplied. It worked better on macadamized streets than on any other kinds of street.

Ald. St. Charles—What is the price and what does it take to sprinkle a mile of street?

Mr. Parson—About 700 gallons for a mile and the price is 5 cents per gallon.

Ald. Panter—How often does the oil have to be put upon the streets?

Mr. Parson—According to the condition of the streets. Probably six weeks to two months.

The matter was referred to the Public Works Committee.

A REQUEST FOR $35,000.

A requisition was made upon the Council from the Board of Education asking the Council to issue debentures to the extent of $35,000 for the purpose of securing land and erecting thereon a school.

A deputation from the Board was heard.

Mr. O'Flynn thanked the Council for the privilege of addessing them He congratulated the Council upon the manner they were taking hold of educational matters. The school which is proposed to be erected on the Lingham property would only accommodate the children attending school south of Victoria Avenue. In the vicinity of the G. T. R. many beautiful residences are being built, and the residents in that section are badly in need of a school for the children residing in that vicinity.

Col. Ponton endorsed what Mr. O'Flynn had said. The general public are now asking for this school, which will create another live industry. He believed that by the erection of this school it would mean the building up of residences in that section of the city. He asked the Council to use their prerogative right to issue the debentures asked for.

Mr. C. M. Reid said the Board of Education were a unit in this matter. Our schools were overcrowded and it was necessary to build two schools at once in order to relieve the overcrowding of the present institutions.

Mr. W. P. Hudson said he hoped the Council would consider this matter in an intelligent manner and grant what the Board is asking for.

Ald. Flagler asked if the Board would be willing to bear the expense of drainage and sewerage.

Mr. O'Flynn—The Chatham Street and Foster Avenue sewer were near by where it is proposed to build the new school.

Ald. Clarke moved, seconded by Ald. Flagler, that the requisition be referred to the Executive Committee.—Carried

GUN CLUB REQUEST.

A communication was read from the Belleville Gun Club, stating that a great tournament would be held here this summer, which at least 100 sportsmen would participate in. The Club asked the Council for the use of what is known as a part of Coleman Flats for the tournament, also asking the Council for a grant of $100 towards assisting in defraying expenses in putting the grounds in shape.

Mr. M. Sprague spoke in support of the communication. The tournament will last three days, but those competing will have to be here four days and they will expend a considerable sum of money in the city. This would be a means of advertising the city. He hoped the Council would see their way clear to make the grant.

Ald. Flagler—What will it cost to put the grounds in shape?

Mr. Sprague—It takes about 450 square yards of space and in Montreal last year it cost $101 to prepare grounds, and the year previous at Ottawa it cost $97. Tents have to be erected, traps set and other matters attended to.

Ald. Panter—When does the tournament take place?

Mr. Sprague—The last day of July and the first two days in August.

The communication was referred to the Executive Committee.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on Reports, etc., Ald. McGie in the chair.

The accounts recommended by the various committees were passed without discussion, with the exception of an account of $20 to firemen for services rendered during a recent fire inspection test.

Ald. Clarke thought it was unreasonable to pay the firemen, as it was, he contended, part of their duties

Ald. Panter—Are the duties of the firemen to turn out at an inspection?

Ald. Clarke—This inspection is for the benefit of the municipality. The Inspector of the Underwriters' Association calls here at intervals for the purpose of ascertaining what the city had in the way of appliances, etc. The firemen, he thought, should attend such an inspection without receiving further remuneration.

The account was referred back to the Fire Committee.

The recommendation from the Executive Committee that the license fee of the Griffin Opera House Company be $100, with the following concessions for the year, viz.: Ten afternoons at $15, three nights for $25 and five nights for $35, and two weeks' notice to be given the company when the house is needed was, after some discussion, laid over for further discussion.

The Assessor was requested to appeal from the assessments of lots 10, 11, 12 and 13 east side of George St south, also W. N. Ponton's property lots 36 and 15 south of Dundas St.

SEWER CONSTRUCTION.

The Public Works Committee recommended that tenders be called for sewers on the following streets: North John, Alexander to Victoria Avenue; Alexander, Charles to John; Campbell Street, Dr. Gibson's to Front Street; Forin Street, from lot No 16 to Charles Street.

Ald. Clarke said he would oppose the building of any collateral sewer which would be draining into Bridge Street sewer until the latter is changed and does not empty at the lower bridge. He moved that the clause be referred back for further consideration to the Public Works Committee, which prevailed.

REPAIR OF STREETS.

It was recommended that Dunbar, Catherine and South Front Streets be repaired.

Ald. Panter stated that other streets would also be attended to.

SITE FOR AN INDUSTRY.

The Industrial Committee recommended that the application of the Allard Platinum & Gold Mining Co for a free site for the purpose of erecting thereon a smelting works, and a fixed assessment of $1,000 for ten years, be granted to them, and it is recommended that the Solicitor prepare a by-law to be submitted to the electors for their approval. The site required is to consist of not less than three acres. This plant is for the extraction of platinum and other minerals and will cost $10,000. The company intend to employ from 20 to 30 skilled workmen and will increase the number as their business develops.

Mr. Allard addressed the Council and said that Belleville was his home town. His company were going to put up a plant for the extraction of mineral. He was not alone in this enterprise, but had a company. He could not divulge where he would procure platinum.

Mr. McClatchie said he believed Mr. Allard's proposition was a good one and the city would not lose anything by having that plant established in the city. Mr. Allard does not give out where platinum is located and he has a good reason for not doing so.

The committee's recommendation was unanimously adopted.

SEATS AND FLAG TO BE PROCURED.

The Light and Parks Committee recommended that the seats on the park be painted and more seats procured; also a new flag be procured for Panter's Park.

This recommendation was passed.

MARSH & HENTHORN INDUSTRY

The Industrial Committee recommended that Marsh & Henthorn, Ltd. be allowed $1,000 in lieu of a site for the purpose of erecting thereon their proposed new workshops; that the fixed assessment be for a term of 15 years and be $10,000; that the bonds of the said company be guaranteed by the city to the extent of $20,000, the bonds of the said company to bear interest at 5 per cent. per annum, provided that said Marsh & Henthorn, Limited, or their successors, erect, establish and maintain buildings and plant for the operation of their manufacturing work and invest in such plant and buildings at least $35,000, and employ during the term of said bonds not less than 50 skilled workmen; and also provided that the said Marsh & Henthorn, Limited, or their successors, agree to retire the said guaranteed bonds in equal amounts in each and every year during the term of said bonds.

Ald. Clarke asked if Mr. Marsh had communicated with any alderman about the matter.

Ald. Bogle stated that Mr. Marsh had spoken to him about the matter and stated that he had in his employ to-day 89 men, four of whom were foremen, 37 journeymen and nearly 50 other workmen. Mr. Marsh thought the $1,000 was not sufficient in lieu of a site. The speaker thought $3,000 was not too much. In regard to the bonds, Mr. Marsh desired to have bonds to the extent of $25,000 guaranteed. He moved that $3,000 be allowed in lieu of a site.

Ald. Clarke moved, in amendment, that $2,000 be allowed in lieu of a site.

Mayor Ackerman was of the opinion that $1,000 was enough for a site. Mr. Marsh would, he thought, be able to secure a site cheaper than the city could.

Ald. Riggs endorsed what the Mayor had said.

Ald. Panter—Has Mr. Marsh refused $1,000 for a site.

Ald. Bogle—Mr. Marsh has stated that $1,000 would not do.

Ald. Clarke said he was informed that a suitable site could be secured for this firm for $2,000.

City Clerk—Has any person got a written option upon any property?

Ald. Adams—If there are any options in writing they wll not be given out now.

After some further discussion Ald. Clarke amended his amendment so as to read $1,500 in lieu of a site and this prevailed.

It was decided to fix the assessment at $6,000 per year for ten years.

The guaranteeing of the bonds caused considerable discussion.

Ald. Clarke said that by guaranteeing the bonds it was only another way of granting a bonus. Sixty per cent. of the taxation to-day is for bonusing in the past. He did not think the ratepayers should be called upon to pay for further bonuses. If other localities were willing to put a mill stone around their neck, the city of Belleville should not do so. There were industries in the city who desire to extend their borders and desire capital. Should we establish a precedent in this matter. He for one was opposed to the city guaranteeing the bonds.

Ald. Flagler contended there was not another concern in the city that was like the Marsh concern.

Ald. Bogle said that Trenton was holding out open arms to have the Marsh & Henthorn concern located in that town. We should not allow this industry to leave the city.

Mayor Ackerman stated that he made the motion in the committee in order to have the matter discussed.

Ald. Panter said he did not consider the proposition was a business proposition. If Marsh & Henthorn will guarantee that they will expend $15,000 in buildings before the bonds are guaranteed he would support it

The committee's recommendation prevailed.

The following recommendations by the Gas Committee were adopted:

That the two inch main on Charles Street north from Victoria Avenue be replaced by a five inch main at an estimated cost of $690;

That the price of gas to consumers be placed at $1.50 per 1,000 c.f., for both cooking and lighting purposes, and a discount of 25 cents per 1,000 c.f. be allowed for payment on or before the 15th day of the month, this change of price to commence July 1st;

That the manager be authorized to employ a man to canvass and look after customers' requirements;

That 200 feet of one inch hose be purchased for the use of the Gas Department in replacing streets in con-

Relief Train From Bancroft Saved Women and Children who Were Hemmed In

MAYNOOTH, May 15.—The village of Lake St. Peter was on Saturday afternoon destroyed by fire. The fire started in the woods about 10 a. m., and there was a fierce gale blowing straight for the village. The Rathbun Company lost all their plant there. There remains only Banagar's boarding house, the schoolhouse, and one dwelling-house.

At four o'clock a relief train came up from Bancroft and picked up the women and children, who were hemmde in by fire and could not get out of danger unaided. It was reported that Wm. Livingstone had perished in his house, but he had taken his horses out in the lake and kept them in the water to save them from burning.

The fire is still raging in the woods along the railroad. About thirty people are homeless.

TAKEN TO THE HOSPITAL

A Swede, whose name could not be learned, but whose number is 925, was brought to the city last evening and taken to the hospital for treatment. The man was apparently very sick. He has been working on the Trent Valley Canal construction at Healy's Falls.

CURRENT COMMENT

The weather man's predictions concerning rain of late have been almost as illusory as the Globe's prophecies of benefits to the Canadian farmers from Reciprocity.

Chariman Levee, of the Toronto Board of Education and President Diaz, of Mexico are acting on the motto: "What we have we'll hold," but both, apparently, must go.

A youthful Illinois couple are to be married in an aeroplane up in the clouds. Probably they want to escape the fool friends who throw shoes; rice and confetti.

Big hats, hobble skirts and other kinds of skirts are under Queen Mary's ban, and the sobs that rise from many feminine hearts are enough to break the heart of any but a sensible woman.

If the sessions of the City Council are to be as protracted in the future as they have been of late, the alderman who does the most talking should be compelled to furnish a hot bird, a cold bottle, beds and nightcaps for the suffering victims of his "hot air."

Belleville is, and certainly has been booming. An addition last year of 432 to the population which is now 10,440, and an increase of $628,000 to the assessment over that of last year, together with an addition of 2,053 to the population during the past six years, are facts which speak for themselves.

A citizen who visited Victoria Island Park with his wife and child on Sunday night complains of boisterous conduct and most vile profanity by a number of young men. If this sort of thing is to be allowed, decent people will be obliged to take their outings elsewhere. The attention of the Police Commissioners is called to this matter in the hope that they will apply the remedy.

The application of Mr. J. G. Lindsay, City Engineer, for an increase in his salary is a matter which ought to receive the favorable attention of the Council. Mr. Lindsay's duties are very onerous, and largely of a character which requires a skilled professional training, and moreover, he is responsible for a large amount of practical work which he is obliged to oversee. The work is constantly growing and Mr. Lindsay should be recompensed accordingly.

EMERSON CONVICTED OF ROBBING PARSONAGE

His Evidence Failed to Exculpate Him—Sentence was Deferred

The attention of the Police Magistrate was occupied until nearly 7 o'clock last evening in hearing evidence and determining the case of James Emerson, who was charged with two offences, namely, burglarizing the residence of Rev. B. Greatrix and stealing therefrom a sum of money and valuable papers.

A number of witnesses were examined on behalf of the Crown and the defence.

The accused, in his evidence stated that he found the cash box in question whilst doing some work about Judge Fraleck's place. The box was lying on an ash pile. He took it home and, being unable to read or write, did not know what the papers were. There was no money in the box when he found it.

After argument by Mr. Carnew on behalf of the accused and Mr. Anderson for the Crown the Magistrate reviewed the case and found Emerson guilty of the charges preferred against him. Sentence was deferred for 8 days and Emerson was returned to jail.

BALL LEAGUE MET

About twenty-five representatives of the clubs in the city baseball league held a prolonged meeting under the chairmanship of Mr. Carnew last evening. TRIED TO END ALL.

Young Man and Woman Attempt Suicide on Train.

Philadelphia, May 15.—Avery McClain and Miss Bessie Smith, who were arrested in Toronto last Thursday, yesterday endeavored to commit suicide as the train upon which they were passengers in custody of detectives pulled into the outskirts of Philadelphia, where they were being brought to answer charges of stealing $2,500 worth of jewelry.

Although the young woman was supposed to have been thoroughly searched, she had succeeded in secreting a package of cyanide of potassium in her hair. Prior to reaching for the cyanide Miss Smith had been eating candy. She was just about to empty the box of cyanide into her mouth when Detective Ulrich, who had the couple in charge, noticed the poison label upon the box. He made a hasty grab for it and the woman struggled. She scratched and bit at the detective and he endeavored to pinion her arms without hurting her. In the melee the box containing the cyanide dropped, and she yelled to McClain: "Swallow it, Av, swallow it. End your troubles now. Don't let them send you to prison."

McClain made a movement as if to follow her instructions, and Ulrich transferred the attack from the girl to the man. Eventually both were subdued, and they were taken to Philadelphia without further trouble.

Forest Fires Extinguished.

Perth, May 15.—Bush fires which have been raging near Perth, are reported to have been practically extinguished, no further danger existing.

Fire in the Village of Lanark Saturday morning destroyed the hardware store of Taylor Bros., with loss of $5,000. Cause unknown.

A Lively Meeting at Wolfe Island.

Kingston, May 15.—The reciprocity question was threshed out at a meeting held in the Town hall on Wolfe Island, Saturday night, at which Thos. Fawcett, vice-president of the Conservative Association for the county, presided. Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac, and Andrew Broder, M.P. for Dundas, strongly opposed the agreement, while addresses in support of the pact were given by D. D. Rogers, ex-M.P. for Frontenac, and Grant Grimshaw. There was a free-for-all discussion, and the meeting was one of the liveliest ever held on Wolfe Island, the chairman having to call for order on many occasions.

A Desperate Resort

The supporters of reciprocity have been driven into the last ditch by the declaration of President Taft that the farmers of the United States would, under reciprocity, sell much more to Canadians than Canadians would sell to them. Those newspaper supporters of the pact who have based their advocacy of the project on the assertion that it would be of enormous advantage to the farmers of this country to have the U. S. market of ninety-two millions opened to them, have resorted to a last desperate expedient, namely that of discrediting their own witness. In its issue of Saturday last the Toronto Star said:

> President Taft's utterances are accepted by the opponents of reciprocity in Canada as words of infallible wisdom. He tells the farmers of the United States that under reciprocity they will sell more products in Canada than Canada will sell in the United States, and it is assumed by the opponents of reciprocity here that he knows more about the farmer's business than the farmer knows. The fact is that there is a very strong movement to induce the farmers of the Republic to fight the treaty, and the President is forced to make extreme statements in order to meet this opposition.

That is to say, in plain English, President Taft, regardless of his exalted position as ruler of one of the greatest nations on the earth, deliberately told an untruth in order to achieve his purpose.

The issue thus raised is easily defined, namely, was President Taft or his journalistic accuser guilty of untruth?

That issue, too, is very easily decided and on unquestionable authority, namely, the reports of current prices in the American and Canadian markets—Toronto and Buffalo, for example—and no comparison could be fairer, as the two places named are the greatest centres of trade in their respective districts and within a short distance of each other.

The quotations given herewith are taken from the Toronto Star and the Buffalo Express of Saturday, the 13th inst.:

	Toronto.			Buffalo.
Oats, No. 2	.39	to	.40½	.37¾	to	.38¾
Eggs	.18	to	.19	.17	to	.20
Potatoes, bush. .	.66			.55	to	.62
Butter	.17	to	.25	.14	to	.24
Cheese.	.13¼	to	.14½	.09	to	.12
Hay	$14.00	to	$20.00	$13.00	to	$19.50

The Star's figures are at outside points for oats. The Star does not quote live stock. Buffalo prices are spot.

From the figures above given it is clearly apparent that President Taft spoke the truth. What, then, of the Star?

Editorial Notes

A HAPPY FAMILY.

The Laurier combination of Alberta are evidently a happy family. They are just now giving the world an idea of what they think of each other. The Calgary Herald says they refer to the representatives of the party "as liars, buccaneers, pirates, bloodhounds, sleuths thieves and burglars." These are hard terms to be used by and about men who, by long association, should know each other. Perhaps Sir Wilfrid Laurier's hesitancy about going to the Imperial Conference was due less to his dislike of imperialism than to a fear that in his absence such Kilkenny cat proceedings may result in his supporters in an important province destroying each other." Honest men would not grieve if they did; nor would Canada suffer.

A QUESTION.

It is declared in connection with the McGillicuddy charges, which Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a political issue, that there will be sympathy with Mr. Oliver in his desire that what may be purely personal affairs should not become public property. This is undoubtedly true. But then, if the McGillicuddy statements are true, is raising and disbursing an election slush fund of $69,000 a private affair?

* * * *

GOODLY FRUIT.

A contemporary says: "The Government of Canada, during the past week appointed a Lieutenant-Governor, three Senators and two Judges, besides a number of minor officials. It is a long time since so much goodly fruit was shaken from the political plum tree in so short a space of time." True, but was it not fear that the plum tree would become barren that induced the dying Ministry to make the appointments?

USELESS EXPENSE.

Many citizens are inquiring why it is that so many people who know nothing whatever about the sale of tax lots which is now being investigated, have been put in the witness box. It would be just as easy, and just as necessary to call thousands of citizens who know as much—or as little—of the matter as do all but a few of the witnesses who have been examined. The sole subject for investigation is whether Messrs. Marsh and Price, as trustees for the city, acted properly in selling city property to their relatives. What possible purpose can be served by summoning people whose only information on the subject has been derived from the newspapers and from talk on the street? Why saddle the useless cost thus incurred upon the ratepayers?

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 15.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 12 were 2080 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 2275 hogs and 1900 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1100 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 425 calves.

Altho the run of cattle was somewhat larger than a week ago, there was no further depression in the condition of the market, as the fact was more than offset by the improved quality of the stock and the increased demand for beef for local consumption, and in consequence a stronger feeling developed. Prices showed an advance of 10c per cwt., which, according to drovers and dealers let them out with a small profit on their day's trading. The market was more active than it has been of late, owing to the fact that butchers generally were pretty well cleaned out of stock and operated more freely.

Choice steers sold at $6.25; good, at $5.85 to $6.10; fairly good, at $5.35 to $5.60; fair, at $4.85 to $5.10, and common, at $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for hogs this morning on account of increased supplies. The advance in prices noted at the end of last week was all lost, but at the reduction the demand was good from packers and an active trade was done, sales of selected lots being made at $6.70 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

The trade in small meats was quiet, but the tone of the market was steady and prices show no important change. Old sheep sold at $4 to $5 each; spring lambs, at $4 to $7 each, and calves, at from $2 to $5 each, as to size and quality.

Redistribution In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—Local politicians on both sides of the party fence, are giving a good deal of attention just now to the redistribution bill, which Sir Lomer Gouin has promised to bring down at the fall session of the Quebec Legislature.

It is generally understood that the new measure, which will be brought down by the Government at the next and last session of the present Legislature will give at least fourteen and very likely fifteen members to the island of Montreal, including one for Jacques Cartier.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

that money was everything, and that how it was obtained was a second consideration.

As he thought over his friend's proposal the idea of making a fortune out of it loomed very large, almost blotting out the fact that the discovery of the murderer of the man who had treated him in the most friendly manner and given him his confidence might depend on the very secret Guelfo possessed. True, the discovery could in no way benefit the dead man. Nor could he, had he lived, have done anything without their aid. They had at the time of his death, formed a partnership, as it were, and now that he was gone, it was only as if he had withdrawn, leaving his companions to share the benefit.

It was with such specious reasoning as this that Ellis did battle with his better nature, and as is, alas! too often the case, evil triumphed, and when Guelfo made his appearance he was greeted with,—

"Well, Guelfo, I have gone over the matter carefully and I see nothing against it. I'm with you hand and glove."

"Stop a minute," replied Guelfo, who, if a villain, was a brave and hardened villain, "you're telling me a lie first off. You're not such a blind fool as to see nothing against it. There is plenty against it. You know that if Vipan were alive we should not be in the position we are in now. There would be three in it instead of two, in the first place. Then, I don't say I am, but I may be able, at this moment, to put my hand on the murderer of Vipan. But who's going to pay me for doing so, and surely my services are worth something. And I never work for nothing. I've made a position where there's no need that I should. To cut a long story short, though I shall be very glad to have you in this, Ellis, I'm not going to have you flattering yourself that you are a better man than I am. We're both rogues, more or less, and in this affair we'll both be on the same table or not at all. Do you stll say 'yes,' now that I've put it plainly to you?"

"You have put it plainly, brutally plainly, Guelfo, and it isn't pleasant hearing. There may be some fractions of truth in what you say, but taking everything together, I don't think I'd be justified in saying "No." So I shall hold to my decision, and there's my hand on it." And the over-persuaded and weakwilled man sacrificed his conscience to the greed of gold.

"That's all right. Now you will understand that I am not going to answer any questions in regard to the letter and the leaf. The matter, as far as you are concerned, commences from to-day. Anything before that is my business, and I can stand the racket of it."

"Quite so. But when we have found this Balbi it may be awkward, may it not?"

"Bother! Who is Balbi? Probably a half-educated Indian miner who has spent the greater portion of his life underground and whose wits are as blunt as his drills after a day's work. If you and I can't manage him we deserve to be kicked. I'm Italian myself, you know. But you need not trouble about that at present. We shall have several weeks aboard ship removed from all bothers and worries, and we can settle our programme then. In the meantime, what you have to do is to get back to London, arrange for your absence, get your kit together and book berths for us two. And whatever you do keep your mouth hermetically sealed as far as Vipan and Peru are concerned."

"Just so. But with all deference to you, the first thing I have to do is to get some dinner; I'm positively starving."

"Sorry I can't give you an invitation. I'm kept here, I find. But I'll meet you afterwards, say at nine, at Olympia, if that will suit you. You're not going back to England to-night?"

"Not if I know it. My skin and bones alone would not be much good in Coleman street, and that's all that would reach there if I attempted two crossings the same day. Then, till nine o'clock." And Ellis left the sanctum as Guelfo turned over a pile of letters requiring his signature.

As Ellis passed through the outer office he saw all the clerks busily at work and gave no indication of shutting up, and in the hall of the palatial suite he noticed two men entering.

"I wonder where he got that letter from?" he muttered, gazing at the men as they passed. "If I only knew it would mean something to me. I wouldn't play second fiddle then. He's got hold of it since he's been here, I'm pretty sure. I'd like to shadow him for a day or two; I might find out something. But it's too risky. You never know where he wouldn't have you. He's got fellows in his pay all over the place, and a rare lot of clients too, it seems," as a poorly clad man with a cleanshaven face and wearing pince-nez passed him as he emerged into the street. The man was raising his handkerchief to his face at the moment and cast a rapid half-shy glance at Ellis as he passed him.

"That's a bad face," muttered Ellis. And then, glancing back through the panels of the door, "And he's one of Guelfo's flock, too, it seems," as the man entered the financier's office. "He doesn't look as if he had much money to bless himself with."

Ellis hadn't taken two steps on the stairs when he trod on something. Stooping down he picked it up, and found it was a piece of hollow wire in the form of a pentagon. He gazed at it a moment, hesitated, and then quickly re-entered the offices and went straight into Guelfo's room, and throwing the door open, said,—

"Did you say eight, or eight-thirty this evening, Gulefo?"

"Neither," replied Guelfo, looking up from his letters. "Nine, sharp, I can't get there before then."

"All right, thanks; I'll be there." And then as he re-crossed the clerks' office, he casually glanced at the three men who sat waiting, and once more in the street, he muttered,—"That may be one to me. Who knows?"

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2963 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HERMIT IN COURT.

"Wild Man" Captured Near Brockville After Hard Fight.

Brockville, May 16.—County Constable Hourigan of Brockville had an exciting encounter with a maniac named W. A. Vandusen, living practically the life of a hermit on a lonely island in Gananoque Lake, 10 miles north of Lansdowne. For twelve years this man had made his home in a shack with a vicious dog as his only companion, and a rifle and shot gun convenient in times of emergency. The man has the reputation of being an expert hunter and trapper, and recently his mind became affected to such an extent, that residents of the locality within a radius of five miles were alarmed at his actions. Vandusen had an imaginery grievance against one of their number, William Lee, and a few days ago Lee learned that Vandusen had on two occasions been seized with an impulse to kill him, first with an axe, and secondly with a gun. He accordingly came to Brockville and swore out a warrant for the man's arrest.

The constable was driven off by Vandusen and his dog on his first visit to the island. On the occasion of a second visit, Hourigan and his son found that Vandusen had left the island, the dog having been made secure in the shack by the maniac before taking his departure. After waiting four or five hours under cover, they were rewarded by Vandusen returning. Hourigan allowed him to get within a few feet of the house before he pounced upon him. Though completely taken by surprise, he fought like a wild animal for ten minutes before the handcuffs were adjusted. During the melee the crazed man bit the constable's fingers, but not seriously.

When arraigned in the Police Court here yesterday, Vandusen presented a wild and woolly appearance. He told the magistrate that he had thought of killing Lee, saying: "The devil tempted me, but the Lord stopped me." He was remanded to be examined for his sanity. With the capture of Vandusen, residents of the locality where he made his haunts, are breathing easier.

NOVA SCOTIA ELECTIONS.

Liberals Have Been In Power for Twenty-Nine Years.

Halifax, May 16.—The Legislature of Nova Scotia is dissolved and the date of the elections has been fixed for Wednesday, June 14. The Legislature has run its full five years. The Liberals have held power in Provincial affairs in Nova Scotia for twenty-nine years, under two Premiers, with W. S. Fielding and George Murray, the latter for fifteen years and the former for fourteen. In the House of Assembly that has now been dissolved there are four Conservatives in the Opposition, with one Independent Liberal, and in the Legislative Council or Upper Chamber, where the members are appointed for life, there are only two who belong to the Conservative, or Opposition, party. Premier Murray will run for Victoria County, though he has not yet been nominated. Candidates have been nominated by the Conservatives in all of the eighteen counties except Antigonish, and the Liberals have made nominations in all except two, Victoria and Colchester. The ranks will be closed up in the three counties within few days.

Duncan Fisher Dead.

Brockville, May 16.—Duncan Fisher, a leading citizen of Athens, where for fifty years he carried on business as a carriage builder, died yesterday after a long illness of paralysis, aged 72. He was the father of A. A. Fisher, recently appointed junior judge of the County of Renfrew. Two other sons reside in the west. One is C. D. Fisher, superintendent of the C.N.R. at Saskatoon. Mrs. A. E. Donovan, wife of the M.P.P. for Brockville, is an only daughter.

REBELS ARE GAINING.

They Have Captured Cities of Acapulco and Canenea.

Mexico City, May 15.—From Acapulco the Government Saturday received news of the capture of that port on May 8, despite the efforts of the garrison, supported by the guns of the cruiser Democrata.

The Government reports the burning of a textile factory by federals. Acapulco is in the state of Guerrero, one of the states controlled by the Figueroa Brthers. Its capture does not mean, necessarily, that the contingent peace agreement made with the Figueroas is broken, as the place fell prior to the departure of Francisco Figueroa from the capital, to carry the terms to his brothers.

Occupied Canenea.

Sonora, Mexico, May 15.—All Canenea is celebrating the occupation by the insurrecto army and cries of "Viva Cabral," and "Viva Madero" fill the air.

Cabral's men having eaten their fill at spreads set at every restuarant in the city Saturday afternoon fraternized with the populace and there is every indication that busines will proceed without interruption or loss, as possession of the town was gained by the insurgent force without loss of life to either side.

The federal garrison under Col. Chiapas, having surrendered with all the honors of war, filed out as the triumphant insurrectos, marched into the town at 3.30 Saturday afternoon. Mayor Arnold and all other local as well as federal officials accompanied the federal troops, who, as the agreement allowed, took their arms and ammunition. They are once entrained for Nogales. The insurrectos hated to let Col. Chiapas go, as he is blamed for the execution of Prefect Talamentes and his sons. Senora Talamentes is in command of a body of troops. Juan Cabral is a native of Canenea, and when marching into the city he was almost pulled off his horse by enthusiastic admirers. Juan is only 25 years old and his revolutionary sentiments at the start of the rebellion made it unhealthy for him to remain here. He has called for the surrender of Nogales.

Juarez, Mexico, May 15.—Rebellion within the ranks of the Maderoist army Saturday morning resulted in the declaring under arrest of Francesco Madero, jr., Provisional President, the demand that the Maderos Cabinet resign, and for two hours threatened the destruction of the Jaurez army as a concrete fighting force.

The incipient rebellion arose in the ranks of the forces under Gen. Pascual Orozco, one of the fighting leaders of the Madero army, and was headed by Orozco himself.

A demand was made upon Provisional President Madero for food and money for his ragged and hungry soldiers. Madero was unable to satisfy these demands at the time, but his explanations were peremptorily thrown aside by the belligerent leader, Orozco, and his soldiers, and Madero was declared under arrest.

Finally the matter was settled by Gen. Madero promising that the immediate needs of the soldiers would be attended to, and the insurrectos, who had gathered in bands about the Madero home, left.

Diaz Still In Power.

Mexico City, May 15.—Gen. Diaz will not leave the Presidency while the country is in its present state of unrest, it is asserted by Finance Minister Jose Yves Limatour. He also said that Diaz stood ready to state in more explicit terms than those contained in his recent manifesto if necessary, his attitude with reference to his retirement.

The President, he said, had demanded to know from his opponents the terms in which they expect him to announce his willingness to resign, and is waiting a reply from them. Judge Carbajal will wait a couple of days in El Paso to get Madero's reply.

TREPANIER CONVICTED.

Jury In Three Rivers, Case Brings In Verdict of Guilty.

Three Rivers, Que., May 15.—Hormisdas Trepanier was found guilty on Saturday morning in the Court of King's Bench of the murder of Maurice Plouffe, whose body was found on March 2 last on the road between Three Rivers and St. Laurant de Nisolet. The jury was only 12 minutes in Reaching its verdict, and there was no recommendation to mercy.

Sentence was postponed until Wednesday, as counsel for the accused stated that there were certain motions to be made by his client along the line of objections raised during the trial.

Plouffe and Trepanier were both farmers, and towards the end of February entered on a drinking bout. On March 2 the body of Plouffe was found and Trepanier, on being arrested, confessed that while under the influence of liquor, he had killed his friend.

The only points raised by the defence were that the confession had been illegally obtained and that Plouffe had made insulting overtures to the women of the Trepanier family. The latter point was supported by a sister of the accused, but his wife and son remained neutral and their testimony was, if anything, detrimental.

PRESIDENT TAFT LOOKS NORTHWARD

Under Reciprocity, He Says, Our Timber and Other Resources Would be Available to America

President Taft of the United States spoke to the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association on Reciprocity and why it should be adopted, in New York on Friday, April 28th. His reasons for wanting Reciprocity with Canada are contained in the following:

"Another and a very conclusive reason for closing the contract," said Mr. Taft, "is the opportunity which it gives us to increase the supply of our natural resources, which, with the wastefulness of children we have wantonly exhausted. The timber resources of Canada, which will open themselves to us inevitably under the operation of this agreement, are now apparently inexhaustible. I say 'apparently' inexhaustible, for if the same procedure were to be adopted in respect to them that we have followed in respect to our own forests, I presume that they too might be exhausted. But fortunately for Canada and for us, we and they have learned much more than we realized two decades ago with respect to the necessity for proper methods of forestry and of lumber cutting. And hence we may be safe in saying that under proper modern methods the timber resources open to us in Canada may be made inexhaustible, and we may derive ample supplies of timber from Canadian sources to the profit of Canada and for our own benefit.

"There are other natural resources, which I need not stop to enumerate, which will become available to us as if our own if we adopt and maintain commercial union with Canada; and this is one of the chief reasons that ought to commend the Canadian agreement to the far-seeing statesmanship of leaders of American public opinion.

"But there are other—even broader—grounds than this that should lead to the adoption of this agreement. Canada's superficial area is greater than that of the United States between the oceans. Of course it has a good deal of waste land in the far north, but it has enormous tracts of unoccupied land, or land settled so sparsely as to be substantially unoccupied, which in the next two or three decades will rapidly acquire a substantial and valuable population. The Government is one entirely controlled by the people, and the bond uniting the Dominion with the mother country is light and almost imperceptible. There are no restrictions upon the trade or economic development of Canada which will interfere in the slightest with her carving out her independent future. The attitude of the people is that of affection toward the mother country and of a sentimental loyalty toward her Royal head. But for practical purposes the control exercised from England by legislation or Parliament is imponderable.

"Canada has now between seven and eight millions of people. They are a hearty, temperate, persistent race; brave, intelligent and enterprising, sharing or inheriting the good qualities of all their ancestors, and with a national pride in their Dominion that grows with the wonderful success and prosperity that have attended them in the last three decades. They are good neighbors; we could not have better neighbors. It is more than a hundred years since a hostile shot was fired across the border, and they are like us because our conditions are similar and because our traditions are similar. They are more restricted in their immigration laws than we, and perhaps they grow less rapidly, but they have before them a wonderful expansion in population, in agriculture and in business, and they offer to any nation with whom they have sympathetic relations and with whom it is profitable for them to deal a constantly increasing market and an ever-increasing trade.

"Why should we not have a closer union with Canada? Think of the absurdity of separating Manitoba and Minneapolis by as great a distance as Manitoba and Liverpool, when certainly Providence intended that their separation, socially and commercially, should only be that of their geographical distance. Canadians have furnished us with a large number of our best citizens. We are giving them a large number of the pick of our young farmers. Let us open the gateway between us. Let us give to both countries the profit of the trade that God intended between us. Let the political Governments remain as they are. Let us abolish arbitrary and artificial obstructions to our association with our friends upon the north and derive the mutual benefit that it will certainly bring."

In conclusion the President said: "I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because, unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States and to make her part of an Imperial commercial band reaching from England around the world to England again, by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity with all the advantages that I have described, and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now or give it up forever."

PURCHASES FROM THE STATES

For the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1910, Canada's purchases from the United States were $223,501,809, their purchases from us $113,150,778. For the past decade the returns in round figures show imports from the United States of $1,600,000,000, exports to the United States of $800,000,000. In other words seven million Canadians purchased twice as much from the United States as ninety million people in the United States purchased from Canada.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMON

LYNCHBURG, Virginia, May 14.—Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, N. Y., preached twice here to-day to attentive audiences. We report one of the discourses, which was preached from the words of the apostle. "Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." The speaker said:

We have a number of times mentioned the glorious exaltation purposed of God for the New Creation. St. Peter tell us that these will attain the divine nature; and this attainment will be through, or by means of the power of God working in the heart as the result of faith in "the exceeding great and precious promises." II. Peter i:4.

These will not be coerced into obedience—theirs will be voluntary submission to the divine will. The test upon them will be loyalty and faithfulness to God to the very limit—to use extreme self-denial, and voluntary humiliation in the service of righteousness, following in the footsteps of Jesus.

Jesus is the first and the head of this new creation. None could attain it except by and through his aid. He is the forerunner of this great 'race' to which, with Him, they have been invited of God—the reward of which to the faithful "overcomers" will be "glory, honor and immortality."

The apostle writes concerning the church, the elect "little flock" of called, chosen and faithful ones. He tells us that by perseverance in well doing we are to attain glory, honor and immortality; and that this reward, to the faithful, will come in the first resurrection, when immortality; when the new body, glorious and of the divine nature, will be granted to each of the faithful, as instead of the fleshly and imperfect bodies of the present trial time. (Romans ii:6,7; I Cor. xv:54.

The immortality for which the apostle declares the church is to seek is of a different kind entirely from that which the world may expect. It is a different kind from that which the angels possess. It is the immortality which is a feature or quality of the divine nature. This immortality, the scriptures assure us, was originally possessed by the heavenly Father alone.

We read: "The Father alone hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man may approach, whom no man hath seen nor can see." The only Begotten of the Father, the Logos, when made flesh, revealed the Father to mankind. John i:18.

The faithfulness of the Logos, as the man Christ Jesus was rewarded by the Father by glory, honor and immortality—the divine nature.

And thsi great privilege has been given to an elect "little flock," the bride class, to become associated with Jesus in the sufferings of this present time and in the glory to follow.

Our Lord Jesus corroborates the apostle, saying, "As the Father hath inherent life (immortality in the highest sense of the word—deathlessness), so hath he given unto the Son so that He should have inherent life," and that he might give it unto whomsoever He would—the Bride class, the overcomers, "more than conquerors."

The immortality enjoyed by the angels, otherwise spoken of in the Scriptures as everlasting life, is not inherent immortality, but an eternal mantenance in life by the Creator, subject to the conditions of obedience and righteousness.

In this same sense of the word Adam was immortal, but his immortality was dependent upon his obedience, divine provision for his sustenance was withdrawn. He was expelled from Eden that the sentence of death might take effect, "dying thou shalt die." Similarly Satan and others of the angels, because of their disobedience will be destroyed, hence their immortality was conditional, as was that of humanity. Hebrews ii:14.

The redemption to be accomplished by the Redeemer during His reign as Messiah is to reinstate all the willing and obedient in human perfection and divine favor, as these were enjoyed by Adam before his transgression. All the wilfully wicked, all not desirous of returning to fellowship with God through the Redeemer, will be destroyed in the second death. The test will be so thorough, so crucial, that God declares there shall be no more crying, no more dying, which implies that there will be no more sin—that the lessons connected with human and angelic transgression will be so thoroughly learned that those found worthy of eternal life will have their characters eternally fixed in respect to righteousness and sin, as God's character is fixed and unchangeable.

The Scriptures, as we have already intimated, use the word immortality in a more restricted sense than is common in our general usage. They apply the word to the Father and to the Son, and to the bride, the lamb's wife, provided for angels and men found obedient to the divine will is Scripturally called, not immortality, but everlasting life.

The Scriptures explain the two-fold work of Christ. (1) The work for the world, in providing for all the willing and obedient of mankind, everlasting life; (2) the work for the church, in making it possible for the willing and obedient of the bride class, glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature.

The Scriptural expression is "that Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." II Tim. i:10. Everlasting life was intimated in the remote past, but not specifically stated. The declaration that the "seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head" implied a recovery from sin and death, a victory over the adversary, a release of mankind from the death penalty.

But it was not specific. The promise of God to Abraham, that in his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed, contained an intimation of a divine provision for the restoration of humanity from death and the present fallen condition, a restitution to eternal life conditions. But there was nothing specific in i. The prophets also gave intimations of coming blessings through a great Messiah, but failed to say that eternal Fashion Revives the Cameo.

An early Victorian fashion revival is the cameo which is being worn on hats or clasping the belt at the waist, or even at the wrist. The antique shops of Paris and London are being ransacked for cameos. The pink and creamy tints of those ornaments are considered wonderfully becoming and as the finishing touch to white evening gowns they are looked upon as indispensable at the present moment.

Jade, too, which has been out of favor for years, has come back into fashion and is to be seen ranging in tint from darkest green to pure white. Jade of a delicate bright green is the most popular and is used in necklaces of rounded beads carefully matched, drops for earrings and cabochons mounted in various ways alone or with pearls and diamonds.

Jade ornaments mounted in the Chinese fashion are perhaps the most interesting, certainly the most curious. They are oblong pendants cunningly carved with lotus flowers and leaves or dragons or lizards or some twisted arabesque. They are strung on yellow silk cords with seed pearls grouped on each side of a roughly shaped pink tourmaline bead. The effect suggests fresh green foliage surmounted by a pink blossom.

Queen-Mother a Musician.

Few people outside her family and her most intimate friends knew until the other day that Queen Alexandra is an expert mandolinist. Her tutor, Signor Leopold Francia, has now told how he first met his royal pupil in 1895, when he was appointed director of the Ladies' Mandolin and Guitar Band Orchestra.

This organization consisted of sixty of the most highly born women in England, including Queen Aleexandra, then of course, Princess of Wales. For three or four years in succession Signor Francia used to go every summer to Kensington Palace or to Bridgewater House, Lady Ellesmere's house in St. James.' Queen Margherita, of Italy, an expert mandolinist had set the fashion for this instrument and from Rome, Naples and Milan the fashion spread to this country.

"Queen Alexandra," says Signor Francia, "had rare musical attainments. She played both piano and guitar with great skill and feeling, and her knowledge of harmony and counterpoint was remarkable. She has written several compositions of real beauty. One of these, "A Wedding March," for piano and mandolin, was played at the marriage of Lady Beatrice Egerton and Mr. Kemp.

She appeared several times on the concert platform with mandolin or guitar. Only a few ladies of the court and her tutor were in the secret. When she appeared on the platform she dressed like the other members of the Ladies' Orchestra, in a black costume, relieved by a sash of red, black and yellow if she played the guitar. No one could detect her identity, as she always appeared on the platform under the name of Countess Gage."

Girls' Tempers.

Why is it that girls who are considered sweet-temperde and agreeable before marriage often develop into arbitrary and self-assertive brides? This question was asked by a mother-in-law and is worthy of comment, says the Philadelphia PublicLedger.

It may be urged that this girl before marriage set a watch upon her lips and tried to be agreeable. The unmarried girl has so much more to gain by pleasant personal qualities than a married woman has, for unless a girl makes herself agreeable and obliging she is apt to be left out when parties are being arranged and to be abandoned to her solitary fate by those who would be her allies.

Since girls are not expected to return as much hospitality as they receive, they must of necessity depend upon their personal qualities for invitations. On the other hand, a married woman who gives parties gets asked in return, whether she is agreeable or not.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Cured by Vinol—Here is Proof.

Seymour, Ind.—"I was troubled with a chronic stomach trouble and five weeks ago it got so bad I had to give up work. I had tried various medicines without relief—and was finally induced to try Vinol. After taking the first bottle I was greatly benefitted. Am now on the third bottle and am ready to resume work. Am rapidly gaining in weight and strength." Edward Neiman. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

It is the curative medicinal elements of the cods' livers, combined with the strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in restoring perfect digestion and at the same time it builds up the tired, overworked and run-down system.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. J. S. McKeown.

INN NAMES IN GERMANY

Scattered throughout England are some curious inn names, but Germany probably keeps the record for out-of-the-way signs and fantastic names. The most absurd results are usually obtained by the name of some animal with a more or less unsuitable object. The Comfortable Chicken and the Cold Frog, both of them in Berlin, are certainly left in the shade by the Angry Ant (Ort, in Westphalia) and the Stiff Dog (Berlin). The Lame Louse is an inn in a suburb of Berlin, and not far from it is the Thirsty Pelican. The Dirty Parlor, the Bloody Bones, the Musical Cats, the Four-hundredweight Man, and the Boxers' Den are all in Berlin or the neighborhood, and the Old Straw Bag in Leipsic. The Open Bunghole is in Stadtohen, in the Palatinate, and the Shoulder-blade in Jericho. The Last Tear is a landlord's notion for the name of his inn, situated near a graveyard, visited by returning mourners, and is of frequent occurrence throughout the Fatherland.

A WELL KNOWN CITIZEN OF STIRLING., ONT., CURED OF CHRONIC CATARRH AND IRRITABLE THROAT BY CATARRHOZONE

A Remarkable Case Exciting Great Interest in Stirling, Which, if Possible, adds to the Popularity of Catarrhozone, as a cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Throat Trouble

Catarrh is one of the most disagreeable and at the same time hardest to cure diseases. This has been Mr. McCallum's experience:

"For many years," he wrties, "I have suffered from Catarrh, and continually hawked and coughed, so that my throat was alweys in an inflamed condition.

"Doctors' medicine did not help me in the least, and all other remedies I used were quite usless. In one case it was time wasted in snuffing powder up the nose, in another using a greasy ointment, and so on. Not one of them was the least bit of good.

"I heard Catarrhozone favorably spoken of and tried a sample, and it really benefitted me more in a few hours than years of treatment with doctors' and other so-called remedies.

"Receiving such immense benefit from the sample size, I got the complete outfit, large Hard Rubber Inhaler, etc., and but a few weeks' use completely cured me of Catarrh and throat trouble.

"I recommend Catarrhozone as the most satisfactory Catarrh remedy on the market. Every word said about it is true."

(Signed.) "Richard McCallum."

KAISER VISITS BRITAIN

To Attend Unveiling of Great Victoria Memorial.

Many Members of Royal Families Will Be Present at Splendid Ceremony To-morrow—Emperor Comes to Pay Honor to the Memory of His Grandmother and Gets an Enthusiastic Welcome at Sheerness.

London, May 15.—The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the Emperor and Empress and Princess Victoria Louise aboard, arrived at Sheerness last evening. The German cruisers escorting the yacht exchanged salutes with the British warships. The latter were gaily decorated and the crews gave a cheering welcome to the visiting sovereigns. Their majesties remained aboard the yacht during the night.

Emperor Wilhelm and the Empress are making the first state visit by foreign monarchs to England since the death of Edward VII. They have come for the unveiling by King George of the statue in front of Buckingham Palace, which completes a great national memorial to Queen Victoria. This, however, will only be an incident of their visit, which extends over a week, during which the English court, now out of mourning, will entertain their distinguished guests at state banquets, a state ball and a gala performance at Drury Lane Theatre.

To-day the Emperor and Empress landed at Port Victoria, and proceeded to London, where they were greeted by King George and Queen Mary and other members of the royal family and escorted in open carriages to Buckingham Palace, where they will be the guests of the King and Queen. This evening there will be a family dinner at the palace.

The unveiling of the statue will take place to-morrow morning. The ceremony will not only be a picturesque military parade, but a religious service in which the choirs of Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and the Chapels Royal will have a share. On the stand with the King and Queen and the Emperor and Empress and Queen Alexandra will be many members of royal families, all, however, related to the royal family of England or representing relatives. Among them will be the King and Queen of Norway, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden; the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Prince Arthur of Connaught; Princess Henry of Battenburg and her sons; Prince and Princess Christian; Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, the Duchess of Albany, the Duke and Duchess Saxe-Coburg Gotha, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, and all the other members of the royal family. The Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch will represent the Czar and Czarina. All the dominion Premiers who have arrived for the Imperial Conference will also be present.

The national memorial, which the statue crowns and completes, is surrounded by a circular space, it stands directly in front of the palace, the Queen facing down the Mall. Around this space are piers surmounted with emblematical figures symbolizing the chief possessions of the Empire. In the centre is the memorial proper, a stately monument of marble and bronze, which it has taken nine years to complete, at a cost of upwards of $1,000,000. On two sides are great fountains. Pedestals flank the broad flight of steps, surmounted by lions and bronze groups representing peace, progress, manufactures and agriculture. Over the fountains are colossal figures representing bravery and intelligence. From the centre of the granite platform rises a huge column around which the chief statues and groups are placed. At the base are seen four ships prows—two bearing trophies of the army and navy, and two fruit and flowers, emblematic of commerce and prosperity.

Some significance may be attached to the state banquet to be given in honor of the German Emperor next Thursday evening. Besides the members of the royal family, Sir Edward Grey, the German ambassador and possibly other diplomats will be present. The next day there will be a reception at the German embassy, and in the evening there will be the gala performance of "Money" at Drury Lane Theatre.

On May 18, the Emperor and Empress will go to Windsor to lay wreaths on the graves of Queen Victoria at Frogmore, and King Edward in St. George's Chapel. The state ball on Friday night will be one of the most brilliant gatherings of the year. The next day the royal visitors depart from England.

Attacked by Moors.

El Knitra, Morocco, May 8.—(Delayed in transmission.)—Major Vidal yesterday conducted a reconnaisance to the south and was attacked by 200 Moors. Quick firers were turned on the tribesmen, who were dispersed with a loss of 20 killed or wounded. The French had one Spahi wounded.

The body of a native scout was found in a mutilated condition. The columns afterwards captured the Moor, who was concerned in this murder, and shot him.

The camp to-night was twice aroused by the shots from the outskirts. A convey from Mehidia on its way to Salee was attacked by a swarm of horsemen. The Spahis charged, sabring many of them. The native Kaid, co-operating with the French, had two of his men killed. The enemy's dead numbered twelve.

Kingston's Labor Trouble.

Kingston, May 15.—Mr. Izzard, fourth vice-president of the International Federaton of Labor, has been asked to come and settle the labor dispute here. The masons will be bound by this ruling, but it will not affect the stonecutters. Saturday, the contractors on the House of Providence hired non-union men to take the place of the striking helpers. Just as soon as they started, the carpenters dropped their tools and refused to work.

PICKING ENUMERATORS

Strange State of Affairs Exists in Manitoba.

W. D. Staples Takes Exception to the Class of Men In Charge of Census In Prairie Province, But Government Votes Down His Resolution—Minister Declined to Answer a Fair Question the Other Day.

Ottawa, May 16.—According to Mr. Borden, the doctrine enunciated in the House yesterday in the course of a debate initiated by W. D. Staples, was that the Government could make appointments to the census staff on the recommendation of criminals. In fact, the Minister of Agriculture went so far as to describe as "trivial offenders" men who had been branded as criminals by the courts, and also men who had been accessories after the fact, if not before, to the crimes committed by absconding deputy returning officers at elections—men who still dare not return to Canada.

When the motion to go into committee of supply was reached, W. D. Staples made a speech in criticism of Hon. Sydney Fisher, in connection with the appointment of census enumerators and then moved in amendment: "In the selection and appointment of pulbic officers, the Government is exercising a public trust and should be guided by consideration of the character and capacity of the person whom it is proposed to appoint.

"That the delegation of such a public trust to a local party committee or organizer is a public scandal and deserves the censure of this House."

Mr. Staples intimated at the outset that the matter would not have been brought up had certain questions which he put to the Minister of Agriculture the other day been answered to his satisfaction. He had asked whether or not the Liberal organizer of Manitoba had recommended the persons in that province appointed as enumerators, and Mr. Fisher had declined to answer. He had also asked if the enumerators were to be schooled by the Liberal organizer, and the Minister had replied in the negative in a very impolite manner. Mr. Staples then read letters addressed confidentially to census enumerators and signed: "Yours in the good cause, H. E. Perry."

Mr. Staples followed up the reading of the letters by a description of the incidents arising out of the provincial bye-election in 1905, when a poll was unlawfully held in the far north and 151 bogus ballots turned in to the returning officer. He read various letters which Perry, the present Liberal organizer in Manitoba, had addressed to Moberley McLeod and Neilson, the principals in that incident, which went to show that after they had been fined and left the country, Perry was in communication with them to stay away. Mr. Staples wanted to know if Perry was the kind of a man in whom the Minister of Agriculture had confidence.

Mr. Fisher said he did not hesitate to say that Mr. Perry, like many others, had made recommendations as to the appointment of census enumerators. "I do not," he said, "acknowledge in this House the recommendations on which I act and I do not propose to do so. They are of a private nature and it is the policy of the Government not to make them public."

Mr. Staples asked if, in view of the letters he had produced, the Minister still considered Mr. Perry to be a fit and proper person.

Mr. Fisher said he did not propose to accept any evidence against any men except such as had been established in a court of law. This was the first he had heard of these letters and he did not propose to accept them as evidence against Mr. Perry.

In reply to a question by Mr. Lake the Minister said that Moberley, who was engaged on census work in 1905, had been dismissed as soon as it was established in court that he had been guilty of offences in connection with an election. He would do the same thing to-day if it were shown that any census official was an improper person. Touching on the correspondence which passed between Mr. Perry and the principals in the Prince Albert election, as quoted by Mr. Staples, the Minister said that he gathered that they had been guilty of some trivial offences.

R. L. Borden interrupted to say that they were guilty of eight or ten offences against the election, and, besides, had committed forgery and perjury.

Mr. Staples' amendment was voted odwn by 84 to 51, a Government majority of 33.

George Taylor (Leeds) asked if it was true that the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. W. S. Fielding on the reciprocity agreement were being sent out in bundles to postmasters, who were instructed to distribute them. He was informed that this was the case. He said that the Government had no business to use the postmasters for political purposes. The Postmaster-General being absent, the Minister of Finance said he would bring the matter to his attention.

Mr. Fielding gave notice last night for Wednesday next of this resolution:

"Resolved that it is expedient to amend the Customs Tariff Act of 1907 to provide as follows:

(1) "The Governor-in-Council may by order-in-council extend to Japan for a period not exceeding two years from July 17, 1191, the benefit of the tariff advantages at present enjoyed by that country on its exports to Canada as expressed by and contained in article V. of the treaty of commerce and navigation between Great Britain and Japan, signed July 16, 1894, which treaty was made applicable to Canada by the convention between the United Kingdom and Japan respecting commercial relation between Canada and Japan signed at Tokio on Jan. 31, 1906; provided, however, that such advantages shall only be extended to Japan when and so long as the Governor-in-Council is satisfied that Canada will receive and is receiving during such period the reciprocal tariff advantages enjoyed by Canada at present on its exports to Japan under the provisions of the said article and the said convention.

W. O. Seeley (Wentworth) made a plea for a branch experimental farm station and better facilities for the handling of fruit.

Hon. Mr. Fisher said that there was a sum in the supplementaries for the construction of a free cold storage cooling plant for fruit in the Niagara district.

G. H. Barnard said this was a somewhat labored attempt of the Minister of Agriculture to pull Mr. Seeley out of the hole he had got into over the reciprocity agreement.

ON HEARSAY EVIDENCE.

And Commons Hesitates to Accept the Senate's Divorce Bill.

Ottawa, May 16.—The unusual spectacle of a divorce bill being discussed on the floor of Parliament was witnessed when the bill for the relief of Gertrude Mary Grantham came before the committee of the whole for consideration. This bill was favorably reported by the Senate, but the Commons' private bills committee hesitated on the ground that the evidence was entirely of a hearsay character.

The petitioner is a daughter of Sir William Mackenzie of Toronto, and Sir Alan Aylesworth said he was not astonished that the private bills committee should have hesitated before reporting the bill. The evidence was entirely hearsay and consisted of the testimony of the wife, the defendant's doctor and Sir William Mackenzie to the effect that Grantham had confessed to misconduct. The Minister of Justice pointed out that while there was no collusion between the wife and husband suggested it was possible that the defendant might have boasted of his affairs with other women in order to get the wife to sue for divorce.

Mr. Barker of Hamilton took an entirely different view, as did E. M. MacDonald of Pictou, who urged that the House should be very careful in setting aside the judgement of the Senate divorce committee, and the Senate itself, which had passed this bill. Mr. Lancaster supported Sir Alan Aylesworth on the ground that to grant divorce on such evidence would be a bad example to young married couples. He also regretted that divorce was getting to be such a favorite fashion.

Mr. Borden argued that the evidence in the case was such as was always accepted and the bill passed on yeas and nays.

TRUST MUST DISSOLVE

Standard Oil Has Six Months to Get Out of Business.

United States Supreme Court Upholds the Decision of the Missouri Tribunals Which Ordered Dissolution—Other Big Corporations Will Be Up on the Carpet—Taft May Press For a Federal Act.

Washington, May 16.—The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday upheld the decision of the Missouri courts ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

The Supreme Court holds:

That the Standard Oil Co. is a monopoly in restraint of trade.

That this giant corporation must be dissolved within six months.

Corporations whose contracts are "not unreasonably restrictive of competition" are not affected.

Other great corporations whose acts may be called into question will be dealt with according to the merits of their particular cases.

The court was unanimous as to the main features of the decision, Justice Harlan dissenting only as to a limitation of the application of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

President Taft and Cabinet will consider immediately the entire trust situation and the advisability of pressing for a federal incorporation act.

The decision in the tobacco case was not handed down yesterday, but is expected on May 29.

Chief Justice White, in his opinion, first reviewed the preliminary proceedings in the case in the Circuit Court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri. He restated the essential points in the bill of the Government asking for the dissolution of the Standard Oil, and the answer questioning the jurisdiction of the court and denying the claims of the Government. He dismissed the objection to the jurisdiction in a few words, by holding that it was not well founded. He then came to the arguments as to the law and the facts in the case, saying that out of the "jungle" of law and facts both sides were agreed only in one thing, and that was that the determination of the controversy rested upon the proper construction and application of the first and second sections of the Anti-Trust Act. The views of the two sides, as to the law, the chief justice said, were as wide apart as the poles. The same, he said, was true as to the facts.

In this state of affairs, the chief justice seized upon the single point of concord, namely, the application of the two sections of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, as the initial basis of an examination of the contention. The rest of his opinion divides itself into a consideration of the meaning of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in the light of the common law and the law of the United States at the time of its adoption, the contentions of the parties concerning the act and the scope and effect of the decisions of the Supreme Court, the application of the statute to the facts, and, lastly, the remedy.

In striving to get at the meaning of the two sections of the law he said that the sole subject with which the first section dealt was "restraint of trade," and that the attempt to monopolize and monopolization" was the subject of the second section. The chief justice said that in getting at the meaning of these words he would be guided by the principle that where words are employed in a statute, which at the time had a well-known meaning in common law, or in the law of the country, they were presumed to have been used in this sense unless the context compels to the contrary.

Young Lady a Heroine.

Toronto, May 16.—The courageous conduct of a young woman, Miss Dora McGillivray, 124 Yorkville avenue, was brought to the attention of Inspector Charlton yesterday morning by a Hamilton woman, who had offered Miss McGillivray a reward for her courage and had been refused.

The woman was Mrs. Thomas Durant, who on April 30, was crossing Queen street with her baby carriage, when a street car was upon her before she realized it. Miss McGillivray bravely rushed from the sidewalk and picked the infant from the carriage, just before the carriage was crushed by the car.

Rosselli Committed For Trial.

Toronto, May 16.—Frank Rosselli, charged with the murder of Giacchina Cece, another Italian, in a row at 40 Agnes street, Good Friday night, was committed for trial from the Police Court yesterday morning upon consent of counsel. The other Italians held in the same matter upon charges of wounding and vagrancy, were also committed for trial.

It is likely that the grand jury of the assizes will at once commence the sifting of the tangled evidence. The charges against the men may be altered.

Bookseller Will Appeal.

Toronto, May 16.—Albert Britnell, the Yonge street bookseller, yesterday secured leave from Magistrate Kingsford to appeal against his decision in the case where he fined Mr. Britnell for the sale of obscene books. The grounds for the appeal are that the books do not properly come under the statute, and that there was no evidence that the defendant had knowledge of the sale as required by the statute.

Held Up at Quarantine.

Montreal May 16.—The Cunard liner Albania, which inaugurates the new Cunard Line service to this port, has been held up in quarantine by a suspected case of smallpox. This is the second vessel to be held up this season, the Dominion being the other ship to have a suspected smallpox case on board.

MUST UPHOLD STANDARD.

Theory of Protestantism Discussed In Workman Case.

Montreal, May 16.—That many of Dr. Workman's pupils had undoubtedly gone to the bad in a theological acceptance of the term, as the result of their professor's teachings, was the evidence adduced yesterday in the Workman libel suit case. Rev. Drs. Young of Montreal and Scott of Brantford both declared that Dr. Workman's views were at variance with the standards of the Methodist faith.

Mr. Justice Weir endeavored to obtain an admission from one of the witnesses that the doctrinal standards were subject to change and evolution, and asked if it was not true that the minister had placed a broader interpretation on the gospel than did he of fifty or a hundred years ago. The witnesses, while admitting that there was a broader interpretation given the doctrine to-day, no less positively averred that the doctrinal standards were in nowise affected thereby.

The judge also asked if it was not the very essence of Protestantism that every man should think as he pleased, and the answer given was that even granting this a Methodist minister was bound in conscience to teach the doctrines as outlined in the standards of his faith.

The chief points on which the witnesses declared Dr. Workman's teachings to be at variance with the doctrinal standards of his church were the questions of the corporal resurrection of Christ, the virgin birth, the nature of the atonement and the historical actuality of the fourth gospel.

Marriages Are Valid.

Toronto, May 16.—"Don't worry about any church declaring invalid any marriage in Canad which is valid according to the civil law," said Mr. Justice Riddell, at Cooke's Presbyterian Church last night.

In addressing the Catch-My-Pal Society, Judge Riddell explained some of the legal positions of the crown, the courts, and the new Canadian.

The King was just as much King of Canada as of Great Britain. The crown possessed a veto power, but its exercise died with Queen Anne, and was as dead as Queen Anne.

The courts were not the mysterious institutions generally supposed. They were simply bodies employed to administer justice in accordance with custom handed down for hundreds of years, with the admixture of a little Roman law. The customs had, some of them been embodied in written statutes, but many of them had not. The safety of the community depended upon the intelligence and honesty of the jurymen.

Want Garbage Collection System.

Brockville, May 16.—At a special meeting the Board of Health recommended that the Town Council complete and put into force without delay a bylaw for the collection and removal of garbage.

When Judge Sutherland came to Brockville yesterday afternoon to open the non-jury spring assizes for these united counties he found a blank docket. His lordship [illegible] to Toronto.

Has Sultan Surrender?

Tangier, Morocco, May 16.—Mulai Hafid, the Sultan of Morocco, has given himself up to the supporters of his brother, the pretender, Mulai el Zin. Mulai Hafid, it will be recalled, dethroned his brother, the former Sultan Mulai Aziz, who is now in exile.

Instantly Killed.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 16.—J. W. Stanilaw was instantly killed yesterday morning at the coke plant of the Michigan Lake Superior Corporation by falling between two heavy-laden coke cars, which were moving out of the yards. Both legs were cut off. He had been standing on the top of a coke pile, when he missed his footing and was precipitated on the track.

C.P.R. Acquitted of Blame.

London, Ont., May 16.—An inquest into the death of Alonzo Player of Mount Brydges was held last night. Player was killed a few days ago on the C.P.R. here. The jury brought in a verdict acquitting the company of all blame.

Flashed Wireless From Aeroplane.

Bridgeport, Conn., May 15.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, was successful in sending a wireless message from his aeroplane during a flight Saturday. He was some 3,000 feet up in the air and over Long Island Sound Station in New York, and through a station which had been set up at the aerodrome the message was caught. Owing to the additional weight of the apparatus, much difficulty was experienced by the aviator on reaching the desired altitude.

Following his first flight when he tried the wireless experiment, McCurdy made another flight, taking up with him Lieut. Fickel of the United States army, who attempted shooting with a rifle from the airship at targets on the earth. Owing to the fact that there was a 25-mile breeze blowing which swayed the craft, accurate aim could not be secured, and the experiments were only partially successful.

BLOOD POISON IN HAND

Zam-Buk Works a Wonderful Cure.

Mr. Jas. Daved, of 786 Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, and a fireman at the Hudson Bay Company's stores, says, —"A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk. I cut a deep gash across the knuckle of the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain, and, had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days, I was greatly alarmed, as my whole hand and arm to the elbow became suddenly inflamed and the finger was much discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off my work and go home.

The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned through the dust and dirt about the furnaces and boilers. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement. The pain was relieved and the inflammation lessened. In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores. It draws all poison and foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it too for cuts, burns bruises, and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction with the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent too for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Requisition for $35,000 for a New School--Referred to the Executive Committee

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Education for the purpose of considering the matter of a requisition to the Council for an appropriation for a new school in the northern part of the city.

Present—Messrs. W. P. Hudson, Chairman; O'Flynn, C. M. Reid, Smith, Col. Ponton, Johnson, Sharpe, Moore, Deacon, Wills, Taylor, Mallory Anderson, Ketcheson and Bennett.

The Secretary read a circular from the Education Department.

Also a letter from Mr. H. Sneyd, secretary of St. Thomas Church vestry, stating that the Board's offer for St. Thomas' church property would be submitted to the Synod, but $3,300 is very low, considering that they had an offer of $4,000.

Col. Ponton asked that the Board co-operate with the Board of Trade in securing a free lecture by Mr. Davy, of Ohio, on preserving the lives of our trees and birds. The expense would not be over $5.00.

On motion of Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. O'Flynn, the offer was accepted.

Mr. O'Flynn said the school accommodation in our city is totally inadequate, and if the new school were erected it would not then be sufficient Another school of the same size as that now in hand would be required in the north part of the city, the population of which was growing rapidly owing to an influx of Grand Trunk employees. He moved the suspension of the rules for the purpose of asking the Council to appropriate $35,000 for that purpose.

Mr. Bennett suggested $30,000.

Mr. Wills said that sum would not be sufficient, nor would $35,000, to purchase a site as well.

Mr. Moore agreed with Mr. O'Flynn and seconded his motion.

Col. Ponton thought they should be as moderate as possible. They would next year need a similar school in West Belleville.

Mr. O'Flynn was willing to fill in such sum as the Board decided.

Mr. Reid, from what he had learned at Lindsay, thought they would need at least $35,000.

Mr. Hudson agreed with Mr. Reid.

The resolution and requisition for $35,000 was passed.

Mr. O'Flynn, Col. Ponton and Mr. Reid were appointed to address the Council, and those gentlemen retired for that purpose, and the Board adjourned to the Council Chamber.

On the return of the deputation the Board adjourned.

RECEPTION WILL BE INFORMAL

It is desired that gentlemen who would call on Mr. Bryan at the home of His Honor Judge Deroche, between four and five o'clock to-morrow, will consider that the reception will be quite of an informal character. Doubtless Mr. Bryan will say a few words to the gathering.

In the evening, when the Bridge Street entrance will be opened to ticket holders, Professor Phelps will commence an organ recital, which will continue until the time of the lecture.

HAS A REMEDY FOR SLEEPLESS

The "Spectascope" Causes a Delightful Sense of Drowsiness to Creep Over You

There is a hope for the sufferer from insomnia. A remedy, it is claimed, has been found for the sleepless, and it is not in old time nostrums, but in the recently patented "spectascope." Mr. Haydn Jones, of Caterham, is the inventor of the instrument. In appearance it is a pair of flat "goggles," and consists of a black flat or concave opaque disc, on which are two white spots, so placed as to correspond to the position of the eyes. 'All you have to do is to sit down in a chair or lie on your bed, and look at tht two spots on the disc, which, of course,' become one apparently. The field of vision is now concentrated and reduced to its minimum. A delightful sense of drowsiners will slowly creep over you, and in a few seconds you are wrapped in a glorious natural sleep. "The spectascope," however, is intended to be used in a room lighted either by daylight or a soft night-light. The "monoscope" meets the need of those who wish to sleep soundly without the aid of a light. It is after the nature of the "spectascope," and is placed over the bed in such a position that the eyes are compelled to turn upwards, and sleep is induced.

MRS. WILLIAM B. LEEDS

Widow of the American multi-millionaire, who, in a speech before a coterie of wealthy Americans now temporarily residing in Paris, declared that she had discovered a plot on the part of French detective agencies to furnish fortune-hunting noblemen with information regarding eligible American women of prominence in the financial world. Mrs. Leeds declares that she, herself, has been placed on the market by these would-be marriage bureaus, and as a result has received several distinctly unflattering offers of marriage from needy nobility. The matter has been brought to the attention of the authorities, and it is expected that a thorough investigation with many arrests will follow.

UNIQUE CHRISTENING

Four Great Great Grandmothers were Among Those Present

A christening took place at Geneva the other day under unusual circumstances. In addition to the parents of the child, there were present the following relatives: Four grandparents, one great-grandfather, and four great-great-grandmothers. Their united ages were nearly 800 years.

ONE MAN, SEVENTEEN VOTES

What a champion pluralist was the Rev. Washbourne West, a late Senior Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, who in 1892, at the age of eighty, recorded seventeen votes in different parts of the country and still left half-a-dozen unused. A hundred and twenty votes in four years was Mr. West's achievement; and very proud he was of it, as he more than once told his friends. His only regret was that he could not live to make it two centuries. He recorded eight of his 1892 votes in two consecutive days at places as far apart as Sevenoaks and Mid-Oxford. But this feat was beaten by the seventy-year-old Mr. W. J. Haywood, of Herne Hill, who, at a recent election actually voted in six county constituencies in one day, covering something lke 250 miles in his motor-car.

A TRAGIC SIGHT

Mr. Asquith in speaking recently in Edinburgh said: "One of the most tragic sights in our town life is that of a boy sitting in the tail-end of a van reading some trashy story, rapidly graduating, as soon as his present precarious and short-lived occupation comes to an end, for a place in the unemployable. For years past this has been the darkest blot and the most fatal gap in our educational system."

SOLDIER AND SCULPTOR

Adrian Jones Understands a Horse From Tail Tip to Nostril

It is said of Captain Adrian Jones, who has designed the four-horse war chariot, weighing upwards of thirty tons, which is to be erected in London as a memorial to "Peace," that he is probably the only living sculptor who understands a horse from tail-tip to nostril. As a boy he loved and studied horses, and would have liked to become an artist, but his father had other plans, and he entered the Army. He saw much active service, and was then advised to become a sculptor, having devoted most of his spare time when in the Army to painting and sculpture.

STORY OF A MASSACRE

Noel Williamson and His Expedition Slain by the Abors in Tibet

The story of the massacre of Mr. Noel Williamson and his expedition by the Abors on the frontier of Assam and Tibet is more hinted at than told in a telegraphic report which the Secretary of State for India has received from the commandant of the punitive police force which is lying, too exhausted to advance, at Pasighat. The tragedy begins with Mr. Williamson's arrival at Riu, leaving Dr. Gregorson at Sishsin. On Williamson's arrival in the village," says the report, "the baggage was put down, and the coolies taken to a big house where a quantity of drink was produced. Williamson warned the coolies not to drink too much. Williamson was then led away to Maddu Gam, Vichi, Williamson's Naga servant, following at some little distance. They disappeared round the corner, and the coolies were invited into the house. Suddenly Vichi came running shoutin, 'The sahib is killed.' As if this had been the signal awaited, the village broke into pandemonium. As the panic-stricken coolies burst out of the house they were cut down by the Abors with long swords. One survivor escaped by jumping out by the back of the house and through the other end of the village. Vichi and the cook succeeded in finding two guns and a little ammunition, and with the few coolies remaining retired from the village, using their guns and covering the escape of the surviving Nepalese. It is said that the cook shot himself with his last cartridge. Vichi's fate is unknown. Nothing is known also about the fate of the sepoy orderly. The five survivors fled, chased by the Abors with dogs, eventually reaching the river at Sishsin, where there were no signs of Dr. Gregorson. His tent had disappeared, and only an ominous gathering of crows hung over the deserted encampment. It is said that Gregorson heard firing and started up the hill to help Williamson, being shown the patch by Sishsin Abors. Somewhere on the path, with the treacherous Sishsin Abors behind him and Komsing Riu Abors in front, he met his end. One of the sick who remained at Sishsin with Gregorson was Lal Bahadur, the coolie sirdar. On April 12 a sentry on the river facing Pasighat saw a body floating down stream with an arrow wound in the chest. The body was recognized as Sardar Lal Bahadur's.

"The last written words of the expedition came from Katoki to his wife in Sisserimukh. He wrote: 'Have arrived at Pangighat. Here Kebong forbid going further. Sahib insists on going into the village. My impression is we shall never return.'

"It is still uncertain whether the massacre occurred at Riu or Komsing. I am inclined to think it took place at Komsing."

SKIN TRANSPLANTATION

Remarkable Operations by Breslau and Other German Surgeons

Details of remarkable operations in the domain of transplantation were given recently before the German Surgeons' Congress, sitting in Berlin. The transplantations were of skin, membranes, tissues, nerves, bones, and even articulations. Professor Kuettner, Breslau, reported that he had replaced part of a femur, including the joint, with similar parts from a corpse. The patient died from a tumor some time later, and a post-mortem examination showed that the united bones had grown together perfectly. In two other similar cases the patients were alive and well. Professor Kuettner expressed the opinion that it will henceforth be regularly possible to transplant sound articulation from corpses. Described as the inventor of the above-mentioned method of transplantation, Professor Lexer(of Jena, gave an account of another triumph in this domain. He introduced to the Congress a lady patient who had attempted suicide by drinking sulphuric acid, and who had seriously burned and constricted the oesophagus. Dr. Lexer constructed an entirely new oesophagus out of intestine and a piece of outer skin, and grafted it on instead of the injured organ. It reached from the pharynx to the stomach, and proved completely successful, the patient being able to swallow solids and fluids without difficulty. This is apparently the first time that this operation has been performed, as several other surgeons present gave accounts of unsuccessful attempts.

NEW WALKING STICK

One That is Capable of Holding a Great Variety of Articles

Young men with smart spring suits are asking themselves the question: "Why have your clothes spoiled by bulgy pockets when by buying the newest type of walking stick this can be obviated?" This new stick, for which there is a great demand in London, is capable of holding a big variety of articles. Of course, the sword stick is ano ld idea, but there is now the matchbox carrying stick, the whistle carrier, the pipe carrier, and the cigarette carrier. Thousands of the latter were sold last year. The surveyor out on business need not trouble about his measuring stick, as the surveyor's stick, in the middle of which is a measure, sees to all that. Malaccas and mingiris are immensely popular among young men this season, especially the latter, which, as the name suggests, is an Indian product.

A FOUR-FOOTED PATIENT

A dog was brought to the West London Hospital, Hammersmith, for treatment. Its owner, a young woman, stated that the poor animal had been run over, and she feared the bone of its foot was broken. Being unable to pay for the advice of a veterinary surgeon, she had brought it to the West London. The hurt was carefully washed and dressed by the casualty officer, and the patient was then allowed to be taken home. The owner left full of gratitude for the care and attention bestowed on her pet.

FRANTIC WITH NEURALGIA

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL ALWAYS CURE THIS TROUBLE

Neuralgia is really blood poisoning. To treat it with opium, morphine, cocaine, "headache powders" and other "pain-killers" is a crime.

The only possible way to cure Neuralgia is to purify the blood by making the Kidneys, Bowels and Skin do their proper work in nature's own way.

This is the way "Fruit-a-tives" cures Neuralgia. "Fruit-a-tives" prevents the formation of Uric Acid—keeps the whole system strong and active—and will always cure Neuralgia, Rheumatism and Headaches due to poisoned blood.

VETO PASSES COMMONS

It Will Be Ready For the Lords at an Early Date.

Amendment to Throw Out Parliament Bill Is Defeated by a Big Majority, and Now Tory Peers Can Have a Struggle With It — Lansdowne's Compromise Measure Does Not Find Much Favor With Colleagues.

London, May 16.—The fight in the House of Commons over the Parliament bill, also designated as the veto bill, for the curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords, ended last night. An amendment moving the rejection of the whole bill was defeated by a vote of 363 to 243, and a motion for the adoption of the bill on its third reading was carried 362 to 241.

It is expected that the bill will go to the House of Lords at an early date.

The debate in the House of Lords yesterday, on the second reading of the Lord Lansdowne bill for the reconstruction of the Upper Chamber, indicated that the leader's orders will fail to coerce many of the Unionist peers into voting for a measure involving their own political extinction.

Baron Willoughby de Broke declared that the House as at present constituted, was the best the country could get, and if he were going to perish he would prefer to receive his quietus at the hands of the electors rather than at the hand of their lordships.

Lord Morley of Blackburn, spokesman for the Government, insisted that the passage of the veto bill must precede any settlement or compromise with respect to the Upper Chamber. He threw out the significant suggestion that in any reconstruction of the Lords the number would be restricted to 100. This is regarded as foreshadowing the purpose of the Government when the reform of the House of Lords comes before it for consideration.

Rev. Father Kidd In Charge.

Toronto, May 16.—By the unanimous vote of Bishop Dowling of Hamilton, and His Excellency Monsignor Stagni, Rev. Father John T. Kidd has been appointed administrator of the archdiocese of Toronto, until the appointment of a successor to the late Archbishop McEvay is made.

The rumor that Rt. Rev. Mgr. McCann had been appointed was emphatically denied by all concerned last night. Father Kidd is sole administrator.

Local Catholics are inclined to think that Bishop Fallon of London will be the new archbishop.

Labor Leaders Freed.

Washington, May 16.—Holding that the imposition of jail sentences on Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, president, vice-president, and secretary respectively of the American Federation of Labor, were unwarranted by the nature of the contempt and that the District Supreme Court should only have imposed a fine, the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday freed the labor leaders, and directed that the cases against them be dismissed.

W. J. BRYAN IS IN TOWN

Famous American Public Man Had a Short Tour in the City

Hon. William Jennings Bryan, lawyer, farmer, journalist, politician and orator, of Lincoln, Nebraska, arrived in this city at 12.05 to-day. He was met at the G. T. R. station by many of the prominent citizens, including the Mayor of the city, a number of the members of the City Council and officials of the Y.M.C.A., under whose auspices the distinguished visitor was brought here. Upon the arrival of Mr. Bryan at the station he was escorted to an automobile in which were seated Mayor Ackerman, Mr. C. M. Reid, and Mr. D. V. Sinclair. An automobile parade was then formed, in which automobiles owned by the following parties participated:

E. T. Ketcheson, A. Gribble, W. E. Schuster, L. W. Marsh, J. V. Jenkins, S. E. Carman, H. Greenleaf, Dr. Marshall, J. A. Kerr, Ald. Anderson, C. M. Reid, E. T. Cherry, C. Ashley, W. H. Faulkner, P. Ross and R. Bateman.

The line of automobiles proceeded over the eastern part of the city and then to the Deaf and Dumb Institution. At this place the pupils were drawn up on the lawn and the approach of Hon. Mr. Bryan was greeted by hearty cheers, given in their inimitable manner.

The distinguished visitor then addressed the pupils briefly, referring to the fact that he was pleased to be present and to see that the children were looking so happy and contented. The work of such an institution was commendable, and it was no doubt doing much good. The address was intrepreted by Prof. Coleman, who, as Dr. Coughlin said in introducing him, to the Hon. Mr. Bryan, that he had been a southern soldier 40 years ago. After a drive down Front St. and around Victoria Park, the party repaired to the Hotel Quinte.

The Luncheon.

At the Luncheon at Hotel Quinte, Mr. D. V. Sinclair, Vice President of the Y.M.C.A., occupied the chair. At his right sat Hon. W. J. Bryan. The others present were Mayor Ackerman, Aldermen Riggs and Adams, Judge Deroche, Messrs. Hy. Pringle, W. B. Deacon, C. N. Sulman, S. Burrows, J. Elliott, F. E. O'Flynn, H. F. Ketcheson, A. E. Bailey, W. C. Mikel K. C., ex-Mayor Sulman, T. Blackburn, C. S. Clapp, J. Dyer, Dr. Coughlin, Supt of the D. & D. Institute, E. Dickens, J. L. Hess, Sec. of the Y. M. C. A., G. J. Sovereign, Director of the Y.M.C.A., Lucius E. Allan, E. P. Frederick, W. A. Chown, and C. A. Harte. The lunch provided by mine Host J. V. Jenkins was all that could have been desired.

After luncheon Mr. D. V. Sinclair introduced Mr. Bryan, who spoke briefly. After thanking those present for the cordial reception he had received he referred briefly to Y. M. C. A work, which he said was not a new thing with him. He had been a member for 30 years and the first day he arrived in Lincoln he joined the Association, and has now been a member of it for 21 years. This work of the Association is no new born zeal of his. He told of the different countries in which he has delivered his lecture on "The Prince of Peace." His work in the Association is growing as he continues. He was pleased to say the Y. M. C. A. was a good idea which had been borrowed from Great Britain, but many improvements have been made in it. In the U. S. there are 400,000 members out of a total of 800,000. $8,000,000 is spent annually by the Y.M.C.A. in the U. S., which is a proof of the estimation held of the Y.M.C.A. Four times as much is spent in the Y.M.C.A. as is spent on a national campaign which occurs every four years. We are taking an interest in the Young Men's Christian Association. A great amount of this money is spent on new buildings. The Association shows a constant growth

MIXED MARRIAGES ARE PERFECTLY VALID

As Long as They are Performed by a Duly-Authorized Clergyman—Anglican Letter Sent Out—Church and State Should be United in this Matter, Says House of Bishops

As a result of the recent mixed marriage controversies that have been going on throughout Ontario and Quebec, the House of Bishops of the Anglican Church in Canada has expressed itself in a statement, copies of which are being sent to every clergyman in the Dominion, to be read from the church pulpits next Sunday.

The Bishops admit that mixed marriages are to be deprecated, but they "emphatically assert the validity of such marriages when duly solemnized, and maintain that when once consummated they are indissoluble. No marriage should be annulled because of the divergent religious convictions of the parties, nor because of the ecclesiastical connection of the one solemnizing the marriage. And whatever be the proper interpretation of the existing law, it is of the greatest importance that there should be one uniform marriage law for the whole Dominion."

Text of the Letter.

The letter from the House of Bishops is as follows:—

"We, the Archbishops and Bishops of that branch of the Catholic Church known as the Church of England in Canada, to the faithful in Christ Jesus: Greeting:

"Whereas the minds of many have been greatly disturbed by a decision in the courts of the Province of Quebec annulling a marriage between two members of the Roman Church, solemnized by one authorized by the State to officiate at marriages and by enforcement of the decree known as the 'ne temere' decree by the Bishop of Rome, and Grave Civil Injustice.

"Whereas we believe the said decision to be contrary to the Christian ideal of marriage, to involve grave civil injustice and to be in its consequences destructive to the home life of the people;

"We deem it our duty to address you upon this subject.

"We desire to remind you that the Anglican Church in Canada has ever taken the strictest view regarding the sanctity of marriage. It is a holy ordinance, instituted by God, and is the foundation of our social and family life. The Church and State must unite to guard the marriage bond, and to presreve its indissolubility. To this end our General Synod has decreed that no clergyman shall officiate at the marriage of any divorced person during the lifetime of the former partner in the marriage.

Solemnity of Marriage.

"It is most desirable that those who enter the holy state of matrimony should realize its solemnity, and have due regard to its blessings and mutual responsibilities. We greatly deplore the lowering of the ideals and purposes of marriage which is so common in many quarters. It is of the greatest moment that those who enter into this estate should be married by a clergyman of the Church before proper witnesses, and, whenever possible, in the church building, and that they should be in agreement concerning their religious convictions. Mixed mariages are ever to be deprecated as they deprive husband and wife of that mutual help which the one should be to the other in life, and make the religious training of the children in the home most difficult.

"Nevertheless we emphatically assert the validity of such marriages when duly solemnized, and we maintain that once consummated they are indissoluble.

"No marriage should be annulled because of the divergent religious convictions of the parties; nor because of the eccesiastical connection of the one solemnizing the marriage.

Church and State Must Unite.

The Church and State though separated by law, must unite in protecting those who have been married by a duly competent officer, authorized by the State for the solemnization of marriages, and in upholding their civil status and rights. Nor should the State permit marriage to be annulled for an ecclesiastical offence, or because it is contrary to the Canon law of the Church of Rome, or contrary to the laws, rules and regulations of any religious organization whatsoever.

"At the same time we fully admit the right of any ecclesiastical or religious body to make and enforce such spiritual penalties as may be in accordance with its own rules; but without impeaching or interfering with the civil status of the parties concerned.

No Opinion on Civil Law.

"We do not desire to express any opinion on the Civil Law. We leave that to our final court of justice. But we would remind that the decisions of various judges have differed upon this question in the Province of Quebec. It is in the interest of all our citizens to have the law clearly defined.

"Whatever may be the proper interpretation of the existing law, it is of the greatest importance that there should be one uniform marriage law for the whole Dominion.

"In conclusion we ugre upon all the duty of safeguarding in every way the sanctity of the marriage, and we deprecate and deplore all interference with legally sanctioned family life, as fraught, not only with injustice, humiliation and suffering to the parties concerned, but as imperilling the fundamental basis of our social system.

"Signed on behalf of the House of Bishops of Canada.

"S. P. Rupertsland,
"Primate.
"Charles Ottawa,
"Archbishop of the Ecclesiastical Province of Canada."

The Fifteenth Regiment did not have a march out last night, but paraded at the Armouries. There was a good turnout and the members were put through an excellent drill by the instructor. Col. U. S. SENATE BUSY ON OTHER BILLS

Will Not Take Up Canadian Reciprocity Until July

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Canadian trade bill is still in the hands of the Senate Committee on Finance.

The resolution providing an amendment to the constitution that hereafter Senators may be elected by direct vote was reported a week or ten days ago. It is the "unfinished business." This means that it has the right-of-way until it has been voted upon. So far as can be learned, the direct elections resolution will occupy the attention of the Upper House until the middle of June. If this be so Canadian reciprocity cannot be formally taken up for discussion until that time, unless the Senate should vote to sidetrack the direct elections measure.

Very little work has been done by the Senate since Congress met in special session on April 4th.

KING GEORGE UNVEILS LONDON MEMORIAL TO QUEEN VICTORIA

Impressive Ceremony Held Before Buckingham Palace in Presence of German Royalty and Many High Officals—Silent Tribute of Races to Revered Ruler—His Majesty Eloquently Expresses Nation's Satisfaction With Kaiser's Attendance

LONDON, May 16.—"This monument is the tribute of races and legions more various in character and circumstances than have ever been combined upon common purpose before. It is source of deep satisfaction to me and my family that my dear cousin, the Emperor of Germany, accompanied by the Empress, is present at this historic ceremony. His Imperial Majesty is the eldest grandson of Queen Victoria, whom he always loved and venerated with natural affection, and his presence and sympathy with us during the last few days of her life and afterward, will never be forgotten by me and my people. Strong and loving ties of kinship and friendship unite our thrones and persons. The nation rejoices with me that he is here to-day to share in the unveiling of this memorial."

So declared King George today in an eloquent tribute to the late Queen Victoria. The occasion was the unveiling of the great marble memorial fronted by a statue modelled to her likeness, and surmounted by a gilded winged Victory, on the piaza before Buckingham Palace. It was unveiled by Queen Victoria's grandson, King George V.

The ceremony was conducted at noon in the presence of Emperor William and other descendants of the Queen, numerous members of the British and German royal families, including Empress Augusta Victoria and Princess Louise, members of the Cabinet, colonial representatives and many other prominent persons. The weather was perfect, and St. James Park was crowded. The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London performed the religious rites with music by massed choirs from severel cathedrals and chapels conducted by Si Walter Parratt, who was private organist to the late Queen.

As a spectacle the unveiling was brilliant. The King and the Emperor William were dressed in the uniform of British field marshals, wearing the blue sash of the Order of the Garter, across their shoulders. The Queen, the Empress and the Princesses appeared in bright costumes, with large picture hats. The Prince of Wales wore the uniform of a naval cadet, and the younger princes were in white naval suits. Mr. Winston Churchill, the Home Secretary, attended upon the King.

Outside the circle of royalties were the heads of the embassies, and high court officials.

At the conclusion of the religious services, Thomas Brock, who made the marble statue of Queen Victoria, was knighted by the King, who in the ancient way, tapped the kneeling recipient on the head with the sword. The Emperor placed an immense wreath at the foot of the statue, an example which was followed by an officer of the German dragoon regiment of which Victoria was an honorary colonel.

CURRENT COMMENT

The experiment of oiling the streets as a preventive of dust and a means of preserving their surface from wear is to be tried. The objects sought to be attained are highly desirable and all will hope for the success of the experiment, and the more particularly so as it is asserted that oiling is less expensive, taking the season through, than watering.

Perhaps the best supplementary verse to our National Anthem is that supplied by Mr. Martin Skiffington:

With England's crown to-day,
We hail our King, and pray
God save the King !
Guide him in happiness,
Guard him in storm and stress,
Then in Thy Kingdom bless,
And crown our King !

But five verses of National Anthem is quite enough, though in Chile they have 40, in Siam 63, and in Uruguay 70.

The sapient wisdom of the Toronto Globe discovers that "Imperial federationists are visionary and impractical though inspired by a desire to promote what they regard as the best interests of the Empire. Their lack of economic understanding is shown by their belief in a similar tariff for all parts of the Emipre." That sort of economic understanding gave to the pregnant union of England and Scotland its first and final coherence, made the success of the American union possible, created the Dominion of Canada, and compacted and inspired the German Empire—the four greatest political developments in the world's history since the French Revolution. —Ottawa Journal.

Belleville needs more Public Schools. That is an undeniable fact, and that want must be supplied at the earliest possible date. Most of the old school houses are out-of-date in every respect and are overcrowded as well, so that additional school accommodation is absolutely necessary. The Board of Education have undertaken the task which has fallen to them of providing for the immediate future as well as for the present. Belleville is growing rapidly in population as well as in prosperity, and the growth at present is just where school accommodation is the most restricted, namely, in the northern part of the city. So, after having undertaking the erection of a ten-room school in the southern division of the city, they have decided on building a similar school house in the northern division of the city. For this purpose the Board have presented to the Council a requisition for $35,600, which is to be passed upon by the Executive Committee. That body ought to have no hesitation in complying with the request, as the proposed school is an absolute necessity.

COMFORT FOR THE TRUSTS

Mr. Bryan Sees a Loop-hole—Standard Oil Decision Not Much of a Victory

Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, the famous statesman, orator and publicist, who is in town to-day, was yesterday at Toronto and was interviewed by the Telegram, which furnishes the following:

A different looking man is the William Jennings Bryan of to-day from the Bryan of the last presidential election, when he made the effort of his life to win the honor which he has thrice sought from the hands of the American people. Then he looked jaded and worn—prematurely aged by the terrible strain of constant speaking. To-day, when seen by the Telegram, at the National Club, he looked the picture of health, and those political wiseacres who have buried him (politically) had better watch his sepulchre pretty closely.

Mr. Bryan has been touring Ontario in the interests of the Y.M.C.A movement in which he has been a prominent figure for years. He has spoken thus far in London, St. Thomas, Woodstock, Paris, Galt, Hamilton and last night in Stratfrod. He says he has seen more of this part of Canada during the last two weeks than he ever saw before.

WHAT IMPRESSED HIM.

The distinguished Nebraskan admits he was a little surprised to find so many large towns in Ontario—towns of 10,000 and upwards. He has found that a lecture tour is a fine way to find out about a country, for wherever he goes he meets representative people and he thus has a better understanding of the country than could be secured in almost any other way.

HE'S A FARMER.

Mr. Bryan, who is a farmer when he's home—in fact he has two farms, one in Nebraska and the other in Texas—was impressed with the Ontario agriculturists.

"The well kept farms I have seen," said he, "give one an impression of thrift."

"You are fond of country life, Mr. Bryan?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the commoner with a smile. "I found on my southern farm the greatest rest I needed after the wear and tear of campaigning."

CHANCES IN 1912.

That reference to campaigning made the interviewer very bold. He asked a question—the perennial one which has been asked and answered so often that Mr. Bryan is heartily tired of it—"Will you be a candidate for president in 1912?"

NOT TELLING.

The face of the editor, orator, politician and publicist, which before had radiated geniality, became suddenly cold and that wonderful mouth shut tightly for a moment and then he said:

"I've quit answering that question. I'm tired of it, and I won't answer it now!"

CAN MAKE OR MAR.

The interviewer left the personal for the social and asked about the chances of the Democratic party in the next election. Mr. Bryan quickly resumed his old manner and replied:

"The chances look favorable. The present Congress will do a great deal to make or mar the chances. The House, which is now Democratic, is doing splendidly, and I have confidence that it will continue to do so."

STANDARD OIL TRUST.

Asked his opinion of the significance of the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, which holds that the Standard Oil Company is a monopoly in restraint of trade, and must be dissolved, Mr. Bryan thought for a moment and then said:

"This decision is likely to make the trust question more of an issue than it has been in recent years. While on the face of it the decision seems a victory for the Government, it virtually amends the anti-trust law by construing it to prohibit not ALL restraint of trade, but only such restraint as the courts, after each lengthy litigation, may decide to be unreasonable.

HAVE TRIED IT FOR YEARS.

"The trusts have been trying to secure just such amendments to the law for years, but have failed, and it is likely that an effort will now be made to make the law more stringent so as to leave no room for such a construction of it. But whether it will be possible to secure such litigation in the near future no one can say.

"The dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan represents what I believe to be the majority sentiment among the people."

Railway Accidents

The Interstate Railway Commission has just made public its report of the railroad accidents in the United States during October, November and December of 1910. The report applies only to steam roads doing an interstate business. Even when the number and length of American railways are considered the toll of killed and injured seems a very large one, especially as regards the number of railway employees hurt or killed.

In the last quarter of 1910, the number of persons killed on the rights-of-way of the interstate railroads was 2,766, and the number hurt was 40,321. Train accidents were responsible for 248 of the deaths and 3,729 of the injuries. There were 1,834 collisions in the three months, and 1,532 derailments, and 550 "miscellaneous" accidents—boiler explosions and such. Ninety-six passengers, postal clerks, express messengers, newsboys, etc., were killed in the accidents—30 of them in the train accidents—and 3,346 were hurt. Of the railway employees, 201 were killed in train accidents, 935 in bridge accidents, etc., 60 while coupling cars, and 107 in "industrial" accidents; the number hurt in the train accidents was 2,054, and in all the accidents 34,276. The number of tramps, other trespassers and casual careless citizens killed in the three months was 1,628, and the number hurt was 2,699.

A total of 2,766 persons killed and 40,321 injured in only three months is shocking, especially as minor accidents which do not keep a man from work more than three days are not reported. The same average would in a year give over 10,000 killed and over 160,000 hurt. Each year sees advances made in safety devices and better protection, but the figures of the report show that there is room and need for a great advance.

Standard Oil

The judgment rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Standard Oil case, while satisfactory in a sentimental sense, is unfortunately a victory of the Pyrrhic order, in which the winner gets the shells and the loser the oysters. In other words, the combine is to be separated into its component parts, but the public will profit nothing—nay, may perhaps be the victim of further extortions by pretences of increased cost of management. Canadians have a practical interest in this matter, as the majority of the refineries in this country are either owned or controlled by the Standard octopus.

Following is a brief history of the case which has been decided:

Once before the institution of the present suit the Standard Oil Company was dissolved by the courts and forced to reorganize. This was in 1892, when the company was an Ohio corporation.

The present suit against the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey was filed by the Government on November 15, 1906, by Attorney-General Moody, under the direction of President Roosevelt. The form the suit took was a petition in equity against the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and its seventy constituent corporations. It was filed in the United States Circuit Court at St. Louis. The filing of this suit came six months after Commissioner of Corporations Garfield made a report on the company to the President declaring it to be a monopoly.

This report was made in response to a resolution in Congress. In reply to this report the company, in a long statement made to its stockholders on May 16, 1906, declared that it was a "palpable absurdity" to call the company a monopoly, and took the Government to task for casting aspersions on it when the courts were open.

The Standard Oil Company's answer to the suit was a general denial of the allegations of a conspiracy to establish a monopoly. They denied accepting rebates from the railroads, and said that whatever rates had been made to them were available to all persons engaged in the business. At the hearing the exhibits were introduced, showing that in seven years the profits of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana alone had amounted to more than $10,000,000 on a capitalization of only $1,000,000. At the time the suit was first filed the company issued another statement addressed to its stockholders in which the directors expressed confidence that they would "vindicate themselves before the public and the law."

It has been estimated that the assets of the Standard Oil Company, which the highest court has now ordered to be dissolved amount to $600,000,000 in plants and properties. For the last seven years the company has paid dividends of $40 a share. In 1900 and 1910 it paid $48 a share. Its lowest dividend was 36 per cent. in 1904.

In 1909 the stock of the company got down to $635 a share, and later, in 1910, to $585. Its low record this year was $617. To-day it sold at $679 3-4. The high-water mark for Standard Oil stock was touched in 1901, when it sold for 943.

A PALPABLE HIT. The contributors to the final cost of the Farmers' Bank disaster owe their start in life to the genius that enabled Hon. W. S. Fielding to outwit Mr. W. R. Travers, remarks the Toronto Telegram. And the genius of Hon. W. S. Fielding will secure for the farmers of Canada, through the operations of reciprocity, benefits similar to those which the same genius secured for the shareholders and depositors of the Farmers' Bank through the operations of W. R. Travers & Co.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Wheat prices sank under free selling in the last half of the session to-day. The decline was coincident with talk by a prominent operator that crop prospects in this country could hardly be better, and that a fall of 10c a bushel from present values might easily take place. Closing figures were the same as last night to ⅜c down. Final trades left corn ⅛c off to a shade up; oats unchanged to ⅛c to ¼c higher, and hog products less expensive by 10c to 20c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅛d to ⅜d higher than yesterday, on wheat, and ¼d higher on corn. Antwerp closed ⅜c lower on wheat, Buda Pest ½c higher, Paris ⅛c higher. Berlin closed unchanged.

TORONTO, May 16.—The railways reported 133 carloads of live stock at the City Market, consisting of 2116 cattle, 1489 hogs, 1244 sheep and lambs, 555 calves and 2 horses.

Exporters.

There were three loads of exporters sold by Maybee & Wilson, weighing 1250 lbs. each, at $5.90 per cwt.; one export bull, 1700 lbs., at $4.90. These sales show that the export prices were about steady with Monday's prices.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree bought for the Harris Abattoir Company 500 cattle, as follows: Heavy steers, $5.70 to $5.85; butchers, $5.60 to $5.75; cows, $4 to $5.10; bulls at $4.50 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The demand for feeders and stockers seemed to be greater than the supply, as there were a large number of farmers on hand looking to get a supply for grass feeding. Short-keep feeders, $5.60 to $5.85; ordinary feeders, 850 to 1000 lbs. each, $5.25 to $5.50; stockers, 500 to 800 lbs. each, $4.40 to $5, and $5.25 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were not large, nor was the market any too brisk. Prices ranged at from $47 to $53 each.

Veal Calves.

Wesley Dunn, who bought the bulk of the calves, reported prices as ranging at from $4 to $6.50 per cwt., or an average of $5.60.

TWENTY SIX-FOOTERS

A Startling Example of How Oats Create Height

Archdeacon Sinclair, in advising boys to eat much oatmeal, said this: "Among my brothers and my father's brothers and sisters there were 20 six-footers, all brought up on oatmeal."

Oats contain more body-building food, more brain-building food, more nerve-building food than any other grain that grows. No other item in all human diet compares in importance with oats. Nothing else creates so much energy.

But thousands of people buy this food carelessly. They accept oatmeal made from oats as they run—the plump and the small, the rich and the worthless.

Quaker Oats is made from the cream of the oats, selected by 62 siftings. Only ten pounds in a bushel are good enough for use in this food. The result is a richness and flavor that all enjoy, and the maximum value as food.

Yet Quaker Oats, despite its quality, costs but one-half cent per dish. Does it pay to take something inferior?

CHAPTER VII.

Which Contains a Mystery.

Guelfo was punctual to his appointment that evening and found Ellis waiting for him, apparently in a far more comfortable bodily condition than when he had seen him a few hours previously, for he had dined well at Vian's in the Rue Danou and his mid-day discomfort had failed from his mind.

Together they sat smoking and drinking occasionally glancing at the performance and chatting over general matters. But their conversation was frequently interrupted by people coming up to greet Guelfo, who seemed to be well known in that haunt of Parisian frivolity.

"You're well known here, Guelfo," said Ellis, after a time.

"Oh, yes, you see I've got a bit of a name and—"Excuse me a moment," and the financier rose and walked away in the crowd.

Ellis watched him and saw him speak to the man wearing the pince-nez whom he had noticed some hours previously entering the office in the Rue Scribe. The conversation was clearly not an amicable one from the expression the two men wore. Guelfo's face had a determined look, while his companion appeared sulky and dissatisfied. But the financier evidently got the better of the argument, if argument it were, for with a shrug of his shoulders the man turned away and was lost in the crowd as Guelfo, with a smile on his face, returned towards his seat. Ellis, who had also risen, and moved away some few yards in order to catch his friend's proceedings, had time to regain his chair before Guelfo joined him again.

"Did you see that fellow?"

"No," he replied, ready with a lie.

"A man I shall have to squeeze. He's forever worrying me for tips and good things, as if I had nothing in the world to do but to put folk up to making money. But he wo'nt trouble me again, I fancy, after the jacketing I gave him just now. Let's have a drink."

"No, Guelfo, I'm off. I'm a bit tired and want a good night's rest. Remember, I've to face that infernal Channel again to-morrow."

"Then you won't stay another day and see something of Paris?"

"Can't, thanks. The sooner I'm back the better. I've got a lot to do before I can get free. I'll see to all arrangements for you and let you know the date of sailing. When shall you be back in London?"

"In a day or two. Send me a wire and I won't keep you waiting. Shall I see you to-morrow morning?"

"I think not. I shall go by the early train, but you can write me if you have anything to say. I open all letters myself. Good-night.' And the two rogues parted company.

The following day proved exceedingly fine, and without a breath of wind and when Ellis arrived at Calais his heart was gladdened by the peaceful appearance of the sea. On this occasion there was no need for him to hurry along to secure a private cabin. He felt quite equal to remaining on deck, and in a spirit of derision of the powers of Neptune he walked up and down with an unconcerned air, and after a time, feeling no threatenings of evil to come, went so far as to light a cigarette.

The boat was carrying a large number of returning tourists, and owing to the exceptionally fine weather the deck was crowed. In his walk Ellis' eyes fell on the figure of a man seated in a deck chair in the lee of the funnel. Something about his appearance caught Ellis' attention, and, turning in his walk he passed him again. Yes, he was certain now. He was the man wearing the blue pince-nez who had entered Guilfo's office as Ellis had left it on the previous evening, and who afterwards had had a conversation with the financier in the music-hall.

The man was deep in the Petit Journal and had not raised his eyes.

Ellis continued his somewhat demonstrative march, and at length the man looked when the two men were opposite each other, but he betrayed no sign of recognition. He cast a casual glance at Ellis and returned to the perusal of the paper. There appeared to be nothing amiss with his eyesight now. The blue glasses had disappeared and he held the paper at an ordinary distance from the face.

Could the glasses have been used merely as means of disguise and not from necessity? It seemed almost as though it were so. Could the man before him have been the owner of the mysterious badge or symbol that he had picked up the moment after their first encounter? It might be so. At any rate it could not have been dropped many moments, for their was considerable traffic up those stairs in the Rue Scribe.

Ellis was feeling absolutely light-hearted from his present immunity from mal-de-mer, and in a spirit of mischief, more than anything else, he made up his mind to try an experiment.

Taking the article from his pocket he toyed with it as he walked, tossing it up, and catching it again in an apparently careless fashion, yet as he passed the reader, keeping one eye on him.

NATIONAL GALLERY HAS GREAT YEAR

Momentous Period for British Art—Some Magnificent Bequests—Number of Visitors Increased

Sir Charles Holroyd, the director, reviews in his annual report one of the most interesting years in the history of the National Gallery and the National Gallery of British Art.

The year 1910 was one of momentous happenings to the national collections of pictures. There was the bequest of 194 pictures under the will of Mr. George Salting, and a number of gifts. The latter included a Ford Madox Brown and two Frederick Walkers, two specimens of Jacob Haris, two of Josef Israels, and six Gainsboroughs.

Four purchases were made at a cost of $26,000, and they included Crame's "The Poringland Oak" and Hogarth's portrait of Dr. Hoadley, the Bishop of Winchester.

The 260 additions to the galleries during last year are divided as follows:—

Italian school	29
Dutch school	71
Flemish school	15
Spanish school	2
German school	3
French school	34
British school	86

A daily average of 3,047 persons visited the National Gallery on the 207 free days during 1910, and the 206 free days at the Millbank Gallery showed an average of 1,340 visitors.

The Sunday visitors were: Trafalgar Square, 69,012; Millbank, 65,859. The fees for students' days at both galleries showed a marked increase on the year 1909.

LITERARY NOTES

CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

There is a fine variety of interest in the May Canadian Magazine. "Fort George: It's Awakening," by Russell R. Walker, is a delightful description of the beginning of one of the new towns along the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. "Canadian Independence," by John S. Ewart, is the kind of article that causes discussion. It makes a frank plea for an acknowledgement of Canadian independence in view of the fact, as he sets forth, that we are independent. "Fleets of Peace," by C. A. Bowman, is a good and timely appreciation of the sumptuousness of the passenger vessels in the Canadian inland waters "Loyalist Shelburne," by Daniel Owen, is an interesting historical sketch of an old Nova Scotian town. "Town Christeners in the West," is a breezy article by Arthur Hawkes on how new towns in the West get their names. There are other articles of interest.

PRISON REFORM IN OPERATION

By Winston Churchill's Scheme About 100 Convicts Will Be Released, But Under Surveillance

The new scheme for the treatment of convicts inaugurated by Mr. Winston Churchill has come into operation. About a hundred convicts will be released. Some of them may not want assistance on leaving prison, but they will all be handed over to the care of the newly-formed Central Association, whose surveillance will take the place of the old system of ticket of leave. Under the old method of working a convict could earn from ten to thirty dollars during his term of imprisonment. On his release half of this was generally used for his benefit through the agency of a prisoner's aid society or similar body. But now the new central body will appropriate the whole of the money earned by the prisoner. If the associations efforts do benefit him, he will certainly get his money's worth. But if these efforts fail his money will have been swallowed up.

The assistant secretary to the Prison Commissioners, in the absence of Mr. Basil Thompson, the secretary, has seen fit to discuss the new scheme.

"The convict," he said, "has never had a legal claim to this money, which has hitherto been paid on the condition that half was administered through the aid society for the particular prison from which the man was discharged.

"But it was understood that he had a sort of moral right to it. Now the moral right will disappear, and the gratuities will go to the central body, which will use these sums, of course, for the man's benefit.

"These gratuities, with the grant of $35,000 which the Government is making, will probably pay all the expenses involved in the setting up of the new body, so that no fresh burden will be cast on the existing societies, whose work should be assisted by the centralization and co-ordination of their efforts.

"Of course, there will still remain the obstacle of the natural reluctance of employers to engage ex-convicts. It has been difficult hitherto to find other than laboring work for these men, as people hesitate to give them positions of trust."

The assistant secretary of the Central Committee of Discharged Prisoners' Aid Societies said that there were about one hundred societies engaged in the work of befriending ex-prisoners. Many of them, however, dealt with both ex-convicts and men released after short sentences.

He also stated that the Home Office had under consideration a scheme to set up a new authority—similar to the one which begins work with ex-convicts to-day—to deal with the short-sentence men. This body will probably be drown largely from the central council, strengthened by Home Office representatives.

"But as to a new career of hope for convicts," he said, "to my mind that could only be achieved by planting them on a Pacific island—giving them capital, if need be, for a start—setting a gunboat to look after them and see they did not escape, and leaving them to work out their own salvation it would be cheaper in the end."

IN PRAISE OF NELSON

"The Most Fascinating Man I Ever Conversed With."

Eight letters written by Nelson's chaplain on the Victory, the Rev. A. J. Scott, have just been sold by auction. While off Toulon Mr. Scott wrote to Lady Lavington:

"I never yet in my life met with so pure a mind as his, every thought flowing from the lusty family of selfishness is a stranger to his breast. He possesses that impulse of genius which, to whotsoever point the mind be turned, conceives, judges, and determines what is to be done, with promptitude."

It was his duty to accompany the body home after Trafalgar. On Dec. 10, off Spithead, he writes:

"Let the country mourn their hero. I grieve for the loss of the most fascinating companion I ever conversed with. The greatest and most simple of men—one of the wisest and most innocent—interesting beyond all. On shore—in public, and even in private life, men are not always themselves, and put on their behavior with their clothes—but if you live with a man on board of ship for years—if you are constantly with him in his cabin—your mind will soon find out how to appreciate him—the more you knew Nelson the more you loved him."

He was horrified later to find that a price was charged for viewing the coffin in St. Paul's, and remarks that no wonder the French call us a "nation boutiquiere." With this batch was a letter by Capt. Wells, of the Thunderer, describing the hero's death:

"I much fear his honors were the cause of his death, as he evidently was picked off from the rest, wearing his stars in action, which, in my opinion, was rather indiscreet. He loved to hear victory pronounced, and that the few ships of the enemy that were able were making off with all possible sail. It had a very great effect on him. He appeared pleased and happy, and thanked God for allowing him to outlive the day, and died almost immediately convulsed—his joy was too great."

This interesting series of letters realized $305.

THE ALTAR OF FASHION

Wholesale Destruction of Rare and Beautiful Birds

Addressing members of the Royal Colonial Institute, London, on the subject of "The birds of the Colonies and their preservation," Mr. Jas. Buckland said the critical condition of many of the more rare and beautiful birds of our colonies, due to their destruction in the millinery interests, was one which it was imposible to adequately realize or to exaggerate. Among ornamental feathers assumed for show during the courting season the strangely beautiful tail of the lyre bird of Australia was unequaled. A few years back over 400 lyre birds were killed in one district in a single season to supply the London plumage market. It was not so long ago that some sordid vandals surrounded a patch of scrub in which some representatives of this fast-disappearing genus were known to be breeding, and setting fire to it they shot down these avian marvels as they struggled through one pitiless ring of fire only to meet their death in another. The plumes having been cut off, the bodies were thrown aside to rot. No species could withstand such ill-timed slaughter as this, and it was a fact of sinister import that 152 tails only had been catalogued this year in the London feather sales. The egret had been practically exterminated in North America and in China, and was so thinning its ranks throughout the world that the best selected plumes were now fetching over $40 the ounce at London feather sales, double the value of gold.

ELEPHANT HUNTER'S INCOME

The first meeting of creditors under the failure of the Hon, Rupert Cecil Craven, a son of the third Earl of Craven, was held at the London Bankruptcy Court, when it was stated that the debtor's occupation had been mainly that of elephant hunting, which produced him an income of $2,500 a year.

The debtor owes about $5,000, and has no assets. He attributes his position to heavy expenses in connection with divorce proceedings in 1899 and to loss over South African shares in 1905

The case was left with the Official Receiver to be wound up in bankruptcy.

SOME ANCIENT DOGS

It is impossible to say when dogs were first domesticated, but some of the earliest traces are found on Egyptian monuments, with figures of dogs, somewhat of the greyhound type, which date back to at least 3,500 B.C. Even in those remote days the dog was highly esteemed. Coming down a little later, we read that Ulysses, 3,000 years ago, was recognized by his dog Argus after his swineherd had failed to do so. Plutarch speaks of Alcibiades, who cut off the tail of his dog, and Myron, the sculptor, immortalized the animal by chiseling his image in marble. The Romans valued their dogs, and kept them for the chase and also as pets. Alexander the Great owned a veteran dog.

A RUSTIC FUNERAL

In compliance with his wish, the remains of John Long, a farm foreman at Rowley Hill, Saffron Walden, were borne to the grave in a farm wagon, drawn by four favorite horses. His employer and all the employes on the estate followed. Long had worked on the same farm and for the same family for 56 years, while among those who followed the coffin were six laborers who had been employed on the same estate between 37 and 47 years.

FASHIONS ETIQUETTE RECIPES CHIT-CHAT

Many women and girls who have a habit of lifting their eyebrows when they are talking have three horizontal lines on the forehead, which will end in abiding furrows if not treated in time. Here is a good way. First, cleanse the face with warm water, and soap, rinsing well, so as to remove all the lather; dry with a soft towel, not rubbing, but patting. Now apply a good skin food across each line, and commence to massage. The first and second fingers of the right hand are dipped in the food; those of the left hand placed one in each hollow just above the bridge of the nose and one at the hair line on the forehead to hold the skin steady, while the right hand fingers tap the food briskly into the horizontal ridges several times. Then the entire forehead is gone over with a rotary rubbing movement from the brows upward. Never let the fingers get dry while the treatment is going on, but as soon as the skin absorbs the food, lubricate again, but do not apply more than the skin will absorb.

How to Wash Gloves.

Girls who wear the convenient washable kid gloves find that the easiest and most effective way to get them clean is to wash them on the hands. They should be carfeully drawn on so as to be smooth over the fingers. Then the hands are washed with a good white soap just as if they were bare. Make a thick lather and rub them thoroughly together. If the ends of the fingers are especially soiled use a soft nail brush for them. After rinsing off the soap it is a good plan to give them a second gentle rubbing with soap and another rinsing to finish the process.

The gloves can be taken off wet by turning them inside out and re-turning when off the hands. But do not pull them off by the fingers—it will stretch them badly.

Age and High Collars.

We are told by eminent authorities that the stiff, high-boned collars that women wear bring on old age by constantly pressing upon the thyroid gland, thus causing it to become degenerate and producing premature old-age.

No woman who has had this condition explained to her will ever want to return to the uncomfortable and dangerous high boned collar again. For some time past fashion has given it a cold shoulder, and if women once realize that it destroys beauty and brings on old age, along with its notural discomfort, they will eschew it forever.

Old age is a disease characterized by the "abundant growth of connective tissue, diminution of the oxidations and a condition of auto-intoxication." This disease is caused by the degeneration of the glands with internal secretions, especially the thyroid. The preventive treatment of old age is in no way less possible than that of any other disease.

To prevent old age coming on too soon the first condition necessary is the possession of healthy ductless glands, say the doctors. Of course this depends upon heredity. But the next generation can be benefitted by the present one taking proper precautions along this line.

It is easy to see that a tight collar offers difficulties to the free circulation of the blood through this thyroid gland, and, therefore, it is advisable to wear a loose and also a low one. One would think that women would be quick to avail themselves of their immunity from a yoke which men have voluntarily endured for so long a time, particularly as it works such direful results, as well as being wretchedly uncomfortable.

The Fichu Revived.

The always feminine looking fichu is revived in the modes for the new summer frocks. On the waists of some they form almost the only trimming. The fichu works well with the fashion for collarless bodices slightly V-shaped at the neck, filled in with a lace chemisette. As first aid to a frock not quite up to date it gives vauable assistance.

BRITISH BUDGET DOWN

Lloyd-George Announces Another Successful Year.

Only Novelty in Latest Report of the Chancellor Is a Proposal to Pay a Salary to Members of Commons—He Has a Surplus of $28,035,000, of Which Seven Millions and a Half Are to Be Given to Sanitariums.

London, May 17.—Chancellor Lloyd-George presented the budget in the House of Commons yesterday.

About the only novelty it contains is a proposal to pay members of the House of Commons a salary of $2,000 a year. The Chancellor declined to give members traveling allowances or pensions, and excluded from the salary benefit all Ministers already drawing salaries.

The Chancellor's realized surplus, including payments delayed in 1909-10 by the action of the Lords in throwing out the budget of that year, totalled $28,035,000, of which he proposes to donate $7,500,000 to the support of sanitariums for consumptives. His estimated expenditure for the current year is $906,170,000, which is $37,750,000 more than last year.

The Chancellor's estimated revenue for the current year is $908,580,000. There is no fresh taxation provided.

Of the increased expenditure of $38,750,000 over that of last year's budget the navy, civil service and old age pensions account for most of this enhancement. The payment of members of the House of Commons will absorb a further sum of $1,250,000, while the coronation will add another $1,500,000 to the demands of the Treasury.

Mr. Lloyd-George claimed that the British fiscal system had passed through an exceptional strain with added lustre. During his three years' tenure of office, the Chancellor declared, he had paid off $130,000,000 of the national debt, while it has been reduced $350,000,000 since the Liberals had assumed power. The Chancellor said he had reached the conclusion that the prospects of a continuance of good trade were excellent, as the trade barometer stood set "fair." Of the estimated revenue of $908,580,00 the big items are the customs and excise duties, which are depended on to bring in $348,000,000, death duties of $125,750,000, income tax and supertax of $221,500,000 and the postoffice revenue of $128,700,000.

The Chancellor, as was anticipated, announced the revision of the cocoa import duties, from which the protective effect is removed. This involves the small loss of $225,000.

The Opposition criticism on the budget centered in the provision for the payment of members of the House of Commons, to which Austen Chamberlain declared he was unalterably opposed, as it would deprive members of the British House of the unique distinction of serving without pay. He predicted that it would flood the House with money-grabbing politicians seeking an easy livelihood.

A. J. Balfour, the Opposition leader, obtained the promise of the Government that an opportunity would be afforded later to debate the question fully.

Aqueduct Plans Burned.

Montreal, May 17.—Damage difficult to calculate was sustained by the city yesterday morning at 10.30 o'clock, when fire completely cleaned out the stores department of the waterworks, at the corner of St. Charles, Borromee and Lagauchetiere streets.

S. Lafond, clerk and storekeeper, had a narrow escape when the flames burst from the paint room and singed his coat as he sat at his desk, and seven draughtsmen on the upper floor, besides losing valuable instruments, were not able to save the plans and notebooks they were working on. As a result the engineers will have to go over their work and calculations for the new aqueduct again, delaying the work for months. While blue prints of the older works are stored in another place, the plans of the men were engaged upon had not been completed, and no record of them now exists.

The building was valued at $800, and the damage to the contents, valves, watermain fittings, etc., is estimated at $20,000.

TENTATIVE DRAFT READY.

Anglo-American Treaty Progressing to Affixing of Signatures.

Washington, May 17.—The proposed treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain has at last reached the stage where it is to be presented to the British Government for its approval.

Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain, before the Cabinet met yesterday, had a half-hour conference with President Taft, during which certain points in the treaty was thoroughly discussed. This was the first conference which these two advocates of permanent peace have had since the President announced his intention of negotiating with Great Britain for such treaty.

State Department officials have been constantly at work upon the treaty and yesterday Secretary Knox presented to the Cabinet for its approval a tentative draft. Apparently it was most satisfactory to the President and his official family as a whole.

Secretary Knox, after the Cabinet meeting, announced that the tentative draft probably would be submitted to-day to Ambassador Bryce for transmission to the British foreign Office.

Exchange of dates between the two nations will follow. When the draft is accepted by both countries, the treaty will be signed and submitted to the United States Senate for approval and ratification.

WILL WRITTEN WITH STICK.

Pathetic Report of the R.N.W.M.P. Tragedy Received at Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 17.—A pathetic tale of suffering, borne with fortitude and patience, culminating in the death from starvation in the northern wilds, of Inspector Fitzgerald and three other members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police force, was received by Col. Wm. White, comptroller, in the form of a report from Corpl. Dempster of Dawson, Yukon, who was sent out to investigate the tragedy.

There is no little pathos in the report, which includes a diary of Inspector Fitzgerald for the ten days preceding the slowly and grimly approaching death. In a will of 22 words, written with a burnt twig, the inspector left all his possessions to his mother, ending the document with the words "God bless all."

The theory that the party lost their trail and were compelled to eat their dogs and eventually starved was all too true. The official diary discloses the whole story. It is heart-rending in the extreme. Inspector Fitzgerald's last words were written Sunday, Feb. 5, stating that the men were forced to eat their dogs while staring death and starvation in the face, reveals some conception of the awful outlook confronting the party on the last day.

DECISION IS FINAL.

Any Judge Can Order Combine Probe, Says Ruling.

Montreal, May 17.—That there is no appeal from an order of a judge directing an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act of Canada, is the effect of a judgment given in the Court of Appeal yesterday by Mr. Justice Cross, and supported by the other judges on the bench.

It was in the case of the United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Drouin Metal, and on account of the precedent which it establishes it was awaited with interest by a host of lawyers and industrial interests.

The result of the judgment is that the investigation into the United Shoe Machinery Co.'s alleged combined "combine" may be continued, as originally ordered by a judge of the Superior Court.

It was announced later, however, that the United Shoe Machinery Co. would immediately carry the case to the Privy Council. This will mean that the three commissioners appointed to carry out the investigation into the so-called combine will not be able to make a move for some time, in any event.

"A Storm In a Teacup."

The abandonment of the scene, he asserted, was not due to fear of American feeling, but the result of conclusion reached by the Canadian committee that the episode was not typical of Canadian life.

GETTING STUNG AGAIN

Canada's Waterways Commission Ignorant of Their Job.

Advice of Their Expert Was Set Aside Says C. A. Magrath, and Now an Agreement Regarding the Milk and Mary Rivers May Cause the Ruin of Thousands of Farms In Alberta Irrigation Districts.

Ottawa, May 17.—Since the early forenoon yesterday until late last night the House had under discussion the bill relating to the establishment of the International Joint Commission under the waterways treaty.

The case of the critics of the Government was in the hands of C. A. Magrath of Medicine Hat, whose abundance of grey matter and knowledge of irrigation problems made the task of defence extremely difficult, and, so far as a layman could judge, exceedingly "lame."

Mr. Magrath says that under the agreement entered into between the representatives of the two countries a situation has arisen in Southern Alberta which, it is claimed, may do everlasting harm to the Canadian farmers in that territory, and may turn prospective smiling farms into arid wastes. In other words their supply of water is threatened. He contends that the Canadian representatives who agreed upon the waterways treaty have jeopardized Canadian interests through absolute ignorance and neglect of ordinary precaution, and so apparently have the interests of Alberta been sacrificed that one of the experts employed by the United States Government has publicly stated that this is so.

The chief argument of Mr. Magrath was in connection with the Milk and Mary rivers, which flow from the United States into Alberta. The former of these, after traversing one hundred miles of Canadian territory, returns to the United States and empties into the Missouri system. By the arrangement come to, water can be diverted from the Mary River into the United States to the Milk River. Mr. Magrath pointed out that the whole water of the Mary River was necessary for irrigation in Alberta. Mr. Oliver claimed that Canada had no choice in the matter, and that the United States, if so minded, could divert the whole of the water of the two rivers, so that none would enter Canada at all. The Opposition constitutional lawyers argued that this could not be done.

Another statement made by Magrath was that the advice of the only expert appointed by the Canadian Government had been set aside, and that there was "not an expert within one thousand miles of the negotiators on the part of Canada," whereas the United States negotiators, as usual, had a number of experts at their elbow. Canada, by slipshod methods, had undertaken to manufacture experts.

He declared that no parallel was to be found in the history of any business in the wide world.

Hon. Mr. Oliver complimented the previous speaker on his knowledge of the situation. He agreed with him in many respects, in most respects. Mr. Oliver explained that Canada was to get half the flow of the St. Mary's River in high water and three quarters of the flow in low water. Two international rivers flowed from the United States into Canada; one of those remained in Canada, while the other, the smaller, turned back again into the United States. But the alternative of Canada was not as between getting half or three-quarters of the flow of the river, but between getting what we did get and nothing at all. The United States proposed to divert the St. Mary's River into the Milk River and so take the flow to Montana irrigation works.

Mr. Borden asked what right the United States had to do this. He could not find that they had any authority for the proposed diversion.

Mr. Oliver said he agreed with Mr. Borden as to the question of the abstract right. The Unted States, however, had the power, as the river where the diversion was proposed was entirely in United States territory.

Major Currie asked if Canada could not divert back the water to the St. Mary's River, from the Milk River, after the United States had diverted it, as the Milk River ran through Canada, after the point where the work was to have been done.

Mr. Oliver said this was undoubtedly the case. But although this could be done, the fact was that Canada by this rediversion could not use the water for the lands it was proposed to irrigate directly from the St. Mary's River, and without the double diversion.

Had Him There.

Kingston, May 17.—Henry A. Lesslie swore before Magistrate Farrell that he had not received notice he had been placed on the "prohibited list." License Inspector C. W. Wright, however, produced evidence to show that Lesslie had signed for the registered letter giving him notice. He was fined $20 and costs.

Almost Asphyxiated.

Kingston, May 17.—Gas escaping from a coal stove almost killed Mrs. Harold Timmerman, her four children and Robert Knowles and his wife. Knowles, although deathly sick, awoke in time to get a doctor, and the others came around all right.

H. B. Commissioner to Retire.

Winnipeg, May 17.—It is stated on what is claimed to be good authority that Commissioner C. C. Chapman of the Hudson Bay Co., will retire June 30, on a life pension of $25,000 in recognition of his great service, and that he will live in England.

Resigned Pastorate.

Tillsonburg, May 17.—Rev. F. Oliver, who had been pastor of the Baptist Church here for several years, has rendered his resignation.

DIAZ WILL RESIGN?

U. S. Officer Says Two Months Will See Him Out.

Washington, May 17.—President Diaz of Mexico probably will resign in two months according to a telegram received at the White House last night, from Col. Steever, in command of the United States troops at El Paso. The telegram reads:

"Prospects for peace brighter to-day and armistice will probably be agreed upon in twenty-four hours. Madero demands four places in Cabinet, one of them Secretary of War, and fourteen governorships. Mexican Government agrees to give him Gobernacion and Justice and possibly one other, while the Secretary of War is to be chosen jointly by the two parties. Madero will likely get ten governorships, Diaz to resign after new governors appointed, probably in two months. This is the latest fairly reliable information I can procure."

The minor conditions of peace include the pensioning of soldiers, the payment of indemnities out of the public treasury and arrangements for the reconstruction and repair of public utilities.

The question of the resignation of Diaz has been diplomatically avoided in the peace terms. The revolutionists obtained their demand that soon public announcement be forthcoming from the President as to his intention to resign when peace should be restored.

The feeling is that Gen. Diaz will give way to Senor de la Barr as Provisional President within two or three months, and that a general election will follow within a month or two later. The provisional governors will hold office until state elections shall have been arranged.

The President's advices indicate that the insurrecto army in Mexico now numbers 27,000 men, while the federal army is only 23,000.

Ought To Be Careful.

Ottawa, May 17.—At the evening session of the Royal Society of Canada, Prof. Ramsay Wright delivered the presidential address on "The Progress of Biology."

He urged the careful selection of the class of immigrants to be admitted to Canada. Earl Grey and M. J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the U. S., were present.

Prof. Wright said it was believed the physical basis of heridity had been discovered in certain particles in the cells of organisms. The problem had been attacked in more than one way; by means of statistics by the principles of the school of eugenics, who sought to show the effects of the introduction of good and bad stock in the race. London, for instance, was slowly becoming decadent. "We ought to be careful in the selection of immigrants into Canada. If we can get a good quality of immigrants from the British Isles, I think that is where we should look for them."

They at present get $2.

BAD FIRE IN PEEL, N.B.

Twenty Buildings Are Destroyed With Loss of $25,000.

A Score of Persons Are Homeless as a Result of a Disastrous Blaze That Broke Out as a Gale Was Raging—One Man Called From Destruction of Goods to a Fi. Which Endangered Property Elsewhere.

Peel, N.B., May 17.—With the wind blowing a hurricane and everything dry as a tinder from the prolonged drought, a fire caught on the roof of the house yesterday owned by Herbert Clark, and occupied by himself and Howard Boyd, and after an hour's hard fighting some twenty buildings are in ashes, a score are homeless and there is a monetary loss of nearly $25,000. The fire is supposed to have caught from a burning flue, and the beautiful residence with contents and the buildings adjoining were swept away, entailing a loss of $5,000 with only $700 insurance.

W. W. Melville lost a barn and contents with small insurance. Harry Carr's building and contents were wiped out with a loss of $1,000 or $1,200 with small insurance.

The buildings owned by Mr. Ross were saved with difficulty, but a large barn owned by Manzar Clark was burned with its contents. His house was also damaged to the extent of about $2,500.

Aldrich Hatfield lost his house and everything he owned, entailing a loss of about $1,500.

The fire leaped from these buildings to the McIntosh house occupied by John Thomas. The buildings are a total loss. Some furniture was saved. The fire worked back and caught in Thomas McRae's fine new farm building and as a result his house, two sheds, three barns, machinery and furniture were burned. The loss is $5,000 with $600 insurance.

Clarke Craig had 500,000 lath stored at the C.P.R. tracks, which were wiped out with no insurance. Mr. Craig was called from this fire to one at Charleston, where his mill was threatened.

Many other buildings were endangered in the conflagration, but the river was close at hand and the telephone brought crowds from every quarter and the fire was soon stopped.

CITY'S ASSESSMENT SHOWS GAINS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

The Total Valuation Has Increased to Nearly Five Millions—A Gain of Over $628,000 from Last Year—Population Increased by Nearly 500 - A Gain of More than 2000 in Six Years—Rents and Real Estate Values Have Mounted High—Evidences of Prosperity on Every Hand

Following is the report of Mr. J. A. Kerr, City Assessor, which was presented to the Council on Monday night:

To His Worship Mayor Ackerman and Members of the City Council.

Sirs,—I beg leave to report the following report taken from the assessment of the City of Belleville for 1911:

14 Murney	5,930	8,420
	$130,060	$155,355
Increase		$ 25,295

The above figures show an enormous advance over the 1910 assessment. $628,276 of an increase, against $58,861 increase in 1910, seems almost incredible. Rents have advanced considerably, together with advanced prices in real estate, for recent sales compel me, according to the Assessment Act, to make these changes. Property holders who are not raised more than 14 per cent. should have no more taxes to pay this year than they paid last year. Owing to the population of the city being brought in last year at over 10,000, we are compelled to reduce the retail business assessment 5 per cent.

THE POPULATION.

The population of the City of Belleville is steadily increasing, this year showing an advance of 432 over the census of last year, the total now being 10,440.

Total population in 1905	8,387
Total population in 1911	10,440
Increase in six years	2,053

an increase of twenty-five per cent.

ALL MUST ANSWER CENSUS ENUMERATORS

The Law Imposes Penalties For Failure or Refusal To Do So

The census enumerators will commence their duties on June 1st, and in this connection it may be stated that a penalty can be imposed upon persons who refuse to answer the questions of a census taker.

According to the statute, every person who wilfully or without lawful excuse, refuses to give an answer or who falsely answers a question, is liable to a fine of not more than $50 nor less than $5 for each offence. This rule applies particularly to manufacturers who might refuse to divulge information about their business.

All officers engaged in the work of taking the census are sworn to secrecy so that no one need fear that any information secured will be passed around.

It will be impossible, even at Ottawa, for anyone to ascertain particulars about any concern for the purpose of comparison. A system of papers is used whereby certain answers are written on a stub which is detached, thereby rendering identity with any firm impossible. Most of the questions relating to the output of a business, etc., are dealt with in a collective way.

In the case of a family moving away after the first of June, which is the deciding date, before they have been reached by an enumerator, the collector of statistics in the place to which they move will call upon them.

CONTINGENT FOR THE CORONATION

The three members of the Fifteenth Regiment who have been chosen to attend the Coronation are awaiting orders as to when they are to proceed to Quebec to go in training before they leave for the old country. It is expected that they will go some time next week; consequently the orders will not be long coming. They will traintrain there for about ten days before leaving with the Canadian contingent for England. Artillerymen from the west, who are in the class with the regulars, will arrive in Quebec on May 22nd to train with the local troops.

ALETHA SUSTAINED BUT LITTLE DAMACE

The steamer Aletha, which went ashore two weeks ago in Navy Bay, after drifting helpless before a high wind with her steam all gone, through the main pipe bursting, went down the bay to-day and will resume her regular run from here to Picton. When she was released by the Donnelly Wrecking Company a week ago Saturday she was towed to Picton, where she underwent a thorough overhauling on Hepburns' ways there and it was found that owing to the toughness of her bottom there was very little damage done to her. A week was sufficient to get her in shape.

STOLE PLANKS, BUT ESCAPED JUSTICE

Yesterday Mr. Richard Arnott, who purchased the old curling rink from the C.N.O.R. officials, discovered that some of the planks were missing, and, upon making enquiries, he found a number of the planks in the yard of a party who resides near there. Mr. Arnott, not wishing to prosecute the party, allowed him to go after he had returned the planks taken.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

ALL DRUGGISTS

LOCAL MUSICIAN WON MUCH APPLAUSE

The following copied from the Owen Sound Times, refers to Mr. Reginald Geen of this city, whose musical talent is well known and much appreciated here: Nothing but compliments can be extended to Mr. Geen on the successful rendering of Maunder's sacred cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," in the school room of St. George's church last evening. Though not large, the chorus was well balanced, the sopranos being supported by the boy choristers. The work is exacting in some of the recitative of which there is a larger proportion than usually found in Maunder's compositions.. Good expression was given both in the chorus and solo numbers, and the conductor had the attention of the singers throughout. Dr. Cowper, Mr. Dawes and Mr. Howard Large took the tenor solo parts, and Messrs. W. Jackson, William Brooks and George Brooks the baritone solos. The sacredness of the work had its effect in suppressing well-merited applause. Mrs. Frank Horton and Miss Maud Spragge were the accompanists on an arrangement for duo piano, two Heintzman pianos true in pitch and tone, being particularly effective. An arrangement of the March to Calvary by Mr. Geen being a most commendable feature of the piano work. The boy choristers deserve special mention. Their clear tones and careful expression made their numbers quite the attraction. The appreciation of the audience was expressed in its approval of a very complimentary reference made by Rev. Mr. Ardill at the conclusion of the oratorio. The National Anthem concluded a very enjoyable musical evening. The seating capacity of the school room was almost entirely taken up by the audience.

DEATH LIST

JAMES WILLIAMS.

Our Arden correspondent writes under date of May 15th:—James Williams, license inspector of this district, passed away on Sunday morning. The cause of death was a cancer on his jaw. He bore this terrible suffering with Christian fortitude. He was born in Camden East, and settled in Arden when a young man. He was engaged in lumbering operations for a time. He farmed and ran the saw mill for a time. He was a devout member of the Anglican church and with his good wife, were lavish in their charity to the poor. He was a great Conservative.

JAMES WALTERS.

Mr. Charles Walters, of this city, received a message this morning from Napanee announcing the death of his uncle, Mr. James Walters, which occurred in that town at an early hour this morning. Deceased, who was about 75 years of age, had been a merchant tailor of Napanee for many years. He was a man well known and highly esteemed and was known to many in this city. Deceased was a member of the Masonic and Oddfellows societies and a member of the Anglican church. He was a brother of the late Mr. Thomas Walters, of this city. An aged widow and a family of three sons and two daughters survive. The funeral on Friday afternoon will be under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity.

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD HAD A FINE TRIP

The Presbyterian Guild of St. Andrew's church held an altogether interesting event on Monday evening last in the shape of a Spring Tour from Chicago to Montreal and return, via Port Huron and the Sarnia Tunnel. Each tourist was provided with a free ticket on which were the names of the places visited. Only eighty-four trunks were allowed each passenger. The conductor of the Tourist Train was Mr. R. McCreary, the brakeman, Mr. W. Leslie. There was a dining car in connection with the train and refreshmnets were served. An impromptu programme was provided en route by Mac Waters, D. Bowen and H. Montgomery. The trip was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Cobwebs in the Morning.

Cobwebs in the head on rising in the morning is the result of a Lazy Liver, one or two mornings in succession and sick headache follows.

Father Morriscy's Liver Pills will clear the Brain.

These Pills are a purely vegetable compound prepared with great care, and are without doubt the very best pills for general use, on the market. The greatest care has been given to selecting the ingredients, and being entirely vegetable, they act upon the liver and bowels in such a manner as not to disturb the other functions of the body as many pills do.

As a Liver Invigorator, Blood Purifier and General System Renovator, they are unequalled. Sick headache is invariably brought on by a sluggish liver, constipation or irregular bowels; these pills are a cure for sick headache in any form.

Pimples, eruptions and yellow skin are often caused by a lazy liver; one pill three times a week, will soon clear the complexion.—Price 25c. per box.

WOODBINE MEETING.

Whether or no there is to be mutuel speculation at the Woodbine matters little, so far as future betting on the King's Plate is concerned. Of course ,there's not much, but sufficient to show St. Bass the favorite at even money, Powderman (Hendrie), second choice at 8 to 5; Seagram 7 to 1; and Davies 10 to 1. The probable starters are: Powderman, St. Bass, Miss Martimas, Jane Shore, Hanrock, Legislator, Sanderling, and Placerland. Shilling is sure to have the mount on Powderman.

It will be easy for the public to follow the movements of the highly tried colt, St. Bass in the King's Plate. His rider will be the only jockey in the race sporting white as the chief silk. The full colors for Mr Giddings' entrant are white blouse blue stars; red bars on white sleeve, red cap. Mr. Arthurs whose Roving Rob is a doubtful plater, has not registered colors, and the platers, Brampton and Courtown, have practically been withdrawn.

Earl Grey and the Countess will arrive in Toronto Friday for the O.J.C. spring meeting. The gaiety at the opening, with the governor-general and party present for the coronation year opening, will be an inspiring contrast to last year, when the opening had to be postponed owing to the demise of King Edward.—World.

THUMBS BURNED TO THE SWITCH BOARD

Reuben Jewell Electrocuted at Picton Electric Light Station

PICTON, May 16.—Reuben Jewell, aged sixty, was electrocuted at the electric light station this morning, twenty-two thousand volts passing through his body and killing him instantly. He was alone at the time of the accident, but when found his body was ten feet from the switchboard, he evidently having been hurled that distance through the shock of the voltage. He was cleaning the switchboard and by mistake touched two parts of the transmitter, getting the full force of the voltage. The ends of his two thumbs were found burned to the switchboard.

NEW ENGINEER FOR THE QUEBEC BRIDGE

OTTAWA, May 16.— An order in Council was passed to-day appointing Mr. C. C. Schneider of New York, a former president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and now probably the foremost bridge engineer on this continent, to be a member of the commission of three engineers in charge of the construction of the Quebec bridge. Mr. Schneider succeeds Mr. Charles MacDonald, who accepted a place on the commission only until the contract was awarded.

The St. Lawrence Bridge Company, who have been awarded the contract, for the superstructure, are now arranging for the establishment of an assembling plant for the bridge site.

To test the freshness of eggs drop them slowly into a bowl of water, and if the small ends come up they are fresh.

THE MAY ROD AND GUN.

"In the land of the Moose Bird," the story of a trip eleven hundred miles by canoe and portage from the north shore of Lake Superior to Hudson's Bay, via the Albany River, forms the attractive feature of the May issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock, Ontario. The narrator is Mr. W. J. Malone, one of the many visitors from the States who finds in the wilds of Canada advantages, from a holiday point of view, impossible to obtain elsewhere. Mr. Malone's writing is full of life and vigor, and his narration is brightened by accounts of incidents by no means usual even in exploration trips taken so far afield. The route taken was one few white men, apart from Hudson's Bay employees, have followed and the story is the more interesting on that account. With such a good opening the reader is led on to the other articles and stories and in particular should attention be directed to the papers on the Big Game Problems and the Destructiveness of Wolves. Accounts of Western Hunts are good and should interest hunters in eastern and central Canada.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE RED MILL.

From Martin & Emery.

Holland Figures Prominently in the Gay Musical Comedy.

A brillian event is anticipated at Griffin's Opera House on Tuesday May 23rd. The occasion will be notable because it will usher in an engagement of what has been pronounced one of the best musical offerings of the decade, "The Red Mill," which under the direction of Martin & Emery Co., made an all year run in New York last season, and has since completed engagements of four months in Chicago, three months in Boston, and two months in Philadelphia. Additional importance obtains through the fact that the play is by those necromancers of stage composition, Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, who gave us that delightful comic opera, "The Prima Donna," with Fritzi Scheff the bright particular star.

In seeking a novel setting for his play, Mr. Blossom happily hit upon the country of Holland, which has heretofore not been served up very much by dramatists. The characters in the piece, with two exceptions, are all Dutch, and their quaint and brightly colored costumes, exhibited in a framework made up of whirling Dutch mills and Delft decorations, form some very novel and pretty stage pictures.

The story revolves around the adventures of two smart, but financially embarrassed Americans, who are "doing" Europe, and get stranded at Katwyk-aan-Zee. They try to beat their board bill, but are caught by a stern sheriff, prosecuted by an unrelenting tavern keeper and sentenced by a burly Burgomaster to work out their debt. This they do by acting as waiter and interpreter. A dainty love story is introduced into the plot, which involves the two Americans, a dashing navy officer, a piquant barmaid, and a Burgomaster's daughter, and flirtatious sister. There various characters are impersonated by a group of exceptionally clever players which includes a company of over fifty people, including the Dutch Kiddies and the company's orchestra.

THRILLING ESCAPE OF A LUNATIC

Jumped Through Window of Train at Outer Station at Kingston

KINGSTON, May 17.—Feigning sleep, thus deceiving Immigration Inspector Peter Devlin, of this city, who had him in charge, Hugo Tchirch, a German-American patient of the Protestant Insane Hospital, at Verdun, Que., whom the Inspector was deporting to St. Louis, Mo., escaped from the Grand Trunk train this morning, as it pulled out from the outer station, by leaping from the window. Mr. Devlin, not being able to jump out after him, was compelled to travel to Belleville, where he notified the nearby stations by wire. He came back to the city on a freight train and securing a horse here, he scoured the surrounding country in search of the fugitive, but found no trace of him.

Mr. Devlin did not have the man shackled, as he was in very poor health.

Tschirch is a short man, being about five feet, four inches in height. He weighs 125 pounds, and is of fair complexion, having brown hair and light grey eyes. He is about thirty years of age and will probably apply to some farmer in the neighborhood for food. He is a lunatic without any criminal tendencies.

AUTO COLLISION NARROWLY AVERTED

At about noon yesterday an accident was narrowly averted at the corner of Front and Bridge streets. It is alleged that an automobile, which was exceeding the speed limit, was proceedings along Bridge Street, when, in crossing Front Street, it not only narrowly escaped colliding with a pedestrian, but also with a vehicle. The police obtained the number of the car and are now endeavoring to ascertain who were the occupants.

MAJOR CARMAN TO COMMAND TROOPS

Balgonie Military Officer to Have Charge of Section of Troops at Coronation

The Regina Leader says: "The officials in charge of the assembling of the Canadian military Coronation contingent have conferred an honor upon Saskatchewan—Regina in particular—in appointing Major R. B Carman, Major of C. Squadron Sixteenth Light Horse, with headquarters in this city, to the command of all cavalry assembled in Canada to go to the Coronation. Major Carman will have charge of the entire western contingent, comprising military representatives from all units of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Mantoba, until they arrive at Quebec, where Col. McLean, the officer in command will assume control.

"Major Carman will then assume the command of the cavalry corps, consisting of two squadrons of three companies each. A captain will have charge of each squadron with three lieutenants as assistants.

"Major Carman joined the 15th Argyle Light Infantry in 1894; in 1902 he signed on as Lieutenant in E. Troop, R. Squadron, Sixth Canadian Mounted Rifles; in 1907 he was appointed a captain in the Sixteenth Light Horse on organization, and today is Major of C. Squadron, with Regina as headquarters."

Belleville is thus honored in the person of one of her popular "old boys," Major Carman, being the eldest son of Mr. T. S. Carman, and Major Carman's many friends here will learn with pleasure of the distinction which has been conferred upon him.

Cavalieri declined a cheque and insisted on cash in hand before she would absolve Chanler from his solemn engagements.

CURRENT COMMENT

Belleville is on the up grade. No room for knockers.

At last the British M. P's. are to be paid for their services. No travelling expenses or allowances will be made so they will not be as liberally dealt with as are the members of the Dominion Parliament.

Hon. Mr. Fielding appears to be afraid that his reputation will suffer if the reciprocity agreement is not carried. He need not worry. Canada will relieve him of all responsibility before long.—Guelph Herald.

As Mr. Bryan is a farmer a visit to a few of the up-to-date farms and cheese factories and an inspection of some of the herds of dairy cattle hereabouts would have had an educative effect upon our distinguished visitor.

The work of making reciprocity agreeable to the New Brunswickers is going on merrily. At St John word was received from Hon. Mr. Pugsley to the effect that $500,000 was to be expended on harbor improvements.

General sympathy will be with Hon Frank Cochrane in the death of his aged father, who passed away at Clarenceville, Quebec. Deceased was a well known and highly respected resident of that district.

In his address to the pupils at the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb yesterday, Hon. W. J. Bryan said that while they were unfortunate in being devoid of hearing, there were some politicians who would envy them in that respect, as they then could not hear the hard things that were said about them. Canada has in Messrs. Sifton and Aylesworth, two politicians who are deaf; but still they are not happy because they can read the remarks of their critics.

The Kingston Standard, having turned its attention upon the high birth rate of the French-Canadian people, rises to remark: "If the French-Canadians keep on producing children at their present rate they must in the end overrun the country." It is about fifty years since such an idea became popular. Dr. Hingston, of Montreal, put a temporary check to it twenty years ago by pointing out that the death rate among French Canadian children was for various reasons almost proportionately high. Dr. Hingston's statistics were supplemented then and have been sustained since by the fact that the census returns of Canada for half a century have shown that the French Canadian people have not increased more rapidly in proportion than the rest of the people. We venture to add a prophecy that this year's census will show that they have increased less rapidly during the past ten years, owing to the influx of immigration other than French-speaking —Ottawa Journal.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE RED MILL."

Of all the musical successes which have been endorsed by New York, Boston and Chicago, none stand out more boldly than does Martin & Emery Co.'s production of the Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert musical story, "The Red Mill," which comes to the Griffin Opera House, Tuesday, May 23rd. The tone of refinement which pervades this unusual musical play, the modest and picturesque costuming, the interesting and clever story of two American tourists who have gone broke on a travelling trip and who, after many complicated situations, find themselves assisting in an escape from the old red mill, form one of the most sensational stories ever given a musical setting. It is made doubly interesting by the introduction of some of Victor Herbert's most tuneful music. Mr. Herbert has fitted Mr. Blossom's unique story and telling lyrics with melodies that will be hummed and sung and whistled for many years to come. Among the best musical numbers heard in "The Red Mill" are "Every Day is Ladies' Day With Me," "You Never Can Tell About a Woman," "Go While the Goin's Good," "The Streets of New York," "Because You're You," "The Isle of Our Dreams," and "I Want You to Marry Me."

Included in the cast are James Crawley as Con Kidder, Wm. Moore as Kid Connor, Harry Sleight, Bert Perry, Jos. Collins, Percy Bacon and the Misses Lenore Butler, Vernice Martyn, Fay Adams, Lula Demison and a chorus of forty, including the six little Dutch Kiddies and an augmented orchestra. Plan at Doyle's Drug Store to-morrow.

about which we hear so much, does not mean living on one food exclusively, but on foods that harmonize.

Certain elements of nutrition are essential to health, but all these elements cannot be obtained from any one food—hence the necessity of a variety.

Deficiency of one or more of these elements, such as iron, for instance, in the blood, will cause anaemia, rundown condition and sleeplessness.

If you are one of the unfortunates who have drifted into this state, change your diet, eat foods that are rich in the mineral elements of nutrition, and take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, which contains no oil and supplies iron to the blood in the most easily assimilated form.

Vinol creates an appetite, aids digestion, makes pure healthy blood. In this natural manner it builds up the rundown, weak and debilitated. If you don't find this to be a fact we will return your money if you will try a bottle. J. S. McKeown.

MICHAEL FRASER HAPPILY MARRIED

Aged Midland Man Tells the Judges of His Wedding

"Happy as the day is long," was Michael Fraser's description of his married life given to the three Divisional Court Judges who visited him at his home in Midland.

Mr. Fraser told how he met his wife. "My little wife and Miss Weston were friends, and my little wife used to go out and visit her many times. I possessed a pretty little boat on the lake down there, and they used to come and ask the loan of it. I used to give it to them every time. That is how the acquaintance thickened. The little woman liked me and she accepted me. No trouble whatever. Not a cross word since nor a crooked word between us. Of course, ladies have little ways of their own that they like to keep to themselves."

"You never made a will yet?" was the next query.

"Never," Mr. Fraser replied. "I have a horror of those things. It is next to going to die."

The aged bridegroom was introduced to the judges by his wife.

"People are taking a great interest in your affairs?" Mr. Fraser was asked.

"Yes," he replied. "It is the few hundred dollars that I own that they want to grab at."

Mr. Fraser said that he believed he and his brother John had between sixty and eighty thousand dollars. His brother died about two years ago.

Mr. Fraser said that his wife had not a dollar from him yet, but he had made hints to her that in case he dropped off the money would be all hers.

"I saw the little woman (his wife) on the road and I saw that she was a good, modest little woman, and good enough to boot, and I asked her to marry me and she accepted me." The marriage took place shortly afterwards. His proposal was made the first time he saw her.

Why So Anxious?

Under this heading The Intelligencer has shown why President Taft and other Americans are so very anxious for reciprocity, their objects being various, but all of the same character, namely advantage to their country, to the detriment of Canada, by the exploiting of our natural resources as raw material for their manufactures and the opening of the Canadian market to the lower priced, but inferior, products of American farmers, whereby the farmers of Ontario would be compelled to accept lower prices for their products.

Further most important information of this character is furnished by the arguments laid before the U. S. Senate committee on the subject by the large deputations from the Buffalo and other Boards of Trade.

Here are some of the sayings of those gentlemen, as reported by the Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Evening News:

Prof. George M. Forbes, of Rochester, was the first speaker. He declared his city to be unanimous in favor of reciprocity. Asked upon what grounds, he replied, "a reduction in the price of living and the establishment of MORE PROFITABLE relations with Canada."

Evidently this learned gentleman does not read the market reports from both sides of the line, otherwise he would come to the same conclusion as have President Taft and the Buffalo News, namely, that the cost of living is slightly higher on this side of the line than in the United States, hence his idea of reduction in Rochester is a mere figment of his imagination.

And here is where the alleged "enormous benefit" to the farmers of Ontario comes in. The News' report continues:

> A telegram which the delegation had received from the Crandall Horse Company of Buffalo was read, saying:
> "Monday we sold Daniel McGregor, of Toronto, to be retailed on open market, 19 work horses for $4,570, or an average of $240 per head, to which 25 per cent. duty must be added. If duty was removed Canada and the Northwest would be the best buyers for at least 20,000 horses this season."

A highly pleasing prospect, truly, for the horse breeders—those of the United States, not those of Ontario, however.

Here, again, are further "crumbs of comfort" for the farmers of this province. We again quote the News' report:

> A letter from J. C. Dold, the Buffalo packer, who was compelled to leave early in the afternoon on pressing business, was also read. Mr. Dold said in part:
> "On behalf of this industry I wish to state that along with other packers of Buffalo I do not believe that the reciprocity agreement would affect stock raising, at least not in our territory, adversely. Canada does not produce the high grade of corn fed cattle we do. The Canadians have, however, in the past supplied a great deal of feeding and breeding stock, which, under the reciprocity treaty, could be shipped over here, fed on our farmers' grain, admittedly the highest source of return a farmer can get out of his feeding grain, and not counting the humus value to the soil—the Canadian farmer could even afford to ship these fat cattle back again and market them in Canada as such.
> "As to sheep and lambs—some years ago Canada shipped many lambs into this market. Being of a superior breed these were much sought for by the feeders of the Eastern States for the profitable conversion of their grains into fat mutton. This condition might come about again to the equal advantage of Canadian breeders and American feeders.
> "As to hogs—the peculiar type of hog bred and raised in Canada and their feeding, for a large part, on pea meal, makes Canadian bacon sought for at a premium in England, often at from one to two cents per pound over American bacon. THIS, I BELIEVE, WILL CREATE A LARGE MARKET FOR HOGS RAISED BY AMERICAN FARMERS TO BE SHIPPED INTO CANADA FOR DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION. THIS WOULD BE OF LARGE BENEFIT TO THE AMERICAN PRODUCER."

Certainly; but where would the CANADIAN producer come in? Of course, every Ontario farmer ought to be prepared to vote "early and often" for a policy which would deprive him of the home market for his savory bacon, and replace it with the oily corn and filth-fed product of the neighboring country.

Mr. Elliott C. McDougall, President of the Buffalo Clearing House, told of another way in which to "benefit" Canada by means of reciprocity. The News' reporter represents him as saying:

> "As to the charges against the Hill railroads going to Canada, he said he could not see how that would hurt this country.
> "THEY WILL BRING THE WHEAT DOWN INTO THE UNITED STATES AND WE WILL BUILD THE ENGINES TO HAUL IT," he said.

And the Government of Canada, and the three great railway companies which have expended hundreds of millions of dollars in building railway lines, elevators and steamships, will be relieved by reciprocity, in Mr. McDougall's belief, of the sordid task of handling and hauling the products of our western provinces, and hand over the traffic to American railways, lake ports, elevators, canals and seaports. A truly delightful prospect—for the Americans.

Mr. H. V. Burns, a Buffalo maltster, spoke on barley, with which subject The Intelligencer will deal in a subsequent article.

Is it any wonder that, under such circumstances, Buffalo wants reciprocity and wants it badly?

The only wonder is that there are in Canada a large number of people who are so badly informed as to support so insane a project.

MONTREAL, May 17.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, but the prices bid were unchanged to 1½d per quarter lower, while prices on this side were much higher, consequently no business was done from here but advices from New York reported sales of several loads to the continent for nearby shipment. The foreign demand for oats was much quieter, but bids in some instances were in line and sales of a few loads were made. The local market was quiet and steady. The local and outside demand for flour was good at firm prices. Mill feed is still somewhat scarce and in demand.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 17.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings of live stock were 500 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1530 hogs and ... calves. There was no change in the condition of the market for cattle since Monday, prices being firmly maintained at the advance noted on that day. The gathering of buyers was large and as they all wanted some beef to carry them over for the balance of the week the demand was good and an active trade was done. Choice steers sold at 6¼c to 6½c, good at 5¾c to 6c, fairly good at 5¼c to 5½c, fair at 4¾c to 5c and common at 4¼c to 4½c per lb. Cows brought from 3¾c to 5½c, and bulls from 3½c to 5½c per pound.

Owing to increased supplies of hogs a weaker feeling developed in the market and prices scored another decline of 10c to 25c per cwt. At this reduction the demand from packers was good and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6.65 to $6.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Supplies of calves continue to come forward very freely and in consequence the tone of the market is weaker and prices are lower, the range being from $2 to $6 each, as to size and quality. The trade in sheep and lambs was more active and prices ruled steady at $4 to $5 for the former, and $5 to $8 for the latter.

At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the supply of live stock consisted of 250 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 550 hogs, and 1200 calves. There was a good demand for hogs at the above decline noted and sales of selected lots were made at $6.65 per cwt., weighed off the cars. The trade in calves was active at prices ranging from $2 to $6 each. The prices realized for the cattle were much the same as those quoted above.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

Twice had he passed without the other taking any notice. The third time he was endeavoring to turn the paper inside out and glanced up. He gave a perceptible start and dropped the paper on to his knees. Ellis continued his walk, whistling to himself in a careless manner When he returned he noticed the deck chair was empty, and on reaching the limit of the promenade deck he found the man standing there. There was an expression on his face that Ellis could not fathom, and he was taken aback when the man, looking straight into his eyes, uttered the one word,—

"Solomon!"

"I bge your pardon," replied Ellis. "Solomon? No, that's not my name."

"Ah, I have been deceived;" and then, after a moment's hesitation,

"You are very like a friend of mine. I must apologise."

"No need to, I'm sure; they say every man has his double."

"Yes—and yet—"

"What a glorious day," continued Ellis, ignoring his companion's evident uncertainty.

"Yes, we are fortunate. We don't often get a crossing like this."

"No indeed. It was very different yesterday."

"Ah, you cross often. You do not mind bad weather?"

"Don't I? I hate it! It always knocks me over. I never come unless absolutely obliged."

"So?" Paris is almost as busy a place as London, and many people are compelled by their business to be as much in one place as in the other."

"That is so," replied Ellis, "but there are other cities which are almost as busy, from a business point of view, for Englishmen as Paris—Marseilles, Lyons, Bordeaux and others." He saw the man was endeavoring to pump him, and he thus drew a red herring across the trail. On his part he was anxious to know if he had been recognized in Guelfo's office, and therefore continued the conversation. But though he continually found the man eyeing him, Ellis felt convinced he had escaped recognition.

The conversation continued on general subjects, but Ellis was quick to notice that his companion introduced certain quaint phrases and expressions that must convey hidden meanings to those who had a key to them, and that demanded special answers—answers he was unable to give, and before Dover was reached he was strongly confirmed in his idea that his possession of the metal symbol which his companion had caught sight of, had led him to believe that he, Ellis, was a member of some association to which his companion also belonged. But whether this talisman had been lost by the man or no, Ellis could not determine. Both were very much on their guard.

When they embarked and Ellis, bag in hand, was walking up the gangway he found that his late companion was following him closely and eyeing his luggage to ascertain if there was any label with name or address on it. And, later, at Charing Cross, just as he was entering a hansom, he caught sight of the man lingering near.

"No. 3. De Vere Gardens, Kensington," he said in a voice loud enough to reach the ears of the listener; and it was not until he was half way down Piccadilly that he pushed up the trap door and changed the direction to Sussex Place, Regent's Park.

"There," he muttered to himself, as the cab turned up Bond Street and he glanced through the side window and saw that no other hansom was following. "I've thrown him off completely. I fogged him on the boat, and the odds are he'll spend a good portion of to-day wandering about De Vere Gardens. Much good may it do him. He got nothing out of me, and, for the matter of that, I didn't get much out of him. It was fortunate I removed my direction from the bag before starting. I wonder now where I could ascertain the meaning of that thing I picked up. Scotland Yard might be able to help me, and yet I hardly like to go there. It might lead to inquiries which Guedfo would not like. There's nothing that I can see to be learnt from the design," and he felt in his pocket to examine it once more.

"By George! It's gone!" he exclaimed, withdrawing his hand empty. "That fellow must have got it when he crowded on me coming up the gangway of the boat."

Thus thinking, Ellis was driven up Baker Street, across the Marylebone Road, through Upper Baker Street and was just about to enter Regent's Park when a shout from the driver caused him to raise his eyes, and he saw, to his intense horror, a lady on a bicycle almost beneath the horse. A big black collie was tearing along beside her and snapping at her feet and dress. Her face was ghastly pale, and so engaged was she in endeavoring to escape the animal that she had not observed the further dengers into which she was running. The moment she did so she gave the handle-bar a violent wrench and swerved out of the horse's way, but in ding so she seemed to lose her balance, for her machine skidded and she came down heavily on her shoulder and side, with the dog growling over her.

Without waiting for the cab to stop, Ellis, who fortunately had his walking stick in his hand, sprang out and dealt the brute a heavy blow. This partially stunned the animal, for leaving the lady, it spun round twice and then rolled over on its side, motionless.

By this time the lady had freed herself from her machine and was endeavoring to rise. Ellis offered his hand, saying,—

"I trust, madam, you are not hurt? Allow me to assist you."

"Thank you very much," she gasped breathlessly. "No, I don't think there is very much amiss. It was very stupid of me. I was so engaged with that horrid dog that I never observed the cab coming through the gates. I shall be all right in a few minutes, only it gives one rather a shake coming down that way," with a faint smile.

"Of course, of course! It's a mercy you were not killed. Now, if if you will just get into my cab and drive to my house, not many yards away. I will follow with your machine, and you can rest there quietly until you feel quite recovered."

"I'm very much obliged to you, sir, and if it is not giving you too much trouble I should,—"

"No trouble at all. Take my arm, if you will so honor me," and very gently Ellis helped the lady, who had grown strangely white, into the hansom, and directing the man to drive slowly, turned and raised the bicycle, which beyond a bent pedal, had sustained no apparent damage. After a sharp word or two, the flashily-dressed owner of the dog who had come up and was bending over the slowly-recovering brute, Ellis followed the cab and was in time to assist the lady to alight.

"This way, madam. You will be quite quiet here, and I will send my housekeeper in case you should want anything," said Ellis, leading the way into a small room off the hall cosily furnished as a study, and immediately retreating.

The lady was glad to be able to rest quietly on the comfortable sofa, for her fall had affected her more than she cared to admit. Nor did she refuse the glass of sherry and a biscuit brought her a few moments later by the severely-dressed, elderly woman, who introduced herself as Mr. Ellis' housekeeper.

"Mr. Ellis! Is it Mr. Ellis, the stockbroker, to whom I am indebted for this kindness?" asked the lady.

"Yes, madam, my master has his offices in Coleman street, and is a member of the House. He was just returning from Paris when he was fortunate enough to be able to render you this little assistance."

For a while the two chatted together and then, as the housekeeper was preparing to leave the room, the lady said,—

"Is your master still in the house?"

"Yes, madam."

AVERAGE PRICES OF FARM STOCK

Statements Showing the Rapid Increase in the Live Stock Industry in Canada

The total value of live stock on the farms of Canada in 1910 was $593,768,000, which was $34,979,000 more than in 1909. The price per head of horses was $130.72 in 1910, of milch cows $42.60 against $36.36, of other cattle $30.90 against $28.81, and of sheep $6 against $5.89. Swine alone showed a drop in average price, being $11.30 per head against $11.80. The total value of horses was $293,398,000 for last year against $278,789,000 for 1909, of milch cows $126,613,000 against $103,601,000, of other cattle $131,781,000 against $127,326,000, and of sheep $15,819,000 against $15,735,000. The value of swine fell from $34,368,000 in 1909 to $31,157,000 in 1910.

The highest average price of horses was in Saskatchewan, of milch cows, other horned cattle and sheep in Ontario, and of swine in Quebec. Horses three years old and over reached the highest price in British Columbia, where the average was $225. Swine per 100 pounds live weight ranged from $6.50 in Manitoba to $9.62 in Quebec. The price of unwashed wool was 18 cents in 1910 and 17 cents in 1909 and of washed wool 24 cents for each year. These are the figures of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

When the Western Canadian farmers waited upon the Dominion Government in December, their leaders presented certain statistics representing their financial position. Mr. F. W. Green, for instance, referred to "The vast aggregate wealth represented by this delegation Each member of the western part of it we estimate has half a section of land valued with its equipment at, at least, $10,000. There are 30,000 in our Western organizations which means an investment of $300,000,000. If, as our friendly rivals declare, we are only 25 per cent. of the Western farmers, we would represent the enormous aggregate wealth of $1,200,000,000."

"If we reflect that the farmers who are here (Ottawa) from the Western prairies," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his reply, "and those whom they represent have been in the West, in their present homes, not more, on the average, than twenty years, we cannot but think that to have accumulated wealth to the amount of $300,000,000, does not argue a very bad condition of things at all. And if we reflect that the actual accumulated wealth of all the farmers of the Western prairies is $1,500,000,000, I still repeat that although things are not as good as they might be, they are not so very bad."

STATE OF PANIC AMONG THE BIRDS

Hundreds of Dead Starlings Picked up in a South of Ireland Town

A mysterious panic, born of some unknown catastrophe of the skies, has caused extraordinary phenomena among the bird life of the South of Ireland. In Carlow starlings and curlews have been seen in great flocks and have made the night sleepless for the inhabitants of the district with their discordant cries. Judging by their wild erratic flight, the birds appear to be in a state of panic from some unknown cause. The starlings showed an even stronger disquietude, the flapping of wings becoming irregular and suspended for unusually long intervals. All power of self control seemed to have been lost, the birds dashing themselves to death against church spires, house fronts, and telegraph poles and wires. In Carlow town on two consecutive mornings hundreds of dead starlings were picked up in the streets. In the neighborhood of Baganalstown recently a vast multitude of starlings gyrated and dived through the air in the most frantic manner. A Wexford church sexton has captured a strange bird whose species has not been determined. For weeks past it has frequented the church tower, preying on rooks, pigeons and sparrows. Its capture was effected with a rat-trap, the teeth of which were covered with rubber. The bird is somewhat after the shape of the eagle, but lacks its peculiar head. It is nearly a foot high, and from tip to tip its wings measure two feet. It is grey-breasted, with the back of the wings and tail of brown, and is armed with strong talons. The head is flat on top and the beak curved, somewhat resembling the owl's.

FACTORY BRANCHES

World's Work Says 755 American Factories Have Plants in Canada

The World's Work, a prominent United States periodical, in a recent number contains an article on the town of Welland, which has had such a phenomenal growth in the last five years by reason of the large number of manufacturing industries that have been established there. The World's Work says:

In the little town of Welland, Ontario, are 20 manufacturing plants which have gone from the United States in the last ten years. These include branches of the Plymouth Cordage Company, of Deere & Company, plow makers from Iowa, of the Pittsburg Tube Company, of the United Motors from Detroit, and sixteen others. The town has, in fact, been made by American manufacturing plants. Hamilton, Ont., too, boasts of 36 American industries, including branches of the American Can Company, the International Harvester Company, the Oliver Chilled Plow Works, and the like. And there are other Canadian towns that boast of a similar transplanting of American factories, for 755 companies from the United States have built factories in Canada since 1900. Many of these are larger than the original plants in the United states. The tariff against Canada—which was necessarily met by a Canadian tariff against us—was, of course, designed to protect our manufacturers; but the result has been to drive these 750 establishments out of the country in ten years. Most of them were built on the other side of the border to take care of the Canadian trade. Many, however, moved from the United States because they wished to take advantage either of the lower cost of living for their employes or of the more favorable tariff arrangements that Canada enjoys for her products in European markets.

HIGHER IN CANADA

Prices of Farm Labor and Live Stock Not So Good in the States

Senator Stone, of Missouri, spoke three hours and a half on the Reciprocity question in the United States Senate on Monday, May 1st. He is the leader of the radical Democrats, and in his speech he showed how the United States farmer would benefit by free access to Canadian markets. He set out to prove that American farmers would not be injured, as had been claimed, by competition with a country where it was alleged farm labor and the prices of live stock were lower. He quoted a multitude of figures to show that, if anything, the prices of farm labor and of live stock were higher in Canada than in the United States.

His figures were such a surprise to some of his listeners that they piled him with questions, and for a time half a dozen or more of the Senators gathered in the aisle and pored over Government reports to determine if the statistics were reliable. The particular problem was as to the possibility of the average wage for farm labor in the United States, as a whole, being $19.21 per month, compared with an average in Canada of $30.08. It was finally pretty well agreed that there must be some difference in the conditions, such as board, the statistics having no common source, but being prepared by each country respectively. Following this up, Senator Stone was at pains to show that cattle, horses, sheep and swine were all slightly higher in Canada than in this country, from the figures that he had gathered.

STOPS SKIDDING

Apparatus to be Tested on a Roof Covered with Soft Soap

Skidding—the nightmare of all motorists—is soon to become a thing of the past. The gyroscope affords a cure. When a gyroscope is fitted to a motor-car—either in front or on the back wheels—it is absolutely impossible for the car to swerve even an inch from the path along which it is being steered. The gyroscope, making 3,000 revolutions to the minute, corrects any tendency to skid in its initial stage. Experiments have already been made on steep hills with a right-angle turn at the bottom. In every case the corners were negotiated with the greatest ease. The Gyroscopic Non-Skid Company, Limited, are giving a demonstration of the gyroscope's possibilities at their works in Grosvenor Road. A 40-h.p. car fitted with a gyroscope will be driven at a high speed on the roof of a large building covered with soft soap and Thames mud. The brakes will be jammed on suddenly as the slippery surface is reached. In the ordinary course of events the car would swing over the edge of the roof.

BUTTONS AND BEADS GALORE

The Parisiennes are more bent than ever this year on wearing summer dresses covered with buttons and beads galore.

Sunshine grates have maximum strength

Sunshine Furnace has four triangular grate bars, each having three distinct sides. In the single-piece and two-piece grate no such-like provision is made for expansion or contraction, and a waste of coal always follows a shaking. On the left- and right-hand sides are cotter pins, which when loosened permit the grates to slide out. These four grate bars are made of heavy cast iron, and are finished up with bulldog teeth. The teeth will grind up the toughest clinker; and because the grates are made in sections, not only can nothing but dust and ashes pass through, but after each shaking a different side can be presented to the fire. Also, with the Sunshine grate there is no back-breaking movements attached to the shaking. By gently rocking the lever, first on the left and then on the right, the ashes are released on both sides, and fall through into the pan.

ROYAL FAMILY GOOD LINGUISTS

Both the King and Queen Speak Welsh—The Prince of Wales Studies Welsh and German

The Prince of Wales is studying the Welsh language in order to reply in that tongue to the address of welcome which will be presented to him on the occasion of the investiture at Carnarvon in July next. Sir E. Vincent Evans, secretary of the London Cymmrodorian Society, said: "The young Prince is thoroughly conversant with French and German, and he has a reputation for learning quickly. He could, by a little application, easily master Welsh and know it sufficiently well to enable him to speak in it at the forthcoming investiture. Welsh is far easier than either French or German. It is well known that all the members of the Royal Family are excellent linguists, and both the King and Queen speak Welsh. The late King Edward could make himself understood in it. When, as Prince of Wales, he was present at the Eisteddfod, he very often made use of Welsh phrases in conversation with prominent Welshman, who were introduced to him. The late Queen Victoria also used Welsh words, to the great gratification of her Welsh subjects, on the occasion of her visit to Merionethshire a few years before her death. The fact that the Prince is learning Welsh will undoubtedly create an interest in the language, which deserves to be appreciated more than it usually is by those who are ignorant of its beauties and literary treasures." There are at present over thirty places of worship in London where the services throughout are conducted in Welsh. The London County Council's evening classes in Welsh have been largely attended, and it is now proposed to establish a Celtic Chair at the University of London.

POTATOES IN LONDON

Prices Have Increased 50 Per Cent. In Ten Days

The English potato market is threatened with a famine. Prices increased 50 per cent in ten days, and Covent Garden merchants consider a further increase as highly probable. The ordinary potato, which, at this time last year was selling at the rate of $1.04 for 51 pounds, is now bringing almost double the price for the same quantity. The threatened famine will only be avoided if there is a good supply of new potatoes, which usually reach England from the Canaries at this time of the year.

UNION OF SERVANTS

Demands of Domestics in Danmark, Norway, and Sweden

The servants in Denmark, Norway, and Sweden have started a big organization, with headquarters at Copenhagen, Christiania, and Stockholm. The demands they have formulated are:—

1. The suppression of all night work; servants to knock off at 9 o'clock in the evening, and to rest until 7 o'clock next morning.
2. Extra pay for servants should they be requested to work after 9 o'clock, as, for instance, when company is being entertained.
3. A night out from 5 o'clock every week; a Sunday off from 10 o'clock in the morning every fortnight, and a fortnight's summer holiday, the regular wages and additional board wages to be paid.
4. Increase of wages when the work of the house is satisfactorily performed.
5. The servant's room to be light and warm, and to be so situated as to catch the sun.

MASTER OF FIVE LANGUAGES

Some Interesting Facts About a Centenarian, A Gordon Hake

Mr. A. Gordon Hake, the dean of the bar, celebrated his hundredth birthday recently at his home at Brighton surrounded by his family—Miss Charlotte Matilda Hake, his daughter; Mr. Augustus Hake and the Rev. T. G. Hake, his sons, and the latter's wife and daughter Constance. Mr. Hake is a master of five languages—Greek, Latin, French, Italian and Spanish, and reads Horace, Virgil and Montaigne. He attributes his long and healthy life to plenty of riding—he had for years a favorite horse named Daisy—and walking, and to abstemious living. He has never cared much for modern varieties of dress. The Rev. T. G. Hake tells a good story of his father's rough-and-ready toilet. Dr. Charles Hanron once called on him at his chambers and asked permission to put on his barrister's wig and gown. "Now," he said, "lend me a looking glass." He was handed a razor—the nearest approach to a mirror possessed by his friend.

A PRETTY ROMANCE

Comes From South of France—Stranger Well Treated Returns and Woos Cafe Keeper

There is material for romance in an incident which has occurred at Marseilles in a little cafe kept by a young woman noted for her beauty and goodness of heart.

The cafe is close to the harbor, and is frequented by sailors, who gave the name of "Mother Marie" to the landlady. The young woman had to deal with the roughest of sailor men, but her kindness to her customers was her best protection. When they had no money she fed them and kept them well supplied with tobacco. The sailors never imposed on her kindness, and always paid her when they received their wages.

One day a stranger of unkempt appearance entered the cafe. "Mother Marie" immediately saw to his requirements. After eating a hearty meal he was asked by the landlady whether he would smoke a cigar. His reply was that he had not any money for a cigar, nor even for the meal he had eaten. "Never mind," said the landlady, "have a cigar all the same."

A few weeks afterwards a well-dressed man appeared in the cafe and ordered food. "Mother Marie" glanced at him and recognized in him the stranger who had not paid for his entertainment.

The elegant gentleman told "Mother Marie" that he had heard of her kindness to rough sailor men, and had resolved to put her to the test. He found that she was all that the sailors had represented her to be, and he added that he had returned to the cafe in order to improve his acquaintance with her.

Then he disclosed his identity. He was a count and a large manufacturer, and asked "Mother Marie" to become his wife. The "sailors' friend" consented, and now the little cafe on the harbor has a new tenant.

GOLD BARS FROM CHINA

Secretly Shipped to England—Part of Hoard of Dowager Empress

There are persistent reports that gold bars to the value of $30,000,000, part of the late Chinese Dowager Empress hoard, have been shipped secretly to England from Peking.

Tse Hsi, the late Dowager Empress of China, had the reputation of being the richest woman in the world, but it is impossible to estimate the millions she possessed.

Her rapacity was amazing. Her favor had to be bought by all who who sought for it. Money, exquisite gems, houses, and beautiful silks and furs were humbly offered in vast amounts and haughtily accepted.

During the occupation of Peking by the allied troops in 1900 many of her treasures were lost in the looting that took place, but the amount successfully concealed must have been very great.

ZIONISTS ACTIVE

The Federation Has Awakened From Its Drowsiness and Has Taken On Vigor

The English Zionist Federation, which has been very somnolent of late, has awakened from its sleep and has just held a conference at Manchester. The Federation, which by the successive secessions of the two contending parties broke up about a year ago, is, it is understood, about to be revived, or rather revivified. At the conference at Manchester the Young Zionist Party, which has never been in full sympathy with the policy of federation, although it accepted representation on its council for a short time, was well represented, and from now on the movement in England will be completely reorganized and will pass virtually under the control of the Young Zionist Party, the English Universities' elements in the movement. As this party is rather severely critical of the policy pursued from the headquarters at Cologne, English Zionism is again likely to make itself heard in the movement, as it has been heard in the past. In the arrangements for the renewed organization no room seems to be provided for the great protagonists and mutual critics of English Zionism in the past, and, presumably therefore, the leaders, Dr. Gaster, Messrs. Greenburg, Cowen, and Herbert Betinck, of the movements within the movement, will remain in their present retirement. Mr. Herbert Bentinck, however, is still at the head of his independent Zionist Friendly Society organization, the Ancient Order of Maccabeans, but so far as the public is concerned this also remains quite quiescent.

Soothing, Healing, Pain-relieving 'MECCA' OINTMENT

QUACK DOCTOR SKINNED A CAT

Laid Its Body on the Chest of a Patient—Arrest of a Sorceress in France

Many people of the working-class in town and country still have great faith in quack doctors, and if these persons profess to have some acquaintance with the occult sciences this confidence is strengthened rather than diminished. In connection with the dearth of a young man who died after a short illness, a woman who went in for bone-setting, and who, moreover, had recourse to empiric devices, has just been arrested in the Lyons district, France. When, at the eleventh hour, the doctor was called in, he diagnosed pneumonia, but he saw that his services could be of no avail, as the case was already too far advanced.

The young man had been a patient of the so-called sorceress, who had laid the body of a cat, which she skinned while it was alive, on his chest, with strict injunctions that it should be kept there as a sovereign remedy. Sometimes she used pigeons, rabbits, and even squirrels for the same purpose. She had a special liking for squirrels, but in this particular instance the cat was employed, as it was less expensive.

Although she is in custody it is difficult to get evidence against this woman, as the peasants are reluctant to give anything away on account of the wonderful reputation that she enjoys among them as an expert in the healing art. Her prestige in these parts had been greatly enhanced by the fact that she has never missed an opportunity of proclaiming that some time ago she cured the wife of a physician in practice in one of the chief towns in France, of a dreadful malady, and that the lady's husband, out of gratitude, had initiated her into the secret of dealing effectively with every manner of disease. This story, of course, is pure fabrication, but the ignorant peasants believe it.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER

And the Romance It Warmed Into Happy Realization.

By VIRGINIA L. WENTZ.

It was that most gracious season of all the year perhaps—St. Martin's summer—when the spirit of ripeness which seems to have fled once more holds the land with its intoxicating breath. The fields were studded with tiny Michaelmas daisies, and the hedgerows were brilliant with early goldenrod, but somehow you fancied you smelled the scent of the roses and mignonette as well.

There was quite a group of people out on the small hotel veranda, and most of them were gossiping. Spinning up the poplar shaded country road was a smart little trap. Across the tennis courts the occupants were plainly visible. They were James Walsh and Mrs. John Burgess.

"I say, girls," cried one of the group on the veranda, "it's a crying shame to let that elderly person cut us out with the richest man we have up here—crying shame, that's what it is! And I don't think any of us has an atom of 'grit' or 'go' or we'd take the wind out of Mrs. Burgess' sails!"

"Why, she must be all of a hundred!" exclaimed another.

"They say that Mr. Walsh knew her years ago. Wonder where he picked her up. In the ark, I guess."

"Oh, my dear, long before that," drawled another mockingly. "Long before Noah's time women had ceased to do their hair in that absurd fashion."

Then the quiet girl with the embroidery on her lap spoke softly:

"She has a lot of hair anyhow, and it's beautiful, and the way she dresses it suits her features. She reminds me of Albert Durer's 'Madonna.'"

"Who's that, Miss Tyson?" interrupted a young fellow in tennis flannels, suddenly appearing in the doorway. "Who's like Durer's 'Madonna?'"

"We were speaking of Mrs. Burgess," answered Miss Tyson without even looking up from her embroidery.

"'Madonna?' Folderol!" cried the other girls in concert. "She's a plain, quiet poke of a woman and a designing one at that. She's encouraging him fearfully."

"You see, Miss Tyson," observed Billy, the young chap in flannels, "we get only one or two big matrimonial catches a season up here. It's a waste of time nowadays to listen to the impecunious ardors of early youth. Consequently"—

Billy's words were ambiguous enough, but the comprehensive little sweep which he made with his glance and sun browned hand, including veranda, girls and all, was inimitably droll. Miss Tyson's gray eyes laughed appreciatively.

They were such nice understanding gray eyes, thought Billy. 'Twas a shame that embroidery should engross so much of their attention. Even now she showed signs of taking it up again, and to avoid such a catastrophe Billy proposed a game of tennis.

"All right," said Miss Tyson cheerfully, folding the bit of linen about the tiny hoop and stowing it away in a tiny bag.

• • • • • • •

The fancied likeness between Mrs. John Burgess and the "Madonna" of Durer was not without some basis. There was, indeed, a similarity in the weary features, more interesting than beautiful, and in the dolorous, somewhat constrained grace of the stately figure.

Mrs. Burgess was a woman of forty-five. Her manner, her aspect, was that of one who had long since ceased wishing to attract. In point of fact, the wish had never been pronounced. Since her husband's death, which had occurred ten years previously, she had never worn a color. It is to be supposed that Mr. Burgess had loved her. His had been her first and only offer of marriage, but in her girlhood her heart had been given to another.

Most people who knew Mrs. John Burgess thought of her as the mother of her children. She had a son in the west who was making great ventures in cattle and horses, and she had a married daughter in Paris who was writing her constantly of her social triumphs and prosperity. Yes, her children were full of their own plans and projects, and once or twice lately Mrs. Burgess had been a bit surprised to find herself feeling a little lonely and forgotten—a chill presage of the autumn winds of life. Her summer, indeed, had flown.

Then, just at the correct psychological moment, he came—the man to whom as a girl she had given her heart.

Ah, where were the chill autumn winds now? It was St. Martin's summer instead.

James Walsh was a middle aged, portly, rich man and a widower. He had married somewhat early in his career a noted beauty. A fortnight of wedlock had convinced him that he and his bride had not a single taste in common, but, being a businesslike man, on his return from his tour de noce he'd sized up the matter in this practical fashion:

"'Twas the pink chiffon dress at the Van Duyers' ball which was responsible. Only why wasn't it"— But the "why wasn't it" in this case hadn't worn a pink chiffon dress, nor had she been at the Van Duyers' ball.

Mr. Walsh had been a widower now for three years, and he still sighed with a half abashed sense of relief.

"No more matrimonial ventures for me," he'd say to himself, with a laugh, although he had reason to believe that he could lay successful siege to several feminine hearts; that he was still quite capable of victory.

He had been spending August alone up in the mountains, and he had enjoyed a month of fishing, tramping and dreaming to his heart's content. On his way home he'd stop for a week or two at a certain little hotel reported to have good cuisine and rest a strained wrist before going back to business.

Glancing casually over the hotel register, he saw the name of Mrs. John Burgess. There arose in the man's breast a curious sensation, but he pulled himself together.

"How absurd!" he upbraided himself as he walked away from the desk. "As if there were not hundreds of John Burgesses. Why, I might even have coaxed myself into believing that I remembered her handwriting."

An hour or so later, however, he met her on the lawn. Their eyes unexpectedly encountered one another.

"Can it be?" cried he, with boyish incredulity. She extended her hand.

"I think it can," she answered, with that little half smile on the corner of her pure lip which he remembered so well.

Mrs. Burgess had escaped the half kittenish challenge of the middle aged woman who will not abjure conquest. She did not move to the shade of the tree nor even open her parasol. She stayed precisely where she was, with a streak of harshly revealing sunlight playing havoc with such loveliness as time had left to her. After awhile the warmth of the sun or some other warmth she knew not of brought into her pale cheeks that glow which James Walsh's first roses had brought, oh, so many years ago.

That night time and again Mr. Walsh drove away the memory of the woman's fleeting half smile, yet it returned to haunt him with all its old sweet allurement. Finally he fell asleep and dreamed of her.

The next morning at breakfast he found himself unaccountably agitated. She was not in the room when he arrived, and all the other boarders, even the pretty young girl with the quiet gray eyes, seemed to him like so many figureheads. What if he had not really seen her yesterday? What if it had all just been in the dream last night? But at last she came, and the beauty of no radiant goddess could have pierced so straight into his breast as did this woman's tired loveliness. In her simple white morning gown she seemed to him the soul of sensitive delicacy and serenity.

He recalled how, being essentially feminine, she always pitied suffering, so now he made his strained wrist a pretext for being near her. She herself ministered to him, binding it firmly and gently. Her breath, sweet as an infant's, touched his brow. They lunched en tete-a-tete and that afternoon took a drive together in a hired trap.

Mr. Walsh's intended week was prolonged to a fortnight. During that time his eyes followed Mrs. Burgess, and, indeed, his feet did also, very much more frequently than she herself approved. She thought of her position, her children, of what might be ridiculous in the situation, of the gossip and espionage of the guests. Once or twice she had heard a few scoffings, with a note of mirth, at the devotion of Mr. Walsh, and it had made her supersensitive.

But all of these trivial objections vanished like mist before the sun on the day when he laid his heart bare before her, when he showed her that beneath his apparent prosperity he was hungry—he had always been hungry—for companionship and sympathy.

"And you could make me so happy, oh, so happy, dear, if you would marry me," he was saying as they walked slowly along the road the day before his departure. Her arm lay lightly upon his, her eyes were shining, and there was a warm girlish tint in her pale cheeks.

"Won't you? I need you so!" he pleaded. Just then they were passing a huge willow tree.

Now, veiled and shadowed from the world by the willow's drooping green, sitting on the lush grass were two young people to whom love had just sung its first sweet song. Naturally they'd started a bit when they heard approaching footsteps, but they might have spared the start. Neither of them was observed.

"I always did think Mrs. Burgess was sweet looking, Billy," said Miss Tyson, absently pressing a cool, bending branch of willow across her hot cheek, "but just then she looked positively beautiful."

"Yes, sweetheart," acquiesced the wise Billy. "Why shouldn't she? She's having her St. Martin's summer, you see."

William Henry Harrison.

President William Henry Harrison's inauguration day was dark and foreboding. The new president rode on horseback in a two hour procession through the streets of the city, after which he stood for another exposed, without cloak or overcoat, to a keen, chilling wind while delivering his inaugural address. When night came he was very much exhausted, but he seemed to recover from the effect of this exposure, and the new administration was launched with Daniel Webster at the helm as secretary of state. The president was besieged with office seekers, and he overworked and was soon stricken with a chill which speedily developed into pneumonia. On the 4th of April, half an hour after midnight, Harrison was dead. his last words being, "May the principles of government be carried out."

WAR WARM WORK

The Phrase "Heat of Battle" Not a Mere Figure of Speech.

FIGHTING FIRES THE BLOOD.

An Old Veteran's Story of an Early Morning Attack In Zero Weather and the Change the Skirmish Wrought In His Half Frozen Body.

"The expression 'heat of battle' is more than a mere poetic figure of speech descriptive of the fierce glow of emotion the soldier feels when in the midst of conflict," said a southern soldier who was an officer under Colonel Mosby. "It describes exactly the sensible, physical condition the soldier feels, no matter what the temperature may be.

"That this is true was evidenced by my own experience during the war between the states. It was in February, 1864, and Colonel Mosby, with some hundred of us, was camped near Upperville, a village in Virginia about thirty miles south of Harpers Ferry. Late one afternoon our leader received a dispatch from General Lee to make a forced march that night and attack a body of Federal troops that was stationed on Loudon heights, which overlook Harpers Ferry. The weather was bitter cold, the coldest that had been known in that section for many years. The mercury was coquetting around zero, a six inch fall of snow, half melted and frozen again, made the roads almost impassable, and a stiff north wind, added to these other evils, made the outlook for a pleasant dash of thirty miles a most dismally improbable one.

"It was about sunset when, muffled to the eyes against the biting frost and bitter wind, our column left camp at Upperville. For the first ten miles our squadron, made up of veterans inured to all manner of hardships, did not suffer much, and occasionally some one would even essay a joke. But in the second ten miles the cold, that had slowly eaten its way through overcoat and jacket and shirt, began to bite into our bodies. To restore life to our numb legs we would take our feet from the stirrups and let them hang until the circulation was restored—an old trick with those compelled to ride much in the cold—and we would keep our hands and arms in some measure warm by beating them against our bodies or clapping them severely together.

"The second ten was bad enough, I say, but the last was—well, a polar nightmare. The vitality seemed to be frozen out of man and beast. For hours the horses stumbled through the snow bearing a troop as silent as the dead save for an occasional thumping of some poor devil's half frozen arms against his side as he sought to restore life to the deadened limbs. When I took my feet out of the stirrups to help the circulation I would have to take my hands and lift my legs up to get the feet back in place, so lost to all sensation were they.

"At length about 3 o'clock in the morning we saw the lights of the enemy's picket fires and could distinguish the muffled forms of the sentries as they paced their beats. There was a small strip of woods that ran to within a hundred or less yards of the Federal camp, and in this we formed for the attack. My hands were so cold that I was unable to cock the hammers of my revolvers with my thumb, but was compelled to effect it with my teeth, holding the pistol between my numbed fists and drawing back the hammer by gripping it in my teeth and pulling it back until it caught.

"At length all was in readiness. As I sat there, barely able to grasp my revolvers, the 'Charge!' rang out, and the next moment we were in the midst of the enemy, who were too astounded at an attack on such a bitter night to offer much resistance and for the most part fled down to Harpers Ferry to the main body. Some of them, however, put up a stout fight for men awakened from warm sleep to fight to the death in the bitter night air, and for a couple of minutes we had all we could do, but it was soon over, and we were in possession of the camp.

"When I came to myself I found I was sitting with one leg thrown over the pummel of my saddle, my overcoat and jacket flung wide open, while my shirt, opened to the last button, allowed a grateful zero zephyr to play upon my bare sweating breast. In my hand, from which I had pulled the glove, moist with sweat, I was holding my hat, with which I was vigorously fanning myself.

"And less than five minutes before I had been so chilled that had I been in a comfortable house with a physician at hand he would have filled me full of hot drinks, wrapped me in blankets and kept me in bed a couple of days.

"No," concluded the veteran, "the 'heat of battle' is something more than a mere figure of speech."—New York Times.

Pills to Prevent Earthquakes.

"I remember," says Addison in the two hundred and fortieth Tatler, "when our whole island was shaken with an earthquake some years ago there was an impudent mountebank who sold pills which, as he told the country people, were 'very good against an earthquake.'"—Letter in London Saturday Review.

HOW SHE CAUGHT HIM.

Fixed Things So Young Man Wouldn't Get Cold Feet.

Amaranth was known to those who knew her best as a most thorough young person in everything she undertook to do. Whenever she embarked upon any sort of an enterprise it was pretty safe to assume that when the end came there would be no loose ends to be gathered up, and for that reason the young men of the community had come to fear her slightly, with the result that after ten seasons had passed since her debut in society she was still in the market. Men seemed to find in her many of the desirable qualities of a sister, but they feared that in a home she might prove too much of a manager for them to risk a venture upon the matrimonial sea with such a person. There was one exception to this rule among the swains of the town, however, and that was Billie Wilbraham. He could see in her to a rich degree the qualities that would make her a most admirable wife for just such a person as himself, but unfortunately he was timid.

"My heart is warm, but my feet are cold," he had once observed to his friend Dawson, who had remonstrated with him for his cowardice in putting the only question that could bring his little romance to an issue. "I've been up there four nights this week," he went on, "and just as I get myself screwed up to the point where the fatal words are to be spoken something slumps inside me, and I switch off on to something else."

Amaranth herself was keen enough to see what was going on in the poor fellow's mind and, inasmuch as she fully reciprocated the feeling which she knew she had inspired in his breast she resolved to take the matter in hand herself. So it happened that when he called upon a certain Friday evening she was ready for him, but she bided her time. She received him cordially, as usual, and they talked about the weather, and the motor show, and how to raise green peas in a flat in winter, and various other subjects, until the clock struck 10, when, as usual, Wilbraham began to get uneasy. The symptoms of an approaching proposal were all there, and Amaranth perceived the fact with anxious pleasure.

"I—er—I've had something I wanted to speak to you about for some time, Amaranth," he began in the usual faltering manner. "I have fully made up my mind that you—that you are the—the—the—only — um — ha — hum — the only er"—

"Just wait a minute, William," she interrupted, with a soft smile and a gracious glance at the stammering lover. "Let me pull your chair up closer to the hearth."

He rose, and together they drew the chair to the very edge of the fireplace.

"There," she said. "Now just you sit down right there and keep quiet for a minute."

Wilbraham sat, watching her with interested eyes and wondering what on earth she was up to.

"Now," she went on after she had got him comfortably settled in the chair, "put both your feet on the fender—not crossed that way, but separately—there—that's it," she added as he obeyed. Then, striking a match under the marble mantelshelf, she turned on the natural gas log and lit it. In a moment the whole room was illuminated with a golden glow from the flickering flames.

"Why, Amaranth," said he, "what is the meaning of all this? I was really quite comfortable without all this, although it is very nice."

"Oh, I only wanted to fix things nice and comfy," she answered demurely. "It was so chilly over on the other side of the room that I was afraid you would have an attack of cold feet before you finished what you were saying. What was it, just, that you thought you would ask me, William?"

"I'll give you two guesses!" he answered with a grin.

"One is enough," she replied. "I guess yes!"

And it turned out to be the proper answer.—Harper's Weekly.

More Kicks Than Ha'pence.

As a boy Sir Rufus Isaacs, the new Attorney-General for Great Britain, shipped aboard a sailing vessel bound for the Indies, and for more than a year he led the rough-and-tumble life of a sea apprentice. And so many more kicks than ha'pence did he get that when the ship reached Rio de Janeiro he ran away, but was caught, brought back, and, as a punishment, was made to help in discharging a load of coal. He had his revenge one day, however. He had been annoying the cook, and that worthy made for the future K.C. with a dishful of water in which vegetables had been cooked. Rufus made a successful dodge as the cook threw the water in his direction, and the captain, coming down to see what the trouble was, received the water full in his face.

STABS INSTEAD OF FRANCS.

Reward Informer Would Have Received, According to Camorrist Chief.

Viterbo, Italy, May 17.—Enrico Alfano, reputed head of the Neapolitan Camorra, was again confronted yesterday by Abbatemaggio, the informer, when the trial of the thirty-six Camorrists for murder resumed.

"To-day," he began, "is the anniversary of the death of my beloved brother Ciro, who died in prison. I must make a superhuman effort to overcome the emotion that possesses me. Still in my ears is the echo of the last desperate lamentations of my brother. In the agony of death he continued to deny the assertion of this man Abbatemaggio."

Attacking the informer, Alfano said: "It is absurd to say that 400 francs ($80) was given to Abbatemaggio, who took no part in the affair, and only 150 francs to the real murderers."

Here Abbatemaggio interrupted: "Alfano intended to buy my silence."

Alfano, infuriated, replied: "If I had been in a position to fear your revelations I would have given you 400 stabs instead of 400 francs."

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

COSTS TWICE AS MUCH

Pulpwood is Far Dearer in the United States.

U. S. Tariff Board Reports to Senate on Cost of News Print and Shows That Canada Can Produce a Ton For $5.35 Less — American Mills Would Have to Improve Equipment and Cut Down Expenses.

Washington, May 18.—President Taft yesterday sent to the Senate the tariff board's full report of its investigation of the pulp and news print paper industry in the United States and Canada.

Summarized briefly, the report says that a ton of news print paper is made in Canada for $5.35 less than it is made in the United States. The average Canadian cost is given at $27.53, and the average cost in the United States at $32.88. The duty upon a ton of news print paper under the present tariff is $3.75.

Several factors entering into the increased cost of manufacture in the United States are taken up exhaustively in the report. The principal increases are said to be due to the fact that a ton of pulpwood costs nearly twice as much in the United States as it does in Canada, and that many of the American mills have much older and much less efficient equipment than the Canadian mills, which is said to be responsible for a large increased manufacturing cost.

The total average cost of a ton of ground wood pulp in bulk at a mill in the United States is $14.50; in Canada it is $9.56.

The total cost of a ton of sulphite fibre in the United States is $31.39; in Canada it is $26.47. The total materials entering into the manufacture of a news print paper in Canada are shown as $16.89 and in the United States as $22.74. The labor cost of a ton of paper in the United States is shown to be $3.27, and in Canada $3.19. All other allowances for manufacturing costs in the United States are $6.87, and in Canada $7.45. Labor costs in all the items concerned run very closely alike.

One feature of the report shows that the cost of manufacturing news print paper in the United States varies widely. The lowest cost recorded is $24.50 a ton; the highest is $43. From this the tariff board strikes an average of $32.88.

At the Canadian mills the lowest price recorded for producing a ton of newsprint is $24.97, and the highest is $30.18. Average, $27.53.

In accounting for the increased cost of the pulpwood, it is shown at an American mill the average cost for a ton of wood for ground wood pulp is $10.23; in Canada, $5.70. The average cost of the ground wood pulp entering into a ton of newsprint paper in the United States is given at $13.27; Canadian value, $8.49. The average cost of the sulphite fibre in a ton of paper at a mill in the United States is given at $8.63; Canadian valuation, $7.41; manufacturing labor in the United States, $3.75; in Canada, $3.19.

To the question of how far American mills are on an equal basis for competition with the Canadian mills in the matter of equipment, the reports present the answer that the total average of equipment and efficiency is slightly better for Canada than for the U. S.

It is declared that in 44 per cent. of the American mills investigated, a condition exists as to machinery and equipment, which would force them, if obliged to meet really extensive competition from Canada, greatly to curtail other expenses, greatly increase their investment for equipment, or shift to making other kinds of paper.

In treating upon the subject of labor efficiency in Canada, the report says: "It would seem then that with modern mills, American machinery, American trained managers and superintendents and American skilled operatives, together with lower rates of wages for unskilled men, the Canadian manufacturing labor costs per unit of production in the modern and well equipped mills of Canada would be considerably lower in the U. S.

Tables show, however, that the Canadian labor cost per ton of news print paper is only slightly lower on the average. The 41.5 per cent. of the tonnage reported in the U. S. carries a manufacturing labor cost of less than $3 per ton, while 54.7 per cent. in Canada falls under $3. The total average for the U. S. is $3.27, as against $3.19 in Canada, notwithstanding Canada's advantage in equipment. This indicates that there is greater efficiency and experience in the first-class mills of the U. S.

PUT UP NEW SIGN.

French Villagers Objected to the Word "Postoffice."

Montreal, May 18.—The following despatch to La Presse yesterday from Vercheres says: A demonstration unique in its kind in the history of that village has just been held. The postoffice was indicated by a notice bearing the English sign "Postoffice." Our population, wholly French-Canadian, decided to protest against this state of affairs. The pupils of the college and the schools formed in procession before the church and, headed by a banner, assembled in front of the postoffice, under the direction of Brother Regis, singing patriotic songs. A board bearing in gilt engraved letters the words "Bureau de post" was carried by a number of the procession. Father Dulude, the vicar, and the brothers of the Christian schools, also took part in the demonstration.

At the postoffice the whole parish had assembled. Father Baillarger, curate of the parish, welcomed the processionists and delivered a stirring speech in favor of the French language. The French signboard was then placed in front of the postoffice amidst the acclamation of the crowd.

APPEAL FOR REPRIEVE.

Toronto Suffragists Plead for Life of Mrs. Napolitano.

Toronto, May 18.—A letter from the Toronto Suffrage Association has been sent the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, at Ottawa, earnestly pleading for a speedy commutation of the death sentence passed upon Angelina Napolitano, "since every additional hour spent by her in the condition of terror anticipating her execution on August the 9th, cannot but re-act in a deleterious manner upon her unborn innocent child."

They further held "that the woman's condition at the time at which she committed the crime, aggravated the sense of provocation received."

The association hope that all societies and individuals throughout the country, who feel that unfortunate foreign woman should not suffer the extreme penalty of the law, in some way make their desire known to the Minister of Justice as soon as possible.

Saved Life of Mother of Nine.

New York, May 18.—Weak from repeated internal hemorrhages, Mrs. Sarah Wynn's life has just been saved by Dr. Arthur J. Savage, who allowed a quart of his virile young blood to be pumped into her veins. Dr. Savage, who is a Rhodes' scholarship graduate of Oxford, is a son of the dean of McGill University, Montreal, and was captain of their famous football team four years ago. He is now interne at the Volunteer Hospital here, and a fellow-physician declares that his sacrifice of blood has never been equalled in New York. Dr. Savage declares the matter is nothing to talk about, for he says: "The woman had a husband and nine little kids waiting at home for her. I haven't got a soul that depends on us. It was little enough to do for her."

Insufficient Fire Protection.

Montreal, May 18.—Chief Tremblay appeared before the Board of Control yesterday and deposited his report upon the inspections the fire captains have made of all the apartment houses in the city and moving picture shows.

In regard to the apartment houses, the chief states that "in nine cases out of ten the houses are not provided with proper or sufficient protective apparatus against fire, and in many instances there are no fire escapes at all."

The reports show need for improved fire protection in many of the moving picture shows in the city.

The youngster had got too near the camel's hay. His clothing protected him from serious injury.

C. N. R. Bond Guarantee Bill Passes the Commons.

Minister of Finance Announces That the House Will Rise for Recess on Friday and That Any Contentious Bills Will Be Held Over Until the Session Is Resumed—C.N.R. Bill Is Rushed Through.

Ottawa, May 18.—The question of the terminals in Montreal and the proposed interchange of traffic with the I.C.R. was a fruitful subject of debate in the House yesterday, when the C.N.R. guarantee bill was under discussion in committee.

Mr. Fielding announced last night that the House would adjourn on Friday. He intimated the program of business that the Government would endeavor to have passed before adjournment. It was as follows: Amendment of the Railway Act, the Banking Act bill, the Quebec Savings Bank bill, the forest reserve bill, the Grain Act, the water carriage bill, the Quebec battlefields bill, the resolution regarding the Japanese treaty, and the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. bill. Besides that he said there was the question of supplying, in addition to several items which the Government desired to have passed for the whole year, and a vote on account for such a sum as would make five-twelfths of the estimates of the year would be asked for. He said he realized that to permit adjournment on Friday such legislation as proved to be contentious would have to be withdrawn, and promised that this would be done.

The leader of the Opposition said the Government could terminate its agreement with the Grand Trunk for the interchange of traffic at any time, but was bound by a ninety years' lease to use the G.T.R. terminals. He declared that the present terminals of the I.C.R. were unworthy of a road which covered sixteen or seventeen hundred miles of territory.

Mr. Graham said he was cognizant of the difficulties of the problem. However, the agreement with the G.T.R. might not be annulled unless it would be in the interest of the country to do so, if at the same time the Government were released from its terminal obligation to the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Graham stated that the route of the railway had been approved from Montreal to North Bay by the Railway Department, but not by the Railway Commission. From Sudbury to Port Arthur the route had been approved by both.

F. D. Monk protested against putting this bill through before adjournment, describing it as a public scandal. He asked if the City of Montreal would have anything to say regarding the terminals.

The procedure, Mr. Graham replied, was for the city and the agreement on the site, and the agreement to be approved by the Railway Board.

Guss Porter insisted that there should be some check on the C.N.R., to see that the railway was not built out of the proceeds of the Government guaranteed bonds.

Mr. Graham contended that no engineer who knew the country would think the road could be built for $35,000 per mile.

Mr. Borden said that might be so, but they ought to have an engineer report upon it.

Mr. Porter declared that the owners of the C.N.R. had grown wealthy in building their railways out of the bond issues, at least this was the opinion of the country.

F. R. Lalor said the whole thing had the appearance of an enormous election fund being got ready for a general election in the fall.

Guss Porter asked how the Minister knew that the road would cost $50,000 per mile, when the Minister could not state definitely where it would be located.

Mr. Graham said that a large portion of the line had already been approved by the Board of Railway Commissioners. As to the other part it was known approximately where it would run and the nature of the country to be traversed was known.

Mr. Middleboro said there was nothing in the bill to bind the company to carry out its agreement to enter into a traffic arrangement with the I.C.R.

Mr. Graham thought that if the company repudiated its agreement there would be redress in the courts.

Major Sharpe then protested because the guarantee had not been fixed at a certain percentage of the cost of construction.

The Minister said this system had not been altogether satisfactory in the case of the G.T.P. He believed it to be in the interest of the country to name a stated amount.

Mr. Borden said that was a good argument, when reasonable evidence as to the cost of the line is produced, and the Minister replied that he had acted on the advice of the engineers of his Department, although they had not written a formal report.

An amendment was inserted providing that the length of the line guaranteed must not exceed 1,050 miles.

That the terms of the new trade treaty between Great Britain and Japan are not suitable to Canadian conditions and circumstances is the chief reason why Canada declined to adhere to the treaty, is made clear in a return tabled in the Commons last night, setting forth the reasons why Canada proposes to continue the existing treaty with Japan in effect for a couple of years, in order that Canada may have an opportunity to make a treaty of her own with the mikado's kingdom.

Woman Startled Reichstag.

Berlin, May 18.—The deliberations of the German Reichstag were interrupted yesterday when a woman in the gallery attempted to make a speech, protesting against the inaudibility of the debate on the floor of the Reichstag. She was forcibly removed from the gallery, the chamber resounding with her hysterical shrieking.

FRANCE IN THE TREATY

She Will Be Included in Big Arbitration Agreement.

Secretary Knox Occasions Great Surprise When He Submits Draft of Treaty to Jesserand as Well as to Bryce — Commission Will Be Appointed to Deal With Difficult Cases.

Washington, May 18.—The principle of arbitration of practically all disputes between nations, including even questions of vital interest and national honor, assumed vitality yesterday when Secretary of State Knox submitted to the British and French ambassadors at Washington the draft of a convention to serve as a basis of negotiations. The fact that this world movement would be inaugurated with France as well as Great Britain came as a great surprise, as it was generally understood that only the U. S. and England were concerned in the initial steps.

When President Taft enunciated the doctrine of comprehensive arbitration, he received a quick response from Ambassadors Bryce and Jusserand that Great Britain and France were willing to begin negotiations with this country for the peaceful settlement of practically all differences that may arise.

Secretary Knox has evolved a document, which has received the approval of the President and other members of his Cabinet, providing that all differences which are internationally justifiable shall be submitted to arbitration. It expands the scope of the existing arbitration treaties by eliminating the exceptions referring to "questions of vital interest and national honor." This elimination is the real accomplishment of the proposed treaty. The exceptions mentioned are found in the arbitration treaties the world over, and have constituted the chief obstacle to the application of the arbitration principle, for it is hard to conceive of a problem which in its essence cannot be regarded as having a controlling bearing upon "national honor" or "vital interest."

SECRETARY KNOX.

Recognizing that there may be questions of policy and other matters likely to force nations to the brink of war, but which no people would be willing to arbitrate, the tentative draft of the treaty provides that differences that either party consider within this category shall be referred to a commission of enquiry empowered to make recommendations for their settlement. In this connection the treaty will take another advanced step by binding the disputants to arbitration in case the commission of enquiry declares that the controversy shall be arbitrated.

Arbitration in all cases will be a last resort. After the two countries have concluded that it is impossible to settle a dispute through diplomatic interchange, the question will be submitted to a commission of inquiry, charged with the duty of suggesting a way to avoid arbitration if possible.

The United State Senate will not be asked to relinquish its right to pass upon the question of arbitrating each dispute. All agreements to arbitrate will be entered into with "the advice and consent of the Senate," as under existing conventions.

The submission of the drafts to Great Britain and France marks the actual beginning of negotiations. The foreign offices of the two countries will now make an exhaustive examination of the American proposition with a view to suggesting modifications or additions. It is the desire of the administration to complete the negotiations if possible for time for submission to the Senate before adjournment of the present session of Congress.

The vast importance of the proposed treaty has been the subject of discussion in diplomatic circles ever since the idea was suggested. Now that this Government's proposal has been reduced to concrete form, the state department assumes a receptive role, willing to enter into negotiation on the same basis with all countries, signifying a desire to do so. It has been rumored recently that Japan was anxious to join in the negotiations, but so far no formal discussion of the subject between the two countries has occurred.

The fire at Kirin will rank with the London and Chicago conflagrations. In the great London fire 13,200 houses were burned, besides churches.

Investigated Charges.

Montreal, May 18.—During the regular meeting of the directors of the Canadian Cement Co., which was held here yesterday afternoon, the sensational charges recently made by Sir Sandford Fleming were brought up.

At the close of the meeting the secretary was authorized to make the following statement:

"With regard to the charges made by Sir Sandford Fleming, these are the same as he made last year. The meeting then had Sir Sandford's charges investigated by a committee of his own choosing, and also by two prominent counsels, one of whom was nominated by Sir Sandford Fleming himself. The result of these investigations showed that there was no justification for his charge and that Sir Sandford's position was untenable."

MR. BRYAN'S LECTURE ON "THE PRINCE OF PEACE"

Eloquent Address in Bridge Street Church Last Night—"A Creator Back of the Creation, For the System Began With God" Says Mr Bryan—Faith in the Bible the Basis of William Jennings Bryan's Religion as Outlined in His Lecture—Proposed Arbitration Agreement Does Not Go Far Enough, He Says—Ridicules Darwinian Theory of Evolution—A Great Audience Listened to the Gifted Orator

Last evening in Bridge St. church before a large-sized audience the Hon. William Jennings Bryan, the noted American politician, delivered his famous lecture on "The Prince of Peace," and never before has such a fine address been heard in Belleville. The lecture was given in aid of the local Y. M. C. A.

Previous to the lecture Rev. Dr. Bishop, pastor of the church, opened the proceedings with prayer and the chairman, Judge Deroche, in introducing the speaker of the evening, said that the Hon. Mr. Bryan had passed through three Presidential campaigns, and had come through them with his moral life unimpaired. It was a delight to have such a distinguished visitor in our midst.

On rising Mr. Bryan was greeted with hearty applause. He thanked the audience for the hearty greeting accorded him, and also for the words of praise from the chairman. He said amongst other things in prefacing his lecture proper that in making a trip to Western Canada. "I asked the pilot in the boat where the boundary line was, and the reply was, "In the water but I don't know where it is," and in the two weeks I spent in Western Canada I never found it, and was as much at home with the people of Western Canada as of my own country. I'm glad to be with you at such a time, when the United States and Great Britain are forming a peace treaty, which I hope will make war an impossibility. I hope it will go so far as not to leave a door open so the two great English-speaking nations of the world cannot go to war.

I might say something about the Y.M C.A., with which I have been connected for some years. The Young Men's Christian Association, with proper equipment does the work of the school, the church and the gymnasium. I know of no Association that does more for the advancement of civilization than the Y. M. C. A., and I would like to meet the man who says he is self-made to ask him if some one hasn't assisted him to success.

"We cannot pay back for the blessings which we have secured, but we can now help those around us, by aiding in every good work. I regard this Association as one of the institutions in which we might take delight in investing and I am glad to say one word in behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association.

"I have made many political speeches and I shall make many more. I feel sure of my ground when I make a political speech, but I feel more sure of my ground in making a religious speech."

His lecture, "The Prince of Peace," said Mr. Bryan, had often been construed to mean something else, and had been called and advertised as "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Price of Peas," and other names. He had known one old farmer who had driven 29 miles as a consequence to find what the speaker knew about the price of peas, only to be disappointed. Other people again, thought he was to talk on the great subject of world peace. In view of the present treaty however, he did not think it a fit subject with which to occupy their time. They had reached the time for action on peace rather than discussion of it, and with all the efforts he had made during the last 35 years, it was hard for him to restrain his feelings sufficiently to answer the question of any man who should ask why should there be a treaty of peace?

Mr. Bryan struck at those who hold "advance views." With his droll touches he dwelt upon the Darwinian theory.

"I do not mean to find fault with you if you want to accept the theory," he said; "all that I mean to say is that while you may trace your ancestry back to the monkey, if you find pleasure or pride in so doing, you shall not connect me with your family tree without more evidence than has been produced. I object to the theory for several reasons. First, it is a dangerous theory. If a man links himself in generations with the monkey, it then becomes an important question whether he is going towards him or coming from him—and I have seen them going in both directions. (Laughter).

"I do not know of any argument that can be produced to prove that man is an improved monkey that may not be used just as well to prove that the monkey is a degenerate man, and the latter theory is more plausible. (Applause).

They should try their higher reasoning powers, he said, in arbitration rather than in violence. The speaker had objections to the proposed treaty between Great Britain and the United States, in that it did not go far enough. The first clause, it was said, included the "vital interests of the country and its honor," This term the speaker remarked, was too ambiguous. He had and, would insist that these nations when they have gone so far as they are willing, that they submit every question no matter of what magnitude to an investigation before declaring war. The sentiment of the two countries was advantage enough for them. At the peace conference in London, England the speaker had the support of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and the motion to this effect was adopted in that congress at which 26 nations were represented. It seemed to be natural now, five years later, that the two Anglo-Saxon countries of the world, should shut their doors against war until the peace forces should have had time to do their work. This, in time, would even remove war from the realm of possibility, and when this treaty was made it would encourage other nations to do likewise.

Outside of Politics.

"I have made many political speeches," said Mr. Bryan, continuing, "and I shall make a great many more."

At this great applause broke out, applause such as has often sounded for the same Bryan in Democratic conventions. When it subsided the speaker continued:

"I feel sure of my ground when I make a political speech, but I feel even more certain of my ground when I make a religious speech."

And certainly it seemed so, for the Nebraskan orator swung on from one phase of his subject, always the note of sincerity ringing in what he said.

"While to me the science of government is intensely absorbing," he said, "I recognize that the most important things in life lie outside of the realm of government, and that more depends upon what the Government does or can do for him.

It was this thing which people may do for themselves that occupied a good deal of the speaker's attention. He did not think anyone could accomplish the most of which they were capable through themselves alone. He thought the spirit of Christ was needed. Man is a religious being and can not attain his highest apart from God.

"But," said Mr. Bryan, "there are honest doubters whose sincerity we recognize and respect, but occasionally I find young men who think it smart to skeptical; they talk as if it were an evidence of larger intellect to scoff at creeds and refuse to connect themselves with churches. They call themselves "liberal," as if a Christian were narrow-minded. Some go so far as to assert that the advanced thought of the world has discarded the idea that there is a God."

To such as these he spoke. He showed that religion is the foundation of morality, and pointed out the weakness of the so-called systems of morals which have supposedly left the religion of Christ out of consideration. He spoke of those whose morality rests upon a nice calculation, of benefits done and benefits to be secured." Of such he said:

Those who keep a book account of their good deeds seldom do enough good to justify keeping books. A noble life cannot be built upon an arithmetic; it must be rather like the spring that pours forth constantly of that which, refreshes and invigorates.

"Morality is the power of endurance, in man, and a religion which teaches personal responsibility to God gives strength of morality. There is a powerful restraining influence in the thought that an all-seeing eye scrutinizes every thought and word and act of the individual.

Religion was the dominant note in every life, he said, and that life was a success just as much as that note sounded clear. Religion was also the most practical thing with which a man could deal. Many men had the idea that they must conform to public opinion no matter which way that opinion stood, and the same men started out with bright prospects and failed. The speaker had yet to see a breakdown in life no due to the morals of the man. There were differences to be encountered in religion, which were impossible to escape.

The college years were perhaps the most difficult in a man's life, for he often had the opinion then that he knew a little more than the rest of his people. The guest of the evening said that at the time he became mixed up in the theory of creation he had gone back to Genesis to find that it said, "in the beginning God created Heaven and Earth." He had taken his stand then, waiting for something that went back of the beginning, but he had been waiting ever since. The theories of the nebular hypothesis was an odd one. It began by assuming that matter existed infinitely fine, but did not explain how the matter come into existence or why. It assumed that there was a tendency of force to act on the matter and that the speaker was in a condition to be acted upon. The speaker had a right to presume, however, he said, that there was a designer back of the dseign, a creator back of the creation, even though he was willing to believe there was a germ of life created in the first place. The system had begun with God and they could not shake his faith in Jehovah. Darwin had not denied the creative act of God, but had only given his ideas as a probability. A Scandinavian scientist was now touring the United States telling the people that the first germ of life came from another planet.

The Miracles.

Then easily the speaker swung on to the miracles. As easily as the modern express train he sped on. Thee was just as little jar, just as little roughness. His thought is connected, and his command of English makes the connection so close that the whole seems one continuous thought, as indeed, it really is.

"Christ cannot be separated from the miracles." This was the next assertion which Mr. Bryan laid down as a mental cornerstone upon which to build.

"The miracles raise two questions: "Can God perform a miracle?" and "Would He want to?" The first is easy to answer. A God who can make a world can do anything He wants to do with it. The power to perform miracles is neccessarily implied in the power to create. But would God want to perform a miracle?

This was a different question, and one which the former Democratic leader did not hesitate to say gave him some feeling of perplexity. "I find it so difficult," he ramarked, "to decide each day what God wants done now that I am not presumptuous enough to attempt to declare what God might have wanted to do thousands of years ago. The miracle is not more mysterious than many of the things with which man now deals—it is simply different. The miraculous birth of Christ is not more mysterious than many of the things with which man now deals—it is simply different. The miraculous birth of Christ is not more mysterious than any other conception—it is simply unlike it; nor is the resurrection of Christ more mysteriaus than the myriad resurrections which mark each annual seed-time.

"It is sometimes said," continued the speaker, "that God could not suspend one of his laws without stopping the universe, but do we not suspend or overcome the law of gravity every day? Every time we move a foot or lift a weight we temporarily overcome one of the most universal laws, and yet the world is not disturbed."

Like the great leader of whom he spoke, Mr. Bryan took examples from the simple things, the things with which everyone is familiar.

Miracles? Yes, he believed in miracles Why shouldn't he? Those who didn't, he believed, were those who thought they knew God so well they knew what He would or would not do. He was not so egotistic. He thought that had two people used the wireless two thousand years ago it would have appeared a miracle. So the all-knowing God might use as natural forces now and accomplish seeming miracles.

But why should the be questioning? Men see seeds planted. They see a little green shoot come above ground. Then they seed lettuce and eat it. They do not know how the lettuce grew. "If a man refused to eat anything until he knew the mystery of its growth," said the speaker, "he would die of starvation." But the mystery does not bother us in the dining-room, only in the church.

Everything that grows tells a life-story of infinite power. Why should I deny that a Divine hand fed a multitude with a few loaves and fishes when I see hundreds of millions fed every year by a hand which converts the seeds scattered over the fields into an abundant harvest?"

This was one side. "But," said the speaker, "there is something more wonderful still—the more mysterious change that takes place in the human heart when the man begins to hate the things he loved, and to love the things he hated. What greater miracle than this, that converts a selfish, self-centred man into a centre from which good influences flow out in every direction?"

"I am sanguine enough to believe that the time will yet come when respectability will no longer be sold to criminals by helping them to spend their ill-gotten gains. A long step in advance will have been taken when religious, educational and charitable institutions refuse to condone conscienceless methods in business and leave the possessor illegitimate accumulations to learn how lonely life is when one prefers money to morals."

"Peace," Mr. Bryan stated, "comes only through God, through His assurance that a line of communication can be established between the Father above and the child below. What," he asked, "will measure the consolation of an hour of prayer?"

And religion, Mr. Bryan declared, to be a thing not for the weak only but for the strong. "Only the man of faith can be courageous. Only those who believe seemingly attempt the impossible, and by attempting prove that one with God, can chase a thousand, that two can put ten thousand to flight."

However, he went on to say, the quibble about miracles which happened 1900 years ago should not be the cause for depriving them of the benefits of religion to-day. Christ had earned the right to the title of The Prince of Peace in many ways. He had taught them that their lives were moulded in the presence of God, and to illustrate this point the Nebraska politician quoted William Cullen Bryant's "Ode to a Waterfowl." Christ had given them the proof that there was a life beyond the grave, and the speaker was as sure that men lived after death as he was that they lived to-day. Christ had given them a measure of greatness that tends to promote peace, and He had given them a method by which the truth was propagated. He had given them a platform so fundamental that it would solve all the problems that confronted mankind and that platform was, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The speaker's faith and optimism, said he, rested in the belief that men would find the platform and apply it more and more to other people's troubles.

At the conclusion of the lecture Mr. Bryan was loudly applauded. The singing of the Doxology and the benediction pronounced by Rev. B. Greatrix brought the proceedings to a close.

13 WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Came Away no Better, and Then Two Boxes of Zam-Buk Worked Complete Cure.

Mr. Fred Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N. B., says:—

I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. I tried various remedies but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial, and although I had little hope of it doing me any good, I took the advice. Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was cured."

For eczema, blood poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers bad leg, sore feet, blisters, insect stings, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. Zam-Buk Soap should be used for washing all wounds, eczemous patches and sores. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. per tablet, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

CRANK TWISTED AND BROKE HIS WRIST

Mr. E. H. Pierce, of Picton, who, with his wife, was a visitor in the city, yesterday met with a painful and peculiar accident. The victim had an automobile, and, after dinner, desired to use the car. He was operating the crank used in starting the machine, when the spark caused the crank to reverse, with the result that Mr. Pierce's right arm was twisted, causing a fracture at the wrist. After the fracture had been reduced Mr. and Mrs. Pierce returned home.

THEIR DISPUTE WAS AMICABLY SETTLED

Yesterday afternoon the police were called to Mr. Frank Munville's residence in the lower part of the city, where, it was stated, trouble was ensuing. It appears that Munville purchased a house from James Babcock, and the latter, it was alleged, was taking away some boards from off the premises. The affair was amicably settled between the parties by the police officer.

CHILD HAD WANDERED

A child named Lenora Smith yesterday wandered away from its home and was not recovered for some time after. The parents and friends joined in a search for the missing child, which was subsequently found in a neighbor's house.

MONEY NO OBJECT

When People are seeking health or relief from any disease, the price never counts.

It is a fact that not less than a million is spent every year by people seeking a satisfactory cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

Probably the best and most highly recommended preparation is Catarrhozone which treats the local symptoms very effectually by means of medicated air supplied through a convenient hard rubber inhaler. The poisons in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone Tablets, which are taken after each meal. They promote appetite, aid digestion, and make the blood rich and pure, so that it will nourish all parts of the body.

This combined local and constitutional treatment in catarrhal diseases has met with wonderful success and can be relied upon to cure every time. The inhaler stops sneezing, coughing, droppings in the throat, and brings quick relief and cure to all the disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh.

The following testimonials from well known Canadians furnish abundant proof what Catarrhozone accomplishes in stubborn cases.

Mrs. James Tweedie, of Jay Bridge says: "For years my daughter doctored unsuccessfully for Catarrh. She had droppings in the throat, hawkings, nausea, and could not sleep at night. The first day's use of Catarrhozone benefitted and ultimately cured my daughter so that Catarrh has never returned. I can recommend Catarrhozone as a grand remedy for Catarrh."

Thousands of strong letters could be given like the above if necessary, but all that is required to prove the merit of Catarrhozone is a trial. It is sure as death to cure; if it fails your money will be refunded. Catarrhozone cured lots of cases worse than yours and can do it again.

WIFE MURDER AND SUICIDE

A Paroled Prisoner From Penitentiary Shoots His Wife and Self

TENDERS ASKED FOR DREDGING HERE

Work at Belleville and Also In Murray Canal to be Done

Advertisements published to-day by the Dominion Department of Public Works, call for dredging at Belleville, and in the Murray Canal. For the former job the tenders must be in by May 26th and contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days of the acceptance of the tender.

This is welcome news and its cause was no doubt the result of the deputation from the Board of Trade and other bodies in the city who went to Ottawa a short time ago and interviewed Hon Wm. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works.

It is to be hoped that this is but a beginning on a comprehensive plan for the deepening of the important inland waterway of the Bay of Quinte all the way through the Murray Canal and Presqu' Ile Bay into Lake Ontario.

CHEESE WAS LOWER THAN LAST WEEK

Prices Declined Over a Cent from Last Week—Production Large

At the Belleville cheese board this afternoon a committee, consisting of Messr. Holgate, Balcanquel, Johnson and W. S. Cook was appointed to revise a rule of the Board that dealt with the membership and also to have names of certain parties printed upon the Board that are now written in.

The decorations belonging to the Board and used here at the Old Boys' Reunion last year were, on motion, loaned to the Madoc Board.

There were boarded by 40 factories 2149 boxes of white and 50 boxes of colored. These were nearly all sold on the board at 10 9-16c. A bid of 10 3-8 cents for a few factories was refused.

"I COULD NOT LIVE"

WITHOUT "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Writes The Treasurer Of Caledonia Township

FENAGHVALE, ONT., Jan. 29th, 1910.

For thirty-five years (and I am now a man over seventy) I have been a terrible sufferer from Constipation.

No matter what remedy or physician I employed, the result was always the same—impossible to get a cure.

About two years ago, I read the testimonial of Hon. John Costigan regarding "Fruit-a-tives" and I decided to give this fruit medicine a trial. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" ever since. They are the first and only medicine that suited my case. If it were not for "Fruit-a-tives", I am satisfied that I could not live." JAMES PROUDFOOT.

The liver controls the bowels by giving up enough bile to make the bowels move. The only possible way to cure constipation is to make the liver active and healthy and thus store up sufficient bile to move the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the liver—ensures an abundance of bile—and causes the bowels to move regularly and naturally. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BOXING

Three Canadians There.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Three of the best amateur boxers in the Dominion of Canada arrived in New York last night for the amateur boxing tournament in Madison Square Garden on Friday and Saturday evenings. The men have established headquarters at the Pastime Athletic Club, under the direction of which the tournament will be conducted.

The men from the land of the snows are W. Pettie, 105-pound champion; A. Roffe, whose title at 125-pounds was won in hard battles, and A. Palmer, holder of the 145-pound championship. J. Abernethey, the Honorary Secretary of the British United, accompanied the athletes.

WORK ON THE RAILWAY BRIDGE

Preparations for the Work are Advancing Rapidly At Present

The work of preparing the bed of the harbor at certain intervals for the erection of piers for the C.N.O.R. is progressing as rapidly as possible. At the eastern side of the harbor at a point abutting the cement wall at the park entrance, a coffer dam was sunk and an excavation made for the abutment of the proposed bridge. Two other coffer dams have been sunk and the water is being pumped out. These are for piers which will be built largely of cement. At present there are a number of workmen engaged on this work.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE

In Ten Years the Central Alps Claimed 886 Victims

The Austrian and German Alpine clubs have just published statistics showing that between the years 1901 and 1910 inclusive 886 Alpinists lost their lives in the Central Alps of Europe, an average of nearly a hundred deaths a year. In 1909, however, there were 144 climbers killed, and in 1910 a hundred, not including twenty-eight persons who met their death while picking edelweiss. Of this total of 128 fatalities, forty-two were Germans, twenty-four Austrians, nineteen Swiss, and four English, while the remainder, including eight guides, were of other nationalities. The largest number of fatal accidents in the Alps took place in the month of August. It is estimated that the army of Alpinists now numbers 100,000.

Large Attendance at the Annual District Meeting Here

NO VOTE ON UNION

It Will Be Taken at Conference—List of the Lay Delegates Appointed

There was the usual attendance at the annual meeting of the Belleville District in the Tabernacle Methodist church yesterday.

Two sessions were held and considerable routine business transacted. A recent arrangement permitted district meetings to vote on the question of the union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches at the annual conference, so that there was no vote on the "union question" yesterday.

The death of the Rev. R. M. Pope was fittingly referred to and an obituary was prepared which will appear in the published minutes of Conference.

The next meeting to be held will be in Bridge street, next year.

The following is the list of laymen appointed to attend the Bay of Quinte Conference at Port Hope in June, 1911

Wm. Johnson, F. E. O'Flynn, Henry Pringle, Judge Deroche, S. Haight, S. Moore, J. A. Goodsall, T. Wills, P. C Canniff, A. E. Bailey, Belleville; F. A. Spafford, Sidney Crossing; C. J. Massey, Wallbridge; H. Finkle, R.F. D., Belleville; W. Vandewaters, R.F. D., Belleville, Nathan Eggleton, Stirling; H. Mullet, Moira, J. Hellinger, Moira; J. A. Holgate, Foxboro; R. FRANK ADMISSION BY GOVERNOR OF MICHIGAN

Says United States Wants Our Raw Material for their Manufactures—His Country Has the Best of it—If He Lived in Canada Would Oppose Reciprocity

Governor Charles S. Osborn, Governor of Michigan, appeared on Wednesday before the Finance Committee of the United States Senate and spoke in favor of reciprocity. Among other things he said:

"The great consideration, after all, is that the United States is manufacturing in a large sense for the world, and that it needs raw material to compete with other countries. We must not give a blow in the face always to the very neighbor from whom we can obtain our raw material of certain kinds."

Senator Lodge called attention to the act recently passed by the New Brunswick Legislature prohibiting the export of wood to the United States, and said that practically every Province in Canada had passed a more or less restrictive act.

"And you will find them more restrictive if this agreement is turned down," commented Governor Osborn.

"The New Brunswick Legislature that passed this act also declared against reciprocity," Senator Lodge added.

"I can readily understand it," the Governor answered, "because we are getting the best of it. I think if I lived in Canada I would be opposed to it."

HARMLESS RUNAWAYS

Last evening runaways occurred on Moira and Dundas streets by horses which became frightened at automobiles. In neither case was any person injured and the animals were stopped before any damage was done to the vehicles.

BULWER'S "MONEY" PLEASED KAISER

LONDON, May 18.— The Emperor William has seen many big shows, but it is safe to say he never saw a greater dramatic display than was prepared for him and the Kaiserin by his British royal cousin and presented last night at the Drury Lane Theatre. It was one of the most notabl eevents in the history of the Fnglish stage. The play chosen for this commanded performance was Bulwer Lytton's 'Money'. which had not been seen in London since it was revived by Bancroft in 1872. Fine acting is indispensable to offset the somewhat stilted dialogue and this was achieved last night by including in the cast of characters nearly all the leading actors on the English stage.

The only three women's parts were filled by Winnifred Emery, Alexandra Carlisle and Irene Vanbrugh. Among the thirty-seven men were three knights—Sir Charles Wyndham, Sir John Hare and Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. While Squire Bancroft rehearsed and produced the play before the arrival of the royal personages, there was plenty of time to admire the toilettes of the women present. There was a blinding glitter of diamonds. When the royal entrance was due the entire audience faced the royal box, and as the party entered there was tremendous applause. The Kaiser escorted Queen Mary and King George acted as escort to the German Empress

The house was filled with the exception of 500 seats in the gallery, by privileged persons, including several Americans.

All seemed in holiday mood. When the royal party was seated the green curtain was raised, disclosing a brilliant drop scene, representing the King and the Kaiser on herseback saluting one another and surrounded by allegorical figures. The band played 'God Save the King,' following with the Kaiser's song of 'Regina.' The Kaiser said afterwards: "It was the finest acting I have ever seen."

STEAMER RATE WAR GOOD FOR CANADA

NEW YORK, May 18.—Mr. C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Railway, returned from Europe this morning aboard the White Star liner Oceanic, accompanied by Mrs. Hays. Mr. Hays says he has been abroad on his usual trip to attend the annual meeting of the board in London, and has been away about six weeks. He said that as far as he was able to observe financial and industrial conditions were good in England.

In connection with the Standard Oil decision Mr. Hays remarked that he believed it would prove a good thing for business here, and that corporations could go on now with their plans without fear of unreasonable interference.

With regard to shipping matters, Mr. Hays said that he understood the Atlantic pool meeting would be held late in June in London and he thought it would be difficult to keep competent lines together in the matter of rates. He said that in his opinion a steamship rate war would not be entirely evil in its effects, because it would result in giving a stimulus to European travel.

CURRENT COMMENT

It is a novel way to test a building by firing it when just finished to see if it is really fireproof, as the Dupont Powder Company did.

A contemporary asserts that oil and water won't mix, It used to be so. but that is not the case now. John D. Rockefeller and his associates overcame the difficulty after a few years' manipulation.

The terms proposed by the insurgents for ending the war in Mexico look uncommonly like a deal for spoils. So far as the leaders are concerned the insurrection appears to be a strike for office.

Illinois forbids the papers to print details of murder, attempt at murder and execution for murder, and they are said to have a free press in the United States.

One advantage of the annexation of the Bahama Islands to Canada would be the privilege it would give us of boasting that Canada is in the banana and pineapples belt, suggests a contemporary.

As the Toronto News pertinently asks: If the United States farmer sells nearly $34,000,000 worth of his products in the Canadian farmers' protected home market what proportions will the invasion assume when the duties are swept away?

It has been found advisable in the interests of public safety to induce the C.N.O.R. to erect a footbridge over George Street. It will also be necessary in case the autocrats of our highways—some of the drivers of automobiles—are not checked in their reckless career, to have footbridges over all the streets.

CONTRACTS GIVEN FOR C. N. R. LINE

New Road from Toronto to Ottawa to be Finished in Year's Time

IT IS 250 MILES LONG

Passenger Trains to be Run This Summer -Grade Will be Very Easy

Sir Donald Mann announced at Toronto yesterday that the contracts had been awarded for the completion of the Toronto-Ottawa line of the Canadian Northern Railway. The successful tenderers are: Messrs. J. P. Mullarkey, Montreal; A. Sinclair, and Ewan Mackenzie, Toronto.

"When will the line be completed?" Sir Donald Mann was asked.

"In one year," was the terse reply.

Line 250 Miles Long.

The line will be 250 miles in extent and the cost will mount up in the millions.

This marks another forward step in the extension of the great Canadian Northern system of railways.

The Toronto-Ottawa line was commenced in the autumn of 1909, and except the perfection of some of the ballasting and grading, and the completion of the bridge across the Moira River at Belleville, this section is ready for operation to this city. The first passenger train will be in operation some time this summer, probably before the opening of the Toronto Exhibition, although no definite time has yet been announced as set by the management.

A Fast Freight and Passenger Line.

The Toronto-Ottawa line of the Canadian Northern will be a fast freight and passenger line, and it will afford railway communication to several new sections in eastern Ontario. In no part will the grade exceed four-tenths of one per cent. a mile. while in many sections the grade will permit the hualage of maximum loads with the minimum of motive power.

Sections of the Contractors.

Mr. A. Sinclair will complete the section between Toronto and Belleville. Mr. Mackenzie will perform the grading and timber work on the twenty-mile section between the 180th mile post to the 200th mile post. Mr. Mullarkey will construct the rest of the road between the 164th and the 180th mile posts, and between the 200th and the 250th mile posts. He will also do the track-laying and ballasting on Mr. Mackenzie's section.

Mr. Mullarkey in all will build 66 miles. His portion of the road starts at Sydenham.

The contract of Mr. Mullarkey covers the grading, fencing, track laying and ballasting.

Work will be put under way on these contracts at once.

Route of the Line.

From Belleville to Deseronto the line will follow the Bay of Quinte. From the latter point it runs north with a deflection of a few points to the east in almost a straight line to the capital. The most important town through which it will run is Smith's Falls. It will cross the Westport & Brockville Railway at Portland Station, the Rideau Canal at Chaffey's Falls, and the Canadian Pacific Railway at Smith's Falls.

Taps a Rich Country.

The country which will be tapped by this railway between Sydenham and Ottawa was described by a person familiar with its topography as being practically level and as being of general excellence for agriculture.

Between Smith's Falls and Sydenham are a hundred minor lakes, and the country is full of attractions for tourists.

It is understood that the Canadian Northern Railway has completed the purchase of the entire right-of-way.

FATHER SUICIDES BY HAND OF SON

Told Boy Gun was Unloaded and Persuaded Him to Pull Trigger

GREENWICH, Conn., May 18.—Yesterday afternoon Fred Husted, a prosperous farmer near here, prevailed upon his 12-year-old son, Lester, to pull the trigger of his shotgun which blew the father's head off. The veracity of the boy, who was the sole witness to the affair, has not been questioned.

Husted owned a farm of 80 acres at North Greenwich, and it is said had lately refused an offer of $80,000 for the place. Last winter he had an attack of grip and his act of yesterday has been attributed either to that or that he was so impressed by a dream from which he had just awakened that he committed the deed while in a doze. He awoke from a nap about 3 o'clock and told his wife he felt queer, having just had a bad dream. He got her to go to the home of a neighbor, Chas. Young and see if he would carry some of his eggs to the Greenwich market. Soon after Mrs. Husted left, the husband called the boy, Lester, to the kitchen, and picking up a double-barrelled shotgun, laid it on the kitchen table, and told the boy to pull the trigger, as he wanted to hear how it sounded. The man knelt on the floor, closed one eye and looked into the muzzle of the gun. The boy hesitated and the father said:—"It isn't loaded." The boy pulled the trigger, but the piece didn't explode. His father took the gun, cocked it again and laid it back in the same position, while he got on his knees and again looked down the barrel.

"It isn't loaded," he said again. Pull the trigger and see how it sounds." The boy did so and the father dropped dead. The lad rushed to the nearest neighbor and told him that he had killed his father.

The boy, when seen to-day, said that his father had never acted strange and if he had not assured him twice that the gun was not loaded, he would not have pulled the trigger.

Daily Intelligencer.

"A Voice From The Past"

Lacking material for support of the reciprocity project of the Laurier Government, some of the less intelligent or less scrupulous of the Grit newspapers have resurrected an address issued twenty years ago by the late Sir John Thompson to his constituents, from which they publish the following extract, in favor of reciprocity:

> "The Government of which I am a member is appealing to the country with a policy, which we believe will be heartily endorsed by a great majority of the electors. We have made to the Government of Great Britain proposals for reciprocity in trade, which, we have good reason to believe, will result in an arrangement by which the markets of the United States will be reopened to the products which our people desire most to send there. A fair measure of reciprocity is what we desire, and we have no doubt that can be obtained without undue sacrifice."

The object of this publication is, transparently, to induce Conservatives to support the present proposal in the belief that Sir John Thompson, were he now in life, would have approved it.

Such a silly attempt to deceive can only result in reflecting ridicule and discredit on those who have been guilty of it.

Twenty years ago, it is quite true, Canadian statesmen of both parties were in favor of reciprocity—the Conservatives advocating the free interchange of natural products between Canada and the United States and the Grit party supporting commercial union, on which disloyal proposal they were overwhelmingly defeated in the general election in which Sir John Thompson was a candidate when he wrote the address which is above quoted from.

But circumstances have, since 1891, changed so greatly to the advantage of Canada that, in the opinion of all but a comparatively few Conservatives and a large number of the ablest Liberals both inside and outside of Parliament, even limited reciprocity would be in the highest degree detrimental to the interests of the Dominion. Such is the situation at present—a situation so radically different that the opinions which were expressed in 1891 have no application to the existing state of affairs.

It is not, however, with the opinions of the lamented gentlemen who headed the Conservative party in 1891 that the people of Canada have to deal, but with those of the present head of the Government of Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Shortly after his accession to office in 1896, Sir Wilfrid was repelled by the Washington Government in attempts to enter into negotiations for reciprocity. Three years after he attained to power, namely in 1899, Sir Wilfrid, in the course of a speech on the fiscal situation, made the following important declaration:

> "If we know the hearts and minds of our people at present, I think I am not making too wide a statement when I say that THE GENERAL FEELING IN CANADA TO-DAY IS NOT IN FAVOR OF RECIPROCITY. There was a time when Canadians, beginning with the hon. gentleman himself (Sir Charles Tupper), would have given many things to obtain the American market; THERE WAS A TIME, NOT LONG AGO, WHEN THE MARKET OF THE GREAT CITIES OF THE UNION WAS THE ONLY MARKET WE HAD FOR ANY OF OUR PRODUCTS, BUT, THANK HEAVEN, THOSE DAYS ARE PAST AND OVER NOW. WE ARE NOT DEPENDENT ON THE AMERICAN MARKET AS WE WERE AT ONE TIME."

Those utterances of Sir Wilfrid form a fitting rebuke to those of his supporters who are at present attempting to deceive the people, as above stated.

But that was not the only utterance of similar import which was made by Sir Wilfrid.

In 1903 the administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose colleague, Mr. Fielding, held the office of Finance Minister, introduced the Grand Trunk Pacific bill. Both gentlemen occupy the same positions today, both are leading advocates of and factors in the reciprocal agreement. In 1903 the policy of constructing the Canadian Grand Trunk Pacific was determined upon and approved by Parliament. The declared reason for constructing this splendid transcontinental line was that the Dominion would be independent of the United States; that Canada's trade route, east and west, should be assured. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House of Commons solemnly declared:

> "It is not for to-morrow, but of this day, of this hour, of this minute. Heaven grant that it may not be already too late; heaven grant that whilst we tarry and dispute, the trade of Canada is not deviated to other channels and that AN EVER VIGILANT COMPETITOR DOES NOT TAKE TO HIMSELF THE TRADE THAT PROPERLY BELONGS TO THOSE WHO ACKNOWLEDGE CANADA AS THEIR NATIVE OR ADOPTED LAND. . . . I have found that the most effective way to MAINTAIN FRIENDSHIP WITH OUR AMERICAN NEIGHBORS IS TO BE ABSOLUTELY INDEPENDENT OF THEM."

The supporters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, upon behalf of the constituencies they represented, accepted this declaration. In 1904, Parliament was dissolved and the electors by an overwhelming majority approved of the policy based upon fervently enunciated pledges recorded in the House and repeated during a general election. More, Mr. Fielding, in his place as Minister of Finance, in 1903, speaking on the subject, said: "It is well that we should let our friends across the border know that whatever measure of independence of them we have now WE SHALL MAINTAIN, and THAT WE SHALL INCREASE THAT MEASURE OF INDEPENDENCE by the line that we are now proposing, and should the necessity arise, we shall not shrink from providing another."

In fact, the contract with the proposed transcontinental railway provided (section 42) that aid was given "for the purpose of encouraging the development of Canadian trade and the transportation of goods through Canadian channels."

Subsequently, in England and Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier pledged his reputation that the one aim of his Government was to draw closer the trade of Canada and the Empire. In Hamilton, he stated "the time will come, I believe, for mutual trade with Canada and Great Britain." Even stronger and more emphatic language was used in Montreal. In Ottawa, when the Right Honorable James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States, was entertained by the Canadian Club, the Prime Minister (1907) declared "We are turning our hopes once more to the Motherland. . . not for my part that I do not value American trade; not for my part, that I do not value all that we would have to gain if our relations were on a better footing. But this is a matter on which we shall have no more pilgrimages to Washington." He attended the Colonial Conference in London (May, 1907); and earnestly addressing the distinguished gentlemen present, said: "If we were to follow the laws of nature and geography between Canada and the United States, the WHOLE TRADE would flow from south to north and north to south. . . we have done everything possible by building canals and subsidizing railways, to bring the trade FROM EAST TO WEST, SO AS TO BRING TRADE INTO BRITISH CHANNELS. All this we have done recognizing the principle of the great advantage of forcing trade within the British Empire."

It is for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues to explain their change of front on this great question—a change which is rendered all the more striking from the fact that the situation is to-day still more in favor of the Dominion than it was in 1899, 1903 or 1907, and that the prospects are brighter than ever before in the country's history.

CHICAGO, May 18.—A fall in the barometer helped carry down the price of wheat to-day. The suggestion of wet weather was too strong to be resisted by dealers who had a handsome profit in sight. The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ⅜d higher than yesterday, on wheat and ⅜d higher on corn. Buda Pest wheat closed ½c higher; Hamburg unchanged to ¼c lower; Antwerp, Berlin and Havre unchanged.

More Kicks Than Ha'pence.

As a boy Sir Rufus Isaacs, the new Attorney-General for Great Britain, shipped aboard a sailing vessel bound for the Indies, and for more than a year he led the rough-and-tumble life of a sea apprentice. And so many more kicks than ha'pence did he get that when the ship reached Rio de Janeiro he ran away, but was caught, brought back, and, as a punishment, was made to help in discharging a load of coal. He had his revenge one day, however. He had been annoying the cook, and that worthy made for the future K.C. with a dishful of water in which vegetables had been cooked. Rufus made a successful dodge as the cook threw the water in his direction, and the captain, coming down to see what the trouble was, received the water full in his face.

SINS OF THE ..,CITY...

A few minutes later on Ellis entering he was greeted with the words,—

"Mr. Ellis, I feel quite myself again now and wish to thank you before leaving for the great kindness you have shown me."

"Don't mention it, madam. Pray don't mention it." And he gazed on the fair face before him. lost in admiration.

"My father, Lord Oxendale, will, I am sure, wish to thank you in person and will call."

"Lord Oxendale! Then it is Miss Spencer who has honored me?"

"Yes, that is my name."

"I am indeed fortunate. I have had the pleasure of meeting your father several times in business."

And thus commenced an acquaintance which had a serious bearing on the events hereafter to be recorded.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Man Balbi.

Some weeks later the mail steamer Milesia had ploughed its way across the Atlantic, round Cape Horn and up the Pacific, until at the Port of Mollendo on the arid, rainless coast of Peru, where it had landed two of its first-class passengers, Guelfo and his satellite, Ellis.

The voyage had been uneventful, and, as soon as the stockbroker had acquired his sea-legs and was able to appear on deck, many had been the consultations and discussions held by the two.

Before they had embarked Ellis had met Pauline several times, and the fescination she had exercised over him that afternoon at his house in Sussex Place had steadily grown. Lord Oxendale had called on him and had insisted on him dining at Mount Street and making the acquaintance of Lady Oxendale. This first visit had been followed by one or two calls, in which Ellis had been able to impress her ladyship greatly in his favor. There was no doubt about it. Ellis was a man who shone in society. He was a gentleman, well read and of a cultured mind, knowing how to display his knowledge to the best advantage.

But with Pauline it was different. She merely regarded him as a man who had rendered her a service and to whom it entailed being civil. Moreover, she knew that Ellis had, though it was only for a few hours, been associated with the man to whom she had given her love in a matter which she regarded as the cause of his death. Indeed, in her eyes there was a cloud of suspicion hanging over Ellis She felt she might be most unfair to him in thus viewing the matter, but, nevertheless, she could not shake off the curious feeling, and never once, when in his company, did she refer to her dead lover or seek any information as to what had taken place between the two men.

Nor was Ellis himself at ease. He admired Lord Oxendale's daughter immensely and recognized that this admiration wah rapidly giving place to a stronger feeling. But at the same itme he felt what a mean, despicable traitor he was.

He would have given much if he had never met Vipan, and more if he had not entered into that fatal contract with Guelfo, which was daily pressing upon his soul. A great fight was going on within him—a fight between honor and dishonor—and he was miserable. Money with him came first, and Guelfo was his stream of Pactolus It was this man who had brought him his wealth; without him Ellis would be poor, and he could not afford to break with him. He had entered into a compact with him and he must go through it, weakly comforting himself with the thought that something might occur which would enable him to cast off the bonds which had, in the light of love, commenced to gall him so bitterly.

And so the two, one a hardened, cold villain, the other a weak coward with some grains of a better nature still lying domant within him, set sail on their search for the riches to which they had no vestige of right.

During the voyage they had carefully arranged their plans, or rather Guelfo had laid them down and Ellis had fallen in wth them. Removed from the influence of Pauline he was given over more fully to his tempter, and was now determined to carry the thing through without hesitation.

At Mollendo, upon making inquiries for Balbi at 4 Strada Regia, the address upon the letter, they were informed that he had left there some time previously for Cuzco, in the centre of the country, where his letters were forwarded to the Hotel Pizarro and where futher infomation regarding him would doubtless be obtainable.

"There! What do you think of that Ellis?" exclaimed Guelfo, in a tone of disgust. "I suppose we are going to have a game of follow-my-leader all over this infernal dried-up country."

"Well, you didn't suppose you were going to drop on him all of a second, as though he had an office in Old Broad Street, did you?" replied Ellis, laughing. "We've come a considerable number of thousands of miles, and a few hundreds further won't matter much; so it's make our way up to Cuzco as fast as we can. They've got a railway there; that is something to be thankful for."

"You are keener on the game than you were, Ellis, I notice," said Guelfo.

"Well, we're getting close up now, and that might be a reason."

On the following day the two men were in the cars crossing the twenty miles or so of sandy waste which lies between the sea and the western foot of the Andes—that strip of land on which the rain never falls, but which from June to November, is watered every morning by the garna or thick damp fog—and thence up the steep ascent to Arequipa and from there through the marvellous passes and canons of the giant Andes, where the line seems to hang on the sides of the precipices more like the thread of a spider's web than anything else, until the glorious lake Titicaca, bosomed in a giant hollow, fringed on all sides by lofty, snow-capped mountains, was reached.

Here at the city of Puno a pause of some hours was made and then a further ascent was commenced, past Pucara and Santa Rosa into the defiles and gorges of the Vilcanota Mountains until at length, after long hours of snail-like progression, they emerged on the high table land of Cuzco and noticed that the rivers were now flowing in a contrary direction to those they had passed earlier in the day. Though the district is described as tableland, yet its appearance gives anything but that idea to the traveller for the surface is very uneven, being traversed by several ridges of hills, and the city of Cuzco itself, nestles at the foot of the lofty hill Socahuaman.

ADVENTURES IN THE ANTARCTIC

Dr. J. B. Charcot Tells of Discoveries In Southern Regions, Which May Be Called South American Antartica

Dr. J. B. Charcot, London, has given an account of his second Antarctic expedition, from which he returned last year.

He did not set out with any idea of attempting to reach the South Pole. He had a three-masted vessel with an auxiliary engine, specially constructed for the purposes of the expedition, and named the Pourquoi Pas? It was equipped with every care and supplied with the most modern instruments for observation. The crew consisted of 22 men, most of whom had accompanied him on his former expedition. The staff consisted of seven men, each an expert in some department of natural science. The expedition started from Havre on August 15, 1908, and finally sailed from Punta Aernas for the Antarctic on December 16.

On arriving at Petermann Island, off the west coast of Graham Land, Dr. Charcot, with two companions, set out to discover if it was possible to pass between the Biscoe Islands and the coast. As they expected to return the same day, they took no store of provisions and no camp equipment; but their return was blocked by the ice, and they did not reach the ship again till four days later, narrowly escaping death from hunger and cold. From Petermann Island a journey was made towards the south along the coast, the mapping of which, begun during the previous expedition, was completed. A hydrographical survey was made of Adelaide Island, which was found to be 70 miles long instead of eight miles, as had previously been stated. To the south of Adelaide Island, in a region which had not previously been visited, a great gulf was discovered and named Marguerite Bay. Still farther to the south the expedition traced and studied the hydrography of 120 miles of unknown coast. After two attempts a passage was forced through the ice to Alexander Land, which was mapped and found to be an island. Then the expedition returned to Petermann Island for the winter. The weather, though comparatively mild, was stormy, a formidable north-east wind blowing during nine months. An immense quantity of snow fell. The conditions were found very trying by the members of the expedition, some of whom were attacked by scurvy, and when the winter-quarters were vacated in November a course was steered north to Deception Island. Here the expedition was very hospitably received by the whalers settled on the island, and after a rest, another attempt was made to penetrate south. In spite of unfavorable ice and weather conditions all latitudes previously reached to the south and west of Alexander Island were surpassed. Sailing along the edge of the pack ice, the expedition found Peter I. Island in the situation assigned to it on the charts; but as the voyage was continued the icebergs became so numerous as to be embarrassing and dangerous. It was estimated that something like 5,000 were seen in one day. However, the expedition succeeded in reaching 126 deg. west longitude, and then, as the supply of coal was nearly exhausted, and the health of some of the members gave cause for serious alarm, the course of the Pourquoi Pas was directed northwards.

From the geographical point of view the expedition proved that the west coast of what may be called South American Antarctica is cut up by deep fjords and fringed with islands and reefs.

GRAIN AND BREADSTUFFS

Some Figures of the Trade In These Commodities

The Canadian Miller, in its May number ,contains the following historical sketch of the grain and breadstuffs trade between Canada and the United States, showing the gradual increase in imports from the latter country:—

A brief summary of the development of trade between Canada and the United States in grain and breadstuffs since Confederation may be of interest just now. Statistics are not complete, and there have been changes in classification which alter the results in some items. In 1874 our imports of dutiable breadstuffs of all kinds were $64,328 from the United States. By 1880 these grew to over a million dollars, and from that down to 1896 they ranged from a million and a quarter to over four million dollars per year. They then dropped below the million mark till 1902, when they were $1,220,000, and they have risen steadily, till in 1910 these imports fro mthe United States were $1,740,000 out of a grand total of $2,589,000 from all countries. The list of free breadstuffs imported from the United States made a total of $15,447,000 in 1874, and these large imports were maintained till 1879, when the National Policy was enforced, when they dropped to nothing for three years, and the grand total up to 1889 was only about $10,000 of free breadstuffs. The imports were small till 1896, when they were $99,288, and next year they jumped to $720,000, and in 1898 they jumped further to $6,968,000. The free imports have ranged since then from two millions to eight millions a year, the figures in 1910 being $4,636,000. These figures include raw grain as well as manufactured cereal products.

Turning to exports, we shipped wheat to the United States to the value of $2,494,000 in 1868, and this varied from a few thousands in some years to over two million dollars, averaging about a million till 1894, when it dropped to $76,000. Since 1903 it has ranged all the way from $100,000 to nearly three millions. Taking all grains, our exports in 1868 to the United States were $6,699,000, and varied from four millions to thirteen millions till 1893, when for the first time it was under two million, since which it has in some years gone as low as $204,000. It rose, however, from $635,000 in 1908 to $2,958,000 in 1910.

Our exports of wheat flour in 1869 to the United States were $423,000, and remained above the $100,000 mark till 1878, since when they have been insignificant till 1904, when they were again above $100,000. In 1908 Canada exported flour to the value of $122,000 and in 1910 $571,000. Our exports there of all other manufactured grain products were $86,000 in 1896, and have been small all the way down the years till 1910. The grand total of our exports of grain products were $850,000 in 1868, but since the eighties were below $100,000, except in one year, down to 1904. In 1908 they were $126,000, and in 1910 $582,000. These returns are given in round numbers.

THE TIME TO CHASE MUSCA IS NOW

Every Fly Killed in Time Diminishes Breed by Millions—Danger to Human Life—Permanganate of Potash Sprinkled Around House is Good Disinfectant

Have you seen Musca to-day? Did you kill him? If not and his progeny are treated with the same respect you are responsible for many millions of his family in Belleville this summer before September.

Musca in his primitive form is a disgusting little object, hardly able to move, he crawls about with his eleven thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine brothers and sisters and cousins and second cousins in about a pound of rotten stable manure or in a little greater quantity of house refuse until he reaches the condition of a small black insect not unlike a diminutive beetle, then he develops wings, and loading himself with souvenirs of his hitherto happy home he goes forth to see the world. A tomato outside a store attracts his attention, and after carefully wiping two of his feet on it and leaving a few of the souvenirs he collected on the manure heap, he finds the decaying part and collects enough from it to carry to his next stopping place. Being fond of children, he alights with all six feet on the baby's feeding bottle and has a wash and brush up in the drop of milk just oozing from the top, leaving the nipple all ready to be put into baby's mouth a little later. Then he goes to see how his brothers are getting on and brings them all back to a nice joint of meat he has noticed exposed in a butcher's shop. They have been joined on their way by some matrons of the family who find in the meat a nice place to lay a few hundred eggs and on they go to a sugar basin, impartially distributing their souvenirs of disease and death over the sugar or into the milk or perhaps they investigate the jam a little too closely just before Johnny has it for supper. They are not at all shy, and if Johnny fell down and cut his hand they want to know all about it, and to-morrow there is a hand to be seen which is beginning to fester.

There is no greater danger to human life than Musca, the house fly. Typhoid fever and all intestinal diseases are known to be carried and propagated by it, yet what are the citizens doing to get rid of it?

Five cents worth of permaganate of potash will make sufficient disinfectant to kill all the flies around the average dwelling house. It should be diluted according to instructions and then sprinkled everywhere where flies may be breeding. Aftrewards the refuse should be destroyed either by burning it or burying it deep down in the ground. Then do not give the flies further opportunities to place their eggs.

Much can be done by the individual in directing public opinion. If for one week every housewife when she went into a store was to tell the storekeeper she would not purchase any more from him unless he covered all his vegetables, meat and other food from the flies, there is not the shadow of a doubt but that she would not only have more satisfactory service for herself, but would be the means of saving some family, perhaps her own, from sickness, even death. The destruction of the fly is man's work, and woman's work is mostly along the line of prevention. Flies cannot live without food, and the food they most need is garbage. It matters not whether the garbage is the steaming manure heap or the basin in the corner of the sink, or the food left on the plates pending cleaning up time, or the insanitary open tubs in which house refuse is kept. Garbage is the food upon which it livees and the breeding place in which it lays its eggs.

Remember the little white coffins going up to the cemetery every summer and determine to lessen the number by killing the fly.

F lies are disease carriers.
L ive and breed in all kinds of filth.
I nfect food and drink by germ-laden feet.
E ach female fly can lay 250 eggs.
S hould be kept out of dwellings.

New York Evening Post Comments on Staple Prices

The following interesting comment on United States commodity markets is from the New York Evening Post:—

Whatever else may be said of the season's very remarkable movement of staple prices, one thing is certain—a supply of grain and provisions in excess of consumptive requirements certainly confronts the trade at present. How long it will last, and how much lower prices will go, is the problem everyone in the trade is trying to fathom.

SOME CURIOUS WATCHES

Not as Complex Nowadays as Formerly—Queer Old Ones

With all our modern improvements we rarely hear nowadays of watches so fancifully complex as used to be made for great folks in the times when all watches were expensive and comparatively novel.

King George III., in the year 1760, received a present of a watch that was a kind of mechanical almanac. It pointed out the date, and also had a device to show the varying lengths of the days, according to the season. It was not bigger than other watches of the time, but then they were all what we should call turnips now.

The Emperor Napoleon I. had a watch which wound itself by means of a weighted lever, which, at every step His Majesty took, rose and fell, and having a gathering click to it wound up a ratchet attached to the barrel. Pedometers were afterwards made on the same principle. The Duke of Wellington had a watch which was given to him by the King of Spain, from which the time could be told by the touch, the hours being market by studs. In the back of the case was placed an index which, when moved forward, would stop at the portion of the hour indicated by the watch, and then by means of the studs the time could be approximately computed in the dark.

Catharine of Russia had a watch constructed by an ingenious peasant which played a chant, and had within it tiny mechanical figures which, moving about, were supposed to represent the scene of the resurrection of the Saviour; the chant was then heard all over Russia at Eastertime. But this watch was bigger than a hen's egg.

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor apetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. SOLDIER AND SCULPTOR

Adrian Jones Understands a Horse From Tail Tip to Nostril

It is said of Captain Adrian Jones, who has designed the four-horse war chariot, weighing upwards of thirty tons, which is to be erected in London as a memorial to "Peace," that he is probably the only living sculptor who understands a horse from tail-tip to nostril. As a boy he loved and studied horses, and would have liked to become an artist, but his father had other plans, and he entered the Army. He saw much active service, and was then advised to become a sculptor, having devoted most of his spare time when in the Army to painting and sculpture.

ARE PLANNING TO KILL THE RECIPROCITY BILL

Move in United States Senate to Tack on Free List Amendment—More Delay Probable—Some Senators Insist that Other Matters Must be First Disposed of

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Evidence continues to accumulate showing an organized movement in the Senate to delay the Canadian Reciprocity Bill and finally to kill it by the indirect method of amending it in a wey that must prove fatal by adding a free list bill.

Predictions are freely made about the Senate that the Canadian Reciprocity Bill will be amended by adding a free list or an amendment providing a general lowering of duties and that it will fail.

President Taft is believed to be fully acquainted with the gopher burrowing that is going on in the Senate to undermine the Canadian bill. He summoned Senator John W. Kern, of Indiana, to the White House to-day, and had a frank talk with him. Mr. Kern is in favor of the House free list bill, and for a general lowering of tariff duties, and he is also in favor of Canadian reciprocity, but he objects to permitting one measure to be used by the enemies of both to kill off the other.

There is an instance among some Senators that both the Lorimer matter and the direct election resolution must be disposed of in the Senate before Canadian reciprocity is voted on. The first evidence of revolt against the delay in action on Canadian reciprocity by the Senate Finance Committee were manifested to-day when Senator Stone, of Missouri, restless under the extended hearings, announced that he would hereafter move daily that the committee proceed to a vote on the question of reporing the bill.

"I may be voted down," said the Senator, "but I will renew the motion each day until we get a vote on reporting the bill."

At the hearings to-day the Texas cattle raisers, led by Judge S. H. Cowan, of Fort Worth, renewed their objections both to Canadian reciprocity and to the House free list bill.

The lumbering interests followed the cattlemen in opposition to the bill.

WOMAN'S WORLD

FASHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS CHIT-CHAT

Femininity and Genus.

The good old generalizations about the metes and bounds of the intellectual and spiritual powers of women still have a good deal of life in them. Like all vague, general dogmas they undergo constant modification, but the change is so gradual that it is usually not present to consciousness. Those who are to-day quite sure that woman is by nature unfitted for this or that have a feeling, no doubt, that they are but reasserting what they or those whom they succeed, were saying forty or fifty years ago; while in reality they would not dream of standing specifically by the opinions current in those days, still less by the notions that prevailed at a somewhat remoter time. Nobody now doubts the ability of perfectly normal women to do scholarly or scientific work of a high order; and it requires a serious effort of memory to recall the time—though it was not long ago—when it was generally thought that none but highly exceptional women possessed even the ability to master creditably an ordinary college course. All this belongs to the past. But the part of the dogma that asserts that high creative genius is a gift from which women are shut out survives in something like its original strength.

The dogma of feminine limitation is often buttressed by an ancillary proposition to the effect that such few women as do show high creative gifts are sure to be masculine women.

"All intellectually, productive—geistig produktiv—women," according to an erudite German writer,' have in their nature, and also in their way of life, something decidedly masculine, whence follows the unescapable conclusion that they owe their peculiar productive capacity to the masculine part of their personality.' The only names instanced are those of the three famous Frenchwomen, Mme. de Stael, George Sand, and Rosa Bonheur. But how about Mrs. Browning, doubtless the most gifted woman poet since Sappho—not to speak of Sappho herslef? Mrs. Browning was the ethereally feminine of women, and yet was a true poet besides being a learned scholar, and all this in spite of an extremely fragile constitution. And how about Mary Somerville, who was a thoroughly feminine woman, a model wife and mother, and even a remarkable needle-woman, although, in the face of extraordinary obstacles, she achieved mastery of the most masculine of sciences?

But apart from the contradictions in fact of this assertion of the masculinity of intellectually gifted women says the New York 'Evening Post,' from an editorial in which the above is taken, there is a point of logic which its proponents overlook and which deprives it of all real weight. How many women have actually possessed capacity for creative work and have not devoted themselves to intellectual production, we shall never know; but it is evident that of all the causes' inhibiting thme, by far the most potent has been the general state of opinion concerning the natural sphere of women and their true ideals and aspirations. There is a kind of influence that operates from the very days of infancy, and has an immeasurable power to shape the future of the growing child, whether boy or girl Nor does its potency end there, for at no time is it more active than in the impressionable and critical years of early manhood or womanhood. If a few women have broken away from it, is it not natural that an altogether undue proportion of these should be such as, in addition to their powers of reason or imagination, possessed the special quality of not being under the sway of the prevailing feminine motives and ideals? So long as intellectual achievement was regarded by the world as unfeminine, it could not be otherwise than that the feminine woman, however gifted, was less likely to essay her powers than her more masculine, though not more gifted, sister. In short, then, we know altogether too little of the matter to justify dogmatizing. Sure enough it is that great geniuses are not to be found on every bush among feminine women—or among masculine women, or masculine men, for that matter; but that there is anything like a contradiction of terms between thorough femininity and true genius there is, as yet at least, absolutely no warrant for asserting..

The Too Fat Girl.

Girls who are conscious of possessing overplump cheeks should face the situation bravely and resolve not to cheat themselves in regard to their own appearance. A face above a vrey low collar or a low cut neck always looks smaller and more delicate than when half buried in a frill edged stock For that reason the full cheeked young preson may profitably subject her face to the high collar test. A glance will show whether the cheeks are becoming fuller and will warn their owner against continuing to consume candy—if that is one of her sins against diet—putting several lumps of sugar in her coffe and ice cream sodas into her stomach directly before or after luncheon. Confectionery and sweetened beverages not only make the fat fatter, but they put an undue proportion of this avairdupois upon the cheeks. Therefore the overplump girl should keep careful watch upon the contour of her cheeks, and practice self-denial, or at least, judicious restriction in sweets, lest she robs her self of the clear cut profile from ear to chin, popularly supposed to be a physical attribute of the refined woman.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

TRADE WOULD SUFFER

British Lords Discuss the Dangers of Reciprocity.

Earl of Selborne Criticizes the Asquith Government For Its Supineness In Not Protecting Imperial Interests In Regard to the American-Canadian Agreement—A Very Good Step Says Viscount Haldane.

London, May 19.—The Government was sharply criticized by the Earl of Selborne in the House of Lords last evening for what he termed "Their extraordinary supineness in failing to safeguard the interests of the United Kingdom in the American-Canadian reciprocity agreement." The earl referred to President Taft's "very remarkable speech," and declared that when Mr. Taft said the annexation talk was bosh all accepted the President's word; nevertheless the agreement formed a precedent capable of very large extensions. It was the first time in the history of the Empire that one part had obtained better terms from a foreign country, than had the United Kingdom, and the step between receiving and giving better terms, the earl continued, they might come to think that it was natural to give foreign countries better terms than they gave the United Keingdom or the other dominions of the Empire.

Ratification of the agreement, the earl said in concluson, would place this country in a position of extraordinary difficulty.

Baron Lucas, Parliamentary Under Secretary to the War Office, replying on behalf of the Government, declared that the Earl of Selborne greatly over-estimated the damage to the trade of the United Kingdom and the difficulties that might arise as a result of the reciprocity agreement. Canada was perfectly within her statutory rights, and the Government could not interefere. The United Kingdom, the baron said, could never offer Canada the same advantages as could the United States. Canada and the United States were complementary to one another in a degree to which Canada and Great Britain never could be. If Canada and the United States wanted a reciprocity agreement this country could not prevent it. Great Britain must give Canada a fair field for promoting her own prosperity in whatever way she thought best, and it was on these lines, Baron Lucas concluded, that the Government was watching the reciprocity negotiations now going on.

War Secretary Haldane, who recently was elevated to the peerage, said that it was the policy of the Government to give the people of Canada every facility to do the best they could for themselves. The Government held that it was not to the disadvantage of the United Kingdom that Canada should develop trade relations with the United States.

"We hold," continued the Secretary, "that Canada, with a great trade of this kind, cannot fail to be a more prosperous Canada, affording a better market for our goods and able to do more trade with ourselves. Therefore, from every point of view we look upon the step she is taking as probably a very good step in our interest, as well as in the interests of Canada. It is not for us to intermeddle in her policy. We do not think it a good thing to attempt to guide or influence the policy of our great dominions in matters of trade. We are free traders, and we intend to remain free traders."

Speakers for Borden Tour.

Ottawa, May 19.—The speakers who will accompany Mr. R. L. Borden on his political tour of the west are: Andrew Broder of Dundas, the chief agricultural expert of the Conservative party; Dr. Roche of Marquette, the leading Manitoba Conservative in the House; and Arthur S. Meighen of Portage la Prairie, a youngster who has already distinguished himself as a Parliamentarian of a high order. It is probable that the party will be joined by one of the leading Quebec Conservative orators.

Besides those mentioned, Mr. Borden will be assisted in Manitoba by W. H. Sharpe, W. D. Staples, Glen Campbell, G. H. Bradbury, Dr. Schaffner and Alex. Haggart.

Investigation Falls Flat.

Kingston, May 19—The investigation into alleged irregularities on the part of the property committee of the Board of Education have come to a sudden halt. A special committee has been endeavoring to secure evidence, but so far none has been secured. The committee placed an advertisement in the press asking for information, but with no result. The entire affair is now looked upon as street gossip.

The investigation was brought on when Trustee Wallace alleged that he had been told that a member of the board had been offered $100 for his vote and influence for the purchase of certain property for a school site.

ALL-RED SYSTEM.

Royal Society of Canada Passes Resolution Favoring Cable.

Ottawa, May 19.—Officers were elected at the concluding session of the Royal Society in the Carnegie Library yesterday afternoon and a number of resolutions passed; one, moved by Sir Sandford Fleming, advocated the all-red system of state-owned cable.

The new officers of the society are as follows: President, Dr. W. F. King; vice-president, Dr. W. D. Lesueur; honorary secretary, Duncan Campbell Scott; honorary treasurer, Lawrence M. Lambe.

A memorandum prepared by Sir Sandford Fleming, approving of an imperial system of state-owned cables on British territory and recommending an alternative route from Australia through the Indian Ocean, instead of depending on one line, was adopted and will be issued in the form of phamplets to be sent to every member of the Imperial Conference. In the report of the section on English literature was included a suggestion that the Minister of Mines be asked for permission to establish the library of the Royal Society in the new Victoria Museum. A motion for the establishment of a Canadian National Library was also moved, and passed.

A resolution of regret was passed at the termination of office of Earl Grey, and another at the retirement from the Royal Society of John Reade of Montreal, a well-known newspaper man.

TREATY IS WORTHLESS

Japan Trade No Use to Canada Says Martin Burrell.

Her Tariff Is So High That the Wheat Sent Across the Pacific by Canada In Three Years Only Amounted to $23,000—Cowan Pleads For a Bar to Prevent Indiscriminate Immigration From Japan.

Ottawa, May 19.—That Canada should abandon her efforts to develop a large trade with Japan and China, adhere to the new treaty between Great Britain and Japan, and restrict or prohibit Japanese immigration was the policy enunciated by Martin Burrell, of Yale-Cariboo, in the Commons yesterday, when Hon. W. S. Fielding moved the House into committee to consider the resolution extending for two years the existing trade agreement with Japan.

Mr. Burrell declared that Oriental trade was a chimera. During the last three years Canada exported less to Japan than during the preceding three years. It was expected at one time that Canadian wheat would find a large market in Janpan, but, owing to the heavy tariff maintained by Japan, Canada's exports of wheat to that country during the past three years was to the value of only $23,000. It would not be of any commercial advantage for Canada to adhere to the new treaty, Mr. Burrell said in conclusion, but because we could keep out oriental immigration and have the backing of the British navy.

Mr. Fielding, by way of reply, read the letter he addressed to the Japanese consul-general, setting forth the reasons of Canada's Ministers for desiring to continue the present arrangement for two years, as set forth in a Parliamentary return made public on Wednesday.

While admitting that trade with the Orient had not developed as rapidly as expected, he said Canada did not desire to be werse off in regard to Japan than other nations, and for that reason it was proposed to continue in the favored nation class. As to immigration he pointed out that our arrangement with Japan was not by treaty. The Japanese Government had faithfully lived up to its promise to restrict emigration to Canada, with the result that only 1,200 Japanese had come in during the last three years. Therefore it was the desire and the intention of the Government to maintain the present agreement governing immigration. If this were done there would be no possibility of further unpleasant incidents on the Pacific coast.

George H. Cowan (Vancouver), discussed the question of emigration from Japan. He argued that, under the arrangement entered into, the power to restrict the emigration from Japan to Canada was in the hands entirely of the Japanese Government. Canada had nothing to do with the matter. The vice of the treaty, he said, was that it gave a preference to Japanese immigrants over the immigrants from every other country. The arrangement was over and above the Immigration Act. Under the act there were restrictions on English, Scottish and Irish immigrants, but under the arrangement there was none on immigrants from Japan. He declared there was no necessity for the making of a treaty at all at this time.

"Why not," he asked, "exercise the power of a self-respecting nation and keep the restriction of our immigration in our own hands?"

The debate on Hon. G. P. Graham's amendments to the Railway Act was resumed in the Commons yesterday morning. It lasted all afternoon and into the evening. It was a fight on behalf of the farmer. The clause prescribing new conditions in regard to the killing of stock by railways, and which provides that railways are responsible for animals slaughtered, unless the farmer leaves his gates open, was strongly opposed by A. E. Lancaster, Arthur Meighen and other members of the Opposition, who argued that the striking out of the provision fixing onus of proof on the railways would leave the farmer in a worse position than he is to-day.

Mr. Lancaster said that it would be better to allow the law to stand as it is.

Much Building Tied Up.

Kingston, May 19.—The building trades are making a strong effort to have the strike of the masons, their helpers and the stonecutters settled. They have asked that the difficulty be submitted to arbitration. If the strike is not soon settled it will have a very serious effect, as other trades will be forced to quit work as well. Work on the following buildings is tied up: Addition to postoffice, new Bank of Commerce, metallurgy building of Queen's, addition to House of Providence, Royal Military College dormitories.

Pessimistic of Settlement.

Winnipeg, May 19.—Dr. C. W. Gordon, chairman of the conciliation board looking into the coal miners' troubles has returned here and is pessimistic regarding a speedy settlement. He says that the board could have patched up a temporary agreement, but that had been done before and what was wanted was a settlement that would last some years. The enquiry would be resumed in three weeks, he said, and continued until the men went back to work.

Sent to Asylum.

Brockville, May 19.—William Albert Vandusen, the hermit, taken into custody after a stiff fight at his island home near Long Point, Township of Lansdowne, was given a hearing yesterday. Several witnesses were on hand, but on the evidence of two doctors, who made an examination, Vandusen was committed to the asylum.

Will License Cigarette Vendors.

Iroquois, May 19.—The village council has decided to pass a bylaw prohibiting the sale of cigarettes after June 1, except by licensed persons. The license fee was placed at $25 per annum.

BAR FREE PULP.

U. S. Senate Committee Amends Reciprocity Bill.

Washington, May 19.—The Senate will refuse to concede immediate free entrance from Canada pulp and paper from the unrestricted lands, as proposed by the amendment of the House of Representatives, and with this and a few other minor changes it looks as if the Senate Finance Committee would report the reciprocity bill next week. The amendment to the paper clause, which will make free trade in paper an event of the indefinite future, was proposed by Senator Root of New York yesterday, and at once caused a flutter in the committee. The manner in which it was received suggested that it had hearty support there, and subsequent inquiry from several Senators showed that it seems predestined to adoption. Paper manufacturers present also shared this confidence.

The effect of making an amendment to the bill is taken to mean, even by members of the committee opposed to reciprocity, that the bill as amended will be favorably reported. Senator Gallinger said as much yesterday afternoon, while Senator Smoot said in an interview that it was proposed to add this amendment and a few other slight ones, which, he said were necessary to make the bill conform to the agreement with the Canadian Ministers, and then report the bill, probably about a week from Saturday.

POOR GETS HIS ESTATE.

Montreal Gets Gustav Meurling's Large Fortune.

Montreal, May 19.—"I will and bequeath all the moneys realized on my properties in France and Germany, England and America to the mayor and corporation of the City of Montreal, to be employed by them for such charitable or other purposes for the benefit of such inhabitants of the said City of Montreal as the mayor and corporation shall in their absolute discretion think fit."

Such are the terms of the last will and testament, dated Oct. 14, 1910, of Gustav Meurling, a typewritten copy of which will was received by Mayor Guerin yesterday from Messrs. Duncan and Gibson, lawyers, of 21 Leadenhall street, the English executors of the estate of the late Mr. Meurling, as far as his English properties are concerned.

In the accompanying letter the lawyers inform the mayor that the exact value of the deceased's estate in England amounts to $118,500.

"We have not yet received any particulars of the deceased's property in France, but we will let you know all details as soon as the particulars are to hand," add the lawyers.

Nothing is said of the properties in Germany and America beyond their bare mention in the deceased's will.

Found Blind Pig.

Chatham, Ont., May 19.—License Inspector Thomas M. French, assisted by Officers Henry Darr and James McGregor, raided the house occupied by E. Termota, a Belgian, at 33 Forsythe street yesterday morning and found it to be a "blind pig." In the back shed of the place they found a number of empty and two full beer cases. In an ice box in the house and in a boiler they discovered 20 bottles of beer on ice. There were a woman and a man in the house at the time, the former being Termota's wife and the latter a man named Beaupre, who boarded at the place. The house at 33 Forsyth street is reputed to be a hangout for Belgians, and some complaints were entered against it. Six Belgians have been boarding there. Charges have been laid.

More Money Growing Fruit.

Cornwall, May 19.—Farmers in this part of Ontario are waking up to the fact that there is more money in the growing of fruit than in the dairy business, to which most of them have devoted nearly all their attention in recent years. D. A. McIntosh of Harrison set his neighborhood a good example last week by setting out 525 fruit trees, 500 of which are McIntosh Red, Mann, Monroe and Ben Davis apples; and 25 Montmorency large cherries. The trees have been planted in rich well-drained soil and in a few years Mr. McIntosh will have a wealth producing orchard. The demonstrations of fruit culture carried on by representatives of the Department of Agriculture in this district is having good results in causing farmers to pay more attention to their orchards, which had been neglected.

Servant Burned to Death.

Ottawa, May 19.—The house of Hector Chauvin, solicitor, of Hull, and residing on Rideau street, Ottawa was burned yesterday afternoon. Katie O'Rourke, aged 35, a servant, was burned to death. Her clothes caught fire at a gas stove and she rushed upstairs to the bath room and thus set fire to the residence. The inside of the house, with all the furniture, was burned; $6,000 damage was done. An inquest will be held on the victim.

Motor Apparatus For Montreal.

Montreal, May 19.—Chief Tremblay is planning to further improve the fire-fighting machinery of the city by the adoption of motor-driven engines, ladder trucks and chemical wagons. The first step in his plan is to put motor propelled apparatus in number twenty station, fire headquarters. It is Chief Tremblay's intention to lay the matter before the Board of Control very shortly.

Saving Up For the Big Show.

Ottawa, May 19.—Ottawa's Board of Control would not; yesterday afternoon, grant $1,200 to celebrate the coronation locally. They considered it better to await the arrival of the Duke of Connaught and spend the money available on a royal welcome.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE

Meeting May Be Necessary to Settle Morocco Troubles.

Madrid Statesmen Think It Will Be Required Because Germany Is Agitating Trouble—French Foreign Office Say It Is Not Needed—France's Relief Column Is Nearing Fez—Skirmishes Are Frequent.

Madrid, May 19.—Statesmen here are talking of the necessity of another international conferenc to settle the Moroccan affair, which is becoming more disturbing and more confused each week. Diplomatic observers believe that Germany is using her influence to add to the international feeling regarding French action in Morocco.

The Spanish Ministers are not satisfied, it is understood, with what it seems the result is likely to secure.

Not Necessary, Says France.

Paris, May 19.—It was denied at the French Foreign Office yesterday that any thought existed there of the necessity arising for another Algeciras conference. The French plans in Morocco, it was stated, include nothing outside of the Algeciras engagement. Consequently all the suggestions concerning another international conference to consider the Moroccan situation were untimely and untrue.

Within Sixty Miles of Fez.

Tangier, Morocco, May 19.—Wireless telegraph messages received here yesterday from the French column to Fez for the purpose of relieving the besieged capital indicate that Col. Brulard, in command of the troops, bivouacked Wednesday night within about 60 miles of Fez.

Additional French forces form an intermittent chain behind Col. Brulard and within easy reach of El Knitro. Of the three principal French commands, Col Brulard has the advance position, Major Simon holds a force holding an intermediate post, while Col. Gouraud is keeping up communication with the French base.

Gen. Moinier, commander-in-chief of the French forces in Morocco, has joined the expedition and is personally directing the advance. It is understood that he alone knows the wishes of the French Cabinet Ministers as to what shall be done when the column reaches Fez. The actual date of its arrival at the southern capital is uncertain, since its progress is precautionary and also slow because of the summer heat. Immense trains of animals are accompanying the troops, the column including 2,000 camels and several thousand mules, largely brought from Algeria.

Moorish horsemen are always in sight observing the Frenc movements and slight skirmishes occur now and then between the tribesmen and the distant patrols.

Miss Gadabout—Ah, professor, when you played those fortissimo measures in your piano selection last night your face reflected the very agony of the passage.

Professor Hitemupski—No, it vos not dot. I haf a gathering on mein finger, und I hit it on her black key.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

AUTO "LOOPED THE LOOP" WITH A PARTY OF SEVEN

Machine Was Travelling Fast at the Time—Party of Six and Chauffeur Thrown Into the Ditch—One Lady's Wrist Broken—Another and Her Little Boy in Hospital—Others Were Badly Shaken Up—Driver Had a Reputation for Skill and Carefulness—All the Injured Doing Well

A very serious and unusual automobile accident occurred at about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the 2nd concession line of Sidney Township, about a mile and a half west of the city limits, on the gravel road, which runs in an easterly and westerly direction parallel with the G. T. R. line. That some of the occupants of the car were not fatally injured or killed seems almost a miracle.

It appears that the Schuster Company placed at the disposal of the Kelso family their E. M. F. car of 30 horsepower, for use in the afternoon, provided they secured a driver. This they did, and Earle Greenleaf, son of Mr. H. Greenleaf, was engaged, as he was considered a capable and careful driver, having driven the car for more than 600 miles during the past few weeks without accident of any kind.

Seated in the car, in addition to the driver were Mrs. Thomas Kelso, Mrs. L. Grant, of Montreal, who is visiting here, Miss Kelso, Mrs. A. A. Roberts and her two young children. The party proceeded from the city to the vicinity of Stirling and were coming home by way of Frankford and down the second concession road, when the unfortunate affair occurred.

The road in question was a year ago crowned up and is in fine condition for motoring and driving. At the point where the accident occurred there is quite a grade, and the car was running at a good rate of speed when it careened to the side of the road, and, in less time than it can be told, the car made a complete somersault, finally righting itself. The occupants were violently thrown out and it was seen that all were more or less injured, while the car presented a most dilapidated appearance.

The accident was witnessed by some parties near by who, as rapidly as possible, went to the assistance of the injured. It was found that Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Roberts were the more seriously injured, and everything possible was done to temporarily relieve their sufferings. Mr. Gerald Jenkins was in the vicinity of the accident with his car, and the two more serously injured ladies were conveyed to the hospital. There it was ascertained that Mrs. Grant had sustained a fracture of the right wrist and was cut about the head and face. Mrs. Roberts' injuries consisted of cuts about the head and face, and bruises about the face. Her young son was also bruised. Mrs. Kelso, Miss Kelso and the driver fortunately escaped with some painful bruises. The two former were taken to their home on George Street, and Earle Greenleaf was able to drive the damaged car to the garage on Pinnacle Street, which it was inspected by many during the evening.

The news of the accident spread rapidly, and, as usual, vague rumors as to the extent of the injuries sustained by the occupants of the car were freely circulated. Enquiries at the hospital this morning elicited the information that the injured were doing as nicely as could be expected.

MOST MAGNIFICENT TREK IN HISTORY

Canada Should Have a More Decorous Civilization than That of United States

"Most magnificent trek in history," was the finale of impassioned sentences by George Tate Blackstock, K.C., in describing the heroic deeds of the United Empire Loyalists from the time they withstood demagogic interpretation of the Stamp Act to the time that they shook the dust of the United States off their feet in their long trek to Canada to build their homes where the dignity of freedom would not be humbled by the license of liberty.

Mr. Blackstock addressed the United Empire Loyalists at their luncheon on Thursday in Toronto. The luncheon was substituted for the annual reunion. President Fetherstonhaugh presided.

CREATE AN IDEAL.

"We should endeavor in Canada," said Mr. Blackstock, "to cultivate our own idiosyncrasy and peculiarity, so as to create the ideal of civilization distungushed from that of the Unted States and in every respect free from the defects of the Americans.

"Great influence, such as the theatrical company, cheap literature, and the commercial agent, are ever at work giving an American trend to our civilization, and it is very desirable to oppose some dyke to those influences.

GOOD NEIGHBORS.

"So far as our treatment of the United States is concerned, it ought to be in the future, as in the past, characterized by courtesy, civility and promotion of neighborly sentiment and friendly relations, but along with this we should relentlessly point out to our people the unsatisfactory aspect of the civilization of the United States, both as regards the expression of public and private life of its citizens.

"Canadians would do well to remember to put up a more conservative and decorous form of civilization. It would give them the leading place on this continent.

IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

"Imperial defence is an urgent policy. It would be a great blessing to Canada if every citizen were compelled to undergo some period of military service. We should be amply rewarded by feeling that we are not only responding to duty as a component part of the Empire but also in improving the physique of our men, and, above all, the benefits of instilling respect for authority and appreciation of discipline."

REGIMENTAL NOTES

This evening the Fifteenth Regiment will parade and it is expected that there will be a good turnout.

On Sunday morning the first church parade of the season will take place. The Regiment will march to St. Thomas church. The Chaplain, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish will officiate and preach.

IMPORTANT ACTION OF DIOCESAN COMMITTEES

New Canon Regarding Widows' and Orphans' Fund Adopted

The diocesan committees of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario met in Kingston this week. There was a meeting of the mission giving committee on Tuesday night, and those in attendance were Dean Bidwell, Rural Dean Dobbs, Rural Dean Beamish, the latter taking the place of the late Rural Dean Dibb. Rev. W. F. FitzGerald, and the Chancellor, D. L. Hill (Napanee), and R. J. Carson.

Under this committee an important canon was accepted after some discussion. It has reference to the Widows' and Orphans' fund. Judge McDonald and W. F. FitzGerald spoke in favor of the canon. It was carried by almost a unanimous vote.

There was also a meeting of the Sunday School Committee. Those present were the Dean, the two archdeacons, Rev. H. H. Bedford-Jones, Rural Deans Armstrong, Beamish and Dobbs, Rev. J. R. Serson, Canon Starr Rev. W. F. FitzGerald, Rev. J. O. Crisp, and Rev. Thos. Leach.

The question before the Sunday School Committee was that of the advisability of forming a new Sunday school paper. The matter was discussed and finally was referred to the synod. On Wednesday there was a meeting of the mission board.

BOTHERSOME INTRUDER MANAGED TO ESCAPE

Last night about eleven o'clock the police were called to Mr. Harris, residence on St. Charles street, it being reported that a man who was apparently a tramp had called at the house and seemed determined to create trouble. Mr. Harris grappled with the intruder, who managed to escape, but not before he had shed his coat. Two officers responded to the call and made every effort to locate the party, but were unable to do so. A man who was found was taken in charge by the police, but when taken to Mr. Harris' house it was seen that he was not the right party. The affair created considerable excitement in the vicinity.

THE CONFERENCES AND CHURCH UNION

Rev. Dr. Carman Suggests How the Vote Should Be Taken

Church union is to be voted on at all the annual conferences of the Methodist church. The union of the Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Methodists is proposed. Since a federal union of churches was proposed by the Presbyterians at the meetings held in St. Andrew's church, Toronto, a number of Methodists seem to favor that plan rather than organic union.

The following official statement in regard to the manner of voting on the question of church union at the annual conferences was made by Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent:

Regarding the vote on union each annual conference is to report its decisions and votes thereon with any additional information deemed desirable to the General Conference Special Committee, immediately after the close of the Conference.

This report will be made by the Secretary of the annual conference to the Rev. T. Albert Moore, Secretary of the General Conference Special Committee. The General Conference Special Committee should be informed as to the votes of the annual conferences as one body, ministers and laymen in their joint sessions, also as to how the ministers stand by themselvse, and how the laymen stand by themselves, in order to make a summation of the whole church.

It is suggested that this can easily and eectually done by appointing a convenient time for the vote and then calling the roll of Conference; every man voting yea or nay, at pleasure, on the call; and the Secretary of the Conference sending the result of the carefully recorded vote to the Secretary of the General Conference Special Committee, Toronto, as soon as practicable.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE RED MILL."

With a record of nearly twenty musical plays to his credit, Victor Herbert stands to-day as not only the most successful but the most prolific composer in America, whose every effort has developed an artistic and financial success, and who has done more to elevate musical plays to a scale of refinement than any living writer, his compositions being found in all music rooms throughout the civilized world.

The latest of Mr. Herbert's comic operas, "The Red Mill," which is to be presented at Griffin's Opera House Tuesday, May 23rd, by Martin & Emery Co.'s organization, has been considered his greatest popular hit. It was produced at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York City, where it remained the entire year, which was followed by engagements of three months each in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, and so great was the demand to see it that seats were placed on sale for months in advance, in order to stop the traffic of the speculators.

The books and lyrics of "The Red Mill" are by Henry Blossom, who will readily be recalled as the author of "Mlle. Modiste," "The Yankee Consul," "Checkers," "The Prima Donna," and other famous successes. Holland is the country selected by the authors for the scenes and action of the story, which readily lends itself to picturesque scenery, quaint costumes and the peculiar characteristics of the country, these being relieved by the introduction of English, French and American tourists. Plan now open at Doyle's.

HORSE TOOK HASTY SNACK OF MILLINERY

MONTREAL, May 19.—The fact that one of the Montreal Plate Glass & Window Company's horses, after being thrown through a shop window started to take a hasty snack from some of the herbage displayed on a line of summer straws, is responsible for a suit against the Montreal Street Railway Company for $751 damages.

Miss Boyer, who owned the millinery establishment at the corner of Planet and St. Catherine Streets, suffered the damage and held the horse owner responsible, who in turn called on the Street Railway Co. in warranty. The company alleges that last February a street car struck one of their delivery waggons and horse and rig were thrown bodily across the pavement, landing through the plate glass window into the shop front.

The horse was attended by a veterinary surgeon. Mr. Justice Dunlop took the case en delibere.

KAISER SURPRISED AT HIS RECEPTION

LONDON, May 18.—The Kaiser is getting in London a reception that manifestly is a surprise to him as there is none of the prevalent anti-German bitterness directed against him.

He fulfils numerous private engagements unceremonial and everywhere he is recognized and acclaimed in the friendliest manner. He visited to-day, among other things, the Zoo accompanied by a single companion. He displayed an almost boyish interest in the animals, but remained longest in the monkey-house. His next longest stay was in the lion-house.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

"SMOKES" ARE GREATEST FIGHTERS, SAYS EXPERT

Colored Men are Natural Born Battlers and Excel in Offence and Defence—Jack Johnson is Leader of All in the Squared Ring

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—In a previous article devoted to the Americanizing of the science of boxing and the development of the "natural boxer," I mentioned George Dixon as a bright, particular example of the kind of ring man referred to.

It is worthy of note that the most effective of the natural fighters this country has known during the past 15 or 20 years were colored men. Of these none had greater vogue than Joe Wolcott, who, on account of his peculiar build, peculiar talents and his particular effectiveness when sent out against men taller and heavier than he, was sometimes called "Joe, the Giant-Killer."

Overhand blows were Wolcott's long suit, and he would deliver them in a notably damaging way when his frame was flattened against that of an opponent. In the old days—more particularly the "clean break" days—I have known excited spectators to yell at a tottering pugilist, "Keep close to him and he will not be able to hurt you." In the main it was safe advice to follow, too, for the old style fighter had to push his man away and measure him in order to inflict damage.

But Wolcott upset all such notions, for, the closer he stood to a man, the more he could punish. On account of his squat build he could stand erect with his face no higher that the average man's chest, and from this position he ladled out overhangers which, from the manner of their delivery, caused those who looked on to wonder if Joe had swivels in his shoulders.

He was certainly a terror while he lasted. Any serious setbacks he met with could generally be traced to crookedness, to which he was a party. He was seldom bested on his merits, and it was quite a relief to men of every class—from light to heavy—when his health deserted him and the ring knew him no more.

Joe Gans, while he had all that Mace or Mace's adherents ever knew down to a fine point, resorted sufficiently to original notions of his own to be classed as a natural fighter. A man who keeps tab on ring happenings often hears reference to hurtful punches which travel but comparatively few inches. Well, it would have been hard to locate a ring man who required less range for some of his punches than Gans. Particularly was this true of a right chop which Gans used in many of his fights. He went very quietly about preparing the way for a punch of this kind, just elevating his right glove while sparring until he felt it topped his opponent's guard. Then without drawing his elbow back the fraction of an inch, he would give a quick turn of the wrist and a downward chug of his Dexter glove, the result being a clip on the chin which jarred the recipient from truck to keelson.

The greatest of all natural fighters of course, is this fellow Jack Johnson, and the best things in his repertoire are the uppercuts with which he times his men so fearlessly and faultlessly It was thought after seeing the way he butchered fellows like Jim Flynn and Tommy Burns with his lifting punches, that he was only poison to short men, but, after that unfortunate affair at Reno, we know differently.

Jeffries was looked upon to crush and maul Johnson in the clinches, yet Jeffries was licked in the clinches. Never before did a frequenter of prize fights see such damage inflicted at close quarters. There were the two big men, swinging around in each other's arms; each supposedly bringing years of experience in ringmanship to bear to blanket the other and render him powerless.

Yet one of the men—the black, too—freed either hand when he felt like it and, with an upward drive, bruised and gnashed the other's face while you watched. And once—just once—when Jeffries tried to retaliate in like manner, the result was absolutely ludicrous.

"I am free to confess that I never saw such infighting as Johnson engaged before, and I cannot conceive of any other heavyweight I know—unless it be Sam Langford—copying Johnson's best licks with success.

Sam Langford is another natural fighter but, while his motions may be original, his style seems to be a blend of Joe Wolcott's and Jack Johnson's. He is all there with high swings and uppershoots, and his treatment of Lang is eloquent proof of the futility of the old mechanical style of boxing when pitted against the methods of the latter day.

Battling Nelson was a natural boxer, but his methods, shorn of his assimilative qualities and his treadmill-like powers of endurance, would have brought him little.

Stanley Ketchel was another, with his lightning-like shifts and his ambidexterous delivery. He had a peculiar manner of maintaining his balance when his fiercest swings went wild, and every battle he engaged in kept the spectators on the jump from first to last.

PEACE THROUGHOUT MEXICO HAS BEEN FINALLY ARRANGED

Madero to Go to Mexico City to Assist the New President In Restoring Normal Order

EL PASO, Texas, May 18.—Peace technically reigns throughout Mexico. Five days is the time fixed for the armstice, but before that time has expired the leaders declare that the peace pact will bound hard and fast. Francisco I. Madero will go at once to Mexico City to join Francisco le la Barra, who is to become de facto President on the retirement of President Diaz and Vice President Corral this month in restoring normal conditions and launching the new Government—a joint Madero-de la Barra Government. Madero, who last night wired Diaz congratulations on his resignation, today wired De la Barra that he (Madero) would resign as provisional President as soon as Diaz is out and De la Barra takes office as acting President.

The insurrecto Cabinet held a meeting this morning in Juarez to discuss whether Madero should go at once to Mexico City or whether he should remain until peace has been finally signed, or whether, when he goes, it shall be with an insurrecto bodyguard or alone. It is quite probable that he will remain here until peace conditions are signed and his army is ordered disbanded, and then he will go direct to Mexico City and there remain at work with De la Barra in the restoration of peace.

Passing of Diaz.

Mexico City, May 18.—While satisfaction is evident in all circles at the capital over the approaching retirement of President Diaz, there is at the same time much sympathy for the empire builder. Now that he has yielded to popular demand, public concern is for the health of the old warrior and there was none to-day who did not appear to wish him continued years to enjoy a well-earned rest. It was learned that the physical state of the Executive is now worse than yesterday. He remains in his bed and is still suffering pain from the inflammation in the face. The fever has abated.

FELL FROM SCAFFOLD AND BROKE HIS LEG

Mr. Thomas Haslip, proprietor of the Albion Hotel in this city, this morning met with an accident which was not only painful but one that will lay him up for some time. He was upon a scaffold where his barn, which was recently destroyed by fire is being rebuilt, when he fell off and sustained a fracture of the right leg near the ankle. The unfortunate man was conveyed to his room and medical aid summoned to attned him.

EMERSON GIVEN A LIGHT SENTENCE

Magistrate Masson Gave Him Three Months With Hard Labor

James Emerson, who was convicted on a charge of breaking into and stealing from the residence of Rev. B. Greatrix, of this city, was this morning brought up before the Magistrate for sentence.

Mr. Carnew, acting on behalf of the prisoner, made a plea for leniency and Mr. Anderson, County Attorey, stated that Rev. Mr. Greatrix desired the Magistrate to deal leniently in the matter.

A peition, largely signed, was also presened to His Worship, asking him to be lenient in sentencing the prisoer.

Magistrate Masson said it was a sad case, and under all circumstances, he would deal leniently. On the charge of which Emerson had been found guilty he was liable for fourteen years in the penitentiary. Under the circumstances he would impose a sentence of three months in jail at hard labor.

MARKET PRICES FAIRLY STEADY

The farmers generally in this section have about completed the seeding of their lands and a goodly number who have done so were in the city to-day attending the market, which was well attended.

A considerable quantity of farm produce was offered for sale at prices that were not at much variance from those of last week.

Owing to cheese factories being in full blast now, butter is not by any means a drug upon the market. To-day it was sold at 22c. to 24c. per pound and in a few cases 25c. was realized.

Eggs were quite plentiful and sold at 16c. and 17c. by the basket lot and 18c. by the single dozen.

Dressed chickens were scarce, as is usual at this season of the year. The price paid per pair varied from $1.00 as high as $1.65, according to size and quality.

A large quantity of garden produce such as rhubarb, lettuce and onions, was offered for sale and disposed of.

Potatoes sold quite readily at $1.00 per bag.

During the past few days there has been an advance in the price of hay, owing, it is stated to the fact that the prospect for a heavy June crop is not of a very rosy nature. The price paid now varies from $12 to $15 a ton.

The price of live hogs has advanced here 10c., the price paid this week being $5.85 per hundred. Dressed hogs have advanced accordingly.

Thursday a grand rally of beekeepers under the auspices of the Hasting Beekeepers' Association was held upon the premises of Mr. E. Geary, Crookston. Inspector Scott of Wooler and Mr. Morley Pettit were among those present.

LITTLE LOCAL NOTES

Are Doing Nicely.

From information at the hospital it was learned that Mrs. L. Grant and Mrs. A. A. Roberts, two of the victims of the automobile accident of Thursday night, are progressing as well as could be expected.

Had a Bath.

Two young bankers of the city last evening had an involuntary bath in the bay by the upsetting of a canoe which they were paddling. Nothing more disagreeable than a wetting for them was the result.

Crop Prospects.

The prospect for a good crop this season is exceptionally bright, excepting that of hay. Although the spring was late the growth has been rapid since seeding time.

Intense Heat.

The heat at this season of the year is excessive. At one o'clock to-day it was 88 and by 3 o'clock it had reached 90. There appears to be a hot wave, not only going over this country, but over the neighboring republic.

Moderate southerly winds, fine.

Sunday—warm, with local thunder storms, becoming cooler by night.

BEEKEEPERS' RALLY AT CROOKSTON

On the afternoon of Thursday, May 18th, forty enthusiastic beekeepers assembled at the apiary of Mr. E. Geary, Crookston ,to see a practical demonstration in the up-to-date methods of treating hives of bees affected with European foul brood conducted by Mr. Morley Pettit, Provincial Apiarist from the O.A.C., Guelph. The district representative, A. D. McIntosh, from Stirling, took down the names and addresses and size of apiaries of those present. Eight hundred hives were represented. Intense interest was shown on the part of those present, as it would be difficult to find more typical specimens of all stages of European foul brood than were exhibited on this occasion. A few beekeepers expressed some fears for their bees on account of the spraying of orchards with lead arsenate poison. It is to be hoped that fruit growers will not be so short sighted as to spray in full bloom, for not only would the bees be injured but the fertilizing of the blossoms also would be affected. It is needless to mention that it is against the law to spray trees in full bloom.

Quite a few paid their dollar to the Secretary of the Association, A. D McIntosh, to join the Hastings County Beekeepers' Association and others promised to do so in the near future.

At the evening meeting a very interesting illustrated lecture was also given by Mr. Pettit, pointing out how, when, where and why bees were kept. After tendering to the speaker a most hearty vote of thanks for his able and interesting demonstration and lecture the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

FIFTEENTH HAD A GOOD TURN-OUT

The Fifteenth Regiment paraded last evening and the turnout was a creditable one. Headed by both bands, the men had a march out through several of the streets, and, upon returning to the armories, drill was indulged in for some time on the parade ground.

To-morrow morning the regiment will attend divine service at St. Thomas' Church, when the chaplain of the regiment, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, will officiate.

An important memorandum has been issued by the tariff commission dealing with the problems to be discussed at the Imperial Conference. The memorandum insists that trade preference is indispensable to any policy of closer union of the empire.

An X-ray proof armor recently devised for the use of professional operators, include a rubber mask, with spectacles of a lead glaze, a long tunic made of lead, rubber and bismuth and thick gauntlets of the same materials. The head is covered with the mask, with broad nosepiece and spectacles.

Lord Minto, speaking at a Central Asia dinner, in London on Thursday said Canada was a young country and could not have become the great country it now was without the high tariff wall against the United States products. Canadians had created their manufactures and become strong through the artificial aid given their own industries.

The Birmingham (England) Post says it can hardly be disputed that the Canadian Government in entering on the proposed agreement with the United States embarks on a course which must impede the fulfilment of their own imperial hopes, however ready and anxious the next Unionist Government may be to cooperate in working toward its realization.

It is not denied that pamphlets containing the speeches of the Finance Minister and Premier Laurier, endorsing reciprocity, have been sent to postmasters throughout the Dominion with instructions to see that they are distributed among the electorate. If this is proper, remarks the Hamilton Spectator, it is to be presumed that the Opposition has the right to similarly distribute the speeches of R. L. Borden, Hon. Clifford Sifton and others, against the pact.

CARS WILL RUN DAY AND NIGHT

Traffic Will Be Continuous in London on Coronation and Following Days

For two days this summer—that of the Coronation and the day after—London will be a wide-awake modern city, for instead of all traffic and life disappearing from the streets after midnight, tubes, busses and street cars will run day and night.

At the close of the evening traffic on June 21st the underground lines will shut down for an hour. At 3 a.m. on June 22nd the trains will start again, and the service will continue without intermission until 3 o'clock the next morning, the trains being lengthened and accelerated. On June 23rd the service will be continued until 2 o'clock in the morning, and again on the following Thursday, when the State Procession takes place.

In connection with the elaborate arrangements made for the protection of Westminster Abbey from fire during the Coronation period, a party of firemen have just made a tour of inspection. The 21 hydrants in the building—all connected with a huge tank in one of the towers—were tested and found in perfect order. Special telephones, connected with the nearest fire stations, have been installed.

While the Coronation ceremony is proceeding special firemen will be placed at fixed points in all parts of the building, each being within reach of an electrical fire alarm signal attached to the regular fire alarm pedestal on the ground floor.

CORONATION CUPS BY THE THOUSAND

The King Has Ordered 100,000 of Them for His Little Guests on June 30th

The great Coronation order for the King is rapidly nearing completion at the Royal Doulton Potteries, Burslem. The order was for 100,000 cups, which are to be presented to his Majesty's child guests at the great Coronation fete at the Crystal Palace on June 30th, and for some weeks past, several hundred pottery operatives at the Burslem pottery have been helping to make the royal gifts.

About half a pound of clay, from which all impurities have first been removed, is required to make each beaker, over twenty-two tons of clay being needed for the 100,000 pieces.

The cups are being decorated, not with ordinary cheap "lithos," but by transfers from copper-plate engravings. They are of fine ivory porcelain, and on each appears a special portrait of the King (in Admiral's uniform) and the Queen, with their Majesties' autograph beneath. The portraits were specially taken and the autographs specially written for the purpose of these beakers. In addition the gifts bear their Majesties' monograms, with the inscriptions: "Coronation of their Majesties King George V. and Queen Mary, June 22, 1911" and "Presented by their Majesties, Crystal Palace, June 30, 1911."

The cups are English throughout—made by English operatives, and decorated with English transfers in English colors. The decoration is an attractive chocolate color.

No duplicate can possibly be obtained, consequently their value will speedily appreciate. The cups which Messrs. Doulton made for the Coronation of King Edward nine years ago, under similar circumstances, have already brought as much as 7s. 6d. each in the sale room.

QUEEN'S TROUSSEAU

One of the Prettiest Details of It Will Be a Fan

One of the prettiest items of Queen Mary's Coronation trousseau will undoubtedly be her fan.

Mr. Wollescroft Rhead's design, which was recently accepted, was so intricate that the Worshipful Company of Fanmakers had some difficulty in securing its acceptance by the lace-workers.

The fan measures about twenty-two inches, and will be entirely British. In the centre of the leaf there is a cartouche with the Queen's cipher surmounted with the royal crown. On the field of the fan there are the arms of England, Scotland, Ireland, and the new-arms of Wales.

The most picturesque features is the imperial touch supplied by the symbols of the four great overseas dominions—India, Canada, Australia and South Africa. To complete the design and to unite the imperial emblems to the Mother Country the designer has included the rose, shamrock and thistle.

The sticks are of yellow tortoiseshell from India. They are decorated with the royal crown and the Queen's cypher, and are of exceptionally artistic design.

A gold pin with a diamond at each end holds the fan sticks together. A small white silk tassel completes what is really a masterpiece.

THE CZAR AND AVIATION

BRUTAL TO HIS CHILD

Terrible Conduct of a Miner, Who Has Been Sent to Prison

Sentence of six months' imprisonment for brutality to his 14-year-old daughter was passed at Doncaster on a Denaby miner named Thomas Birmingham. He was said to have beaten the child with a broom and pick shaft, and when he left her for his work, locked her in the house, sometimes fastening her in the bedroom. When he allowed her out of the house he fastened a strap round her arm, and led her about by the strap. She fled from him when they lived at Rotherham, and took refuge in the police office. For one week she never went to bed, and had been kept for two days without food. The girl had scars and bruises on her arms, legs, and thighs, and several of her teeth had been knocked out. The prisoner (a widower) has been convicted before for offences against his children, one of whom was said to be now in an asylum.

Thirty-seven young ladies of the congregation had in mind 37 pairs of slippers for the curate for Christmas. But one young lady made known her intention, and when the day arrived the curate received one pair of slippers and 36 dressing-gowns.

SECURE THE PROSPERITY OF YOUR SONS AND DAUGHTERS

The opportunities that are coming to the young men and women who have been trained at the Ontario Business College are unparalleled. The demand is constant from every section of Canada and the United States. Principal Johnson placed E. Malyea, a Belleville boy, three weeks ago in the Winnipeg office of one of the lragest companies of Canada, two months aftre graduation, at an initial salary of $960 a year. Two young ladies, Miss Walters and Miss Alexander went to Calgary a month ago, when they had finished the course at the college, and within three days each had secured a first-class position—one at $50 a month. These are examples of what is constantly taking place. Give your sons and daughters the O. B. C. course. The thorough equipment they will receive will place them on the highway to prosperity.

Send or call for the O. B. C. catalogue. Students may enter at any time.

CEILING SENSE

cover old plaster with them

You would not tolerate a plaster ceiling in your home or store, if you really knew how much better are Preston Steel Ceilings. For plaster cracks and crumbles—and these steel ceilings cannot. Plaster harbors dust, disease germs, vermin—and Preston Steel Ceilings cannot, because they have no crevices and can be washed like a pane of glass.

PRESTON

save on fire insurance

And, then, any fire insurance company will grant you a lower rate if you put in Preston ceilings. For they go a great way towards fire-proofing an interior. Of course they are damp-proof as well. You can have Preston Ceilings put on to cover old plaster ceilings. Easily done. We tell you how.

and they cost so little!

Preston Steel Ceilings never need repairs and seldom need re-decorating. They will outlast the building you put them in. Thus they are the cheapest ceiling money buys, in point of service. Even in first cost they compete easily with plaster. In the long run, plaster simply doesn't compare. Nor does it in beauty. For these ceilings come in hundreds of most graceful, eye-charming designs, that can be painted in any color scheme. Our skilled decorators advise you, free, about colors, if you wish.

Barley and Malt

Among the representatives of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce who made statements before the U. S. Senate Committee in support of the project of reciprocity with Canada was Mr. H. V. Burns, representing the malting interests of Buffalo, whose testimony is thus reported by the Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Evening News:

> H. V. Burns, representing the malting interests of Buffalo, gave a clean-cut, comprehensive statement of the reasons why Buffalo maltsters wanted reciprocity. He skilfully evaded the traps laid for him by Senators hostile to the treaty and always had a pat answer ready. The malting industry has been removed from the East to the West, he said, by reason of the tariff.
> "But let them keep their supremacy," he said. "We are not here to wage war, but to demand justice
> "By putting on a prohibitory duty on barley in 1890 Congress had cut off the suppy of the Eastern maltsters. But we are still in the game," he said, "a little tired, sometimes discouraged, and a trifle sore, but still doing business at the old stand."
> Continuing, he said western maltsters had all the advantage as they had at their doors 170,000,000 bushels of barley, while the duty prohibited the importation of Canadian grain, the best in the world. He showed that an increase of 25,000,000 bushels in one year had lowered the price only .7 of a cent per bushel. Why, then, fear the five or ten million bushels that might be imported from Canada?
> "We have heard much," he continued, "about ignorance in the east. I am going to retaliate. Any rural editor, any body of farmers, or any one else, who claims that the duty on barley benefitted the American farmer does not know what he is talking about.
> "That is strong language, but I have the government statistics to bear me out. For 17 years prior to 1890 the American farmer received 61.6 cents average per bushel for barley, but during the subsequent 17 years he received only 43.4 cents, a loss of 18.2 cents per year. Let the farmers wake up and see what they are losing."
> Senator McCumber read a letter from Milwaukee to the effect that there was no market for barley.
>
> "How do you reconcile that with your statement that there is none offered on the Buffalo market?" he asked.
> "What is the date of that letter?" asked Burns quickly.
> "February 1," replied McCumber.
> Mr. Burns then informed him that the Buffalo maltsters bought their winter supplies previous to the close of navigation and that every year there was a dull market while navigation was suspended. It had reopened and there was now a lively market.
>
> "That does not agree with the reason given in the letter," said McCumber. "They say the elevator men are afraid to buy because this treaty may go through."
> "You can take my word for it that I have given you the true reason," replied the witness.
> "Would you consent to taking the duty off malt?" inquired McCumber.
> "I don't give a snap of my finger," replied Burns, suiting the action to the word, "if you take the duty off of malt or beer. It was a wicked thing to do," he added, "to destroy the barley and injure the malt industry of Western New York by a prohibitive tariff."

While it would be presumption on the part of The Intelligencer to contradict a gentleman so well versed in his business as Mr. Burns evidently is, as to the effect of reciprocity, were conditions the same to-day as they were previous to 1890, yet we here make the confident assertion that, in that respect, Mr. Burns is completely mistaken as to present circumstances.

The imposition by the United States in 1890 of a prohibitory duty on Canadian barley virtually ended the culture of that cereal in the Bay of Quinte district and adjoining counties, whence the maltsters of New York State derived their supplies. The consequence was that the farmers of this region turned their attention, perforce, to other branches of agriculture, and fruit growing, which have proved so much more profitable than barley growing that their financial condition has vastly improved and their lands have increased in value by at least thirty per cent.

Barley such as was exported from the Bay district previous to the imposition of the prohibitive duty—the hard, bright six-rowed grain, which U. S. maltsters sought because of its color and saccharine qualities, which, if it were slightly colored by rain or moisture, was worth 5c. or 10c. less per bushel than if it were light in color—is no longer grown hereabouts. It has been replaced by a barley which is darker in color and yields more heavily, and is used for feeding purposes. The reason for this change of seed, as given to The Intelligencer by a farmer who grew six-rowed barley up to 1890, is that the old kind of barley which used to yield from 18 to 35 bushels per acre, according to the quality of the land, would not now average more than 10 bushels per acre. Extensive enquiry among farmers in the district has confirmed this statement, and none of those who were consulted could give a reason for the altered condition of affairs.

Finally, were conditions as to the raising of bright barley the same now that they were twenty-one years ago, it would not be grown here, because dairying, with its kindred industries, is much more profitable than the cultivation of barley for malting.

So the maltsters of New York State will have to look elsewhere than to Canada for their supplies.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

But at this time the physical appearance of the country had little interest for Guelfo and Ellis, and when at last, weary and travel-stained, they drove from the Cuzco railway station to the Hotel Pizarro, they positively loathed mountain scenery and awe-inspiring catnons.

Their first inquiry was for Balbi, They heard that he was staying at the hotel, though, at the moment, was away at a village a few miles distant, but was expected back the following day.

"Come, that's better!" exclaimed Guelfo. "It really looks as if we had run him to earth at last."

"Yes, I don't think we can be far from him now, and I'm glad not to have met him to-day. One must be a little off-color after such a blazing hot and tiring journey as we've had A good night's rest and I shall feel double the man I do at present."

"Well, you don't look particularly frisky just now, Ellis. A child could bluff you into anything."

"You're right, my boy, perfectly right. Therefore, as I said, I am going to lie low for the present."

The night's rest did wonders for both men. They rose refreshed and alert, and the invigorating nature of the mountain air—for Cuzco lies 11,300 feet above sea level—was already being felt by them. They got up late having given orders on their arrival that when Signor Balbi returned he was to be at once informed that two gentlemen from England were waiting to see him.

Ellis and Guelfo had had their midday meal and were sitting, smoking and chatting in the shay patio of the hotel with its open trellis roof of green creepers, when a small, dark-skinned, bright-eyed, blackhaired man entered the quadrangle from the house and cast his eyes all about until they rested on the two Englishman. Then stepping towards them he removed his sombero with a sweep, saying in broken English,—

"Gentlemen, you wish to see me?"

Both men sprang to their feet and at the same moment exclaimed, "Signor Balbi?"

"Yes," replied the little man shortly with his piercing, dark eyes riveted on the face of Guelfo with an intense look of surprise and indecision, which he did not withdraw for some moments.

"Very glad to meet you, Signor Balbi," said Guelfo, in Italian, in a hearty, half-jocund manner, extending his hand, which the other did not notice or ignored. "We've come a long way to find you."

"You are from England?"

"Yes, all the way from London."

"And Signor Vipan is not with you?"

"Alas, he could not come. So he sent us to represent him. We have our credentials with us which will be shown to you in good time. In the meantime, let us have a talk."

All this while Balbi's eyes had been fixed on Guelfo's face, totally ignoring the presence of Ellis.

"Your names are—?" asked the Italian.

"This is my friend, Mr. Henry Ellis of Coleman Street, London, and I am Giuseppi Guelfo, of Throgmorton Avenue, in the same city, the Rue Scribe of Paris, and various other places as necessity of business may require."

"Va bene!" muttered the little man beneath his breath, and turning away from them without another word he strode to the farther side of the patio, and furiously marched up and down, muttering to himself.

"Odd, isn't he?" said Guelfo, surveyinghim with surprise. He spoke in French.

"Very! Is he quite mad?" replied Ellis, in the same language. "We'd better take no notice. Something has upset him. Perhaps we did not address him with sufficient formality. These men are very punctilious."

"But he isn't a Don. He's Italian—a countryman of my own. I'll soon make it all right with him. He'll come round. Take no notice." And the two travellers resumed their seats and continued chatting as if nothing had happened.

It was a quarter of an hour later that Balbi, having sufficiently recovered himself, approached them and said:

"Signori, I must offer you my apologies. I doubtless appeared to act very rude towards you just now, but such was far from my intention. The fact is that I was terribly disappointed at finding my old friend Vipan had not come, as I had been looking forward with such pleasure to seeing him again, and in my disappointment I forgot myself for the moment."

"No apologies, signore, pray. We can quite appreciate your feelings, and I may tell you that they were shared by your friend when he discovered that circumstances would not permit his return to Peru. He always spoke of the great pleasure it would give him to meet you again."

"Ah, the Signor Vipan was a man after my own heart, a man whose word was his bond, a true man and a firm friend. He was well when you saw him last?"

Without a moment's hesitation Guelfo replied,—

"Quite well. His journey over the Continent had done him no harm. He had had great difficulties, but came through them alright, and the very last time we saw him he spoke with enthusiasm of his projected return to Peru at a later date, and his regret at being unable to accompany us on this occasion."

"Ah! the signor is a man who dearly loves travel and adventure. For him no difficulties are too stupendous, no dangers too great. He is a grand man."

During the conversation the eyes of the little man were rarely moved from the face of Guelfo. He watched the man as a cat watches a mouse. Of Ellis he appeared to take little notice; his attention was concentrated on the financier. And Ellis, in his turn, while taking little part in the conversation, watched the face of the Italian closely and endeavored to read his character. But he failed. He could not come to any definite conclusion regarding him.

SUNSHINE FURNACE

The Sunshine is differently and better constructed than common furnaces. It's stronger, safer, more healthful

The dome, the two sections of the fire-pot and the frame of the ash-pit are all securely fastened together by our famous "cup joint." Three "cup joints" in all, you see.

All sections, you will notice, fit together perfectly, and are lined with a layer of asbestos cement, which unites them so firmly together that they become, in every purpose, one solid piece of metal. Can never spring or fall apart.

And that's not all! The top of the dome is fastened to the sides with cement and boiler rivets, making the Sunshine just as smoke, gas, heat and dust tight as a steam boiler. From a hygienic standpoint it takes precedence in the furnace world.

Notice, too, the Sunshine is equipped with an automatic gas damper. This damper automatically opens when the gas in the furnace reaches a certain pressure and allows it to escape up the chimney. Eliminates all danger of an explosion or gas escaping through the registers

Safest as well as most healthful, easiest managed, cleanest, greatest labor-saving and fuel-economizing furnace you can buy.

If your local dealer does not handle the Sunshine write direct to us for free booklet.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 19.—Wheat opened easy, being influenced by weaker American cables and prices ¼d to ⅜d lower. Following the opening there was further pressure in the way of realizing and values further declined. Pressure was due to reports of general rains in the wheat belt of Russia and prediction of large world's shipments with Russian offerings freely at the decline. Crop advices from India, Australia and Argentine favorable. The lighter Argentine shipments than expected as well as light shipments for Australia, were offset by rains in Russia.

CHICAGO, May 19.—Promises of cooler weather and showers turned wheat prices into a downward course to-day. A prediction that shipments from Russia would be heavy formed another important influence on the bear side. As a result closing figures were ½c lower all round than 24 hours before. The end of the day left every other leading staple at a decline, corn off ⅛c to ⅝c, oats a shade to ⅛c to ⅝c, and provisions in a slide from last night's level to 2c beneath.

Laurier at Liverpool.

London, May 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Wilfrid Laurier landed at Liverpool Thursday. The Canadian Premier was met at the landing stage by the lord mayor and accorded a civic welcome. A large crowd had assembled to witness the arrival of the Virginia which was gaily dressed in bunting.

Sir Wilfrid refused to be interviewed on political topics, and remarked that he was truly delighted to be in England once again. The London & Northwestern Railway Co. placed at the Premier's disposal one of the saloon carriages of the royal train, which was decorated with flowers.

Acquitted.

St. Catharines, May 20.—In acquitting James Bohen, Frank Tracey, James Everett and William Cox of a charge of abduction yesterday afternoon, Judge Carman administered a strong rebuke, telling them that they escaped punishment because the child wavered in her evidence. Their own stories, he added, were sufficient to show their character. In dismissing them he complimented them on their luck, as he had intended to be severe, and to give Bohen, who is the oldest of the men, the full limit of the law, five years.

Ten Years For Murder.

Chatanooga, Tenn., May 20.—Dr. J. Sherman was sentenced yesterday to ten years in the penitentiary for the murder of Thomas B. Norman, his brother-in-law, whom he killed; he contended in self-defence.

WOMAN'S WORLD

F SHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS. HIT-CHAT

English Women Workers.

There are it is estimated, some 5,000,000 women and girls working for wages in England and Wales, and of these a considerable proportion are married women.

In an address on 'Women in Industrial England,' given by Miss Huribatt, last week under the auspices of the Local Council of Women, the different phases of the situation were shown. The lecturere sketched the history of the inductrial revolution that had taken the work out of the homes, and as a result, the women into the factories; where they had at first passed through some bitter experiences, but, latterly, had enjoyed much of the benefit of modified conditions. Women had so far been at the disadvantage of not having the parliamentary franchise, and their disinclination to combine had limited the protective influence of trades unions on their labor.

In regard to classes of occupation, domestic service was in the lead; then came the making of clothes, and third the textile industries, followed by laundry work, pottery, artificial flower making, etc.

Miss Huribatt considered the different causes that affect women's wages. Their choice of work is more often than man's a matter of circumstances. The average wage of domestics is £15 or £16, a rise of some 38 per cent from that of the 19th century. Taking into account board and lodging, the wages amounted to about £33 8s. A factory girl will average about £3 less, against which she places her greater indeuendence. The chief difference in favor of domestic service is the regularity of employment. Women's wages in some of the industries were only one-third to one-half as much as men's, but how far this was the result of inferior work was difficult to determine, because it was hard to obtain statistics of employments where men and women were doing precisely the same work. The greater physical strength of men counted, and so did their longer experience, which enabled them to come to the front in cases of emergencies. The lack of combination had no doubt also affectew women's wages.

The lecturer explained the factory legislations regulating the employment of women and children. More women inspectors are being appointed. There is no special legislation for married women except that a mother is not permitted to return to work until four weeks after the birth of her child. The incapacity of maried women in regard to their domestic duties was commented on. While it was necessary as things were, for many of these women to work to help support the home, they could often earn sufficient in half a day, and have the other half for their home duties. Lady McLuren in her Women's charter, was advocating the half day shift.

The provision of technical training for women in inductrial schools would do much towards improving their position by making them more skilled workers. A higher standard, physical and mental, was wanted, and there must be something done to make the life of industrial workers pleasanter.

BRONCHITIS

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.— "I was sick for two years with chronic bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors or from a trip which I took for my health and I had to give up work. Vinol was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my bronchial trouble disappeared and I am at work again. I want to recommend Vinol to anyone who is in need of such a medicine." Thos. Higgins. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so successful in curing bronchitis.

Vinol is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis, and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Vinol contains no oil or drugs and is far more efficacious than cough mixtures, because it cures the cause. Try it. If you don't think it helps you we will return your money. J. S. McKeown.

Lesson for Sunday, May 28th, 1911. Micah's Picture of Universal Peace. (An International Peace Lesson.) Micah iv:1-8.

GOLF'S EXPENDITURE NEXT TO BASEBALL

A striking proof of the popularity of golf is given in a comparison of the cost of various branches of sport recently made for Outing by Arthur Pottow, the editor of Golf. Considering its comparatively recent introduction the annual expenditure on the rayel and ancient game is really remarkable, as in this respect it now ranks second only to baseball. The writer estimates that there are about five hundred thousand regular and occasional golf players in the United States. He places the average of club dues, fees, etc., at about $50 a year, and if only one-fifth of these players are actual members of golf clubs that would mean a cost of $5,0000,000 a year to them. On golf clubs and balls the expenditure is estimated at about $2,000,000 annually. Nor does this take into account such things as golf shoes and all the other incidental paraphernalia, calculated to cost during twelve months a sum of $7,000,000.

For the average city man who has to go into the country to play Mr. Rottow considers $5 a very fair approximation of the day's expense. In a year $2,500,000 would thus be spent by 100,000 golfers, playing only five days a season.

Considering that many clubs have investments that run up into a quarter of a million dollars or more, and that several in this district have club houses alone worth from $75,000 to $100,000, an average investment of $25,000 cannot be regarded as an excessive calculation.

This would represent a total investment of $7,250,000, to say nothing of the money invested in the unallied private and hotel courses, of which there are more than one thousand in all. These the writer thinks should at least double the investment, and would probably bring it up for real estate, buildings and permanent improvements to $15,000,000.

"What's the matter with May, mother
what's the matter with May?"
Gran'pa mourns as he putters 'round in his aimless sort of way,
Peerin' here and peerin' there,
Seekin' the gleam of her golden hair,
Or looks for the flash of her gingham dress,
Or the sound of her laugh an' her happiness.
"What's the matter with May, mother,
what's the matter with May?"
Gran'pa rests on his faithful cane in a tired sort o' way.
Thinking of May, as it was last year
Sunny and bright—an' the child was here,
An' played at his knee like a gran'- child kin,
A-bringin' the cheer and the sunshine
in.
"What's the matter with May, mother,
what's the matter with May ?"
Gran'pa asks in trembly voice an'
nachally roams away
Down the road where his gran'- child went;
Let him be, for he's rail content
A-thinking the breeze and the buds that stir
Ain't nothing at all but the voice of her!

Kingston, May 20.—Yesterday Isidore Griffin, son of Edward Griffin, blacksmith, Wolfe Island village, was engaged in setting up a stove when he was struck by lightning and hurled to the ground, the bolt coming down the chimney. He will recover.

A team of horses belonging to Edward White was also killed by the storm. Residents of the island say the storm was one of the heaviest experienced there in years.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR

Hon. Mr. Pugsley Wants 447 Items of Supply Railroaded.

He Tries to Force Them Through Unread, But Mr. Borden Checks Him and Business Is Held Over—House Adjourns Until July 18, When It Will Re-assemble and Reciprocity Will Be Chief Topic.

Ottawa, May 20.—After attending in the Senate where Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, the Deputy Governor-General, gave the royal assent to a supply bill for thirty-four and a half million dollars, and all the other bills which had passed their third readings, the members of the House of Commons ceased work shortly before ten o'clock last night. Just before the Speaker left the chair R. L. Borden asked what business would be taken up when the House met on July 18. "Probably reciprocity," was the laconic reply of the Minister of Finance.

The supply bill, which includes five-twelfths of all the items not voted, is made up of main estimates for the current year, totalling over twenty-six millions, supplementary estimates of slightly less than eight millions, and $350,000 of supplementaries for the previous fiscal year.

At the evening sitting Mr. Lemieux's bill to increase the salaries of postoffice officials was given a third reading. The Minister stated that he expected within a year or two to bring all the outside postal service under the Civil Service Act.

Hon. Mr. Graham introduced his resolutions providing for the lease of various short lines of railway in the Maritime Provinces, by the I.C.R. They were under discussion when the Black Rod summoned the members to the Senate chamber, Hon. H. R. Emmerson, who was the founder of this policy, advocated the inclusion of the lines of the Maritime Coal & Railway Co. and the Cumberland Coal & Railway Co. in the terms of the resolution, pointing that it would not be in the interests of the I.C.R. to have them fall into other hands.

Mr. Emmerson said that this was a business proposition, which should not be treated as a party matter.

In committee of supply Hon. William Pugsley produced a list of 447 items for dredging and public works, which he said it was necessary to put through before adjournment.

R. L. Borden took exception to the proposal. He said that the Minister of Public Works had purposely submitted a list which he knew the Opposition could not accept.

Mr. Pugsley said that if the Opposition refused to pass the items it would be necessary to give orders to have the work stopped.

George H. Perley said that during the early part of the week the House had been discussing matters which were not of urgent importance, including amendment to the Railway Act. The Minister of Public Works, he said, was putting up a bluff. The Opposition did not object to the items, but desired time to discuss them.

Mr. Pugsley said the officials of the Department had informed him that it was essential that these items should be passed, as they covered repairs, necessary dredging, and small works.

Both Dr. Sproule and Mr. Perley declared that the Minister was not sincere in his proposals.

After some further protests by the Opposition members, Mr. Pugsley said that if the Conservatives decided it was not in the public interests he would not press the votes.

Hon. George P. Graham secured the approval of the House for several votes which he described as urgent, including one of $600,000 for a dock at Halifax.

Mr. Borden gave his approval. He said that increased facilities were necessary because in past seasons there had been much delay owing to the lack of proper dock accommodation.

Mr. Pugsley, to the amusement of the House, said the Opposition leader was quite willing to put through the large vote affecting his own constituency, but declined to allow many items just as urgent to pass.

Mr. Borden said if the Minister of Public Works had adopted the policy of Mr. Graham and submitted only a few items he would have received different treatment. He had, however, asked the House to pass no fewer than 447 items, without consideration.

Storm in Brockville.

Brockville, May 20.—This section was in the grasp of a violent electrical storm for an hour or so yesterday, accompanied by a heavy down-pour of rain and sleet. Two houses were struck in Brockville and slightly damaged, but the occupants escaped.

From the rural section reports are coming in of much damage wrought. The barns on the farm of John Harnett, near Kemptville, were struck by lightning and totally destroyed. Five cows were burned, besides a quantity of hay and grain. Members of the family had just finished milking and left the cow barn when the bolt descended.

Eli Hebert's Body Found.

Windsor, May 20.—The mystery surrounding the sudden disappearance of Eli Hebert, aged 65, a well-known farmer living near Tecumseh, was partly solved when the bloated and almost unrecognizable body was discovered by the crew of the U. S. mail boat floating in the river off the foot of Bates street last night. The head was cut and battered, and the body bore strong indications of having been thrown into the river after death. All the pockets but one were turned inside out.

C.N.R. Lets Contracts.

Toronto, May 20.—Sir Donald Mann stated yesterday that the contracts for the entire line of railway between Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal, including the section from the latter city to Hawkesbury had been let.

THE FIRST STATE BALL.

Given In Honor of the German Emperor and Empress.

London, May 20.—The first state ball of the reign of King George, the date for which was selected in honor of the visit of the German Emperor and Empress, was held at Buckingham Palace last night. It was an unusually brilliant function.

King George and Emperor William previously had dined together at the palace with the royal family, and afterwards were joined by some thirty additional members of the royal household, who former into a magnificent procession. The King and Emperor, in German and British uniforms respectively, were preceded by the state officials attired in gorgeous robes, carrying their wands of office, through the whole length of the state apartments to the ball room, where had gathered thousands of guests, including the entire diplomatic corps.

Queen Mary and the Empress Augusta Victoria and all the ladies wore lavish displays of jewelry. Emperor William took as his partner Queen Mary, and King George, the German Empress. The Duke of Connaught and Princess Victoria Louise opened the ball with the "Royal Quadrille." Midnight saw a repetition of the gorgeous procession, this time from the ball room to the supper room.

Dropped Dead.

Brockville, May 20.—Thursday evening a sudden death took place in the Township of North Crosby. The victime was Mrs. Thos. Bier, who dropped dead. The other members of the family left the house to do the evening milking, and on their return discovered the lifeless body lying on the floor. She was 60 years of age.

Another Trip Through Rapids.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 20.—Bobby Leach is preparing to make another trip on July 4 through the whirlpool rapids in his steel barrel. Oscar Williams, who last year tried to cross the river on a steel wire, hanging by his teeth, but who stuck and hung for hours over the cataract, plans to repeat his trip next month.

AFTER LUMBER TRUST

U. S. Attorney-General Prosecutes Alleged "Conspirators."

One Hundred and Fifty Individuals and Several Companies Named as Defendants in Suit—Conspiracy to Maintain High Prices, Keeping a Blacklist and Violations of Sherman Law Are Among the Charges.

New York, May 20.—Sweeping charges of a gigantic conspiracy to maintain high prices, to blacklist concerns not regarded as "proper" trade, and to violate generally the Sherman anti-trust law, are made in a Government suit filed by Attorney-General Wickersham in the U. S. Court here yesterday against the so-called lumber trust. Ten trade organizations and more than 150 individuals are named as defendants in this suit.

The defendants named in the suit, and who are alleged to have conspired among themselves and with the assistance of the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association, have prevented wholesalers from selling directly or indirectly to consumers, are:

The Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, a New York corporation, with offices at No. 18 Broadway; the New York Lumber Trade Association of New York City; the Building Material Men's Association of Westchester County, New York; the Lumber Dealers' Association of Connecticut; the Massachusetts Retail Lumber Dealers' Association; the Lumber Dealers' Association of Rhode Island, the Retail Lumbermen's Association of Baltimore.

The officers and directors, trustees and members of the above are named as individual defendants as well as the officers and directors and members of the three following voluntary organizations: The New Jersey Lumbermen's Protective Association; the Retail Lumbermen's Association of Philadelphia; the Lumber Exchange of the District of Columbia.

The Government asks for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from continuing the conspiracy charged.

Briefly the retailers have conspired among themselves to prevent manufacturers and wholesalers from selling lumber direct to the consumer. A consumer for these purposes is held to be a contracting builder, mail order house, farmers' co-operative union, or the citizen who buys a pine board to repair his woodshed.

That hundreds of consumers, some of them the largest industrial corporations in the country, have been compelled by alleged unlawful agreements to buy lumber from retailers at much greater prices than they would have paid to wholesalers.

The wholesalers and retailers in joint conventions and by agreements have classified the consumers into "proper" and "improper" trade and have prepared and exchanged blacklists.

That, although the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association is not named as a defendant in this action, by agreements with it, the Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association has organized and circulated blacklists which have affected the lumber trade in New York, North Carolina, Kentucky, Penna., Maryland, Michigan, West Virginia, Massachussetts, Tennessee, South Carolina, Virginia, New Jersey, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Connecticut, Indiana, Florida, Georgia, Missouri, Alabama, Rhode Island, California, Missouri, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia.

That as a result of the alleged blacklists wholesalers have been directed not to sell lumber to retail dealers, will have dealt with consumers in wholesale quantities and that wholesalers who have dealt with consumers in retail quantities have been "protested" to the organized retailers who were directed by their organization not to buy lumber from such wholesalers.

That retailers who have sold lumber in wholesale lots or who have competed for business outside their allotted territory have been posted to the traders as "poachers" or "scalpers," and in some instances have been heavily fined or expelled from the organization.

More to Follow.

Washington, May 20.—At the Department of Justice yesterday it was stated that the suit filed in New York against the so-called lumber trust probably would be the first of a series to be instituted wherever similar violations of law are alleged.

A Difference of Opinion.

Kingston, May 20.—The stonecutters have agreed to the proposal of arbitration. The masons, however, persist in their contention that they have no dispute with the stonecutters, but that they have an agreement with the mason contractors, whereby they are given authority to do work on the Nicol building, which is in dispute. This they are agreeable to taking the matter up with the contractors, but not with the stonecutters.

Hardie Holds Wrong View.

Kilmarnock, Scotland, May 20.—At a meeting here, presided over by Keir Hardie, Hon. Andrew Fisher, Premier of Australia, voiced his dissent from the chairman's views with regard to naval defence. "If anyone holds the same ideas after looking at a map of the South Pacific ocean," he declared, "I would say that he lacks perspective in his judgment."

She Would Do the Work.

"See here, Jim, I want to speak to you."

"All right. Hurry up."

"But I can't hurry up. There's a lot to be said."

"Then send for my wife. She will say it in no time."

ROAST FOR EARL GREY

Senator Power Says He Should Close House in Person.

When Sir Charles Fitzgerald Comes to Adjourn Session Power and Mackenzie Bowell Raise a Protest—Such Carelessness of Governor-General's Duties Will Weaken the Already Slender Tie That Binds.

Ottawa, May 20.—A sensational episode took place in the Senate yesterday. His Excellency Earl Grey being severely criticized for his alleged slighting of Parliament by sending his deputy, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, to give royal assent to bills prior to the two months' adjournment. Senator Power led the attack, and he was in some degree supported by Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Sir Richard Cartwright came to the defence of the governor, extolling his service to Canada in the high position he holds. "I am a very strong believer in British connections," said Senator Power. "I should very much regret that the present practice of having the Governor-General come from England be discontinued. I am altogether opposed to the idea of our becoming independent and separate from the Mother Country. The connection which now exists is not any too strong, and I would regret if anything should be done which would tend to weaken the silken tie that binds us to the Mother Country. I feel that the fact that the gentleman who represents the crown here apparently is desirous of showing that he is not necessary, and that we can get a chief justice or an associated justice of the Supreme Court who will discharge his most important functions just as well as he does, is really doing a good deal to teach this country that we do not want a Governor-General from England. From that point of view it is, to be hoped that future Governors-General will do what was practiced formerly and will, unless absent from the seat of Government, make it a point to do what I consider their duty as one constituent of Parliament."

Sir Richard Cartwright: "My hon. friend is perhaps a little too severe with His Excellency."

Senator Power: "I do not wish to be understood as reflecting on His Excellency. I simply think he has made a mistake, and we should enter a protest."

Sir Richard Cartwright: "There is a material difference between an adjournment and prorogation. Unless my memory is entirely at fault I think that in Great Britain the sovereign does as a rule or very frequently delegates the adjournment of the House where such a thing occurs to commissioners equivalent to our deputy governors.

"One thing I can assure the House, that the last thing the Governor-General would desire would be to show any discourtesy to either Houses of Parliament. That I am perfectly certain is entirely removed from his intention or desire."

Control Over Cable Rates.

London, May 20.—In the course of a statement in the House of Commons concerning the postoffice appropriations, Postmaster-General Samuel announced that he had arranged to obtain some control over cablegram rates from now on by the insertion of a clause in the licenses of cablegram companies, giving the Government power to protest against excessive rates, and, in cases of dispute, to refer the matter to impartial arbitration.

The cable companies had agreed, the Postmaster-General said, to reduce by 50 per cent. their rates on telegrams, written in plain language, which are liable to delay not exceeding 24 hours.

C.P.R. Increases Wages.

Winnipeg, May 20.—In the Canadian Pacific Railway's freight sheds here the truckers, storemen and checkers will receive an all-round increase in wages at once, the raise being given voluntarily by the company. There are about five hundred men who will benefit by the increase. The rates paid previously were 18 1-2c. per hour to truckers or porters, and $52.50 per month to checkers. The pay to truckers is raised now to 20c. per hour. Checkers will now receive $55 per month for the first six months and then $57.50 for another six months, which will later be increased to $60 and after two years to $65. The previous maximum was $60.

QUESTION OF LAW.

Has Canadian Magistrate Power Over a German Ship.

Halifax, N.S., May 20.—An interesting question of law and discipline on board ship is furnished by the captain of the German freight steamer Rheingraf now in this port. Captain Schnoor of that steamship had some trouble with his chief officer, but particularly with his chief steward, whose name is Martin. The upshot of it was that Steward Martin had Capt. Schnoor arrested on a charge of assault, committed on board the steamer, and on which the police magistrate fined the captain $30.

Capt. Schnoor from the first stubbornly held that no court had any jurisdiction over a German ship except on a charge as serious as that of murder for instance. He was amenable only to German law. A decision given by Judge Drysdale of the Supreme Court, that British law governed German ships in Canadian waters had no weight at all with Capt. Schnoor, and he refused to pay the fine, appealing to the imperial German consul at Halifax, N. C. Grant, to straighten out the matter. To avoid further complications, the consul became responsible for the fine and Schnoor was released.

Then the captain asked that the steward be sent back to the ship. The man obstinately refused to go, alleging fear of the captain. A second appeal was then made to the German consul, the captain telling Mr. Grant that the man must be sent back to him. The consul could not persuade the steward to go, though he was told that otherwise he would be considered a deserter. All arguments and persuasion failing, Mr. Grant had Martin arrested as a deserter, and in the meantime the jurisdiction of German law in Canadian waters over German shipping and the case of a steward who will not go back to his post with a captain who assaulted him, are matters to be considered by the authorities.

TWO ARE INJURED.

Third Man Is Missing In Collision on C.P.R.

Montreal, May 20.—An engineer and fireman were injured and a brakeman is reported missing in a collision of C.P.R. freight trains near the city at midnight Thursday. The injured are engineer Robert Crawford and fireman Arthur Hughes, of Ottawa.

A brakeman named Miller, from Quebec, is missing. It is feared he was buried in the wreckage.

The two trains were the Ottawa and Quebec fast freights. The accident occurred at an intersection. The Ottawa train ran into the other, striking the cars sideways with such force that the engine was derailed and turned turtle. Crawford was pinned under the engine, being badly scalded.

Hughes says the signals were set for "line clear."

C.P.R. as Tree Planter.

Montreal, May 20.—The latest C.P.R. scheme to be tried out is the planting of millions of young trees along their lines in Western Canada. These trees are to serve the double purpose of taking the place of the present snow forces and of encouraging their settlers to beautify their homes by the planting of shade trees. So far the railway has had great success with their trees, nearly all of them appearing to be in a flourishing condition.

SALES MADE OF THE YORK LOAN LANDS

Nine Miles Have Been Sold—Frontage Left Has Shrunk To 1,300 Feet

Since the winding up order was made in the York County Loan & Savings Co. on December 16th, 1905, the National Trust Co., liquidators, have disposed of lots with nearly nine miles of frontage. At the time of the liquidation there was an aggregate frontage of 50,000 feet, which has been sold steadily, till now there are only 1,300 feet left. Some of this is on Bloor street, Toronto, and is being held by the liquidators to assist the city in the proposed widening of that thoroughfare.

The property has been sold on terms, and as soon as sufficient has been paid by the purchasers, dividend cheques will be sent out to the shareholders. When this will be is a matter of speculation. The sum required to pay the twenty-five per cent dividend, for which the cheques have already been made out is about $750,000. The cheques will have only to be dated and signed when the required amount is in hand.

The first dividend was paid on November 1st, 1909, and was received by 98,000 shareholders. There will be about 110,000 shareholders to receive the second dividend, as many shareholders were in arrears for an amount exceeding the first dividend, and that dividend was placed against the arrears. The cost of postage alone for sending out the second dividend will be over $1,800.

There will be a further small dividend of an amount at present unknown.

There are still between 8,000 and 10,000 shareholders who have not sent in their pass books, and who have not, as a consequence, received the first dividend. If these send in their books now, they may still receive it.

THE HERPICIDF GIRL

ADVISES GENTLEMEN.

At Mrs. Blank's reception I met a gentleman who fulfilled my ideal of a man in all but one particular. He had a good head, fine physique, perfect manners, was a most interesting personality, and bore himself with the distinguished air of a gentleman His linen was immaculate and his clothes faultless as to cut and material. But all the pleasant first impression was ruined when I discovered the collar and shoulders of his coat was covered with loose hair and flakes of dandruff.

To me this was an indication of personal carelessness, not to say uncleanliness. I wanted to tell him to get a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide. This remarkable remedy would, in a short time remove every trace of dandruff from his head, stop his hair from falling and prevent him from becoming bald. I don't like baldheaded men; they look old whether they are or not.

Dandruff is caused by a germ and Newbro's Herpicide kills that germ. The itching, which is so frightful, with dandruff, stops instantly.

Herpicide is the Original Remedy that destroys dandruff. There is nothing in the world just like it, nothing that is "just as good."

One dollar sized bottles are guaranteed by all druggists to give satisfaction.

Applications may be obtained at the good barber shops.

Send 10c. in postage for a sample bottle and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE RED MILL."

The comic opera success—with a thrill—"The Red Mill," by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, which was presented an entire season at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York City, and engagements of three months each in Boston and Chicago, is an early attraction for this city.

Martin & Emery Co.'s organization which will present this splendid musical play at the Griffin Opera House Tuesday, May 23rd, has been carefully selected and embraces a clever lot of principals, while the chorus is said to be unusually comely and talented.

An augmented orchestra, which is carried by the company, will also be an important feature. Plan now open at Doyle's Drug Store.

CARDINAL POINTS OF METHODIST DOCTRINE

Ministerial Witnesses Say Dr. Workman's—Teachings Transgressed Them

MONTREAL, May 16.—Further evidence concerning the standards of doctrine of the Methodist church, as laid down in the book of discipline, was given this morning by Rev. Dr. Scott in the libel suit brought against the Weselyan Theological College, by Rev. Dr. Workman.

Rev. Dr. Ross, a member of the Court of Appeal of the Methodist body, was also examined concerning the interpretation which was to be put on these doctrines.

Questioned by Mr. Skinner, Dr. Scott said that theological students had "gone wrong" by resigning from the Church. He added: "I have had some speak to me personally and convey to me the idea that they did not know what to believe, as the statements received in Dr. Workman's classrooms were entirely different from those received in any of the other classrooms."

Revs. Dr. Ross and Jackson were the chief witnesses in this afternoon's hearing, and the testimony of both was to the effect that on certain points the teachings and views of Dr. Workman were unorthodox, and not in accordance with the doctrinal standards of the Methodist faith.

Dr. Jackson, who was for some years a fellow-professor of Dr. Workman, was asked to state in a general way the nature of the questions which formed the basis of the exception taken to Dr. Jackson's views, and enumerated the following points: the Deity of Christ, the propritiatory character of the atonement, the virgin birth and the effect of the atonement on all men, even on infants.

The witnesses declared that all the above points were cardinal points to the Methodist doctrine, and that if one of them were touched all would be affected. Dr. Workman, he declared, held unorthodox views on these questions, and these views formed the sole basis of the opposition which had arisen to his teachings.

In concluding his evidence, Dr. Jackson, in reference to the recent testimony of Dr. Carman, stated that that gentleman had had no right to claim that he was voicing the views of the Methodist church, dsepite his high position. Jesus Christ was the Head of the Church, and Dr. Carman one of the most highly paid officers and the earthly head in Canada. Dr. Jackson admitted that on minor points he and Dr. Carman differed, but declared that on fundamentals they were agreed.

ECZEMA WAS SPREADING

TILL D. D. D. CURED IT.

This is a translation of a letter written us in French on April 16, 1910, by Mr. Dan Babineau, Cap Lumiere, N. B.:—

I had been suffering with eczema for about six months, and had consulted several doctors who did not do me any good. The disease was spreading and I was most uncomfortable. I thought I would go crazy. All my friends were telling me I would lose my hands unless I found the right treatment.

One day I read in the Messenger about your D.D.D. treatment and asked for a sample. It did me so much good that I immediately ordered two large bottles. It took eight bottles to cure me of this terrible disease. I shall never be without a bottle of D.D.D. in my home.

The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most severe cases show that D.D.D. stands to-day as the absolutely reliable eczema cure.

Write today for free trial bottle to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. B. L., 49 Colborne St., Toronto. It will give you instant relief. J. S. McKeown.

FIRE BRIGADE WERE CALLED OUT TWICE

The fire brigade had two runs yesterday afternoon, but fortunately in neither case was any damage done to property. At five o'clock a blaze broke out in the rear part of Mr. Shaw's residence on the corner of Strachan and St. Charles streets. This was extinguished without any particular damage being done.

At a few minutes after six o'clock the second call was sent in, it being reported that the Walker Foundry premises were on fire. This was a false alarm.

LUNG TROUBLE

PROMPTLY RELIEVED AND PERMANENTLY CURED BY INHALING CATARRHOZONE.

Mrs. Siny Brown, of Tenecape, N. S., was cured by Catarrhozone of lung trouble and Catarrh after hundreds of other remedies failed.

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices and numerous other remedies, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," she writes, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to sure me. I could feel the medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed the most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the inhaler the local symptoms such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone Tablets which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absoutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

Complete outfit costs $1.00; small size, 50c. At druggists.

The "Unlucky" Liquor Drinker

The world is full of "good fellows" with GOOD INTENTIONS who are FAILURES—UNLUCKY—UNSUCCESSFUL. And you will find about all of them to be liquor drinkers. If the liquor drinker could but grasp the fact that there is a link connecting WHISKY and FAILURE, and then take the Gatlin treatment so that he could STOP drinking, there would be a chance for him as a successful business man.

If he could but REALIZE that a WHISKY-BRAIN means BAD LUCK in business, he would come to the Gatlin Institute TO-DAY. In THREE DAYS he would go back to his business a man RENEWED. with a BRAIN and a NERVOUS SYSTEM strong enough to make SUCCESS out of what will SOON be FAILURE; he would go back to his business at the end of the third DAY with no more craving or nerve-demand for liquor or inclination to drink it than he had the day he took his FIRST DRINK.

You are not to blame because you CAN'T STOP drinking liquir. Foolishly, not knowing the CONSEQUENCES, just as a million men before you have done, you took your first drink. With that first drink you introduced into your system the CUMULATIVE POISON of alcohol, the antidote for which is MORE ALCOHOL. You TRY to stop drinking—you at least realize that it does no good even if you believe it does no harm—but you CAN'T STOP.

Without liquor your NERVES go to pieces, your STOMACH refuses to act, your HEART palpitates. YOU CAN'T THINK RIGHT, work becomes a HARDSHIP, you CAN'T SLEEP—and with all these symptoms you seek RELIEF in liquor, and you get it—TEMPORARILY.

The Gatlin Treatment

The Easy Way to Stop Drinking

The Gatlin Home treatment is for those who cannot come to the institute for three days. It is just as efficient as Institute treatment if directions are followed.

AT LAST, A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Me" Says Mrs. Baxter.

"I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without help. I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try them. After I had taken one box, I was much better.

When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone. After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-tives" cured me.

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.
4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, Dec. 15, '09.

In hundreds of other cases, "Fruit-a-tives" has given exactly the same satisfactory results because "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world. "Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine regulates kidneys, liver, bowels and skin, and prevents the accumulation of uric acid, which is the prime cause of Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Rheumatism, when taken according to directions. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE NEAREST STAR

Is Alpha Centauri, but it is Quite a Distance Away

Alpha Centauri, a conspicuously bright point of light in the constellation of the Centaur, is the nearest to our own world of all the stars. Not only so, but it is the nearest by a colossal span. The next in distance from the earth, a faint star known as 61 Olygni, is almost twice as remote. So in the great company of the stars we must regard Alpha Centauri as, comparatively speaking, close at home. Yet, neighbor as it is, its distance is such that it is very difficult to convey to the mind any really adequate idea.

Light, everyone realizes, travels at some incredibly fast pace. It can be accurately measured, and it is found to traverse a distance of 186,300 miles in a single second of time. Even at such a speed, the light leaving Alpha Centauri takes three years to reach the earth. If the star were suddenly blotted out from its place in the sky, three whole years would pass before we became aware of the loss. The star is 275,000 times more distant from our solar system than is the sun from the earth. In other words, to reach Alpha Centauri, the nearest star, would require a measuring rod twenty-five million millions of miles in length.

Professor Todd has suggested an ingenious method for realizing such vast distances. Imagine the solar system—the sun, and all the planets circling round it—as represented by the dot over this letter i. Even the sun itself, on this exceedingly reduced scale, could not be detected with the most powerful microscope ever made, or dreamed of. But on the same scale, the vast circle having the sun as its centre and reaching to Alpha Centuri would be represented by the longest circle that could be drawn on the floor of a room ten feet square.

For Alsace-Lorraine.

Berlin, May 20.—After prolonged bargaining the committee of the Reichstag yesterday adopted the Government's bill providing a constitution for Alsace-Lorraine.

The support of the Socialists was secured by abolishing the proposed plural voting. The original measure provided that the lower Chamber should be made up of members elected by universal suffrage of those twenty-five years old or over, and that voters over thirty-five years old should have two votes and those more than forty-five years old three votes.

The clericals were won over by concessions in the matter of religious freedom, and an arrangement by which the French language will be used officially in the schools of those districts of Alsace-Lorraine where there is a French-speaking population.

Newcombe Pianos

Before the Public Forty Years

The following letter, written by Howard Brockway, the composer, and Mary Garden's accompanist, will give some idea of our present day quality :

April 26, 1911

Messrs. Newcombe Piano Co., Ltd , Toronto.

Dear Sirs,— It gives me great pleasure in testifying to the general excellence of your pianos. One in particular—style 70—shown me this afternoon, being especially fine, and for brilliancy and sympathic quality of tone, I consider your upright piano to be unequalled by any made in Canada. Your piano has a splendid sonority which is so rare in Upright Pianos.

Yours truly,
HOWARD BROCKWAY.

MARSH GAVE EVIDENCE AS TO TAX LOT DEALINGS

Tells of the Formation of the Committee and their Modus Operandi—Advised Together as to Sales—Tried to Get More than Taxes—Suggested to His Mother-in-Law to Purchase Tax Lot—She Inspected Lots, Bought and Paid for Them—Had Not Loaned Money to Her—Had No Personal Interest in the Transaction—No Intending Purchaser Was Headed off

The tax lot sale investigation was continued on Saturday afternoon before Judge Deroche. A number of witnesses were examined, including ex-Mayor Marsh, whose examination in chief and cross-examination occupied considerable time.

ALD. WOODLEY.

Ald. Woodley, examined by Mr. Mikel, said he was an alderman of the city last year and this year. He knew nothing of the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price.

Examined by Mr. Carnew—He had been an alderman for three years. There was no discussion about sale of lots in any committee upon which he served. He never questioned Mr Marsh or Mr. Price about the sale of lots.

To Mr. Morden—He knew there was a Lot Committee, which had to do with the sale of lots.

JOHN COOPER.

John Cooper, G.T.R. engineer, examined by Mr. Mikel.—He purchased a lot from the city for $30. This was the last of September, 1910. He went to Mr. Price's office to see about a lot. He had heard that lots could be secured for $1. He asked about these lots, but was not aware of the fact that if such a lot was secured a house had to be built. He bought a lot on the west side of Bleecker Ave. No attempt was made to him to purchase a lot from relatives of Messrs Marsh or Price.

Examined by Mr. Carnew—It was about the 28th of September that he visited Mr. Price's office, and the latter showed him a plan of lots. He went to the office with his friend Mr. Kerr. At first Mr. Price said that he could not just then tell what the price was, but he said about $30. A few days later he saw Mr. Price and purchased the lot for $30. He could not tell the date of receipt of deed, but it was some days after he had visited Mr. Price's office. He still held the lot. As soon as the School Board builds a school near by he would build a residence.

To Mr. O'Flynn—Mr. Price treated him like a gentleman. Mr. Price went with witness up to Bleecker Ave and showed him where the lots were situated.

C. J. BOWELL.

Mr. C. J. Bowell was examined by Mr. Mikel—Said he was manager of The Intelligencer. All he knew about the sale of lots was what the newspapers had to say.

To Mr. O'Flynn—He had known Mr. Price all his life and he had offered to sell witness four lots on Bleecker Avenue. Mr Price appeared to be in his case anxious to sell him some city lots.

F. D. DIAMOND.

Mr. F. D. Diamond was recalled and presented a detailed statement as to the sale of lots, cost of same to city and what was realized for the lots.

To Mr. Mikel—The sale price of lots to parties showed more was realized than was against the lots and for which the city had paid for them. In some cases he assisted Mr. Price to make up the taxes against the lots. Personally he knew nothing about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price.

To Mr. Carnew—He had seen the Tax Committee in Mr. Price's office. He never offered to buy any lots. The first he knew of relatives of Messrs Marsh and Price purchasing lots was when he saw it in the newspaper. There was activity in lots outside of Bleecker Ward, also in Coleman, Baldwin and Murney Wards. This activity commenced about two years ago.

To Mr. O'Flynn—Mr. Price seemed keen to sell lots. These sales made were audited every three months last year. The statement he presented showed that the lots sold to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price, what the lots cost the city and prices sold for were as follows:

SOLD TO MR. DAVIDSON.

	Cost city.	Sold at
Sold to Mr. Davidson.
Lots 4, 5 and 6, east Alice..	$22.47	$45.00
Lots 1 and 2, north Myers, lot 4 south Myers	75.42	125.00
Lots 7 and 8 south Russell, lots 4 and 5 north Russell. ..	32.58	100.00
Sold to Mrs. Smith.
7 lots Bleecker Ave..	176.61	400.00
Lots 6 and 7 north Russell	29.83	100.00
Sold to Mrs. Price.
Lot 1 north Pine ..	17.20	25.00
Lots 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 west Alice St...	49.17	80.00

To Mr. Carnew—Witness could not personally say anything of any correspondence between the Treasurer and Mr. Burrell. He did not know Mr. Ford when he was in the office.

To Mr. Mikel—All the lots sold, excepting the Holley lot, brought more than what was against them.

To Judge Deroche—Sometimes during Mr. Price's absence parties would come into the office and he would take their offer for a lot and he would inform Mr. Price upon his return. He would say that the prices paid for lots by Mrs. Smith, Mr. Davidson and Mrs. Price were fair as compared with sale of lots to other parties.

COL. LAZIER.

Col. Lazier was examined by Mr. Mikel. He was at one time president of the P. O. A. Personally he knew nothing about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price.

To Mr. Carnew—He was made president of the Property Owners' Association at its first meeting, and he personally was the originator of the association, which had for its object the consideration of civic matters, such as paving Front Street, the C. N. O. R. bridge, etc. It was not organized to investigate in any way the tax lot matter. He was taken ill soon after. He was not consulted about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price. It was a question, in his mind, whether the city would have received more for the lots in question than what was paid for them. He considered the price obtained for the lots was a fair price. In his opinion the city did not lose anything in the transaction.

To Mr. Morden—These parties were to his mind astute and probably made something by the sale of certain lots.

J. S. McGURN.

Mr. John S. McGurn was examined by Mr. Mikel—He knew nothing whatever of the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price. All he knew was what he had read in the newspapers.

To Mr. Carnew—He had no property in Bleecker Ward.

To Mr. Mikel—He had one vacant lot near the rolling mills.

To Mr. O'Flynn—He had some real estate in the citq. He had made a bid upon some real estate in the city, but was not much interested in vacant lots.

L. W. MARSH.

Mr. L. W. Marsh was examined by Mr. Morden. He testified that he was a member of the Council for some years, being two years Mayor. A by-law was introduced and passed by the Council appointing a committee, known as the Tax Committee, composed of the Mayor, chairman of the Executive Committe and the City Treasurer. Mr. Price was appointed City Treasurer, he thought, in 1903, and he exhibited anxiety to sell city property. The committee was generally consulted about the sale of lots and they would advise together. The committee would endeavor to get, if possible, more for the lots than was charged against them. At one time the city had some hundreds of lots on its hands. Previous to 1904 the city would sell lots by auction at a tax sale. The sinking fund of the city could, he contended, be kept in a better shape by the sale of city property. His opinion was the city became possessed of so many lots because parties owning the same allowed them to be eaten up, as it were, by taxes accruing against them. Mrs Smith is Mrs. Marsh's mother, and her home is in Quebec. She is a widow and has been for years. She visited the city occasionally. She made an extended visit here during the fall of 1909 and in 1910. She is a nurse by profession. Witness was sick for two months. Mrs. Smith had a bank account of her own and witness knew it. Witness suggested to her to purchase some city lots. She expressed a desire to see them and witness took her up to Bleecker Avenue and that section. Her idea was to build residences on the property, as it was then known that many G. T. R. men were coming to the city. One lot had been sold on the north end of Bleecker Avenue at that time. Witness put

Steamship Teutonic of The White Star Dominion Line

ANOTHER BIG WHITE STAR LINER FOR THE ST. LAWRENCE

The "Teutonic" Makes Her First Trip—Growing Trade Demands Best Ships

The big White Star liner Teutonic arrived at Quebec this morning en route to Montreal on her first voyage to Canada, with over 500 cabin, and nearly 900 third class passengers, a record list.

The fine lines and graceful proportions of the ship are quite a contrast to most vessels coming into this port.

The Teutonic is the longest steamer ever seen in the river, having an overall of 582 feet, and with her powerful engines of 18,000 horse-power, capable of developing a speed of twenty knots an hour, it is expected that she will win the blue ribbon honors on the St. Lawrence route.

The Teutonic will carry cabin passengers in one class only and third class passengers. The cabin accommodation has been greatly enlarged, and a fine Ladies Room has been added to the public rooms, which include also a spacious and beautifully decorated Lounge and a Smoking Room. The Staterooms are large and airy, and the Promenade Decks are broad and extensive.

The Third Class has also been rearranged and all passengers will be berthed in closed cabins, while the former Second Class Dining Saloon has been converted for their use, and a fine Lounging Room has been provided on deck.

The "Teutonic" has been a popular favorite on the Southampton-New York run, where she is to be replaced by the giant "Olympic," and, judging from the list she is bringing out on her first trip to Canada, that popularity will cling to her in this trade.

The wonderful growth in travel to and from Montreal is bringing great changes in the facilities provided for passengers by the big steamship lines and new and larger vessels are being diverted to the St Lawrence every year. Thousands of tourists prefer it to any other route, as it reduces the actual ocean voyage to less than four days, while the trip on the river and through the broad expanse of the gulf is a panorama of scenic interest not to be found elsewhere.

SOLDIERS AT CHURCH

The City Regiment Attended St. Thomas' Yesterday Morning

The Fifteenth Regiment attended divine service at St. Thomas' Church yesterday morning. Considering the excessive heat, the turnout was most creditable. Both bands were in attendance and the music furnished by the regimental band was good. The services at the church were conducted by the Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, who is chaplain of the regiment.

After the usual morning prayers had been said and appropriate hymns sung the rector addressed the regiment briefly, but did not occupy the pulpit, speaking from the chancel. He said he had intended to preach and speak upon some matters of importance which were at present engaging attention, but owing to the heat and the fact that the members of the regiment were warmly clothed he would refrain from delivering a sermon. The officers and members of the regiment he welcomed to St. Thomas' Church to attend divine service. It was a pleasure to him as chaplain to have the regiment worship in God's house on the Lord's day. They had come to worship to thank and praise God for His goodness. The Rector referred to the Imperial Congress which was about to take place and also the peace conference which was taking place. As Canadians and loyal subjects of the Empire these matters were of importance to us. While the regiment stood for king, country and order, there was still a higher call, namely that to be soldiers of the King of kings, and to be true christians. In conclusion, he impressed upon all present the necessity of being steadfast for righteousness and not for material things. He wished the regiment God's blessing.

During the service Mrs. C. Wilmot sang sweetly and effectively two solos, namely "Abide With Me," and "Angels of Light."

Games Committee—J. F. Wills, C. N. Sulman, Dr. Clinton.

The season promises to be a highly successful one, as the membership is large. The interest in the game is keen and the lawn is in fine condition.

AN EGG WITHIN AN EGG

Mr. Jesse Barlow has shown to The Intelligencer a portion of a hen's egg, within which was found another little complete egg of about the same size as that of a pigeon's. This egg was laid by one of Mr. Thompson's hens on Hillis' farm, at Mud Creek, not far from Bancroft.

VALUABLE HORSE WAS ELECTROCUTED

Tuuched a Building Charged With Electricity and was Instantly Killed

A building situated on Coleman Street, covered with corrugated iron and which was found to be charged with electricity, was this morning responsible for the death of a valuable horse. The building in question was recently erected by the McLaughlin concern and adjoins the livery stable of Messrs. Brickman and Cronkright. The horse was taken out of the stable and was being washed off. The animal was standing close to the McLaughlin building and touched its nose against the structure, and immediately fell dead. Mr. James Cretney, a blacksmith, who was near by at the time, touched the animal's hoof, with the result that he received a shock which threw him for some distance. Fortunately he escaped without serious injuries.

The horse was valued at $250, being the pride of the stables. It was apparent that in some manner the sheeting had become charged with electricity by the wires which are used in it for lighting purposes. Had the party who was attending to the animal touched the building a human life would, in all probability, have been sacrificed.

C. N. R. HAS BIG PLANS FOR TERMINALS

Will Spend Five or Six Millions in Toronto and Thirty Millions in Montreal

Five or six millions upon terminals in Toronto and thirty millions upon terminals in Montreal is said to be the programme decided upon by the Canadian Northern Railroad, and while the official announcement has not been made, those who should know, substantiate the news.

Toronto is to have a C. N. R. station uptown, with perhaps a joint arrangement with the C.P.R. To do this it will be necessary to build a huge viaduct over the Don Valley to let trains in from the east and through to the proposed C.N.R. line from Toronto to Niagara Falls and eventually into the United States. In connection with the new terminal at Montreal a bridge will have to be swung across the St. Lawrence.

According to Sir Donald Mann, the $36,000,000 guarantee of the Government, which the Senate passed, will fall considerably short of the cost of constructing the Montreal-Port Arthur line. The engineer's estimate is $59,000,000. Tenders will be called at once for the construction of the section of the C.N.R. between Port Arthur and Silver Junction, a stretch of about 550 miles.

PROSECUTION FAILED

Two city hotelkeepers were this morning charged with selling liquor to minors. The charges arose out of a case that was tried last week, whereby a young man was fined for being drunk and with careless driving. The parties in question were unable to tell definitely where they obtained liquor and the cases were dismissed. Mr. Anderson was prosecutor, and Mr. Porter, K.C., appeared for the accused.

HE TRIED SUICIDE

His Suspenders Were Not Strong Enough for their Intended Purpose

A young man named Edward Carr on Saturday afternoon about five o'clock caused considerable excitement by his actions. It appears that he had in his possession a 22 calibre revolver and he made some threats to his brother-in-law, Mr. Bert Report, who resides near the station, and it is also alleged he fired one shot, but no one was injured. The police were notified of the occurrence and Officer Corrigan responded. Seeing the officer approaching, Carr, as fast as possible, made for the G. T. R. bridge, but instead of crossing the structure he

WADED INTO THE RIVER.

The officer endeavored by persuasion to induce Carr to come ashore, but he refused. The officer then waded out and, securing his man, placed him under arrest and escorted him to the police station.

TRIED SUICIDE.

Later on Carr made an attempt to commit suicide. He took off his suspenders and fastened them to the upper part of the cell door and then tied them about his neck. The suspenders, however, would not support his weight and he fell. The fall was heard by the officer in charge at the station, and, rushing to the cell, he learned Carr's intentions. The suspenders were then tightly about his neck, and the officer loosened them as quickly as possible.

NO HARM DONE.

A physician was summoned, but Carr had evidently sustained no particular injury. Later on he was in the act of tying his garters about his neck, but his scheme of self destruction was frustrated.

At the time Carr was somewhat under the influence of liquor. He is about 22 years of age and has resided in the city for some time, Napanee being his former home.

This morning Carr was brought up before Magistrate Masson and the charges preferred against him were shooting with intent and attempting to commit suicide. The accused did not plead and no evidence was taken, but the case was enlarged for a week

"YOUR MONEY OR YOUR LIFE"

Local Youths Followed Jesse James' Example--Scared $1,40 Out of a Man

Two young men of good parentage, residents of the city, were arrested this morning and later on appeared before the Magistrate to answer to a serious charge. It appears the parties in question are no doubt imbued with the Jesse James idea of securing money by hold-up means by their reading of dime novels. Last evening they "held up" a man near what is known as Holton's grove in West Belleville, and secured from him by blood-curdling threats $1.40 in change. One of the parties had his face obscured by a handkerchief and appeared to be the chief offender. The affair was reported to the police with the result that the culprits were arrested.

Before the Magistrate this morning they pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money by threats of violence, and one of them also pleaded guilty to having a mask upon his face. The latter was remanded to jail for a week and the other was remanded until tomorrow for sentence.

Mr. Anderson represented the Crown, and Mr. Porter, K.C., appeared on behalf of the accused.

CENSUS OF SWISS ANIMALS

Everything Was Counted Except the Cats and Dogs

While England and Germany have been taking a census of all their people, Switzerland has been taking a census of all its animals. The numbering of the beasts which took place recently included even the bees, only the number of hives, of course, being taken in this case. All animals, with the exception of cats and dogs, have had to be included in the census, the exception in favor of dogs being explained by the fact that they are generally used to pull light carts, and are thus registered already. Owners of horned cattle were obliged to state the number of their cows, calves, oxen, and bulls, and how many they possessed of each particular breed.

THE CORONATION NEXT

For the Crown Prince of Germany—He and Princess Home from Asia

The Crown Prince and Crown Princess, of Germany, are at home again, much to Potsdam's joy, after their long five months' sojourn in Ceylon, India and Egypt. Like the ardent soldier that he is, the Crown Prince went promptly back to his military duties, as major of a battalion of the Guards at Doberitz, to be warmly welcomed by his comrades, among whom he is extremely popular. The Crown Prince's next trip abroad will be in June, when he goes to London to represent the Kaiser at the Coronation.

Getting Ready

The vast supplementary estimates recently brought down indicate beyond peradventure that the Government is getting ready for an election. The fact is staring them in the face that they cannot force through reciprocity without first obtaining a mandate from the people. Even Sir Wilfrid Laurier's threat to absent himself from the Imperial Conference and the Coronation did not stampede the Opposition. Through Mr. Borden they suggested three courses which he might take, anyone of which might enable him to perform his plain duty to the Empire. He affected at the time to make light of these suggestions, and more than intimated that he would follow his own course without any regard to the wishes of the Canadian people. Indeed he went so far as to say that he considered the reciprocity agreement as of more importance than the great problems to be considered by the Imperial Conference. He retained this top-loftical position for a few days, and then suddenly wilted. Even his own supporters refused to stand by him in his petulant demeanor. Without any attempt at explanation he came down from his perch more quickly than he had ascended to it and started for England at the time arranged. Whether he had always intended to do this and was merely making a cheap bluff when he talked to the contrary, or whether he became frightened at public opinion, is not material. The fact remains that he was forced to go to the Conference and that he was only too glad to accept one of the propositions tendered to him by Mr. Borden.

Editorial Notes

FEAR QUEBEC. The faddists, who loudly declared Quebec to be virtually a unit in support of the Laurier-Fielding pact, evidently do not believe their own assertion, as they have arranged for no less than four hundred and twenty meetings to be held in that province during the parliamentary recess.

* * * *

SETTLES IT. U. S. Senator Root has offered in the committee on reciprocity an amendment to the pact which provides that reciprocity shall not go into effect until Canada allows wood pulp and paper free entry. The committee is said to favor the amendment; and if the Senate adopts it that will be the end of the proposed arrangement, because Laurier & Co. cannot coerce the Provincial Governments into repealing their restrictions.

* * * *

TIMELY WORDS. Governor Osborn, of Michigan, is an ardent advocate of the reciprocity which will not reciprocate, but he candidly stated that, if he lived in Canada, he would oppose the pact. Which, being interpreted, means that he is satisfied that the advantage would be largely on the side of the United States if the proposed arrangement went into operation. Governor Osborn's words are timely, and form good advice to Canadians.

* * * *

ON THE SHELF. Reciprocity is laid on the shelf for a while. It is not likely to be heard from again until Parliament reassembles on July 18th. If it is not killed by the United States Senate in the meantime, the Government will have to take up the awful burden again when Parliament reassembles. There is much speculation as to what course will be pursued, but it is generally believed that a few weeks of struggle will be followed by an appeal to the country. The Conservatives are more than confident that that appeal will be followed by a verdict in their favor.

* * * *

PRINT PAPER. The United States Tariff Commission reports that Canadian mills can turn out news print paper for $5.35 a ton less than has to be paid for making it in the United States. The average cost is stated to be $27.53 in Canada and $32.88 in the United States. The main item in creating the difference appears to be the cost of pulp wood in Canada, and while, remarks the Montreal Gazette, this is likely to increase on both sides of the line, the advance will hardly be as marked in Canada as over the border. Reciprocity, by this U. S. showing, does not seem to be necessary to ensure a share of the U. S. market for Canadian paper mills and their workers.

* * * *

"BALLY ROT." It is all right, even with the ultra-loyalists, for Canada to trade with Germany, France, Bolivia, or any other country, under a special pact, but it does not do to trade freely with the Americans. It may encourage annexation. What bally rot!—Kingston Whig.

The Whig, in serving up such rubbish, must measure its readers' intelligence by a very low standard; for it ignores the issue raised by President Taft in his speech at New York, in which he declared that his object in pressing the pact upon Congress was to render impossible the project of preferential trade within the Empire. As to trading with other countries under a pact, that was arranged because it was mutually profitable. The proposed arrangement with the States, although called "reciprocity," would not, under present circumstances, benefit Canada to more than a very small extent. The great bulk of the advantage would fall to the share of the United States.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 20.—Wheat opened easy, unchanged to 3d lower. Prospects point lower. Further general rains were reported in Russia, with rain in Roumania and crop conditions thruout Europe generally improved this bearishness. Notwithstanding this the market displayed a steady undertone, and toward the close there was some covering, which caused a steadier feeling and prices unchanged to 3-8d lower than yesterday. Corn declined ½d on opening and further lost ½d during the morning on a poor spot demand and very small enquiry for parcels.

CHICAGO, May 20.—With a change to showery and cooler weather, conditions favored the bear side to-day in wheat. There was a good deal of caution, tho, about unduly pressing sales. When the pit was cleared prices were left 1-4 lower to 3-8 up. Corn showed a net decline of 1-4 to 3-8 to 1-2, and oats 1-8 to 1-4. Provisions in the end varied from last night's figures to 15c off.

Fire In Kingston Theatre.

Kingston, May 22.—Fire at five o'clock yesterday morning, caused by spontaneous combustion, it is believed, did about $300 damage to the Princess Theatre, run by John Campbell. Oily rags left under the flooring when the floor was oiled, is believed to have been the cause. The quick work of Chief Armstrong and his men saved the building. The blaze was put out with chemicals. The theatre will not have to be closed. Campbell came here recently from Brantford.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"And you had a pleasant journey here" continued Balbi.

"The voyage was alright after the first few days," said Ellis, joining in. "But I can't say much for your railway system; it's too slow. I admit though, that some of the scenery we passed through is magnificent."

"I shall be able to show you some equally fine during your stay, Signor Ellis, if you care for that kind of a thing," said Balbi.

"I suppose this discovery of yours Mr. Balbi, lies among these mountains?" said Guelfo, anxious to get to business at once.

"We will leave that matter for a later time, if you have no objections. Mr. Guelfo. At present we have to make each other's acquaintance, as it were."

"True, true! And you will want to see our credentials and satisfy yourself as to our bona fides no doubt."

"It is but business, signore."

"Certainly, certainly. We shall get on well together, Balbi," said Guelfo dropping the prefix, which the Italian was quock to notice. "You're a man of business; so am I. But, at any rate for to-day, we'll give pleasure the first place. Are you engaged this afternoon?"

"I am quite at your service, signori."

"Then I would suggest that, if not inconveniencing you, we should have a carriage, if such things are to be had in this country, and you should show us some of the ruins about here we have heard talked of."

"They are well worth seeing, signori, and I shall be delighted. You are now in the very heart of their country, and when we return you will do me the honor of supping with me."

"No indeed. That honor rests with us, Signor Balbi," said Ellis. Your part will consist in acting as cicerone and you must allow us to play the hosts."

"So be it, signore. I go to order a carriage." And Balbi left the two Englishmen.

"He's not such a bad sort after all," remarked Ellis, in French, little knowing what was passing through the mind of their new acquaintance at the very moment.

The afternoon was spent by the three among the ruins of a past age, examining the remaining traces of that highly-cultured mysterious race which had fallen a victim to the Spaniard's lust for gold.

The excursion was an interesting one to the Englishmen, and was continued until the shades of evening had fallen. During the supper, which afterwards was taken beneath the green roof of the patio, Balbi gave them many interesting details of the vanished race, and displayed a small collection of gold ornaments and relics, which he had either found or purchased during his stay in that district.

The trio retired early, but when Balbi reached his room his nature seemed to alter all at once. He threw off the mask he had been wearing during the latter part of the day and gave himself over to the passion that was burining in his soul.

"Diavolo," he muttered hoarsely to himself, as he strode up and down his chamber. "At last we have met! At last I have him in my power!" He went to a drawer, and, unlocking it, he drew out a long, slender, triangular poignard, an old Florentine weapon of the middle ages, and felt its edge, still almost as keen as a razor "No," he muttered. It would be too swift, too painless. He shall suffer as he has made others suffer His flesh is nothing. He is but a pig a dog! Dio! It must be at his heart his soul that I shall bite and gnaw, He shall feel the tortures of the damned before I hold my hand."

And then, after a pause, "But the Signor Vipan—is he his friend? He cannot be, yet I must be certain of that first, for the signore is my friend and never by deed of mine shall anything of his be harmed. Guelfo!" and he spat on uttering the name, "shall even go free for his sake." But we shall see. I have waited a long time, and I can wait still, and vengenace grows in the keeping;" and he smiled grimly as he replaced the keen weapon in the old sheath of stamped leather.

CHAPTER IX.

The track of the "Sharks."

It would be wearisome to record the many interviews and meetings, discussions and bargainings which took place between "Giuseppe Guelfo of the one part and Piero Balbi, called the vendor, of the other part" (for Ellis did not figure by name in the agreement) for the sale and purchase of the copper mine to which the financier had decided to give the name of "The Queen of the Cordilleras," as having a particularly attractive sound.

Business arrangements are never very attractive to those who have no personal interest in them. Suffice it therefore, to say that on the day following heir first meeting, Guelfo had produced Balbi's own letter and the half of the vichaya leaf which had been enclosed and which was found to fit exactly on to the portion retained by the undersized Italian miner, who, to all appearances, seemed quite satisfied. After further interviews had taken place, the amounts to be paid as purchase money settled and, with the aid of a lawyer, an agreement had been drawn up and signed, Balbi drove with the two Englishmen to Larco, some few miles distant from Cuzco, where hidden amid the hills above the village, the entrance to the mine was situated.

More for form's sake than anything else they followed Balbi into the dark workings and heard his explanation of the various cuttings, levels, adits and passages, most of which seemed half choked up with debris fallen from the roof. The mine was really there, they could vouch for that, but whether it was really workable or contained ore in paying quantities was a question for the mining experts whom they engaged to examine and report on it, at the same time throwing out a strong hint that the better the mine was discovered to be the better it would be for the experts.

At length all arrangements had been made, contracts signed, and after no inconsiderable bribery of government officials, the concessions had been obtained and Guelfo and Ellis were about to leave Cuzco for Mollendo, there to take boat for England and give the British public the opportunity of participating in the wealth lying hid in the depths of "The Queen of the Cordilleras.'Q'

The men had finished their evening meal and were sitting in the patio.

"By Jove! I shall be glad to get out of this; I've had quite enough of Peru," said Elis. "But it was worth coming for. We've got hold of a real good, soft thing. I'm convinced, and there's nothing like being in a position to be able to say you've seen the property. It really ought to go."

A Century's Lapse

What Was Accomplished Under an Indian Fakir's Instructions

By F. A. MITCHELL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There are many singular processes known in the east that are not understood in the west. In India we hear of people being buried and a long while afterward resurrected. Ordinarily persons shake their heads at such stories, but there has been so much testimony as to these strange doings that the feeling has gained ground that there is something in them. There is certainly nothing new in them. What these Indians know has been handed down to them through centuries.

During the reign of terror in France a young girl, Marie de Maurier, the daughter of a nobleman, was condemned to death with others of her class whom the revolutionists desired to eliminate. She was expecting to be taken to the guillotine and executed when the door of her cell was opened and a man of swarthy features, with a fez on his head, entered. He lighted a taper he held in his hand, and a strange odor soon pervaded the cell. The girl sat on a pile of straw in a corner, but the man stood with his face near a window, holding at the same time a vial under his nose. Mlle. de Maurier sank down apparently dead. The man took her in his arms and carried her out to the prison dead house, where she was put into a coffin. The coffin was then placed in a cart and driven away in charge of the swarthy man, who before leaving dropped several gold pieces into the palm of the jailer.

The body of Mlle. de Maurier was carried to the laboratory of a distinguished French savant, Professor Chantan, who received it from the swarthy man. Both entered the laboratory with it, and the professor locked the doors. That was the last seen of Marie de Maurier for a hundred years.

In 1898 Paul Chantan, the great-great-grandson of Professor Chantan, a young scientist of promise, went to the family vault in the cemetery of Pere Lachaise and, taking down from an upper shelf a casket, had it removed to his laboratory. There he lifted from the coffin the body of a young girl. Having laid it on a table, he took from his pocket a manuscript and began to read:

Record of the case of Mlle. Marie de Maurier, who was to have been guillotined on the 5th of March, 1798. Her jailer was bribed to permit Hyder Cassim, an Indian fakir, to place her in a comatose condition, and she, being considered dead, was taken to the laboratory of Professor Antoine Chantan, where the Indian in the presence of Chantan prepared her to lie dormant for an indefinite period. One hundred years after the application of this process let the oldest born lineal descendant of Professor Chantan take the body from the family vault in Pere Lachaise and determine if it can be resuscitated under the following instructions, to wit—

Then followed minute instructions, which young Chantan read carefully again and again. Finally, when he had thoroughly familiarized himself with them, he began to apply them.

Two hours after the commencement of the process Mlle. de Maurier showed a faint tinge of redness in the cheeks, and in thirty minutes more the operator noticed a pink tinge under the finger nails. Placing a mirror under the nostrils, he detected a slight moisture on the glass. Listening for the heartbeat, he discovered that it throbbed very slowly. All these symptoms gradually gained ground until three hours and fifty minutes after the young scientist had begun the resuscitation, when the subject opened her eyes.

"Is it time?" she moaned.

"Don't excite yourself," said Chantan. "You are in a critical condition, but if you can avoid giving way to any strong emotion you will come out all right."

"But why do I care, since I am to be executed?"

"That matter is past and gone. You have been unconscious for a long while. The revolution is accomplished. The republic is established on a permanent basis, and there is no longer need for executions."

"Thank heaven!"

The professor had prepared a lounge and, taking the girl in his arms, lifted her from the table on to it, covering her with an afghan. He noticed that the body was quite warm.

"Have the emigres returned?" asked the girl as soon as she was made comfortable.

"Long ago."

"I wonder if my uncle and my cousins are here."

To this the young man made no reply. Presently he asked her if she had any consciousness whatever before recovering her faculties.

"I fancy it could not have been long before I opened my eyes. The first thing I knew was you standing over me saying what you said." A blush overspread his features.

"What did I say?"

He was obliged to urge her, but she finally told him that he had said:

"If I succeed in bringing you back to life I will love you forever."

He had spoken the words believing that they were said to a dead person and never dreamed that a living being heard them. He was silent a few moments and then said with great feeling:

"And I will."

He was bending over her as he spoke. Her joy at having been told that she was not to be beheaded, but instead that this young man, who had brought her from nothingness to life, loved her, knew no bounds. She threw her arms about his neck.

Notwithstanding that Chantan reciprocated the emotion that caused this act he shuddered. A terrible gulf stood between him and this new and suddenly born love. A hundred years intervened between her going to sleep and her awakening. How could he tell her that during that long period she had been on a shelf in a tomb in Pere Lachaise; that those she would expect to find alive to rejoice with her in her escape from death on the guillotine had been in their graves for many years? And what would he do with her? He had kept the secret that he intended to obey an injunction handed down to him from his great-great-grandfather to resuscitate one supposed to be dead. How could he take this homeless girl to his mother and sisters dressed in a fashion of a hundred years ago? Indeed, he dreaded lest the faded and rotten fabrics of her clothing would fall to pieces as soon as she left the laboratory.

He had prepared a luncheon in case he was successful in his experiment, realizing that food would be at once needed, and now, noticing a pallor come over the girl's face, he brought her a glass of wine and offered her some dainty bits to eat. She partook of both and seemed refreshed. Then she began anew her questionings.

"How long have I been asleep?"

"Oh, a long while."

"What has happened since I began my slumber?"

"Many things. Napoleon Bonaparte made himself emperor, but was overpowered by the other European sovereigns and abdicated."

"I never heard of him. What a long time I have slept! Go on."

"Then the Bourbons were placed again on the throne of France, but the people would not remain tranquil under their rule and drove them out. After that Napoleon's nephew was elected president and afterward made himself emperor. He was conquered by the Prussians and a republic was proclaimed. This is the government we live under now."

"Heavens, how old I must be!"

"I have told you all of what has happened since you went to sleep that I can tell you now. I must take action with regard to your future. Since you are comfortable here and I don't dare for the present to permit you to make the slightest effort I will leave you, though only long enough to make certain provisions. You will need a woman to attend you, and that is the first matter for me to arrange. Do you fear to remain, say, half an hour, alone?"

"No."

He bent over her and kissed her. There was a cold clamminess to her lips he did not like. He was much troubled. This bringing a woman back from a past century appalled him. The brief synopsis of what had passed since she had become unconscious was in itself harrowing. What would he say when she began to ask where were those who had been near and dear to her?

At the door he turned for another look. He started. It seemed to him that since her resuscitation Marie had grown ten years older.

Locking his charge in the laboratory, he went out, thinking as he went what course to pursue. He felt that but one plan was practicable—he must go to his mother and give her his confidence. Calling a fiacre, he directed the driver to take him home.

Arriving, he called for his mother to follow him and, leading her to his own room, showed her the mandate of the first Chantan to resuscitate the body of Mlle. de Maurier. Mme. Chantan read the paper without displaying any especial interest, but when her son began to tell his story her face assumed a very different expression. When he recounted his taking the body from Pere Lachaise her features grew anxious. But when he told her that he had actually brought back to life a body that had been in the tomb a hundred years she had no doubt whatever that her son was insane.

Mme. Chantan was a remarkably self contained woman. As soon as her son began to tell her that he wished her to help him take care of the resuscitated girl she arose, stepped to the door, passed out, closed it and turned the key. Paul Chantan was a prisoner.

The idea that Marie would be left alone locked in his laboratory with but such provisions as he had provided for immediate use threw him into a terrible agony. He hammered on the door, called, screamed and acted like a veritable madman. In an hour two men came, overpowered him and, taking him down to a carriage, drove him to a lunatic asylum.

How long Chantan remained in the asylum he did not know, for he was attacked with brain fever and passed into delirium. When he came to himself he could see by the leaves on the trees without his window and by the heat that the season had changed. Before the attendants knew of his altered condition he had had time to lay his plans. He wrote to his mother that he was aware he had suffered from insanity, but had recovered. Mme. Chantan came at once to see him, and within a few days he was permitted to order a fiacre and drive away.

He drove at once to his laboratory.

After he had inserted the key in the lock it was some time before he could nerve himself to turn it. When he entered, there on the lounge was a body, but it was not the body of a young girl. He saw instead a small dried up figure the hue of papier mache. The eyes were entirely sunken away, and the teeth had disappeared. It was the corpse of a woman more than a hundred years old.

In New York during the first three months of the present year 434 persons were arrested for spitting in public places.

TEACHING DOGS TO BE SINGERS

A Chat With a Well-Known Animal Trainer on His Interesting Work

A good many pet-owners may be startled to learn that animals can distinguish between musical notes, and that those of any degree of intelligence may be trained as musical performers. Animals that play musical instruments are by no means uncommon, and a number of seals have before now been equipped with drums, cymbals, horns and bells, and have made music when instructed by their trainer to do so. If the melody has not been perfect, it has been sufficient to prove that the seals have at least some music in their composition.

Circus Horses and Tunes

The majority of wild animals are influenced by music, and everyone knows that bears can be taught to dance on their hind legs while holding a pole to sounds of music, even if that music is ground out of a common street organ by means of a handle.

Once a circus horse has been taught to do a trick to a certain tune he will do it whenever he hears that tune, and, in consequence, he is the cause of some funny incidents now and again. Once I took a horse into the street for exercise, and as we turned a corner a barrel-organ commenced to grind out its music. The tune was the very one the animal was accustomed to in the circus-ring, and he concluded that I was expecting him to go through his usual performance. He broke away from me and gave a free performance in the middle of the road, and I could only call him to order by appealing to the "musician" to stop the organ.

When the ordinary dog howls at music it does not always do so because the notes get on its "nerves," but often because it is striving to imitate them as well as its untrained vocal powers will permit.

I heard a wonderful story of a singing dog the other day. A handsome collie, named Sammy, the property of Mr. Carlson, is a tenor-soloist. Every morning, when a bell on a church near his master's home rings, Sammy takes up a position close by and begins an accompaniment, which blends remarkably well with the deep notes of the bell. A musician has declared that the dog is exactly in tune with the metallic sounds that come from the church belfry. Later in the day—at noon—Sammy goes off to a lumber plant operated by his master. Here the animal accompanies the whistle, achieving perfect harmony, it is said.

The Talking Dog!

It might be remembered that some years ago a singing dog created a furore amongst scientific men in Paris. This animal, which belonged to a Dr. Bennati, could sing the scale perfectly without any assistance from the human voice or a musical instrument. Moreover, it could imitate a new tune with extraordinary accuracy after hearing it played two or three times.

The philosopher Leibnitz declared that he knew a dog which was not only a remarkably fine singer, but could actually talk. All the letters of the alphabet, with the exception of "m," "n," and "h," it could articulate quite clearly, and could give its master, when spoken to, a suitable answer.

Lions, elephants, and monkeys are fond of music. I have seen an elephant play a whole band of music at once, using its trunk and fore feet to play the various instruments. Lions will often forsake their meals to listen to a tune, and this applies also to tigers and others of the fierce cat tribe.

GIRLS' HAIR CUT OFF

A Despicable Act in a Cinematograph Theatre in England

Several young girls at Brighton, England, have just been the victims of a most despicable form of practical joking, and are now sorrowing over the loss of luxuriant hair upon the beauty and possession of which they had naturally prided themselves. With their hair in plaits they have visited one or other of the cinematograph theatres that abound, and upon unfastening their locks afterwards they have been astounded to find quantities fall to the ground, a big proportion of the plait having been cut by scissors or some other sharp instrument. The act has undoubtedly been committed in the darkness of the theatre. All attempts to detect the miscreant have failed.

PARIS NIGHT DANGERS

"It is humiliating to admit," says M. Achille, a member of the Paris Municipal Estimates for 1911, "that in the twentieth century the security of Parisians is scarcely better assured than it was in the days when the watch was given a drubbing every night. Respectable citizens shut themselves up closely in their houses, leaving the purse-snatchers and brigands masters of the streets. Do not accuse me of exaggerating; rather read over the columns of the press devoted to the numerous robberies committed daily in the heart of Paris, to the burglaries of unheard-of audacity, and to the frequent murders—many of them unpunished—as well as to the innumerable strikes, the mysterious sabotages, and anarchy everywhere."

MONEY FOR NECKLACES

Despite hard times, there still seems to be money in some quarters. In London a week ago a necklace of 85 pearls of pinkish orient was sold for $20,000, and another of 57 round pearls realized $5,750.

LACK OF CHAUFFEURS

The chairman of a motor cab company in London says they have 700 cabs not in use, simply because they cannot get chauffeurs to drive them.

BUILT IN A DAY

A Substantial Wooden Church With Seating Capacity of 300

To build in a growing suburb a substantial wooden church seating over 300 people in a day of 24 hours by volunteer labor is unique in the story of Australian development. This was actually accomplished at Preston by some 150 members of the "Church of Christ," a body with over 1,000,000 members in the United States.

The building began at one o'clock in the morning, when the holes were dug for the foundation posts, and it was completed by acetylene gaslight shortly after 11 o'clock at night, when the last screw in the door locks was driven home. The workers included some thirty skilled carpenters and twenty or so painters, who followed the carpenters in their work stage by stage. The gangs were all carefully organized, and those who could neither dig, paint, saw, nor hoist, were busy feeding the builders. Even the minister did his share of digging. Thousands of enthusiastic spectators watched the operations, and miles of bioscope films were taken. When the church was opened next day it was found unnecessary to attend to a single detail. Pews, gasfittings, notice-boards, pulpit, etc., were all in position.

HAREM SKIRT ADVERTISING

Hotel Proprietor at Lucerne Uses it to Attract Custom

The harem skirt, often facetiously alluded to as the "scarem" skirt, has at least one staunch friend in an hotel proprietor at Lucerne, who, far from considering it likely to scare anybody, has adopted it as an up-to-date device for advertising his restaurant. All his waitresses, who are pretty Swiss girls, have to wear the new garment, and although some of the other restaurant proprietors of Lucerne look askance at this unorthodox method of attracting custom, the believers in the efficiency of the harem skirt as a means of increasing trade report that they are only jealous of his originality.

A ROYAL COLLECTION

Queen Alexandra Has All the Letters of Condolence in Connection with Edward's Death

Queen Alexandra has carefully preserved all the letters of condolence her Majesty received on the death of the King, and these are now numbered among her most treasured possessions. The letters have been divided into categories, those from Royalties and intimate friends, and those from thousands of the late King's subjects not only in England, but in all parts of the Empire, many of them being quite poor people, and from little children. The letters have been carefully bound in plain, dark red calf, with a small crown on the cover. Queen Alexandra specially prizes those letters of sympathy which came from poor people, and though it was obviously impossible for her Majesty to reply to them all, during the first few months she wrote to several of these correspondents, thanking them for their kind sympathy.

Rev. Father Morriscy

Father Morriscy's "No. 11" Cures Stomach Troubles.

When your stomach is working right you never know it is there. But when it feels as heavy as lead—when you have Heartburn, Belching of Wind, Sourness, a gnawing hunger, with distress after eating—when you feel irritable and depressed — then you may know that the digestive fluids in the stomach are not sufficient to digest what you eat.

Father Morriscy's "No. 11" Tablets supply these fluids in concentrated form. Each tablet, dissolved in the stomach, will digest 1¾ pounds of food, which is more than an average meal.

Read what Father Morriscy's treatment did for Mr. Gosline, of Salmon Lake. He writes Nov. 30, 1908:

"I was troubled with indigestion, so severe that I really thought I had cancer of the stomach. I took much doctors' remedies, till I was forced to seek another resource, and this was the Rev. Father Morriscy. His treatments worked miracles, until I have been entirely cured, so that now I do not look to the quality of the diet but to the quantity."

PLEASED THE KAISER

According to the Kaiser, Germany has found in Herr Karl Schonherr a dramatist of priceless worth. After seeing Schonherr's "Faith and Fatherlandn" just before he went abroad, the Kaiser sent for the author and complimented him in his customary extravagant fashion. The play, he said, had moved him in a way that hardly any other tragedy had done, while as for the Kaiserin it had affected her to tears.

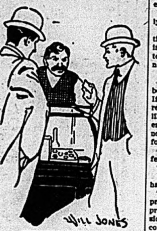
The Sale of an Autograph

It Brought a Fortune to a Family That It Had Impoverished

By ARTHUR TURNER BEALE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I went into my new house I desired to have one room in it as antique as possible. That room is my library. Among the furniture I desired was a desk. I looked about everywhere for one that I could be sure was very old and at last found one that filled my wishes. Upon getting it into my library I unlocked every drawer and after dusting it wiped it with a damp cloth. I noticed that every bit of space in the desk was converted into use except a rectangular area which seemed to have been omitted. A bit of veneering as large as the tip of my finger had become loosened. In pressing on it I released a secret drawer. There was only one piece of paper in the drawer, but it was important. It was addressed on the back to Peter Driscoll and was dated April 5, 1895. It read:



VECHI HEARD HIS DOOM.

> Send the balance of the property at once or take the consequences.
> NEMO.

I am endowed with a fair amount of curiosity and, fortunately for me, have the means to gratify it. I telephoned a prominent detective agency to send me a good man. It sent me Evan Hunt. Showing him my desk, I told him where I had bought it and directed him to trace its ownership. The next day he reported that the storekeeper from whom I had purchased it had obtained it from the estate of Peter Driscoll, a man who had been found murdered one morning in his bed.

I was very much moved by the news. I saw at once that the discovery of the paper placed upon me an obligation to turn the letter over to the authorities. But as I am of a retiring disposition I did not relish being mixed up in a murder case. I concluded to prosecute my investigations further before making the matter public. Pledging my detective to secrecy, I showed him the paper I had taken from the desk and directed him to find the writer. The signature "Nemo" was undoubtedly assumed. But the detective believed the handwriting was that of the person who had made the demand since those who levy blackmail are not likely to impart a knowledge of what they are doing to any one else.

It was fully a month before he reported that he had found a man whom he believed to be the writer of the letter. No clew had ever been found to lead the police to the murderer of Peter Driscoll. Hunt had secured an acquaintance with Driscoll's family. They had been rich, but discovered at the death of their father that the property, which had consisted of interest bearing stocks and bonds, had disappeared. They had concluded that he had been speculating and lost it. They had been obliged to give up the handsome house in which they lived and had sold their furniture at auction. Hunt questioned them to discover if they suspected their father's property had passed to the man who had written the letter, but found they had never heard of him.

A great many discoveries are stumbled on. Hunt stumbled on the man who wrote the letter. He talked with every one who had known Driscoll and learned incidentally from one of Driscoll's acquaintances, a banker, that Driscoll had kept an account with him. Hunt succeeded in inducing the man to let him have a peep at Driscoll's account. One man, an Italian named Vechi, had received large amounts for which there was no explanation. Hunt then asked Driscoll's widow to permit him to look over her husband's papers. Among them he found a letter the handwriting of which corresponded with that of the note I had discovered. In the note it was disguised, but not so successfully but that Hunt suspected it was the same as in the letter he had compared it with. An expert proved that he was right. Vechi lived as a poor man, keeping a shop in which he dealt in odds and ends, curiosities, and did something in the way of autographs of prominent persons.

When we had laid our plans I went with Hunt to Vechi's shop. The Italian had as disagreeable a face as any man I ever knew. I shuddered at his knowing we possessed his secret lest he murder us to prevent our giving it to the authorities. Hunt said to him:

"Do you buy autographs here?"

"Sometimes."

"I have one I would like to sell you."

"Whose autograph is it?"

"Not a very distinguished person. Nevertheless we ask a large price for it."

"I don't wish to buy any autograph for a large price."

"You will pay a fortune for this one, I am sure, when you know whose it is."

"Whose is it?"

"Your own."

The man gave an involuntary start. Up to this time he did not suspect we had any other motive than to sell a bona fide autograph. Hunt's words "Your own" and the way the detective looked at him assured him that we had come on a very different errand.

"Let me see it," said the autograph dealer in a low voice.

"I will read you the note to which it is signed," said Hunt.

I had arranged with Hunt that when he drew the note I was to put my hand in my side pocket and grasp a revolver. I did so, and Hunt, standing well away from the Italian that he might not snatch the paper, read what was written, ending with the word "Nemo." Vechi heard his doom in the words and turned ghastly white. Hunt waited for him to speak, keeping his eyes riveted on him the while.

"How much do you ask for it?" finally Vechi asked.

"My friend here," replied the detective, pointing to me, "is its owner. He intends to give the proceeds of its sale to the family of the man to whom this note was addressed and who was"—

"The price is certain stocks and bonds that passed to this man Nemo. If they are all returned the note will be returned to the writer to do what he likes with it and no steps will be taken in the case. If every security is not given up Nemo will be arrested before he can leave his shop."

Vechi seemed to be thinking for a few moments, after which he asked:

"Tell me the amount."

We did not know the amount, but had provided for this.

"You alone know the amount at present, but since we know that this property has passed into the possession of Nemo we can at any time discover the exact amount. If we discover that he has withheld any of it we may reopen the case."

Vechi stood wavering. Whether he was hesitating as to the amount he would return or whether to defy us I don't know. Presently he said:

"I will buy your autograph, gentlemen, but I have not the price here. You must go with me to my house."

We went with him, as he suggested, I walking on one side of him, Hunt on the other, Hunt and I each having a hand on a revolver concealed. When we reached the house Vechi took us into a room, locked the door and said:

"What guarantee have I that you will keep your word?"

"None whatever," said Hunt. "You must rely on the promise of a gentleman."

Making a virtue of necessity, he opened a closet door, exposing a safe timbedded in the wall. The safe being painted like the wall, only its keyhole was perceptible. Introducing the key, he opened the safe door and took out a large bundle of securities. I looked them over and knew the value of most of them. I judged they were worth between $350,000 and $400,000. They were mostly coupon bonds, not the same property that had been transferred by Driscoll to Vechi.

"Is this all?" asked Hunt.

"Everything," replied Vechi. "I have no desire to leave anything amiss that will reopen this matter."

"Perhaps my friend," said Hunt, "may wish to know the hold you had on Driscoll."

"I have no such desire," I said. "The property is returned, and that is sufficient. The secret of blackmail if told might bring distress on an innocent family. Goodby, Mr. Nemo. So far as this matter is in my possession you may consider it closed."

We went from the shop to the Driscolls', where Mrs. Driscoll answered my card in person. I said to her:

"Madam, I have an important announcement to make to you, and I desire that you call into the room your sons and daughters to hear it."

Surprised, she complied with my request, and her children, mostly grown, were summoned. When they were all assembled I told the story of my purchase of the desk and the finding of the paper in the secret drawer. Then I entered upon Hunt's investigations (some of them recognized him) and lastly told of our visit to Vechi's shop. It was interesting to watch their features during my recital of our interview with the blackmailer, they growing more and more intent till the delivery of the property. When the recital was finished I took the securities from my pocket and handed them to Mrs. Driscoll, saying:

"There are securities affording an annual income of $20,000, in consideration of which we have taken the liberty of giving indemnity against prosecution for blackmail and"—

I shrank from speaking the dreadful word murder.

Every member of the family approved of all I had done and acknowledged in every possible way their indebtedness for the great favor I had done them. Before I left the house every one of us took an oath never to reveal anything of what had happened.

Mrs. Driscoll afterward informed me that so far as she could discover the equivalent of all the securities her husband had possessed was returned. Some $8,000 in cash was unaccounted for.

WOMAN'S WORLD

F SHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS CHIT-CHAT

Doings in the World of Fashion.

—:—:—

Lovely fichus of dotted or ring dot net, trimmed in lace or in frills of the net are shown in all of the exclusive shops, and almost all are slightly draped, so that little responsibility is left to the wearer Some are short ending at the bust line, others are long, the folds runnig down to the normal waist line, and still others cross under the bust in front and pass around to the back, where they knot or are held by a girdle.

Many of the shorter models take on cape-like lines, falling low over the shoulders and arms and of the same depth in the back, so that the lower edge runs around almost in a straight line at elbow depth. There are beautiful models of this kind in the fine embroidered linen only slightly drapel.

Pretty fichu draperies of fine muslin less deep than those just described and laid in folds over the shoulders are drawn down to the waist line in surplice fashion, and flat collars or revers exquisitely embroidered turn back over the soft folds.

Scarfs of chiffon or tulle embroidered or dotted with porcelain beads are popular and the beads give weight to the sheer stuffs, making the draping an easy matter There are pretty scarfs, too, with narrow fringes in metallic or crystal effects and some of the smartest chiffon draperies are finished with old fashioned ball fringe or perhaps merely by a band of velvet.

Among the inexpensive cottons charm of design and coloring is as ubiquitous as among the more expensive stuffs. One soft, fine cotton voile of white ground was sprinkled with tiny dots of pink and bordered with two inch wide floral beads, one of prim little pink daisies and gray green foliage on a white ground, the other in the same prim design on a pink ground.

The dimities, always cool and serviceable, if not so soft as the voiles, and mercerized cottons, are certainly prettier than ever before. The smartest of the dimities this season are in striped and dotted designs of charming colorings.

Much is done with the soft, yellow or buff tones combined with white which came to the front last season and are so deliciously cool looking, despite the fact that some say that yellow is a hot color.

There are peculiarly pretty green and white violet and white effects among the ginghams and other cottons.

One pretty white and black striped chiffon has bordering hems of chiffon in a deep, vivid blue. Another white and black stripe in a very soft sheer cotton of some kind had a striking border design of pansies and was girdled about the high waist line band a four inch band of pansy purple velvet, tied in a square flat bow in front. A good looking black and white linen had its yoke braided in black and white cord, witha bunch black and white cord, with a touch of vivid cerise embroidered in the centre of each of the little trefoils with which the cord ends were finished.

We might add that black and white woollens are almost as numerous as black and white cottons. The designs are countless, dots and stripes being equally popular.

Summer Furniture Covers.

The houskeeper who in winter time rejoices in her beautifully upholstered furniture, in summer time likes to cover it up, partly to save its colors from the strong light, but more particularly because the thick colored materials seem stuffy in the hot weather. Nothing can help more to cool the appearance of a room than crisp linen slips. Delightful results can be attained at only a small expense. For hard service, plain brown Holland or gray linen is practicable, but only the heart of the house holder yearns for something more ornamental. Then come vast quantities of chintz, and gay cretonnes from which she may choose She will, of course, choose a material which will harmonize with her wall paper and floor covering. For this purpose a favorite is the material which has a deep ecru background, and patterns in old pinks and olives and dull blues. This harmonizes with almost any room whether the wood is dark or light or mahogany. One attractive room with white woodwork had slip covers made of ivory white material, strewn over with rather conventionalized flower in dull rose shades with grayish green leaves.

NATIONAL LIFE OF SCOTLAND

The Main Purpose of the Glasgow Exhibition is to Depict the History of the People

Visitors to the Coronation would do well to spend a few days at the Scotch Exhibition at Glasgow, which is far more interesting than any of the so-called Coronation exhibitions in this city, which have been created for no other purpose than that of enriching the promoters. The main purpose of the Glasgow Exhibition, in the other side, is to depict the national life and history of Scotland, and any surplus will be devoted to the establishment of a chair of Scottish history and literature in the University of Glasgow. Prof. Glaister, of the University, who has taken a leading part in this movement, gave an interesting resume of the principal exhibits in the historical section at a luncheon given the other day. Scottish art, from the very beginning of pictorial presentation, is represented by many priceless works. Scottish architecture is revealed in pictures of many notable castles and mansions. Memorials of Wallace, Robert the Bruce, Mary Queen of Scots, and others notable in Scottish history, are on view for the first time, and a unique collection of Burns and Scott MSS. first editions and personal memorials, most of which have never befor been publicly exhibited, are collected here for study and observation. The old burghal life of Scotland is represented by many quaint old houses, gathered together in one centre, and depicting the scene in which the forefathers of the race lived and did their daily task. The costumes and other paraphernalia of the various periods are worn and used, while a vivid pageant of Scottish rural life and industry is given as typical of present-day scenes. Highland peasant industries are seen in operation in this extremely well-designed village.

Relics of the Scottish Antarctic expeditions of Dr. Bruce, and other trophies of Scotland's triumphs in science, marine engineering, and other industries, are fully represented, and a special section is devoted to the display of the achievements of Scotland's greatest scientific genius, Lord Kelvin. Many historical pageants, depicting stirring scenes in the troubled and often tragic history of the nation, are in preparation.

WHOLESOME FUN

Those Who Try to Do Without Recreation Have a Sorry Time of It

Those who try to do without recreation pay the penalty in arrested development. They dry up; their lives become humdrum and uninteresting. They do not get rid of the brain-ash from one day to another, and the monotony of using the same faculties a great many hours each day, without change or diversion, will soon so deteriorate the mind that it will lose its elasticity, its power to rebound, and the brain will operate in a perfunctory manner, instead of with strong, vigorous action, and will produce nothing original or great.

A multitude of people, however, lose the very good they are seeking in their recreation by indulging in pleasures which demoralize, weaken, and which, instead of making them fresher and stronger for their next day's work, leave a demoralizing reaction and exhaust their vitality.

Those people confuse fun with dissipation. Anything which lessens your self-respect, which makes you think a little less of yourself, is dissipation—not good, wholesome fun.

SCHOOLBOY "HOWLERS"

Here are some fresh schoolboy "howlers," culled from the "University Correspondent":—

"Herrings go about in shawls."

"The German Emperor is called the Geysir."

"The strength of the British Constitution lies in the fact that the Lords and Commons give each other mutual cheek."

"Queen Elizabeth rode a white horse from Kenilworth through Coventry with nothing on, and Raleigh offered her his cloak."

"Ben Johnson is one of the 'three highest mountains in Scotland.'"

"Mr. John Burns was one of the claimants to the Throne of Scotland in the reign of Edward I."

A Useful Work

In the fifty-second annual report of the Metropolitan Drinking Fountain and Cattle Trough Association it is mentioned that during last year 611 cattle troughs, 921 drinking fountains, and 1,045 dog troughs were in public use. This society is supported entirely by voluntary subscriptions.

Adventure of a Trouser-Skirt

In Venice, as in other parts of the Continent, the populace will not countenance the trouser-skirt. A wearer of this latest freak of fashion had to take flight in a gondola while the proprietor of a cafe kept the menacing crowd at bay by means of a barricade of tables and chairs.

Coach and Four Revived

This year sees a recrudescence of the old coach and four, whose romantic appearance is thought likely to appeal to overseas visitors. Four coaches made their first trips on a recent day—the Old Times to Brighton, Venture to Hampton Court, New Times to Guildford, and the Reynard to Windsor.

General Booth's Eyesight

When General Booth visited Nottingham recently to open a Salvation Army home in the district in which he was born, he said his medical advisers would not at present hear of an operation for the removal of the cataract from his remaining eye, holding that a little sight was better than none.

Haven for Lost Dogs

Since the Battersea Temporary Home for Lost and Starving Dogs was established in 1860 over a million dogs have received food and shelter. Last year close on 27,000 lost dogs were received. Of these 1,610 were restored to their owners, and 2,980 found new homes, while 22,467, mostly old, diseased, and dangerous animals, were painlessly destroeyd.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

TWO BATHERS DROWN

Season For Fatalities Opens Early in Toronto.

Percy L. Rouse, Aged 21, a Traveler For the W. R. Brock Co., Goes In Swimming In the Humber River and Succumbs to a Cramp—Alexander Eagleson, Aged 9, Is Carried Over His Depth In Don River.

Toronto, May 22.—Earlier than usual the drowning season was ushered in yesterday, when a man and a boy in the east and west ends of the city paid the price of recklessness within a few hours of each others. The victims were Percy L. Rouse, aged 21, city traveler for the W. R. Brock Co., whose home is at 73 Howard avenue, and Alexander Eagleson, aged 9, 163 Shipper avenue.

In the morning a party of young men from the Parkdale Canoe Club paddled up the Humber River in their canoes to the old mill, which they reached shortly after 12 o'clock. They decided to bathe, despite the coldness of the May waters. Percy L. Rouse and his boating partner, a young man named Walm, dived in about 100 yards below the mill, and stayed in for some time, the chilly waters apparently not diminishing their ardor. Of a sudden, however, Rouse threw up his hands and went under. Walm immediately went over to help him, but could not find his friend for nearly five minutes. With the assistance of others, he then dragged him to shore, and administered first aid. The artificial respiration was kept up for nearly an hour and a half, but as there was no sign of life the young man's heart evidently having been too weak to respond, the work was given up.

Young Rouse had only joined the canoe cub a few weeks ago, but was an ardent boatman and a good swimmer. An inquest will probably be held.

Carried by Current.

After Sunday school was out, a party of five boys from east end churches hurried up the Don to a point near Taylor's paper mills, about three miles north of Gerrard street. Young Alexander Eagleson of 163 Skipper avenue, aged 9 couldn't swim, but he went in with the others. Hardly had he been in the water a minute when the current carried him over his depth and he floundered about helplessly. His companions followed him along the shore, but were afraid to venture out after him. When the lad sank they told some farmers on the riverside and the body was recovered further on. It was taken to Ingram's undertaking rooms.

Coroner Dr. W. A. Young is investigating, but it is not probable that an inquest will be held.

Hollinger Plant Gutted.

Porcupine, May 22.—Ignited by the bush fires, the dynamite magazine on the Hollinger property exploded, breaking the pipes, and the whole plant was gutted by the flames. Mr. L. K. Timmins, who is here, said that the loss on the Hollinger property is $70,000. The buildings on the McIntyre property have also been burned.

The district around Pearl Lake has been swept by the flames, and the settlement around Aura Lake has been completely wiped out.

Two houses and a general store were burned at South Porcupine. The schoolhouse at Porcupine, reported burned on Friday night, was saved.

Construction gangs on the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway fought the fires on the right of way.

It rained hard on Friday night, and this considerably checked the flames. All the fires were out by Saturday night.

Twenty Millions For Pagans.

London, May 22.—In the name of education and the church, an appeal has been made for one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to further the educational plan of the Church of England, the Evangelical Free Churches of Great Britain and the Church of Scotland, represented by the All-India committee for work among the Hindu and Mohammedan subjects of Great Britain in India.

According to the many eminent churchmen forming this committee, an appropriation of this kind is obsolutely essential to those who would make headway against paganism in England's Indian possessions. Over a quarter of a million dollars was subscribed within half an hour after a report of the committee had been made public.

Tried to End Life.

Toronto, May 22.—In a fit of despondency Thomas Martin, 40 years of age, 21 Clarence Square, took part of the contents of an one-ounce bottle of laudanum Saturday afternoon.

He was found unconscious on a bench in the square by Policeman McCoy and removed to St. Michael's Hospital in the police ambulance.

There, at first, it was thought that he could not survive, but after several hours' work he was brought around. Martin is a single man and is employed by the Toronto Sanitary Towel Co.

Need More Power.

Kingston, May 22.—Hon. Adam Beck has written Ald. Elliott stating that the Hydro-Electric Commission has an engineer going through eastern Ontario municipalities, and says that more power will be required than at first estimated. It will probably be late in the fall before anything further is heard from the commission.

Kingstonian Hurt In Cleveland.

Kingston, May 22.—Edward Clark, son of J. E. Clark, of the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario Navigation Co., was struck by an automobile in Cleveland and badly injured. He will recover. He was getting off a street car when an automobile on the wrong side of the road hit him.

FEAR NEW PAPER.

Ottawa Le Temps Refuses to Be Directed By the Bishop.

Montreal, May 22.—The French-Canadians who were opposed to the appointment of Mgr. Gauthier of Kingston to be Archbishop of Ottawa now see danger in an alleged plan of his grace to establish a French daily in the capital. The Revue Franco Americaine says his grace of Ottawa called to his palace the other day the representative of one of the French-Canadian papers in Ottawa, when the following dialogue is alleged to have taken place:

Mgr. Gauthier: Is your paper a Catholic journal?

"Yes, sir, it is."

"Then," replied Mgr. Gauthier, "you have no objection to accepting episcopal direction."

"On certain questions, your grace; but the newspaper desires to conserve its entire liberty of action."

"All right, then, if you do not see fit to accept my direction you will see another newspaper started in Ottawa."

The same authority states that Mgr. Gauthier has already given the direction of the proposed newspaper into the hands of a French priest from old France, and The Revue Franco-Americaine state that it would not be at all surprising if the newspaper will be quite luke-warm in the defence of French-Canadian rights in this country.

ELEPHANT JUMPS CIRCUS.

Mussed Up the Scenery In the Vicinity of Ingersoll.

Woodstock, Ont., May 22.—One of the large elephants belonging to Howe's London circus did the disappearing act in Ingersoll yesterday morning. Its going was not noticed by the attendants, who were all busy in setting up the show there.

Shortly after seven o'clock, however, he was missed and examination of the neighborhood disclosed the fact that he had done considerable damage before leaving the town in a southerly direction. Gardens were trampled and fences torn down as by a cyclone and evidence led to the belief that the brute had gone in the direction of Verschoyle.

A search was instituted, and after some time news reached town that the elephant was safe in the bottom of a ditch one mile north of Verschoyle, six miles from town, and was unable to get out. Horses on the road were terrorized by his trumpeting, and farmers found difficulty in getting them to go past, though the beast was some distance away. Men are at work trying to dig the elephant out, but the job is proving very difficult.

Ultimatum to Senate.

Washington, May 22.—What is practically an ultimatum was served on the Senate yesterday by the Democratic leaders of the House, that there must be a vote in the Senate at this session on Canadian reciprocity, on the farmers' free list bill and on the revised wool tariff.

Provided these terms are met the House will agree to a recess from July 1 to Oct. 1, otherwise the Senate will be held in continuous session throughout the dog days by the House refusing to adjourn.

The Democrats do not expect that the Senate will ratify all their tariff legislation of the special session, but they want a record vote, it is declared, whether affirmative, or negative, on the three principal measures—reciprocity, the free list and the wool tariff.

Senator Burton of Ohio declared on Saturday that this word had been communicated to the Senate from the House side and that, in his opinion, should the House leaders adhere to this policy the prospects of a recess were not very bright.

A Critical Time.

London, May 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—To the Manchester Saturday preference demonstration Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain wrote: "The present is the critical time for our preference policy in view of the proposed reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States. Advantages ought to be taken of the imperial conference to make some satisfactory offer to Canada and the other dominions. I still believe it is the only way the Empire can be strengthened and kept together. The English have this opportunity. Perhaps it is the last."

Scare For the Sultan.

Constantinople, May 22.—During the Selamlik procession on Friday a party of boisterous Kurds rushed the sultan's carriage to present a petition to the ruler. The sultan was so badly frightened that he fainted. The Kurds were arrested but liberated later after they had explained their intentions.

FRENCH MINISTER DEAD

M. Berteaux, Secretary of War, Killed by Monoplane.

Aviator Loses Control at Start of Paris to Madrid Race and Plunges Into Group of Notables and Kills M. Berteaux, Seriously Injures Premier Monis and Slightly Hurts Two Others.

Paris, May 22.—France yesterday paid another and terrible toll in her magnificent endeavor to attain supremacy in the art of aviation, when a monoplane, the driver of which lost control, plunged into a group of members of the Cabinet who had gathered to witness the start of the Petit Parisien race from Paris to Madrid, killing the Minister of War, and injuring the Prime Minister, his son, and a well-known sportsman.

A large number of other persons of note had narrow escapes from injury.

The accident occurred on the aviation field at Issy Les Molineux, and was witnessed by two hundred thousand persons.

M. Trail was piloting a monoplane. With him in the car was M. Bonnier, a passenger. Neither of these men were injured. The machine was wrecked.

PREMIER MONIS.

Minister of War Berteaux was horribly mangled. The swiftly revolving propeller cut off cleanly his left arm, which was found ten feet away from the spot where he was struck, the back of his head was crushed in, his throat gashed and the whole of his left side cut and lacerated.

Premier Monis was buried beneath the wreckage of the monoplane. He was taken out as quickly as possible and examined by military surgeons, who found he had sustained compound fractures of two bones in the right leg; that his nose was broken; his face badly contused and that there were bruises on the breast and abdomen.

M. Deutsch and M. Monis, jr., were not seriously hurt.

Among those who had narrow escapes from injury was M. Lepine, the prefect of police.

Premier Monis and Minister Berteaux and their party arrived at the aviation field about 6 o'clock, shortly after Roland Garros, M. Beaumant and M. Gibert had started in the race, headed in the direction of Angouleme, capital of the department of Charente.

The great line of spectators bordering the flying was being held rigid by a large force of soldiers, who, however, permitted the Ministerial party and some half hundred other persons of distinction to walk across the field to a point where they could get a better view down the course and see the airmen as they rose from the starting point and flew in their direction.

Trail's monoplane swooped toward the earth at the impulse of an air flurry and it appeared as though the aviator was about to dash into the cavalry. The pilot's attention seem momentarily to have been diverted from his course and he make a quick turn to the left, towards where the party of officials were standing. Then he lost control of the craft altogether and it dashed violently into the Ministerial group.

The impact knocked M. Berteaux ten feet away, where he lay in a pool of blood, badly mangled, while under the wreckage of the monoplane lay Premier Monis, his son and M Deutsch. Trail and M. Bonieur emerged from the wreck uninjured.

A scene of frightful confusion followed the fall of the monoplane. From all parts of the aviation field arose cries of alarm and dismay, and tens of thousands of persons broke through the lines and moved towards the scene of the accident. The cavalry, however, by repeated charges, managed to clear the field and the injured men were given first aid by the field surgeons. From the first it was seen that M. Berteaux was fatally hurt, and that M. Monis was seriously injured. After the Ministers had been cared for, the surgeons dressed the wounds of those who had received minor bruises.

M. Dupuy, immediately after the disaster, gave out word that the race should be suspended. M. Lepine issued a formal order to that effect, stating that it would be impossible to continue, for a large part of the aviation field was covered by vast crowds. Late in the afternoon, however, the aero club decided that the six airmen, who had not started yesterday should have an opportunity to do so to-day.

M. Fallieres summoned his Cabinet, and M. Cruppi, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was designated to fulfil the duties of Minister of War, pending further developments, and temporarily to act as head of the Cabinet.

GERMAN WEEK IS OVER

Kaiser Wilhelm and Party Leave England For Home.

Best of Feeling Has Prevailed In the Capital During the Stay of the German Emperor and King and Kaiser Are Expected to Bring Countries Together—Veto Bill Is Now In the Lords, But Peers Are Stubborn.

London, May 22.—The "German week" which was brought to a close by the departure of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern from Sheerness yesterday, has been full of promise, potency and good feeling. Splendid functions, like the dedication of the Victoria monument, the command performance at the Drury Lane Royal Theatre, and the court ball, have been less significant than the cordiality displayed by the two royal families and the personal interest taken by the London crowds in the movements of the German emperor and empress and their daughter.

King George has seemed delighted to make the German emperor prominent, and the relations between them have appeared intimate and unclouded with suspicion. King Edward never seemed to trust his brilliant nephew, and inevitably they were rivals in continental diplomacy. King George and the German emperor are drawn together by mutual affection, and apparently prefer to be considered allies in bringing the two nations into closer and friendlier relations.

Momentous are the issues between the House of Parliament, politics are neglected in the pageantry and social excitement of the most brilliant season London has ever known.

Lord Lansdowne's bill will be read for the second time on Monday, after the Government peers have walked out of the House and irreconciliable Tories have expressed their dissent. It is not likely to emerge from committee. The Opposition leaders will be satisfied with forcing the Government bill out.

By formulating a definite reform scheme the Parliament bill will be carried to the second reading by Lord Morley, and Lord Haldane will take charge of it in commttee. Even if Lord Crewe returns to the House after Whitsuntide, Hotspurs on the Unionists' side are talking confidently of the certainty of defeating the measure, and prominent members of the Upper House are declaring that surrender is impossible.

Mr. Balfour has stopped with the demand that a referendum on home rule shall be the price paid for the acceptance of the Parliament bill. This was the point on which the conference broke down last November. Mr. Redmond vetoed the demand then, and would do it again.

The Lords will challenge the Government to create 500 puppets. If they make a determined fight for the referendum on home rule they are more likely to employ dilatory tactics and to attempt to wear out the patience of the Prime Minister by a prolongation of the session.

The spirit of the coronation season is against them. The country is weary of constitutional controversy.

Rebels Use Bombs.

Cuernavaca, Mexico, May 19.—(Delayed in transmission.)—The federal garrison, under Col. Munguiat to-day was forced to evacuate Cuatla, twenty miles south of here, after a fierce four days' battle with a force of rebels commanded by Col. Seapata. The federals retreated to this city, where they arrived to-night.

The rebels showed great bravery and are said to have lost over 100 men killed and wounded.

Cuernavaca, Mexico, May 19.—The rebels repeatedly attacked the federal defences and eventually the Government troops, unable from weariness and loss of sleep to withstand the assaults any longer, retired from Custala, making their escape through an aqueduct which supplied the city with water.

The federal loss was 18 men killed. The rebels used dynamite bombs with which they blew up many of the principal buildings. The insurrectos are under the command of Col. Zatata, and it is feared he will follow up his advantage and march upon Cuernavaca. Orders have been issued to strengthen the already heavy fortifications in the streets here.

Cuatla was surrounded last Saturday. The rebel demand that the garrison surrender being refused the attack began on Sunday. The federals were in strong positions commanding the street approaches, and in the repeated furious assaults the rebels lost heavily before they were finally successful in dislodging them.

Thirty-Four Years a Judge.

Kingston, May 22.—Judge Price will this week celebrate his 34th year on the bench, and in point of service is regarded as the eldest living judge in Canada. He was appointed judge of the County of Frontenac, vice Burrows, resigned, by Earl Dufferin on May 25, 1878, and surrogate judge of the maritime court of Ontario by the Marquis of Lorne on March 3, 1879. He was educated at Newburgh Grammar School, graduated at Queen's as LL.B. in 1863, and was called to the Bar in 1865. He practiced his profession with B. M. Britton, now Justice Britton, and it is significant that the present head of the firm, J. L. Whiting, K.C., was offered a judgeship, but declined for personal reasons, else this firm would have had three judges to its credit.

Ask Cromer to Resign.

London, May 22.—The members of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, decided on Friday night to ask Lord Cromer to resign the vice-presidency of the organization because he upholds vivisection.

Lady Pender said that the fact that Lord Cromer was vice-president caused many persons to refuse to identify themselves with the society.

LADIES GRATEFUL FOR BLOCK DAY GIFTS

List of Collectors and Donors—The Result of The Appeal

The trustees of the Woman's Christian Association acknowledge with sincere thanks the generous response to their "Block Day" appeal in aid of the hospital.

The expense of building is heavy and, while in time, this Institution will, no doubt, pay for itself, they are very grateful for whatever financial aid their friends can give just at present, as they wish to equip the building in a manner that will conduce to the greater comfort of all the inmates as well as the credit of the city which is honored by having such an institution to care for.

The following list embraces the names of those who so kindly gave their services in distributing and collecting the envelopes and of those who contributed $1 and over, as far as has been possible to give them, as in many instances the name of the donor was not given.

If there are any who were overlooked, and still wish to contribute, the treasurer, Mrs. Ada L. Coulson, will be happy to receive, and credit their donations.

CONFIRMATION AT EMMANUEL

Bishop Fallows Administered the Rite to Twelve Persons Yesterday

Rev. Bishop Fallows, D. D., L. L D., preached both morning and evening in Emmanuel Church yesterday There was a large congregation in the evening, when fifteen persons were admitted to the communicating membership of the church; twelve of them by rite of confirmation.

A large number partook of the communion of the Lord's Supper.

The eloquent and instructive sermon in the morning was from 2 Cor., xii:7.—"A Thorn in the Flesh." Before beginning the sermon the Bishop referred to to the wide spread interest in universal peace, and also to Empire Day and Victoria Day and what they commemorate. At the close of the service the National Anthem was sung.

The Bishop's theme in the evening was "Go Up Higher." Prov. xxii:4.

Humility was the ground and foundation from which all true advancement proceeded. By a seeming paradox humility is the avenue to glory. "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." The Kingdom of nature can only be entered only as one enters the Kingdom of Heaven: by becoming a little child."

It was philosophic humility which made Socrates aver that the oracle was right in declaring him to be the wisest of men, as it was Christian humility that made St. Paul say "When I am weak then am I strong" The discourse was enriched with many illustrations and classic quotations. The venerable preacher waxed eloquent in the closing paragraphs of the sermon. He said "I know all things are possible to him that believeth." Onward and upward in the knowledge of God's eternal laws, and boundless love and joyous service he goes, and humility is with him in every buoyant step. He reaches the land of Beulah, whose air is fragrant with the perfume of flowers and vocal with singing of birds, and from it he sees the new Jerusalem—the Home Beyond. Over the pearly entrance he reads, "Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and enter into the gates of the City."

Humility is leading him to undescribable honor. He hears the trumpet call, "Come in come in, eternal glory thou shalt win." and then he enters into the joy of his Lord.

The Bishop left for Ottawa by the noon train.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE RED MILL.

Fresh from its triumphs of a year's run at the Knickerbocker Theatre, of New York City, followed by engagements of three months each in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, Martin & Emery Co's. complete production of the Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert comic opera masterpiece, "The Red Mill," will be seen at Griffin's Opera House on Tuesday evening, May 23rd. The story is to the point, describing the trouble in which two American tourists find themselves after spending their money too recklessly, after which they unconsciously prove heroes in rescuing a persecuted maiden from an obdurate parent by entering the mill on the blades of a revolving fan, in which manner they escape with the girl on to the ground and restore her to her lover.

Victor Herbert has composed a score of the whistleable kind of music which has already gone through the country with telling effect. Messrs. Martin & Emery have provided an admirable company of some fifty people and have faithfully reproduced scenes and costumes of quaint and picturesque Holland.

Plan now open at Doyle's Drug Store.

You, the Unbelievers—You're Going to be Converted

There are two classes of men not yet wearing "Sovereign Brand" Clothes:

(1) Those who imagine they have to have custom tailoring;

(2) Those who think they are already wearing the "best value" brand of ready-to-wear.

By a series of advertisements to appear in this space, we intend to convince both classes of their error.

You may consider yourself beyond such influence—and we must admit it's hard to put into words the arguments that our clothes themselves so forcibly express.

But read the series anyway—it's going to be worth your while.

A quicker way to be convinced is to go to the shop in your town where Sovereign Brand Clothes are sold, and see for yourself the wonderful value they represent.

MARSH GAVE EVIDENCE AS TO TAX LOT DEALINGS

the offer of Mrs. Smith into Mr Price, but did not tell Mr. Price who Mrs. Smith was. The offer he made was $400. He certainly believed it was a fair offer for the lots in question. The sale was made on Sept 15th, 1910. Mrs. Smith gave witness the money in bills, and he paid same to Mr. Price. He had no personal interest in the transaction whatever. He had not loaned any money to Mrs Smith. There was no truth in the statement that he was making anything out of the lots bought. Mrs Smith bought some lots on Russell St after the above lots were purchased. Mrs. Smith considered it was a good investment to purchase these lots. He put in an offer of $100 on behalf of Mrs. Smith for four lots on Russell Street. Mr. Ackerman, as chairman of the Executive Committee, was sick then and witness was acting as chairman of the Executive Committee. On Sept. 30th Mrs. Smith left for home and she had made no arrangements about the conveyance of these lots. Some days after a Mrs. Willoughby came to see about a lot, and Mrs Marsh wrote to her mother about a power-of-attorney. Before Mrs. Smith went away she intimated that if there was a possibility of the lots being sold to advantage or double her money they could be sold. The first time Mr. Ford made an offer for lots he could not tell. He did not in any way connect Mr. Ford with Mr. Burrell. In fact, did not know him at that time but thought he was a G. T. R. man The first intimation he had that Mr Ford was in any way connected with this matter with Mr. Burrell was through the newspapers. Witness heard Mr. Phillips' evidence in this investigation. He would not have consented to the sale of the lots to Mrs. Smith had he been aware of the fact that the city could have secured a better price. There was no attempt to head any person off in buying lots He remembered having a conversation with Mr. Phillips and the gist of it was that Mr. Phillips asked if he could redeem certain lots for the taxes which were against them. Mr. Price said that Mr. Phillips had made an offer of $9 for certain lots and, upon investigation, it was ascertained the taxes against them was more than Mr. Phillips had offered for them Witness said he thought the lots were worth $25 each. Mr. Phillips never made an offer for lots to witness.

Mr. Morden—Mr. Burrell had intimated in his evidence that he could not purchase certain lots. What do you say to that?

Mr. Marsh—Know nothing about that. Had nothing whatever against Mr. Burrell. Never had any interest whatever in Mrs. Smith's money. The cheque for the payment of the lots purchased from Mrs. Smith was deposited in the Standard Bank by Mrs. Marsh.

To Mr. Butler—There had been some difficulty between the Council and Mr. Burrell about an assessment and in consequence he moved his works out of the city. This did not in any way influence witness with Mr. Burrell in this matter.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness never bought a lot for himself. From March to September in 1910 a number of sales of lots were made. These sales were largely in the vicinity where Mrs. Smith purchased lots. He knew the sale of the Skinner lot. On Sept 9th the deed was given. The city got $200 from Mr. Skinner for that lot and witness knew it when he signed the deed. The lots purchased by Mrs. Smith were directly south of Mr. Skinner's lot. Mrs. Smith secured 2 lots and 2-3 of another lot. The taxes against the lots were $116.34, and she paid $400 for them. Witness did not tell Mrs. Smith anything about the Skinner sale. The offer to Mr. Price was made verbally by witness. Mr. Price wrote the letter and took it up to Mr. Ackerman, who was sick. He did not know of any other offer for those lots by any person. Witness was of the opinion that Mrs. Marsh was with witness when Mrs. Smith was shown the lots in question. Mrs. Smith acted entirely on the advice of witness. The identical money which Mrs. Smith gave witness he paid to Mr. Price. The offer for four lots on Russell Street by Mrs. Smith he put in, but Mrs. Marsh paid in the money. He did not know of any offer being made then for lots on Russell Street. There was no doubt in his mind that this was correct. He could not tell the date when the offer of Mr. Davidson or Mrs. Price was made He considered the offer. He knew it was Mrs. Price. He did not go with Mr. Price to see lots. He instructed the surveyor to lay out Alice and Victoria Streets and extend Chatham Street.

Mr. Carnew—How did these lots seem to move so quick after they were purchased, and were soon resold?

Mr. Marsh—Nothing excepting people wanted them. Mrs. Smith fixed the price she wanted before she went away. Messrs. Clute & Morden did business for witness, also for Mrs Smith. The latter left with Mrs Marsh $180 or $185 to purchase other lots if they could be procured. The instruction for a power-of-attorney was, to his memory, drawn about the 4th of October. It was prepared here and sent to Mrs. Smith in Quebec, and was in her hands some days. It was filled in by a solicitor at Port Fortune. The power-of-attorney was prepared on instruction from Mrs. Marsh. He never paid anything for the power-of-attorney or for instructions. The Russell Street lots were sold by Mrs. Marsh for Mrs. Smith. They were sold about five weeks after the offer was made. Witness and Mr Ford had a conversation about the lots on Russell Street and witness sold the four lots for $300. Mr. Ford made no complaint about the lots or that he had made an offer for them Mr. Ford never made an offer for lots secured by Mrs. Smith before she purchased the same. Mr. Ford made no offer to witness for lots until after the 14th of October. The City Solicitor, as far as witness knew, never had anything to do with preparing conveyances or deeds about city lots Mr. Price did this. Mrs. Smith did seriously consider the idea of building upon some of the lots. As soon as Mr. Price had an offer for a lot he registered it in his book. Witness denied that he and Mr. Price connived in any way in reference to the sale of lots to their relatives and the procurings of powers-of-attorney. The city might possibly have procured more money for these lots than that which was procured, but he could not say that such was the fact. It was generally known that many G. T. R employees were about to move into the city and that lots would be in demand for building upon. This was information everybody he thought knew. Personally he had not made a cent of profit out of the transactions.

To Mr. Mikel—The practice of the Tax Committee was to get as much money as possible for lots for sale by the city. He thought the price paid for the lots by Mrs. Smith was the best sales and prices obtainable then and also the sales to other parties The first he heard that Mr. Burrell was prepared to pay $100 for these lots in question was when he was examined. If he had made such an offer witness had no hesitancy in saying that they would have been sold to him. Never heard Mr. Ford say that Mr. Burrell was desirous of purchasing any of these lots. The resale of lots by Mrs. Smith was about a month after she purchased them.

To Mr. Morden—The same consideration of an offer for the purchase of lots would be given to any person making an offer to purchase.

To Mr. Carnew—Never made a statement that he desired to recompense Mrs. Smith for services she rendered towards witness while he was sick.

To Judge Deroche—If a stranger had made an offer of $400 for these lots which Mrs. Smith purchased he (witness) would certainly have sanctioned the selling of them.

ALD. FLAGLER.

Ald. Flagler was examined by Mr. Mikel—Witness knew nothing about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs Marsh and Price, and never heard of them at the time. Witness spoke to Mr. Cushing about purchasing some lots on Bleecker Avenue.

To Mr. O'Flynn—These lots were, he understood, what Mrs. Smith bought. He was given a list of lots by Mr. Price.

To Judge Deroche—The price was said to be about $37 or $40 per lot according to the taxes. This was told him by Mr. Price.

To Mr. Carnew—Last summer a number of G. T. R. employees came here from York. Just about the time Mr. A. Skinner commenced to build witness made enquiries about lots on Bleecker Avenue.

The investigation was then adjourned until Saturday afternoon next.

BELLEVILLE MAN GETS A BIG POSITION

Geo. N. Lingham Appointed Manager of the Foreign Department of the National Cash Register Company—Given the Position Because of His Fine Michigan Record

The Detroit Journal of Saturday last says:—

Mr. G. N. Lingham, for over two years the National Cash Register Company's district manager in Detroit, has been appointed foreign manager of that company. His headquarters will hereafter be in Dayton, O.

The new Foreign Manager's promotion was announced at an enthusiastic convention of National Cash Register sales agents held at Detroit, last week. Every territory in District 14 was represented at the convention. This means that the whole of lower Michigan and northern Ohio had delegates present.

The convention was representative. The delegates are business men of standing and reputation in their communities, and all had the same encouraging report to give—namely that of future prosperity.

They recalled past gains in business as the best promise of what is to come. They called attention to the fact that in choosing Mr. Lingham as its Foreign Manager, the National Cash Register Company was getting an up-to-date business man from the most progressive section of the United States—Michigan.

First to Develop Foreign Field.

The speakers pointed out that the Company was one of the first big American business organizations to develop the foreign field.

This typically American organization now extends into every civilized country. Mr. Lingham will be called upon to extend and develop the N. C. R. business in every continent. It is a matter of patriotic pride that National Casch Registers now are sold in the Far East and Near East, as well as in occidental Europe.

It takes a big man to master such a business. Mr. Lingham is that man. His work in Michigan gave proof that he is possessed of executive ability of the highest order.

Mr. Lingham is a son of ex-Mayor Lingham, of this city. His good fortune, won by energy and capacity, will be rejoiced over by a host of his friends in Belleville.

THE VICTIM OF A WATERY GRAVE

First Drowing Accident of the Season Occurs Last Night—A Young Man Named Clarence H. Pound the Unfortunate Victim

The first drowning accident of the season occurred here last evening, the victim being a young man named Clarence H. Pound.

It appears that the victim, in company with Patrick and J. Hall, about 8.30 last night, went out to the end of the Grand Junction dock for the purpose of having a swim. Pound, we are informed, was by no means an expert swimmer and had been in the water but a short time when he was evidently seized with a cramp. He came up to the surface, but made no outcry, and immediately sank to rise no more. His companions made an outcry, but owing to the spot where the accident occurred being some distance away it was some time before assistance was secured. Messrs. Thomas Carter and Walter Kellar were among those who were attracted to the scene of the fatality. By the aid of a pike pole, in about seven or eight feet of water, they located the body, and Patrick Hall, by diving, was able by following the pike pole downward, to reach the body and bring it to the surface. Pound by this time had been in the water for about an hour. The body, after being recovered, was taken to Tickell's undertaking establishment and prepared for burial. Dr. Yeomans, coroner, after being informed of the facts of the case, did not deem an inquest necessary.

The victim of the unfortunate affair was a son of Mr. John R. Pound, who resides in the third concession of Thurlow Township. He was in his 21st year and was the eldest of a family of eight children. For some time the deceased had been in the city, having for some months been employed about the County House of Refuge. Recently he went to work at the Walker Foundry. Those personally acquainted with him refer to him as an examplary young man, quiet and of a retiring disposition. He was a member of the Home Circle Society and identified with the Methodist Church. His untimely death is sincerely regretted by a host of friends.

In addition to the bereaved parents, four brothers, Frankland, George, Harry and Roy, and three sisters, Selina, Grace and Martha, all at home, survive him.

The remains were to-day taken to the parents' home in Thurlow Township and will be interred to-morrow.

NEW HANGMAN IS ENGAGED OUT OF TWENTY-FIVE MEN

MONTREAL, May 22.—In readiness for the fatal work next Friday morning, when Frank Grevola is to be hanged for murder, the hangman who has been engaged for the gruesome task has arrived in Montreal and reported to the sheriff. He is not the man who sprung the trap for Timothy Candy last November, but is a professional whose home is in Detroit.

There were twenty-five applicants for the position of hangman next Friday, and this was the man selected The majority of applications were from the west, especially from ranchers and cattlemen.

Word was received from Ottawa this afternoon that the Department of Justice has declined to interfere and that Grevola will hang on Friday. The application of Mr. Dan McAvoy for a postponement of the date of sentence has been denied and Grevola has no further hope of a reprieve.

The scaffold was completed this morning and Father Caramello has applied for the body of the condemned man, but as he is not a relative of Grevola, his request has been referred to the Attorney-General Should it be refused, the body will be interred in the yard of the jail

C. N. R.'S SURVEYS FOR LAST LINK

TORONTO, May 22.—The Canadian Northern's New Ontario link is rapidly being prepared for the contractors. The surveys of the first 240 miles west from Sellwood have been "trued up," and may be said to be all ready for construction to commence. One hundred and fifty miles of location east from Port Arthur is likewise ready to be tendered upon. Work on the intervening section is now going on.

The final improvements on location, grade and curves are being made with that carefulness in preparatory work for which the C.N.R. construction is noted. From Selwood east the survey has been put well under way. The survey camp is now at work a short distance behind Port Arthur.

Sir Donald Mann this morning was busy considering the tenders for the British Columbia contracts, where 500 miles through the mountains from Port Mann to Edmonton will connect the Pacific coast with the new transcontinental system by 1914.

"How about the Montreal terminals?" asked a reporter.

"Not settled yet," replied Sir Donald. "They have to be approved by the Railway Commission."

DOG HELD THE FORT IN DOOR OF LAUNDRY

TORONTO, May 22.—Suffering from the excessive heat of the past couple of days, a big dog ensconsed itself in the doorway of the Crown Laundry, 9 Gerrard Street east, and with frothing mouth and bared teeth barred the entrance of the proprietor Henry A. Lay, for over an hour this morning.

Strangely enough, the dog did not show any militant tendency until Mr. Lay was within a few feet of the door Then the animal disclosed two well-preserved sets of masticators; and the man wisely backed up to the street. From eight until after nine, repeated attempts were made by persuasion and threats to dislodge the dog from his place of vantage. But the ingenuity of Mr. Lay and a crowd of accommodating neighbors was of no avail, and the police were summoned.

An officer arrived and endeavored to entire the animal from the doorway. But he narrowly escaped a nip on the leg, and with the consent of the owner, sent a revolver bullet into the dog's brain.

REGIMENTAL NOTES

The Regiment will parade on Wednesday, 24th inst., at 7 a. m. for Tactical Field Exercises. Both bands will attend. Refreshments will be served before leaving in the morning, and before returning from the field. By order, D. BARRAGAR, Major, Adjutant.

CANADA IS NOW GROWING A NEW TOWN EVERY DAY

Next Six Months Will See an Average of a Municipality Every Twenty-Four Hours Brought Into Being—Novel Movement to Eliminate Insanity—Conflagrations Numerous

(From our own Correspondent.)

MONTREAL, May 23.—By the end of the coming summer there will be at least one hundred and seventy new towns in Canada, not counting those which come into existence gradually and in the natural course of evolution from clusters of houses, into hamlets and then into towns. The one hundred and seventy will all be in the west. Not for them the humdrum processes of conventional development; they will spring, full-panoplied, into being, with hotels, courthouses, jails and all the modern improvements, on paper, and a small railroad station, a mile or so of siding and unbounded hope and confidence in the future as actual assets. The Canadian Pacific will be responsible for fifty of them, the Grand Trunk Pacific for twenty-four, and the Canadian Northern for ninety-six. It is a fair supposition that all of them will live because of the fostering care of their railroad and that most of them will prosper because the time has come for towns to succeed farms at selected locations on the praries, and the railroads are in a better position to do the selecting than any other instrumentality except land companies. Nor will these railroad towns be the only communities to come into being in the West in the next three or four months, but from their number it is possible to draw some kind of an impression of the method and the speed of Western development.

No More Insanity.

Insanity as a defence in murder trials which have become so common of late years may eventually be eliminated as the result of a novel movement just started here. Figures have been gathered which show that in this city alone there are 2,000 feeble-minded children many of whom will inevitably become members of the criminal class. Statistics show that crime and insanity are on the increase, and that fully one half of the criminals are criminals because of mental or nervous conditions which obtained during childhood. Accordingly it is proposed to catch the potential criminals suffering from some mental or nervous disorder while they are young and cure them before it is too late. To this end it is planned to establish here an institution where feeble-minded children shall be examined and registered since if the condition is recognized soon enough the child can generally be cured. Under the present system the procedure is to send mentally deficient children to a reformatory from which they are generally released in a few months often worse than they were before entering. Under the new plan they will not be released until they are cured. If this proposal does not succeed in eliminating the overworked defence of insanity in criminal cases it is not improbable that a long suffering public will be willing to erect a monument to its sponsor.

Conflagrations Numerous.

Fire alarms have been far in excess this year in comparison with the same period last year. Since Jon. 1st 857 runs were made by the various divisions of the fire brigade, up to May 1st, while during the same period of 1910 the total number was only 636. Up to the first of June, last year the runs made numbered only 807.

CURRENT COMMENT

Feed the flies.

Give them plenty of permanganate of potash.

The way a Southern city has put it is: "If you don't get the fly, the fly may get you."

Mayor Harry Ackreman will pitch two balls at the baseball grounds tomorrow.—Never knew the Mayor to be strong on High Balls.

With a few more days like this we can readily believe we are "getting ours" previous to entering into that happy state from whence no one returns.

Miss Dorothy Campbell, the Canadian lady whose home is in Hamilton, went over to Ireland, where the women golfers were competing for the championship of Great Britain, and won the title. Another case of "Canada first."

Some counterficiters have been traced and captured b the clue afforded by the fact that the lady member of the gang had diamons in her teeth. This should be a warning to members of the only class that would likely to follow such a fashion.

Some people are wondering why the superstructure work on the C.N.R. bridge has not been begun. The reason is that the bridge workers are out on strike since May Day, and until a settlement is effected, little will be done here, or elswhere, in iron bridge construction.—Trenton Courier.

Belleville City Council and citizens have apparently decided to keep Messrs Marsh & Henthorn at home. They have voted the firm $1,500 cash for a site, and are granting them all other concessions asked for, so that Trenton's chances of securing the foundry seem to be at an end. We are sorry, of course, but then, we are not greatly surprised.—Trenton Courier.

A new and hitherto unsuspected source of danger has manifested itself in the death of a horse from the electrification of the iron sheeting of a building in the city. There are within the fire limits, many such buildings, and it is therefore the duty of our civic authorities to take action as is necessary in the premises, otherwise a human life may be the next sacrifice.

A ban was placed on tipping at a mass meeting of bosses and journeymen barbers yesterday at St. Louis Mo. The action comes as the result of an investigation by the officials of the International Union of Journeymen Barbers of America, representing Canada, the United States and Porto Rico. Barbers have for some time complained because their patrons were joining the ranks of the self-shavers.

The fireman is the general utility for emergencies. In Grand Rapids Mich., a few days ago, the firemen turned the hose on a mob. In Germany, the firemen took down from a shed the passengers and crew of Count Zeppelin's wrecked airship. And in Newark some women were so alarmed at a small fire in a school attended by their children that the firemen had to calm them with a stream of water.

The weather man has slipped a cog, sending out July weather in May.

Too hot to walk, too hot to ride,
Too hot for those employed inside.
Too hot to stray, too hot at home,
Too hot the celiar and the dome,
Too hot for joy, too hot to weep,
Too hot to sprinke or to sweep,
Too hot to fish, too hot to row,
Too hot to plow, too hot to hoe.
Too hot to eat, too hot to drink,
Too hot to loaf, too hot to think,
Too hot to write, too hot to blot,
Too hot, too hot, too hot, too hot.

STORM AND WEATHER FORECAST FOR JUNE

Forecasts for June, 1911.—A regular storm period covers the first six days of June. The Mercury and Venus periods also bear upon and intensify disturbances at this period. The crisis of these storms will fall on and touching the 4th and 5th. A low barometer, high temperature and humidity may be put down as foreshading severe storms at this time. Rising barometer and change to fair and much cooler weather will pass eastwardly over the country from the 6th to the 9th.

A reactionary storm period will bring decided storm conditions on and touching the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th. At this period we enter into the June soltice disturbances. This fact, by oversight, is not shown in the diagram, but the solstice period extends from the 10th to the end of June. The full moon on the 11th falls at the central day of the annual magnetic and electric crisis. Within three days of the sunset on the 11th, a maximum of magnetic and electric storms will visit many wide extremes of the earth, attended by phenomenal "earth currents," much volcanic unrest and violent seismic shakes.

A regular storm period extends from the 13th to the 17th, being at the crisis of the Mercury period, and under full strain of the solstice and the Venus periods. Daily thunder storms with an excess of electricity wind, hail and rain may be expected. Tornadoes may be looked for, and your locality may be in their paths, why not? Change to very much cooler will follow about the 16th to 19th.

A reactionary storm period will make itself severely felt on and touching the 20th, 21st and 22nd. This period is at the exact centre of the summer solstice and great electrical manifestations will mark this period and in all this part of the month we may look for an excess of lightning all round the heavens, in early evenings and through the nights. As we have often said, this solstice lightning is very grand and awe-inspiring, but for the most part it is perfectly harmless. Of course the electric bolts of an on-coming thunder storm are fraught with danger, but the noiseless panoramic flashing all over the clouds banked round the horizon these solstice evenings, is as harmless as moon shine—beautiful to behold and full of life and health to the vegetable kingdom as well as to all animate life.

A regular storm period is central on the 26th, the new moon falling on the same day, moon being in perigee and at its greatest north declination. In every probability this will prove one of the most decided jeriods of disturbance during this month. The barometer should be consulted with care as we enter this period, and if it falls to a very low reading—a result to be expected—storms of violent character should be apprehended. All storms during the last half of June will be erratic in character—and will move in directions out of the ordinary, often doubling back over their tracks after they have supposedly passed off to the east. We believe there will be too much rain in June, for best agricultural interests, except in the New England States, and the extreme southern and southwestern sections. A marked seismic period, is central on the 26th, covering the 23rd to the 29th.

SAVED SELF AND DAUGHTER

Mattoon, Ill.—"Will you allow me for the benefit of others who may be in the same condition as I was to make a statement in this paper?"

"I was in very poor health for years was weak, ailing, and all run-down, and had lost weight until I only weighed ninety pounds. I had been undre a physician's care, without any benefit for so long I was discouraged.

About a year ago I decided to try a tonic callde Vinol, concerning which I had heard many favorable reports. I commenced to gain, and increased in weight until now I weigh 127 pounds, am in perfect health— and never felt better in my life.

Then my daughter, who lived in Martinsville, Ind., was an invalid, and no encouragement was held out for her recovery. After my experience with Viol we went to Martinsville and brought her to Mattoon, as she was helpless. When we got her here I put hre on Vinol, with the same good results from its use which I had—she gained in weight, and to-day she is well and strong and feels better than she ever did in her life." Mr.s O. M. Watrous. (We guarantee this letter to be genuine.)

We have for years recommended Vinol as a grand tonic and body-builder, and every year we gain more and more faith in its wonderful virtues. It is crtainly the best and simplest tonic restorative we know of. J. S. McKeown.

FOR SKIN IRRITATION

We Guarantee Relief...Your Money Back if not Satisfied.

We have an ointment possessing extraordinary power to permanently relieve all forms of eczema, skin eruptions, pimples, blotches, ringworm, acne, tetter, scaly scalp, hives, all forms of itching and irritation caused by insect bites. Its power to soothe unlcers, sores and wounds is very pronounced.

We are so positive that Rexall Eczema Ointment is unexcelled for overcoming these ailments that we sell it with our personal promise that it will not cost the user anything unless it in every way gives satisfaction. We exact no promises and obligate the purchaser in no way. You must admit that we could not afford to make such a broad, liberal guarantee, except we are certain we could substantiate our claim.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is a grayish-white, pleasant smelling, antiseptic, cooling, healing salve that is strongly germicidal. It destroys the germs that penetrate the skin and cause eczema and other tormenting skin ailments. A remedy must do that to be effective, for in no other way can such diseases be overcome.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is ideal for the treatment of skin irritations peculiar to children, for barbers' itch and for sore, itching feet.

It is positively the best remedy we know of, and we urge you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

THREE FOURTHS OF PANAMA CANAL DUG

WASHINGTON, May 22.—"Uncle Sam has taken stock of what was accomplished at Panama up to May 4, which day ended the seventh year of canal construction by Americans. Only one-fourth of the great task of excavating remains to be done, for the "ground hogs" have removed 133,000,000 cubic yards from the line of the canal. That leaves 44,000,000 yards to be cut away.

—The placing of the concrete in the locks is more than 52 per cent. completed, the installing of the lock gates has begun and 70 per cent. of the filling for the Gatun dam, which will feed the canal with water, has been done.

The lock gates are staggering in their vast proportions compared with the timber gates of the canal in this country. Each leaf, of which there are two in a gate, is seven feet thick, 65 feet long, and from 47 to 82 feet in height, there being no less than 92 of these leaves. Special hoisting machinery has been installed to place these masses of steel.

One of the unexpected obstacles in the construction was the development of 32 slides in the Culebra cut, within a distance of nine miles, but it is stated that these will not delay the completion of the canal, as the earth can easily be removed by dredges after the water is turned on.

DRAINAGE DEMONSTRATION IN HASTINGS COUNTY

It is very gratifying to see the interest taken in the Drainage Demonstrations being held in Hastings County this year. The district representative at Stirling says his general observation in regard to under-drainage is that a man who begins to put in tile usually continues to increase the area of under drained land. The strange thing about under-drainage is that is is the very best soil which requires it. On some farms there are from five to fifty acres of choice land which give little returns until it is under drained. If neighbors would co-operate in putting in their underdrains it would not be long until a great deal of the low lands would be recovered and produce excellent crops

Our Ocean Highway

The expansion of trade via Canada's great ocean highway to the mother country has of late years been so great both in passengers and freight, that the very highest type of modern steamships are being introduced. And this is no matter for wonder, as not only is the Canadian route much shorter than that via New York, but the Gulf of St. Lawrence cuts off two days from the voyage on the open ocean, and the climate is much cooler than that of the more southerly route.

Consequent on a more general diffusion of these facts of late, new lines of transatlantic steamships have been established, and the existing lines have been improving their service by the employment of larger and more modern vessels, so that the New York route has been surpassed in the transmission of mails, and it will not be long before the voyage from Liverpool to Quebec will occupy less time than that to New York.

Good Advice

A western exchange gives good advice to citizens in the following short, snappy suggestions. They may well be taken to heart by citizens of Belleville:

Plant a tree.

Make yours a spotless town.

Cultivate the backyard.

Join the Horticultural Society.

If each individual householder keeps his own yard clean, plants trees, shrubs and bowers and sows grass seed on his own lot, there will be no cause to complain about the appearance of the city as a whole.

Get the habit of NOT walking across the city boulevards, and of NOT throwing waste paper on the streets.

Get the habit of regarding the city parks and boulevards as your own property, and do what you can personally—and encourage others to do likewise—to keep them looking their best.

If you have not already made a start, start to-day, to do your share towards having our city always look its best.

The Frank Oliver Case

The Mail-Empire puts the matter most plainly when it says:—

"The committee appointed to enquire into the case of Hon. Frank Oliver has met and Mr. Oliver's plan of defence has been mapped out. What Mr. Oliver proposes to do is this. He intends to bring witnesses to prove, first, that the land transaction with the Canadian Northern was a'l right, and, secondly, that he didn't get the $69,000 from that railway company as a reward for the manipulation of the land grant.

But Mr. Oliver underestimates the 'intelligence' of the country if he supposes that this will satisfy public opinion. As has been observed two or three times already, the people are in earnest in their demand for information as to where the money "did" come from. Suppose a trustee who has conducted large transactions for the owner of an estate is found to have received $69,000 from some source unnamed, would the owner be satisfied if the trustee were to prove that the money had not come from one specially mentioned quarter? Would he allow the matter to pass without further notice if it were alleged in defence of his employee that one transaction with the parties who are alleged to have paid the money was honest? Is it not likely that the owner of the estate, far from accepting so obviously incomplete an explanation, would insist that his servant declare where the money came from, and why it was given? It will not do for Mr. Oliver to say, "I did not get the $69,000 from the Canadian Northern. The money was not given because I revived and gave to the railway a land bonus worth many millions that had already elapsed." What is needed is not information of a negative character, but information that is positive. The country must know where the money came from and how it was used.

The proper plan for Mr. Oliver to pursue is that of free and thorough disclosure. Mr. Oliver ought to appear before the committee of enquiry at once and produce his papers showing the giver of the $69,000 and the manner in which the money was employed. He must have the facts at his fingers' ends. He must be able to explain how he came into possession of so large a sum, and why he received it. If there is a reasonable explanation, let it be given. The other course, the ebating about the bush, and the trickery, only serves to awaken suspicions that ought not to be encouraged."

Editorial Notes

DON'T HITCH. Britain has the best and only logical fiscal system in the world, and this is attested by what she has accomplished in spite of great natural difficulties.—Globe, May 22.

Ten years ago the number of emigrants from Scotland to places outside Europe was 8,869. Last year the number was 33,366. The total emigration for the ten years was almost a quarter of a million. The revelation of a rapidly declining population disclosed by the census returns has had an alarming effect upon the public mind, and various are the causes assigned for an exodus which the Master of Elibank describes as "a drain on the nation's manhood, which all Scotsmen will regard as a mortal danger."—Globe, May 22.

And yet Scotland enjoys all the advantages of the "best and only logical fiscal system," which does not seem to work as the Globe and other free traders would fain have it.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Relief from anxiety concerning drought resulted to-day in a sagging market for wheat. Because of special support, however, the May delivery was an exception, closing ⅛c up. Other months finished ⅛c to ½c down. The end of the day left corn at ⅛c to a shade advance; oats, with ¼c to ⅜c decline, and provisions varying from 2½c gain to a loss of a dime.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅜d to ½d higher than Saturday on wheat, and ⅛d to ¼d higher on corn. Berlin closed ¼c higher on wheat, Budapest ⅜c higher, Antwerp unchanged, Havre ⅜c higher, and Hamburg unchanged to ⅜c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 22.—There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, and what few bids came forward were away out of line with values here. Cables on oats were weaker, and the prices bid would bring back over 35½c per bushel for No. 2 Canadian, afloat at Fort William; consequently, no business was done. The local market was weaker, and prices declined ½c per bushel on account of the slow demand and the easier markets in the west. A fair volume of business continues to be done in spring wheat flour for local and country account, and the undertone to the market is firm. There was some inquiry for winter wheat flour from foreign buyers, but the prices bid were just 9d per sack lower than millers were disposed to accept.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, May 22.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 103 carloads, consisting of 2085 cattle, 173 hogs, 17 sheep, 102 calves and 16 horses.

Exporters.

Geo. Campbell bought 308 cattle for export—for London, 100 steers, 1300 lbs. each, at $6; for Liverpool, 208 steers, 1220 lbs. each, at $5.85.

Butchers.

Best loads and lots of butchers, good enough for any market, sold at $5.85 to $6; loads of good, $5.60 to $5.80; medium, $5.30 to $5.50; common, $5 to $5.25; but there were very few cattle in this common class, as will be seen by the many sales given below.

Stockers and Feeders.

Short-keep feeders, $5.60 to $5.90; feeders $5.30 to $5.60; stockers, $5 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Milkers and springers were quoted at $50 to $70 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold at $4 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5.25; rams, $3.50 to $4; yearlings, $5.75 to $6.50; spring lambs, $4 to $6.50; American lambs are quoted at $7 to $7.25 per cwt.

Hogs.

Hogs are higher, at $6.20 for selects, fed and watered, and $5.90 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 22.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 20 were 1250 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1720 hogs and 1415 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning consisted of 800 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 200 calves.

A feature of the trade was the stronger undertone to the market for cattle, and prices since this day week show an advance of 15c per 100 lbs., in spite of the extreme heat which has prevailed during the past few days and the continued discouraging advices received from European sources, cables from Liverpool this week noting a further decline in prices of ½c per pound, which makes a net drop of 1c per pound in the past two weeks, which means that exporters will lose money on their first shipments, which went forward from this port, instead of making some, as they would have done if prices had been maintained around 13½c to 14c per pound, but the hot weather and the increased supplies were too much for the market.

The gathering of buyers on the local market this morning was fairly large, but owing to the very warm weather and the higher prices demanded, the demand for cattle was only fair, and the trade in consequence was only moderately active. Choice steers sold at 6½c; good at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good at 5½c to 5¾c; fair at 5c to 5¼c, and the common at 4½c to 4¾c per pound. A few extra heavy choice bulls brought as high as 5½c to 5¾c, and lower grades sold down as low as 4c to 4½c per pound. Cows of good quality sold at 5¼c to 5½c, and inferior ones at 3¾c to 4c per pound.

Owing to the smaller run of hogs and the keener demand from packers for supplies, a stronger feeling developed in the market, and prices, as compared with those of last Wednesday, show an advance of 10c per 100 pounds. The trade was active, and sales of selected lots were made at $6.75 to $7.85 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

The trade in small meats was quiet; but, as the offerings were limited, a steady feeling prevailed in the market, and prices show no important change. Old sheep sold at $4 to $5, and spring lambs at $5 to $8 each. Calves brought from $2 to $6 each, as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, May 22.—Cattle—Receipts, 3125; market active; 10c to 15c higher; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.40; butcher grades, $5.50 to $6.35; cows, $3.50 to $5.35.

Calves—Receipts, 2500; market active; 25c higher; cull to choice, $5 to $7.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 15,000; market fairly active and steady; choice lambs, $7.40 to $7.50; cull to fair, $4.75 to $7.25; yearlings, $5.50 to $6; sheep, $2 to $5.

Hogs—Receipts, 11,900; market fairly active and steady; yorkers, $6.50 to $6.55; stags, $4.50 to $5; pigs, $6.50; mixed, $6.40 to $6.50; heavy, $6.35 to $6.40; roughs, $5.25 to $5.35.

Barbers to Banish "Tips."

St. Louis, Mo., May 23.—A ban was placed on tipping at a mass meeting of bosses and journeymen barbers Sunday.

The action comes as the result of investigation by the officials of the International Union of Journeymen Barbers of America, representing Canada, the United States and Porto Rico.

Barbers have for some time complained because their patrons were joining the ranks of the self-shavers.

225 Chinamen Murdered.

Eagle Pass, Texas, May 23.—In a desperate fight between Mexican insurrectos, and Chinamen at Torreon, 225 Chinamen were killed. This information was received here yesterday by Sam Wah, owner of the International Hotel at Ciudad Parfirio Diaz, across the river from here.

Of the number of Chinamen killed fifty were off Wah's ranch.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"Go! It'll go like blazes. I'll get a real good man to write the prospectus, a fellow who can rub it in thick and knows how to describe scenery and all that. I'm not going to spare money over this job. The game's worth the candle. As it is, I've been shelling out pretty heavily already. The mining experts had the impudence to suggest to me that they usually worked on the reciprocity plan; the better the pay the better the reports provided. And the way those government robbers required their palms greased was horrible. They have no conscience in Peru. But, after all, what does it matter? I shall see my money back. I am not going to pay for all this. Giuseppe Guelfo knows a dodge worth two of that. When he wants money he goes to the great, open-handed confiding and childish British public and because he asks them they are only too anxious to give."

"It is really so," said Ellis, laughing; "the people believe in you in the most marvellous way. By-thebye Balbi surprised me."

"In what way?"

"I should have thought he would have wanted more."

"So he did, but he didn't get it. He'd no fool to deal with in me."

"No, that's right enough. But why would he not take part payment in shares? I didn't think that looked as if he had much faith in his property."

"Said he didn't understand such things and would rather have the dollars. And, if it comes to that, I'll put some down in his name just to bait the public. Don't worry yourself; we've done with him. He'll be content with what he's got, and will spend his life grubbing about here until he gets killed in some of these holes he's always exploring.. He's no business man; I soon found that out. Vipan and Balbi are now wiped clean off the slate and Giuseppe Guelfo takes their places. He's eaten them up, devoured them—d'you see? They are no more."

"Then it's a good thing for us."

"It is a good thing. One of the best we've got hold of, my boy. You wait till we get back to London and see how I will work it. Now, let's have another drink and we'll give our minds a holiday till we see the City again. They deserve it. They've worked hard enough of late."

"Right you are! I'm quite agreeable." And no more was said of the matter.

Next afternoon Ellis took a walk by himself into the country to one of the massive blocks of ruins which still remained as monuments of the building and engineering skill of a forgotten race, those marvellous builders who, in the dark ages, had from somewhere learnt how to trim ponderous masses of rock into mathematical exactitude and raise and lay them as truly and correctly as the most highly-trained masons of modern times. He was deeply interested in these relics of the past, and much of his spare time had been given to visiting and examining the many which were still to be found round Cuzco.

At length, somewhat wearied with his walk, he turned into a small posada by the wayside, and sitting down in the cool, stone-walled public room, what in England we should have designated the bar—he called for a flask of wine of the country, and lighting his pipe, he proceeded to rest himself.

He happend to glance at the wall against which he leaned, and started violently, for there, not a yard away from him, roughly scratched on the smooth surface of the stone, was the figure of the pentagon surrounded by the circle, while beneath it was the one word, "Larco."

The attendant approaching at that moment with his wine, he pointed to the sign and asked, in the best Spanish he was capable of, what it meant.

The girl smiled, looked at it and with a shrug of her shoulders said it was nothing; only some nonsense some visitor had drawn. Yet Ellis did not pass over it so lightly. It had given him a shock. It was so odd that this symbol, which he had only seen once before, and then on the other side of the world, should here figure on the wall of a country inn. And the word, "Larco," beneath it was the name of the village in which lay the mine which was the object of their long journey.

Could it be that the man whom he had first seen in Guelfo's Paris office and later on board the Dover boat had been here before them, also on the track of Balbi and his property? Ellis was puzzled and far from feeling completely at ease. It was an enigma, the solution of which he could not grasp.

The girl, evidently amused at the visitor's curiosity, returned with the landlord of the inn and pointed out the mark to him. He looked at it intently for a few seconds and then, without uttering a word, left the room

Ellis sat for some time over his wine and when he felt rested, prepared to leave. At the door he encountered the landlord, who, taking off his combrero, said,—

"The senor was interested?"

"Yes," replied Ellis; "it was a curious mark."

"It is not a good one," replied the man, apprehensively. "It will have to be removed. I did not know it was there!"

"What does it mean?"

He shrugged his narrow shoulders and answered, "It is not good. My house is respectable. It should not be there."

"Do you know who traced it?"

"How should I? I am not always in the room."

"I have seen it before, and cut out of metal."

"Ah! was it in Cuzco?"

"Cuzco! No; the other side of the world—in Paris."

"Then let the senor beware. It bodes no good to have seen it. Beware!" he added, holding up his finger.

PLUCKY POLICE AND BURGLARS

Desperate Encounters of Recent Years Recalled by the Murder of the Houndsditch Police

The attempted burglary of a jeweller's shop in Houndsditch, which resulted in the death of three constables at the hands of the baffled miscreants, may, in the suddenness of its awful catastrophe, be said to stand alone in the annals of English crime. It surpasses even the tragedy of January 23rd, 1909, when Constable Taylor lost his life while gallantly striving to apprehend two Poles, named Hefeld and Lepidus, who, after a desperate resistance, involving two deaths, besides numerous injuries to others who had taken up the pursuit, finally, by shooting themselves, evaded justice.

Police Heroes

Wheatley and Wright, having successfully burgled the warehouse of Mr. Elsbach, a Hoxton furrier, were accosted by a policeman, who, despite a bad thigh wound from a revolver bullet, managed to apprehend the former. Wright contrived to escape, and, having shot down a constable who attempted to seize him, gained the roof of a block of houses lying between East Road and City Road, where, after a struggle, he was captured.

A narrow escape was that of Constable Robinson, when on November 17th, 1878, he attempted to arrest a burglar who had just quitted a house in St. John's Park Blackheath. Five shots from a revolver were aimed at the policeman, who, although severely wounded, retained his hold, threw his man to the ground, and ultimtaely, after a desperate struggle, secured him.

Not so fortunate was an officer named Cole, who, on the night of December 1st, 1882, being on duty in Ashwin Street, saw a man clambering over the wall in front of the Baptist Chapel. Thinking that all was not right he proceeded to arrest the suspect, who, in his turn, attempted to break lose, and on finding that he could not effect his purpose, whipped out a revolver and fired four shots, the last of which took fatal effect, so that when two constables who had been summoned arrived on the spot they found their comrade lying dead.

Concealed in Wagon

Although fortunately unattended by any tragic consequence, the pursuit of Fowler and Milsom, who were wanted for the murder of Mr. Smith at Muswell Hill Lodge in 1896, was as exciting as it was persistent. The miscreants, having left London, made for Liverpool, whence they travelled across country to Cardiff, where they threw in their lot with a showman named Sinclair. From Cardiff they moved to Pontypool, Bristol, and Swindon, whence they were traced by the police, now close upon their heels, to Chippenham, and Bath, at which town, at a house in Monmouth Street, they were finally run to earth.

Fraught with even more sensational incidents was the comparatively brief chase after the Netherly Hall burglars. Thrice when stopped by the police the miscreants answered with revolver shots, on the third occasion killing a constable named Byrnes. They then gained Penrith Station and were noticed by a guard concealed beneath the tarpaulin of an empty wagon, as the train was starting. On reaching Tebay, the guard, as there were no police at hand, called together all the railway officials available, who surrounded the wagon where the men were concealed. Finding themselves discovered, the ruffians made a desperate bid for freedom. One, indeed, did escape, only to be captured a little later; but the other two were secured and tied to telegraph posts, there to await the arrival of the police.

CORONATION LETTER

Old London Is in Festive Mood, and Will Be Most Generous in Hospitality to Her Guests From All Parts of the Empire

(Special Correspondence).

London, May 6.—London in May Day is accustomed to present such joyous nights as no other great city in the world can produce. The early summer sunshine gives fresh color and brightness to the parks, whose foliage and splendor make the vast crowds everywhere in the opulent streets forget the winter of their discontent. Everybody is now in festive mood, not alone because the merry month has come again, but because the Coronation season has begun, and the curtain has been raised on the happy prologue of this Imperial theme.

The magnificent preparations in the metropolis seem already to be well ahead. In all parts of the City the huge stands are practically completed. On every former occasion of vast processions and crowds the local authorities have usually left such preparations to the last few days, but now they appear to be exercising unusual care lest anything should be rushed at the last minute. Every provision is being made for the comfort of sightseers and for public safety. How private citizens are joining in all the preparations for the great Imperial event may be understood when it is stated that a commercial building, close to the Mansion House, is spending some £1,500 on illuminations alone on Coronation Night. The dominant idea seems to be to make it plain to all the colonial and foreign strangers within her gates that London is, beyond all question, the most opulent and lavish of cities as well as the most generous in her expression of loyalty to the King, and of her hospitality to her guests from all parts of the Empire.

The first of the interesting appearances of the King and Queen in London is that fixed for May 12th, when they will drive over Westminster Bridge, through Walworth Road and Camberwell Road, a squalid industrial "slummy" neighborhood. Thence they will go through South London amid crowds of poor working folk, whose dull lives are so rarely varied by the sight of a Royal pageant. That the King should understand his metropolis he must needs see South London, whereas in the East End poverty chiefly abounds. The Royal procession, as in other European cities, needs no military guard, for the people, for all their shabbiness, are not the stuff of which rebels are made. They recognize cheerfully that even in London the poor we have always with us, and that both King and Parliament are now more than ever strenuous to clear away the slums and to establish social reform.

Till the east and west meet in London the rich and poor will be one people in their loyalty to the King and the Empire. In the Coronation season it is the pride of all classes that London harbors no dangerous or lawless classes, and that as the King drives through the shabby districts and even through the slums he feels proud and grateful for the loyal cheers of his poor.

Past the slums of the Walwoth Road and Camberwell His Majesty will drive in open carriage on to the quaint village of Dulwich, beloved of Thackeray and Dickens; past the mediaeval "College of God's Gift," which connects us with the generous founder of Shakespeare's days. In semi-state, drawn by four horses and outriders, the King and Queen will reach the outlying Crystal Palace on Sydenham Hill, which over 600 years ago was the scene of the first international Exhibition in Hyde Park of 1851, and is to-day revived in all its former glory and shows the Coronation Festival of Empire, whose grand opening is to be celebrated by a concert attended by the King and Queen. The arrival of their Majesties well be heralded by a fanfare of trumpeters in Elizabethan uniform. As the Royal carriage passes through the shabby route in Walworth and Camberwell their guard of honor as they go through triumphal arches will be some 400,000 school children of South London schools, and as they reach the grounds of the Crystal Palace, they will be received by thousands of pageanteers in historical costumes.

The Grand Concert will commence at three o'clock. The assembled audience will include the Royal party, ambassadors, and other representamembers of the Imperial Parliament, Peers, and representatives of the Colonial Governments. The Imperial Choir will number some 4,500 voices, and the orchestra will be composed of 350 of the best professional musicians in London, and the conductors will include world-wide celebrities such as Sir Hubert Parry, Sir A. Mackenzie, Sir Henry Wood; and the organist will be Mr. Walter Hedgcock, and the pianist Mr. Theodore Flint.

To Londoners the appearance of the streets since the beginning of this month, has been made remarkable by the invasion of Colonial and American and foreign visitors, who have come early that they may see the whole show and study every aspect of the brilliant scenes from the rise of the curtain. To see the crowds here is a familiar sight, but such crowds! The sight of our Colonial cousins trooping to London's great family party is becoming every day more impressive, even for the most blase cockneys.

The City, so long familiar with startling schemes of decoration, is fast becoming a city of unwonted splendor, and the man in the street is lost in wonder. The masts going up everywhere are unusually tall, and overhead decorations will all be level with the roofs. Venetian masts with cross bars and festoons of green will be completed on the eve of the Coronation, for not till then is our British climate to be depended upon to give us Royal weather.

Fleet Street and the City will display the City crest, and at the junction of each bar and mast a laurel wreath will be fastened, and at the top will be a figure of Fame sounding his trumpet. Standing six feet high a bronzed shield with the arms of the Corporation will be conspicuous, but there will be no overhead decorations in the historic Fleet Street, as the buildings are so varied in height.

In St. Paul's Churchyard instead of the City crest, the four patron saints of the Kingdom will be displayed, the Venetian masts will be decorated as in Fleet Street, but they will be surmounted with crowns and Prince of Wales' feathers. In Cannon Street and Queen Victoria Street the City masts will be decorated with evergreen and wisteria.

London Bridge is to have real trees alternated with lattice pillars. Facing the Mansion House the City crest is to be hung in mid air, holding in its claws a huge canopy of purple and gold, surrounded by the shields of the various colonies of the Empire, and from these shields the purple and cloth of gold draperies will be suspended. These hangings will be fastened to Corinthian pillars in white and gold. The shields of the City Guilds will be used to decorate the streets in Cheapside as the King passes through it on his procession to North London. At Old Jewry at the head of Cheapside there will be lattice over the roadway with amber and silver draperies on either side of Moorgate Street. In the ward of the Lord Mayor, there is to be the most dazzling scheme of color. Ropes of flowers, with moths and butterflies and dragons will be suspended on invisible wires. It has just been decided by the corporations of Shoreditch and Finsbury, the biggest commercial and industrial wards north of the Mansion House, that some 40,000 children will greet the King. The youngsters will be regaled with milk and buns and be given 40,000 Coronation medals.

The Princes who are to represent the Emperor of Japan are due to arrive in London at the beginning of the first week in June, and about the same time the Grand Duke Michael will come to represent the Russian Emperor.

The old City is making herself worthy of the great occasion, and will no doubt delight her distinguished visitors who are coming to see her.

Although the month of May only heralds the coming Coronation festivities, it may be no less a notable time than the Coronation month of June. There are shortly to be no less than four State Courts: the German Emperor's visit, attended by splendid ceremony, and again the opening of the Queen Victoria Memorial; and further, there is to be, on May 18, the Fancy Dress Ball at Savoy Hotel in aid of the Prince Francis of Teck Memorial, when nearly a score of Royal and other distinguished guests will take prominent part. During the German Emperor's visit, the Royal guests, with the King and Queen and a most distinguished audience, will witness, on May 17, at the historic Drury Lane Theatre, Lytton's famous play, "Money," with an exceptionally brilliant cast. The floral decorations are to be on a scale never before seen in any theatre. The decorations at the play are so far arousing the greatest interest. A box is being specially constructed for the Kaiser and the German Empress, who will attend with the King and Queen and some members of the Royal Family. The stage triumph of stage decoration is to be the drawing-room scene. The actors will include all the stars of the English stage, dressed in the costumes of the prehistoric or early Victorian period. The ladies, who will appear in frequent changes, will show every variety of fashion in vogue in the old times. A surprising floral effect will be produced in the stalls and galleries of the theatre by sheaves of tulips of all colors hung all round in rich profusion in holders of black and gold. There is to be a beautiful pictorial surprise on the Royal Command night and for several nights following, the same novel effects are to be reproduced for the delight of the general public who will attend.

The Hon. Sec. of the Committee of the Houses of Parliament is completing arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the Dominion members at the Waldorf Hotel, Kingsway. The guests and their ladies are expected on the eve of the Coronation to visit the Naval Review at Portsmouth, and on June 25 they will attend a trip on the river. A visit is arranged to the City of Manchester on their journey south from Glasgow in July. They are also expected at Norwich for the Agricultural Show. From Manchester and Liverpool they will journey to Yorkshire, Warwick, Stratford-on-Avon, and on their return to London they are to dine as the guests of the Earl Derby. The country trip proper extends to Ireland, but it is doubtful if Dublin will be a popular resort now that the City Corporation of the Irish capital have declined to join in the proposed Coronation address or to welcome the King to Ireland.

The month of May, before it closes, will usher in the round of entertainments specially provided for the visitors who have come for the Coronation. Preceding the Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace, the crowds are expected to rush to Earl's Court, the Coronation Exhibition, White City, Shepherd's Bush; the Naval Review at Portsmouth, and not least, the Naval and Military Tournament a Olympia.

KEEPING HER QUIET

SUNSHINE FURNACE

BURNS COAL OR WOOD

The Sunshine is a good, "all round" furnace. Burns, with equal facility, either coal or wood. Coke, too, if you prefer it.

And so perfect is the combustion of the Sunshine that it extracts every unit of heat from the fuel. What's left in the ash-pan is not worth sifting.

Sunshine consumes less fuel, too. Because its perfect system of dampers prevent the escape of the hot air up the chimney—compels it to come out through the registers.

You pay for heating the inside—not the outside—of your house when you buy the Sunshine.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

JEWS ARE REFUSED

Settlement in Western Australia, as They Want Species of Autonomy

Although the British public hears but little of the work done by the Ito, that is the Jewish Territorial Organization, founded by Mr. Israel Zangwill, of London, it is nevertheless trying harder than ever to find a country in which Jews may settle down and call their own. Mesopotamia was high in favor as the site of a Jewish settlement on a considerable scale—the principal object of the organization. It seems, however, that this region has now fallen into the background, principally on account of the opposition of the Turkish Government. And Western Australia has come into favor. Western Australia is by no means a new region so far as the Ito is concerned. Some years ago Mr. Zangwill was both directly and indirectly in negotiation with its government on the subject of a Jewish autonomous settlement within its boundaries, and it was understood then that the negotiations had broken down, not because the West Australian Government had any objection to a Jewish immigration even on a large scale, but because they could not consent to any species of autonomy.

The Great Adventure

And How It Solved the Problem of Four People

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

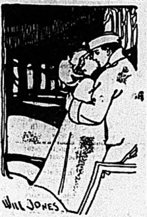
Miss Penlow yawned behind her pretty hand and blinked her blue eyes at Roderick. "Dear boy," she murmured wearily, "this is the seven hundredth time, more or less, that I've said I don't want to be married yet awhile. I want to enjoy my single blessedness for another year. I want to have a good time, and I see my way clear to have it now that Aunt Bee has invited me to spend a winter in New York. Next fall, after the summer abroad she has promised me, I'll be ready to marry you and go to housekeeping in that dear, horrible, stuffy little apartment which, I am sure, is all we can afford."

"You have evidently thought the matter over carefully. Your reasons are most excellent ones, and I dare say you will have a splendid time with Mrs. Frake. When are you going to start on your journey into the world?"

"A week from today. And what are you going to do, Rod? You spoke of joining Dick Ellis on his hunting trip into the north. Didn't you say you might get a picture up there among the trappers and guides?" Edith Penlow spoke rather absently, as one who tried to force an interest in a very tiresome subject.

"I am planning to join Ellis on Thursday. We shall be gone all winter. I withheld my answer until I might know your decision, Edith. I will see you before I go."

Out in the silent street Roderick Wakely strode swiftly along the frosty pavements, his hands thrust deep in his coat pockets, his eyes searching the gloom ahead, as if they were trying to pierce the gray veil of the future that seemed stretched before him. Before the veil Edith Penlow's dainty figure seemed to dance alluringly, yet with diminishing clearness, until at last she vanished and there was nothing but the gray veil and little else beyond.



TOOK HER IN HIS ARMS.

At the door of his rooms he paused a long while, pondering over Edith's assurance of her love for him. At last he flung his head up and drew a sharp breath. "What a donkey I am!" he muttered angrily. "Of course she wants a good time, and I'm a selfish beast to expect her to make the sacrifice. I'll just clear out with Ellis, and the air of the north will drive the cobwebs from my brain and make me see things straight."

On Thursday he set forth with Dick Ellis bound for the Canadian woods. As they left Boston behind in a mist of smoke Roderick thought, with a sharp pang, that spring would have rolled around before he saw it again. And Edith—for she would return at Easter before going abroad with her aunt—would she have forgotten him—would she learn to care for another? Dick Ellis broke in on his reverie with some commonplace, and thereafter the talk was all about game and fishing and Roderick's pictures.

Anjou was a quaint enough settlement of little houses, crowded together as if for warmth from the wintry blasts that swept screaming through the woods, shaking the trees to the very roots and snapping dead branches with a sound like pistol shots. In the house of Ellis' guide, an Englishman named Peter Bush, they found lodgings, and Roderick secured the empty loft over the kitchen for his own especial retreat. The stovepipe from the big heater ran through the loft and warmed it comfortably, but Roderick loved to lie near the trapdoor in the floor and look down into the smoke wreathed room where Ellis and other neighboring sportsmen gathered about the stove and told their stories.

Roderick made several sketches that might develop into the great picture, but he felt no especial enthusiasm about pushing his work forward. Edith's attitude had somehow set the machinery of his life out of adjustment. He told himself that only she could make matters right again. Every mail he watched for a letter from her, but the letters came rarely and were lacking in the great essential that he craved—her assurance that she missed him in her new life; that she longed for the time when they would no longer be separated, when the year's probation would be over. But she never wrote of these things. Her letters were mere frothy jottings of her gay life—of her happiness—and a careless word of affection at the end, sometimes forgotten after all.

One morning he took sketching block and pencil and went forth on the trail of Ellis, who had been gone hours before hot on the track of a brown bear which had invaded their storehouse the night before.

Roderick paused to rest on the fallen trunk of a giant beech when his startled glance took in a scene that he never forgot.

Beyond him in a small clearing carpeted with a soft drift of newly fallen snow there stood a girl and a deer, quite unconscious of his presence. It was evident that each had emerged from the woods on opposite sides of the clearing and were now poised in startled contemplation of each other.

The girl, small and slender and graceful, wore a long red cape that enveloped her like the cloak of Little Red Riding Hood of nursery tales, and over her fair hair was drawn a red hood, framing the pale oval of her lovely young face, out of which shone eyes as shy and brown as those of the deer, which stood in an attitude of pitiable fright.

So they stood for a whole minute while Roderick transferred their heads to his block with quick, sure strokes of his crayon. Then he thrust both in his pocket and made a sharp sound with his lips. Instantly the animal turned about and leaped into the forest from whence it had come, while the girl leaned against a tree, one little hand against her palpitating bosom, staring at Roderick.

"You were frightened—there was no cause for alarm—but it was no doubt startling to come face to face with such a wild creature," he said, talking rather volubly to enable her to recover herself. How is it that you are alone and so far from the settlement? Are you not afraid?" asked Roderick curiously.

"Indeed, no," she said in a surprised tone. "I know every inch of these woods, but I don't know all the denizens thereof. Now I can add another to my acquaintances." She smiled in such a friendly way that Roderick took the compliment to himself.

"Thank you," he said courteously. "I am proud to be received by the lady of the forest."

She blushed beautifully and bit the red curve of her lip thoughtfully. "Really it seems such a rude thing to say, but I didn't mean you, sir. I meant the deer was a new acquaintance."

Roderick reddened as he laughed at his own confusion. "Serves me right," he said emphatically, "for being such a conceited jackanapes. If I can be of no further service to you I may as well get along after Ellis."

"Oh, do you know Mr. Ellis?" she asked. "Is he here?"

"He's staying in Anjou for the hunting. I'm with him. My name's Wakely—Roderick Wakely."

"Then you're the painter. Mr. Ellis has often mentioned your name to us. He always comes over to the lodge to see father and me. We have a camp away back here. Tell Mr. Ellis we shall be glad to see him and his friend too." She smiled back over her shoulder and disappeared, while Roderick whirled about and tramped back to the cabin, forgetting everything save the fact that at last the great picture was at hand.

After that the weeks flew rapidly while Rodireck worked on his picture, tramped the woods hoping for a glimpse of Katherine Deering's red cloak or joined Ellis in his trips after brown bear and deer. Many evenings they spent at the lodge with Colonel Deering and his daughter while the great fire blazed on the hearth and threw flickering shadows over their faces.

As the spring came on Roderick's engagement to Edith Penlow seemed to fade into a dull background that he had called life—before he had met Katharine Deering and fallen in love with her sweetness and shy simplicity.

Edith's letters had grown fewer until they ceased altogether. Then one morning there came a letter that fell into his life like a bombshell of unpleasantness.

"I am tired of New York," she wrote rather petulantly, "so if you are ready to go to Paris I shall prepare to be married in June. Aunt Bee has given up the trip for this year."

In his perplexity Roderick laid the case before Dick Ellis. The latter gnawed his pipestem savagely and looked at Roderick through narrowed lids.

"You're all over it, eh, Rod?" he asked bluntly.

"I'm ashamed to say I am," nodded the other. "I didn't know I was such a cad."

"You're not, only neither of you is in love with the other. Of course it's Edith Penlow." His voice lowered.

"Yes."

"She doesn't care a rap for you—never did! She's in love with me. Fact! No, I'm not conceited, old man. It happens I know it, only—only it was too late. You see, I love her, too, but when I asked her she had promised you. What time does the express leave the junction?" he asked suddenly, springing to his feet.

"Three-ten this afternoon."

"Then I'm off. Have Rush send my traps down. Wish you luck, Rod. You needn't wish me any. I know I'll win out."

Roderick whistled softly as he carefully wrapped his finished picture and tucked it under his arm. "The Great Adventure," it was called, this meeting of the timid girl and the frightened deer, and as he went through the woods toward Colonel Deering's camp he was conscious that he was setting forth upon the greatest adventure of his life. When he saw Katharine coming through the cathedral aisles of the forest toward him one glimpse of her face caused him to drop the great picture in the snow and take her in his arms.

WOMAN'S WORLD

FASHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS CHIT-CHAT

To Carry a Manicure Set.

A convenience when one is travelling is a manicure envelope. It is merely a case to hold the different articles of the manicure set, but it is flat and will fit much better in the suit case than a box will. It is quite easy to make one of these envelopes as describel by the New York Herald.

The handsomest are made of brocade, but linen taffetas and cretonne may also be used, or any colored linen or plain white heavy linen. The latter has the advantage of perfect laundering qualities. But whatever material is used it must be lined with something strong enough to make the envelope quite firm.

The measurements to be used for this convenient little case cannot be stated, for they much depend on how many utensils its prospective owner uses for her manicuring. The size of these tools must also be considered, for nail files, scissors, polishers, etc., differ very much. So one must spread out her own set and make her measurements, cutting a piece of the material wide enough to allow them to lie in a row, and long enough to turn up at the top for the flap.

The lining is the same size and has a separate piece stitched to it, making little pockets into which the various articles are slipped. When the stitching between the pockets is finished the lining should be basted to the outside and the two bound together with ribbon or tape. Then the lower part is sewed over, partly covering the pockets, and the top furnished with buttons or snap catches to fasten the flap.

Hints for Simple Frocks..

All sorts of wash materials are to be worn this summer, and the mercerized cottons are wonderfully effective. There is the chance that after laundering the silky appearance will be lost, but if a dark color or figured design is chosen the gown will not require constant laundering, any more than does foulard. Cotton voile is both inexpensive and effective, and there is scarcely a model shown for any kind of dress that will not do for these cheap materials.

The high-waisted styles popular now, require a broad inside belt of heavy webbing or belting. This should be well boned and fitted. The top of the skirt fastened to the top of this firm belt will hang in the straight folds fashion now orders. When this belt is not tight enough the skirt sags and hangs badly in spite of every effort to prevent it doing so. The gown with the waist made to wear inside the skirt often requires to be finished with a belt or girdle. This belt, again, must be boned in front, at the sides, and back, for unless a woman is extremely slender the belt will slip up and look hopelessly crumpled and dowdy.

LACK OF APPRECIATION

A Serious Mistake Which is Made in Some Families

In families it is quite often the case that the child who has real talent is overlooked because some brother or sister has more conspicuous attractions. And in some communities the same mistake is often made. Some precocious infant is told off for future honors, and it is hard for fathers and mothers to understand that some quiet little mouse of a maid or some unobtrusive lad will be the future authoress or statesman.

This lack of appreciation is really what urges those who know what they have in them to seek greater opportunity for their expansion by leaving the people who do not believe in them, and going among those who do.

This does not mean that every girl who fancies herself a genius should cut herself off from the precious home atmosphere, but there are those who feel that they have it in them to do things, and when this feeling becomes so strong as to be a certainty, and when they have some good reason to think they can succeed, then they probably have sufficient excuse for some new line of action.

WORKHOUSE REVOLT

Among the articles broken in the Surrey workhouse revolt against porridge a week ago were two panes of glass, four forms, 11 salt cellars, 26 spoons, 90 plates, and the heads of several officials.

FOUND HIDDEN MONEY

John Eastup, of Runcorn, Cheshire, has discovered in various parts of his cottage nearly $5,000, which had been hidden by his wife, who died a week or two ago. Eastup knew that his wife was of very thrifty habits, and after the funeral commenced a search of the house. Secreted in a cupboard he found a basin containing several hundred threepenny-pieces, in another cupboard was a hoard of half-crowns, and beneath a brick in the cellar floor a jampot filled with 552 sovereigns was discovered.

Isaac Early, who walked to the polling booth at East Garston, Berkshire, last December, and voted, has died at the age of 104. He passed away in a cottage which he had rented for seventy years.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

NOW OUT OF DANGER

Premier Monis Progressing Satisfactorily, Says Doctor.

Injured French Statesman Persistently Asks For M. Berteaux, and Has Been Told That War Minister Is Unconscious and That There Is No Hope—Aviators Proceed With Race—Yesterday Was Monis' Birthday.

Paris, May 23.—The physician's bulletin, issued last night, says simply: "M. Monis' condition most satisfactory."

The Premier was permitted to take light nourishment yesterday and Prof. Lannelongue, at the close of a consultation, said there was no longer fear of complications.

The Premier persistently asks for news of M. Berteaux. The physicians told him that the Minister of War was unconscious, and that there was no hope. The Premier was so deeply affected that it was deemed best not to inform him of the death of M. Berteaux until later.

Yesterday was Premier Monis' 65th birthday and he received the congratulations of his family and friends.

Aviator Frey began his flight from the aviation field at 2.06 yesterday afternoon, but only succeeding in reaching Etampes, where his machine turned turtle in a squall and plunged to the ground. Frey was not hurt.

Gibert, on leaving Pontlevoy for Angouleme lost his way and landed at Brizay, but later resumed his flight on the first leg of the course.

Garros, the first contestant to reach Angouleme, is repairing his machine for the second stage of the flight from Angouleme to St. Sebastian.

No further starters appeared for the race and a provisional classification has been made for the first stage of the flight to Angouleme. Vedrin is placed first, in three hours 43 minutes; Garros second, five hours and one minute; Gibert third, eight hours 55 minutes.

Wanted Their Money Back.

Angouleme, May 23.—Vedrine, who made a record-breaking flight from Issy Les Molineaux to this place yesterday, in the Paris to Madrid aviation race, brought out his machine last evening to give an exhibition for the benefit of a vast throng of people who had gathered to witness the arrival of the aviators. He was not successful in rising, and the crowd became unruly and demanded their money back. Rioters broke the barriers and attempted to wreck the official buildings and Vedrine's machine. It was necessary to call out the troops to rescue the members of the local aero club's committee, which had charge of the affair.

Lightning Fired House.

Sudbury, May 23.—An electrical storm of exceptional violence swept over Sudbury and district Saturday night. At the height of it, lightning struck the house of Robert Gilmour, foreman in the Sudbury Foundry Co. The bolt passed through the window of a bedroom, passed round the wall, hurled a bureau into the middle of the room, and crashed through the floor. Instantly the house burst into flames, and the occupants had only time to rush out in their night clothes.

Gilmour's brother-in-law, Jos. Bannagan, who only arrived with his wife from Scotland last Tuesday, lost absolutely everything.

A C.P.R. train ran down and killed Joseph Smart, about two miles east of Espanola, on Saturday night. A bottle of whisky carried in his pocket was unbroken, though not a bone escaped.

Informer Assaulted.

Hamilton, May 23.—Claiming that he had given the police a tip that led to a raid on an alleged Chinese gambling joint Sunday night, two of Jim Lee's fellow-countrymen last night assaulted him when he entered a Chinese store at 151 North James street. A heavy bowl, hurled by one of Lee's assailants, struck him on the head and inflicted injuries which made his removal to the city hospital necessary. Detectives Cameron and Coulter arrested Leo Kow and Chew Chong on the charge of committing the assault.

Another Deadlock.

Kingston, May 23.—Keen disappointment was handed those interested in settling the strike of the stonemasons and stonecutters yesterday, when it was found that the masons' delegate, Thomas Izzard, had left the city. The contractors had a meeting on Saturday night, when Mr. Izzard was appointed by the masons to meet the arbitrator of the stonecutters and contractors. Thus the whole matter is again at a deadlock. Five of the striking masons left yesterday for Sault Ste. Marie. Mr. Izzard came here from international headquarters.

HEAT BRINGS DEATHS

Several Fatalities Reported in the Big Cities.

Two Men Are Found Dead In Montreal Where Thermometer In City Districts Register 90 In the Shade—Infant Mortality Appalling In Cleveland—Pittsburg Registers 100 Degrees of Heat—Several Others.

Boston, May 23.—The heat blanket which oppressed Boston and all New England yesterday shattered life out of two persons in this city and more than a score of others were prostrated by the sun's powerful rays and a high humidity. Dr. Albert H. Hayes, 74 years of age, collapsed in the Scollay square subway station and died a few minutes later. Seated in a chair near an open window, where she had gone to get some air, Mrs. Elizabeth Hanley, aged 60 years, was found in her home late yesterday, dead.

Cleveland, O., May 23.—Because of the high temperature eight babies died yesterday, making 24 deaths of babies in the last four days attributable to the heat. One woman was also fatally prostrated. There were a number of prostrations. The official temperature was 88, but thermometers in the business streets registered nearly 10 degrees higher.

Troy, N.Y., May 23.—Yesterday was the hottest May 22 in fifteen years and there was many prostrations. One unknown man was overcome while watching a circus parade and died before medical aid reached him. Several others are seriously ill as a result of the excessive heat.

Charles R. Hill, paying teller of the Security Trust Co. of this city, a man about 50 years old, dropped dead while watching the twelfth innings of an exciting ball game. Excessive heat is regarded as the cause.

Pittsburg, May 23.—Showers last night and a slight easterly breeze somewhat relieved for a short period the excessive heat in which Pittsburg and vicinity had sizzled for a week. The official temperature yesterday again scored 92, while hundreds of thermometers in front of business places registered 100.

Six deaths were recorded yesterday, while prostrations are reported almost hourly from half a score of hospitals, besides the police stations.

Heat Deaths In Montreal.

Montreal, May 23.—Sunday was the hottest May day in many years, the thermometer registering 88.5 at McGill, the coolest spot on the mountain, and down town reached 90 in the shade.

John March, aged 71, nightwatchman at the Canada Rubber Works, was found dead in the office there, a victim of the heat, and Francois Xavier Ledoucuer dropped dead from the same cause.

Hot In Toronto.

Toronto, May 23.—Monday was regarded by most Torontonians as a genuine scorcher, but it was not the unusual height of the temperature, but its humidity that caused such discomfort and adoption of mid-summer attire. The weather man said no records for heat had been broken this May. The hottest day in May recorded at the observatory was May 30, 1875, when the temperature rose to 93 degrees, eight degrees higher than Sunday. So far this has been a remarkably dry May, there having been up to yesterday but 45 per cent. of the average rainfall.

In May, 1897, the thermometer for about three weeks registered over 90 degrees every day. This is the first recurrence in the fourteen years of such a heated May.

Kingston Swelters.

Kingston, May 23.—Kingston sweltered yesterday under an unusually warm wave. In Princess street the thermometer registered 85 degrees.

Fear for Emperor.

Goedeolloe, Hungary, May 23.—Prof. Neuesser, whose arrival at the Royal Chateau here, where Emperor Francis Joseph is sojourning, caused some alarm, is so satisfied with the emperor's condition that he to-day left for the Austrian capital. His majesty took a three hours' walk in the park surrounding the chateau yesterday morning, and on returning received in audience Baron von Blienerth, the Austrian Prime Minister.

Vienna, May 23.—Notwithstanding the reassuring official reports concerning the emperor's health, there is a widespread feeling that his condition is less satisfactory than reported.

The news that Prof. Neusser had paid a professional visit to the emperor resulted yesterday in a weakening of the Bourse.

Approve Nationalism.

London, May 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post, discussing the pamphlet of the Canadian National League, says: "Many imperialists in the Mother Country in strong sympathy with the league, have recognized that Canadian nationalism is no menace, bt the best support of imperial unity, for the simple reason that the Empire is obviosly necessary to the aspirations of nationalists."

Girls May Strike.

Winnipeg, May 23.—The conditions which brought about the strike of the telephone operators in Toronto a few years ago, may lead to similar trouble here. Girls in this exchange are said to be threatening to leave on account of heavy work and irregularity of schedules.

Steamer Belleville Aground.

Kingston, May 23.—The steamer Belleville ran aground near Iroquois, but was released by the tug Frontenac of the Calvin fleet, without damage. The vessel was delayed for 48 hours.

Fell From Tree.

Kingston, May 23.—George Adsit, caretaker of the fair grounds, died in the General Hospital yesterday afternoon from injuries received in a fall from a tree.

MANY PETITIONS.

People From All Over Canada Plead For Life of Mrs. Napolitano.

Ottawa, May 23.—Petitions praying for executive clemency in the case of Angeline Napolitano, sentenced to death for the murder of her husband at the Soo, are piling up at the Department of Justice. These petitions are from women and women's societies chiefly, and from practically all parts of Canada. The plea is made in some petitions simply on account of the sex of the prisoner, but in most cases the ground taken is that the woman's approaching motherhood would make the carrying out of the sentence itself almost a crime.

So far these petitions have not resulted in any action by the Minister of Justice, for the reason that custom requires first a perusal of the evidence taken at the trial, and copies of the evidence have not yet reached the Department. It is expected that several days, if not weeks, must pass before the notes of evidence are extended and the record has been placed in the hands of the Minister of Justice. The execution is set for August, and it is expected that the child of the condemned woman will be born in July. This is said to have been taken into consideration by the trial judge, whose report will have much to do with the action of the Government. Other Ministers than Sir Alan Aylesworth will likely have something to say in regard to the carrying out of the sentence, as cases of this kind go before the whole Council.

RESTORED TO PAGEANT.

Chateauguay Scene Will Be Included In Historical Spectacle After All.

London, May 23.—The Canadian pageant committee has arranged to include in the Festival of the Empire the scene depicting the battle of Chateauguay, the withdrawal of which has been much resented by Canadians.

It was announced in April that the Canadian committee, of which Lord Strathcona is president, had decided to eliminate from the coronation program Canada's principal contribution to the pageant. This piece, which has been in course of preparation at the Crystal Palace, was entitled "Chateauguay, where Canada was held for the Empire," and was intended to represent the defeat, through strategy, of an invading American force in 1813, by a handful of Canadians.

It was thought that the pageant might wound the susceptibilities of American visitors, and that it might cause a feeling which would endanger the conclusion of the proposed Anglo-American arbitration treaty. Later it was explained that the opposition was not from Americans, but other unnamed parties.

Elopers to Be Deported.

Quebec, May 23.—Admitting that he was Ferdinand D'Abbadie and that she was Helena Benoit, both were taken from the C.P.R. liner Lake Champlain yesterday morning, and are now awaiting probable deportation.

D'Abbadie is a wealthy iron master of Evreux, France, who eloped with Miss Benoit, a governess employed in his household. D'Abbadie's family move in high Parisian society. The couple traveled to Canada as Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wye.

Questioned on the boat coming over, they stoutly denied that they were the eloping parties, stating that they were on their way to take up farming in the west.

D'Abbadie is about forty years old, while the girl is 22. He is wealthy, has been married 18 years, and left a wife and seven children in France.

Japan In a Huff.

Washington, D.C., May 23.—The fur seal conference at which the United States, Great Britain, Japan and Russia are seeking to come to terms for a fifteen year close season for pelagic sealing in the North Pacific, has already met with difficulties.

Preliminary to the conference, an agreement was signed between the United States and Canada with respect to the Pribiloff Islands, under which Canada was to receive one-fifth of the catch on the islands themselves as compensation for giving up destructive fishing in the open sea.

Japan has taken offence at the arrangement being made before conference, and the proceedings on Thursday ended in Japan's representatives withdrawing in bad feeling. Another meeting will, however, be held to-day.

Two Sudden Deaths.

Cornwall, May 23.—There were two sudden deaths in Cornwall within 24 hours. About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. Alguir, wife of Dr. D. O. Alguir, expired suddenly while talking to her daughters. She was apparently in good health and spirits till the summons came. Her maiden name was Louise Ross, and she was the only child of A. P. Ross, ex-M.P.P. She was 51 years of age and leaves one son, Dr. A. Ross Alguir, and four daughters.

London, May 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Asquith dined the members of the Imperial Conference last night. There were present Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Duke of Argyll, Lord Minto, Lord Aberdeen, Lord Kitchener, Lord Strathcona, Sir Edward Grey, Sir William Harcourt, Hon. David Lloyd-George, Austen Chamberlain, Lord Lyttleton. A reception at the Foreign Office followed.

Seized Ten Nets.

Brockville, May 23.—George Toner of Gananoque, fish and game overseer, is the busiest official on the St. Lawrence. During the past week he has seized ten nets. Three of these were taken from the head of Howe Island, four near Poole's resort, and three at Fiddler's Elbow.

Tag Day In Berlin.

Berlin, May 23.—Over $2,200 was raised for the Berlin and Waterloo hospital by the ladies' auxiliary on the annual tag day. This is over $100 ahead of last year.

A Secret Directory.

Paris, May 23.—Private letters received in Paris from Lisbon contain the prediction that an attempt to restore the monarchy will soon be made in Portugal, probably before the elections. It is claimed that the movement will be started at Oporto, the second city of Portugal in population and importance, where business is at a standstill as a result of the dockmen's strike.

A secret directory composed of three men, it is declared, is engaged in arming the monarchist recruits.

Alleged Blackmailers.

Hamilton, May 23.—A pair of alleged blackmailers, in the persons of two young and attractive girls of this city, were taken in charge by Detective Sayers here yesterday. A prominent business man complained to the police about the girls, but when they had been apprehended, he refused to appear against them. They were accordingly released after receiving some wholesome advice from the police.

BELLEVILLE CORONATION CONTINGENT LEAVES

The Three Representatives Given a Hearty Send Off at the Armouries Last Night—Remembered in a Tangibile Manner by the Officers of the Fifteenth Regiment

The officers, non-commissioned officers and a few friends of the Fifteenth Regiment assembled at the armories last evening for the purpose of saying good-bye to Sergts. L. Green, J. Boyd and J. Barber, who will represent the Fifteenth Regiment in the Canadian contingent at the Coronation. The three members of the Fifty-Seventh Regiment, of Peterborough, being in the city, were present at the function.

The gathering was called to order by Col. Stewart, commanding officer of the regiment, who stated the object of the gathering, namely to say good-bye and wish God speed to the representatives of the corps who will shortly proceed to England to take part in the coronation ceremony of King George. While the men would not see His Majesty crowned, they would no doubt have the privilege of seeing him pass to and fro at the place of coronation. That the three representatives would acquit themselves like soldiers and men he had not the slightest doubt. They would, he was certain, reflect credit upon the regiment and the city. On behalf of the regiment he wished them good-bye and God speed on their journey. Their trip he would assure them would not be all pleasure, but they would have an opportunity for recreation and sight seeing. The officers and members of the regiment would follow the representatives with interest and gladly welcome them home again.

Major Marsh said he could heartily join with Col. Stewart in wishing the representatives of the regiment God speed in their journey, and also wish them a pleasant and safe voyage.

Col. Penton said he was content to be a link with the Fifteenth Regiment. He recommended to the boys to look up the Fifteenth Regiment in the old land. The Fifteenth Regiment was an old corps and was ever ready for service. The representatives were going over for King and Queen. They will be merged there with Imperial troops, and be side by side with not only white, but also blacks. What a memory that trip will be to those who participate in that great pageant. They would, no doubt, all be welcomed there by some Bellevillians, including Sir Gilbert Parker, an old Bay of Quinte boy. They should also visit the Duke of Argyle, the honorary colonel of the regiment. In conclusion, Col. Ponton spoke of the apparent lack of interest by many in the Fifteenth Regiment. There were many young men in the city who should identify themselves with the regiment.

Col. Stewart then called upon the three representatives and on behalf of the officers, etc., presented each with an envelope which contained some gold coins.

Sergts. Green, Boyd and Barber responded briefly, stating that they would do all in their power to warrant the confidence which had been reposed in them by selecting them as representatives of the Fifteenth Regiment on the Coronation contingent.

After this the remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse.

Mr. S. R. Burrows sang some selections and Mr. E. Lang rendered some piano solos.

A number of the officers and men accompanied the representatives to the station to see them embark on a special train for Quebec City, where they will be in training for a few days.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR YOUTHFUL HOLDUP

Ryan One of the Principals was Allowed to go by Furnishing Bonds for Good Behavior

Ryan, one of the young men who on Sunday night, with a companion, held up a man and succeeded in procuring $1.40, was this morning up before the Magistrate, who gave judgment in the case. Ryan admitted the offence, but could give no plausible reason for committing it. As it was apparent Ryan was not the chief actor in the affair, the Magistrate dealt leniently with him. The accused was bound over to appear at any time within a year for sentence, and his father had to enter into a bond of $100 for the boy's good behaviour in the future. The Magistrate, in allowing Ryan to return home with his father, gave the lad some wholesome advice.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE RED MILL.

"The Red Mill," the new comic opera which is to be seen here for the first time at Griffin's Opera House, To-night, certainly has been provided with all the elements of success. The music is by Victor Herbert, by far the best of the composers of light music in this country; the book is by Mr. Henry Blossom, who always writes clever dialogue, and the presenting company is, from all accounts, an exceptionally clever one. "The Red Mille" will be presented here after a season's run at the Knickerbocker Theatre, Now York City, which was followed by engagements of three months in Chicago and Boston, where it proved to be one of the most important musical successes in many years.

OILING OF STREET

As an experiment Bridge Street, between Fron and Pinnacle streets was to-day sprinkled with oil. If it proves satisfactory other streets in the city will be similarly treated.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BASEBALL

The baseball season for 1911 will open to-morrow at the Agricultural grounds with two games: first game at 10 a. m., between the T. A. S. and Ontarios; second game at 3 p .m., between Coleman Flats and Rolling Mills. Mayor Ackerman will pitch the first ball at both games. Mr. William Cochrane will act as umpire. Two fast games are assured. The grounds are in excellent shape and a good day's sport is promised the fans.

—:—:—

At a meeting of the officials and representatives of the various City baseball teams, held last evening, the chief business transacted was the selection of an official umpire. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was unanimously selected for the position.

Pari-Mutuel Commission.

TORONTO, May 23.—The statement circulated to the effect the commission on the pari-mutuel investments at the Ontario Jockey Club meeting would be ten per cent. is incorrect. VICTORIA DAY SPORTS

To-morrow, Victoria Day, will be fittingly commemorated in this city. Two City League baseball matches will take place, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. A programme of sports will be carried out under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. at Victoria Park in the afternoon. The Fifteenth Regiment will parade in the morning for field day manoeuvres.

TIPS UNDIGNIFIED FOR A MONTCALM PRESENTS INSTEAD

New York Courts Discharge Him from Larceny Charge and Judge Adds Good Advice

New England courts seems to be the gathering place of many a name which had adorned Canadian history. With a de Champlain now wrestling before the courts of the State of New Hampshire, a de Levis who had troubles of his own in New York police courts about a year ago, the list of Canadian historical names now inscribed on the records of various American jails ends by that of Paul S. J. de Montcalm, a descendant of General Wolfe's great opponent.

Defrauding Mrs. Eugenia A. Gaylord, a young widow, out of $1,500 in bonds and running up a credit account at a department store in the young woman's name were the charges which caused the arrest of de Montcalm and his seclusion for forty-two days in Raymond street jail, at New York. The prisoner claimed to be well acquainted in Montreal and Quebec, having started in the venture of selling stocks and expecting that his name would give him entrance in the two cities. Having to explain the account he had run up in the department store in the name of Mrs. Gaylord, the young man said that having been to Montreal on business for the lady, he felt that as a true gentleman he could not give tips to hotel people. The only way he saw open before him was to remember them by gifts and that was why he bought sticks, opera glasses and other things which were included in his account.

After fifteen minutes of deliberation the jury acquitted the nobleman of grand larceny, and in discharging the accused Judge Fawcett gave him the following advice: "I think I know what has been the cause of all your trouble. You have depended simply on your name and prestige to make you a way in the world without turning your hand to anything useful. I would advise you in the future to go out and work for yourself and not depend upon women for your support."

Paul de Montcalm was born in New York, but claims to be a direct descendant of General de Montcalm.

DROWNED HERSELF IN RAIN BARREL

Wife of Retired Prince Edward County Farmer Suicided—Eluded Dozing Nurse

PICTON, May 22.— Breaking from her nurse at one o'clock this morning and racing through the stairs and out of the house, Mrs. David Starks, aged 53, at Cherry Valley this morning committed suicide by drowning herself in a rain barrel.

For the past few weeks she had been ill, and it is believed her mind became temporarily unbalanced. She assumed a threatening attitude at Sunday, but went quietly to bed While her nurse was dozing, however she ran from the bedroom. The nurse pursued her but lost track of her in the darkness out of doors.

Neighbors were aroused and very soon after the body was found in the rain barrel, in which there was scarcely a foot of water. Deceased was the wife of a wealthy farmer who had but recently retired. She had always led an active life, and it is believed she grew despondent with the changed conditions of her life.

CAN THIS BE TRUE

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

I should like to have your opinion as to the action of the Waterworks Dept. of the City Council in the face of the following experience of two of our citizens, which has come to my notice.

Some weeks ago a builder of this City placed an amount of building material on the first lot back of Bridge St. on Foster Avenue, and requested the Department to put him in a line so that he could build a house.

So far, he has not got any satisfaction, and has decided to remove his material and give up building. Last week another man started to lay out a house on the lot opposite, but did nothing on learning that he could have no water.

Please note in the face of this, that there is now a sewer on this street but there is no water to flush it with, and I should like to know of what use it is.

If the Department will not run this Waterworks as a business why not sell out and let some one who can and will run it, do so?

It would appear that the only street that can have any amount of money spent on it, is Charles Street, not however, the best part of it which lies between Bridge St. and Victoria Avenue, but that north of the latter. There is now pavement of each side, a sewer, water and gas, and the only piece of good road in East Belleville. Now I am informed that a larger gas main is to be laid, and this good street torn up. In the face of the fact that many of the streets have neither gas nor water, why should so much money be lavished on Charles St., north of Victoria Ave.? I would not suggest that it is because Mr. Mikel owns property on this street, but there must be some reason.

The city cannot go ahead as it should if favorites are to be played.

Yours etc.,
OBSERVER.

Violin solos were executed by Miss Kathryn Roote, and Miss Sydney McFarlane. A vocal solo— "Yearninks"—was given by Miss Kathleen Hungreford. ROBBERS CHOKE GOLD TEETH OUT

CHICAGO, May 19—R. F. Dudenthal was given credit by the police for the best "hard luck" story of the day.

He was passing an alley in Indiana avenue near his home, when two men seized him. One choked him so hard that his gold teeth fell out.

"Hey Jack" said one robber who caught the teeth, "this looks good. Tighten up on him; he may give up more."

They not only took Dudenthal's gold teeth, but $50, and a meerchaum pipe.

DON'T HUG A DELUSION

Something "Just as Good" an Impossibility.—If not the Original Have oNthing at all.

For a woman to adorn her head with false braids, puffs, rats, or a man to wear a toupee, is like buying an off-brand preparation instead of Newbro's Herpicide. The "false hair" and the "off brand" are both substitutes of the real thing. The original is always conceded to be better than any imitation or substitute. "Something just as good" is a heresy of the rankest kind.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy and does as promised. Years of success and thousands of satisfied users have made it standard. Herpicide kills the dandruff germ, keeps the scalp clean and stops falling hair. Its proper use before baldness appears makes false hair and wigs unnecessary.

There is no uncertainty. The purchaser gets positive results or money is refunded. It is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10c. in postage for sample and book on "The Care of the Hair," to The Herpicide Co., Dept R., Detroit Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

WOMEN'S HEAD-DRESS BETTER AT HOME

Advising ladies to leave their hats at home in an effort to secure more comfort at the Sunday services, Rev. Dr. Sparling created an unusual ripple of interest last night at St. James Methodist church, Montreal. The pastor did not mention St. Paul's injunction during his remarks, but he assured the women that they need have no fear of being refused absolution.

His remarks were as follows:—"I have been wondering, whether the ladies would next Sunday leave their hats at home. Perhaps they think they would not have absolution if they did; but I think it would be more comfortable and we would all be able to enjoy the service better. I woud like you, at least, to think about it."

During the Eucharistic congress many women were seen in local Catholic churches wearing the mantilla, a custom which prevails to a considerable extent throughout continental Europe. At the moment Catholic London is interested in a learned controversy as to the advisability of women leaving their hats at home when going to church, wearing instead the mantilla which leaves free vision for those in the rear.

HALLOWAY.

May. 15—At the last regular meeting of L. O. L. 251 we the undersigned were appointed to send the following letter of condolence to Mrs. John Towsend and family:

We the officers and members of L. O. L. No 251, assembled for the first time since God called home our beloved brother John Towsend, desire to place on record our sense of the great loss to our order which this dispensation of the divine wisdom has visited us with our late brother. He was not only a true hearted member of our order but also a man whose broad experience, ripe judgment and wise counsel must long be missed in our deliberations He had been a member for over 60 years and was never absent from his seat at any lodge meeting unless sickness prevented. Knowing this and how those amiable qualities which so endeared him to us, must have intensified the grief of his bereaved widow and family, we desire to express our sincere, heatrfelt sympathy Our humble prayer for them and us is, that God will bless us in th loss by drawing us closer to Himself and a happy reunion through Christ.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,
Wm. Kelly
W. G. Morgan.

The Old Way and the New.

The old way was to apply a mustard plaster, mussy to mix, or a belladonna plaster, hard to get off. Now when in pain or suffering with sore lungs apply a few drops of Merrill's Wizard Lightning, the great modern stainless pain-killer, and get the effect of the plaster in five minutes. Unequalled for colic, cramps, rheumatic or neuralgic pain, toothache, earache, and a positive specific for monthly female pain. Get it from your druggist. Price 25c., or postpaid from The Merrill Medical Co., Merrill Building, Toronto.

OUR VETERAN VOLUNTEERS HONORED BY SUCCESSORS

XV. Regiment Given Custody of Historic Portraits—Names of the Men Whose Fame is Thus Preserved—The Trust Received With Proper Ceremonies—The Veterans' Association Elected Officers.—A Notable Occasion

Additional interest centered in the annual meeting of the Veterans' Association of this district by the function which followed the annual meeting yesterday.

In the fall of 1900 eighty cabinet sized photographs of veterans of the Fenian Raid of 1866, nearly all of whom still resided here, were grouped into one large photograph and has remained in the possession of the clever photographer who took it. The building of the armories suggested the thought that the home for so historical a picture was that structure, and the long cherished hope of many was carried out, when yesterday the Veterans' Association requested the XV. Regiment A.L.I. to accept the custody of the photograph.

It was thoughtful of the Executive of the Veterans' Association to invite to the gathering of yesterday the families of those whose loved ones have "passed on before" since the photograph was taken. These are Thomas Gibson, John McKenna, Donald Urquhart, W. H. Scholes, George Brooker, John Rowan, R. A. Beckett, U. E. Thompson, Charles Woodcock, Joseph P. Reeves, Albert Casswell, Charles. P. Holton, R. Croft Hulme, A. M. Morrill, Charles Reddick, Jas. Mackie, Thomas S. Smith, John Sparrow, Samuel Taft, Thomas McGinnis.

The total enrolment is Wm. Jones, Joseph Bosley, R. J. Bogle, John Morris, Charles Addison, James Malyea, Wm. Mills, Thomas Gibson, W. J. Russell, James Woodley, W. H. Howe, Wm. Foxton, John McCutcheon, Alex. Morton, Matthew Hill, E. J. Servias; John McKenna, Donald Urquhart, W. E. Bottoms, Lt. Col. S. S. Lazier, Lt. Col. P. H. Hambly, W. H. Scholes, George Brooker, George Morden, John Rowan, Wm. Gibson, Charles Kiser, Robert Wilson, Chas W. Taylor, W. Sutherland, Wm. Johnson, U. E. Thompson, Col. the Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C.M.G., R. A. Beckett, J. P. Thompson, F. M. Clarke, Lt. Col. E. Harrison, John Pearce, Robert Roy, Charles Woodcock, David Gerow, J. W. Wrenham, Joseph P. Reeves, Allen T. Petrie, James Macoun, N. B. Falkiner, J. W. Johnson, Wm. Hopkins, John McKeown, Albert Moon, James Hamilton, R. T. Gray, Joseph P. Maiden, James Mackie, J. W. Hunt, Donald Graham, John McFee, Albert Casswell, Charles P. Holton, Lt. Col. R. C. Hulme, W. Jeffers Diamond, J. F. Jeffers, John S. Marsh, A. M. Morrice, R. M. Brown, W. A. Gibson, W. Kirkpatrick, Charles Reddick, Samuel Taft, Thomas Smith, R. E. Gerow Thomas McGinnis, Edward Dulmage, George Dame, George F. Thompson, D. T. Rutledge, John Belknap, John Sparrow, J. E. Harrison.

ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the Veterans 'Association, Lt. Col. W. N. Ponton, the President, was chairman, the Hon. President, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, being "his right hand support," and Mr. John W. Johnson, M. P.P., his left. The "roll call' is always an important feature of the meetings in which sympathetic inquiries are made of the absentees.

Four members will never answer the roll call again. One of these was the last of the men of 1873—Mr. A. L. Crouter. Mr. R. A. Beckett, who has resided in Montreal for nearly forty years, who was one of the original officers of the XV. Batt., who was a captain in the First Administrative Battalion in 1864 formed to guard the Niagara frontier, and who was senior major in the XV. Batt. at the Fenian Raid in 1866. Mr. Thomas McGinnis, who saw active service with his regiment, the 8th Batt. of Quebec City; and Mr. Samuel Taft, who, with two brothers, were at Prescott in June, 1866, guarding the St. Lawrence frontier.

The Veterans' Association has added to the attractiveness of the armories by asking the XVth A.L.I. to take the custody of the composite photograph of eighty gallant fellows who in 1866 went to the defence of the St. Lawrence frontier to guard it from an attack from the Fenians.

The speeches which were delivered by Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Lt. Col. Lazier, Col. Ponton and Mr. John W. Johnson, M.P.P., were very appropriate, intensely patriotic and will go far to cement the bonds that bind the two local regiments to each other.

The officers elected were:

Honorary President—Col. the Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C.M.G.

Honorary Vice-President—Lt. Col. S. S. Lazier, ex-commanding officer of the XVth A.L.I.

Honorary Vice-President—Lt. Col. E. Harrison, ex-commanding officer of the 49th Hastings Rifles.

Honorary Vice-President—Lt. Col. J. A. Orr, ex-commanding officer of the 49th Hastings Rifles.

Honorary Vice-President—Lt. Col. Thomas Stewart, commanding officer of the XVth. A.L.I.

Honorary Vice-President—J. W. Johnson, M.P.P.

President—Col. W. N. Ponton.

Secretary—Mr. Wm. Johnson.

Treasurer—Mr. John McKeown.

Captain—Mr. F. M. Clarke.

Lieutenant—Mr. C. S. Clapp.

Sergt. Major—W. H. Blaind.

Executive Committee—Rev. A. M. Hubly, Messrs. F. Hitchon, W. Gibson and D. J. Hay.

A BOY'S CARELESSNESS CAUSED A BAD FIRE

Double House on Brown Street Partly Destroyed—Contents Were Badly Damaged

A boy throwing a lighted fire cracker upon the roof of a house caused a fire in the city at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The building, a double frame one situated on Brown street, is owned by Mr. Wm. Hughes and was occupied by Mrs. E. Haslip and Mr. A. Kiser. The roof and the upper porton of the building was burned. Although the greater part of the contents was removed they were considerable damaged. The occupants were uninsured. Mr. Hughes had an insurance of $500. on the building which will probably cover the loss.

LAST TRIBUTE PAID TO CLARENCE H. POUND

The remains of the late Clarence H. Pound, the victim of the drowning accident here on Monday evening, were interred yesterday and many were in attendance at the obsequies held at the family residence 3rd concession at Thurlow. The funeral was under the auspices of the Canadian Home Circle, of which deceased was a member and circle No. 202 was largely represented. At the house Rev. Mr. Kemp conducted an impressive service. He also officiated at the grave, as did the officers of the circle. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The bearers were members of the Circle, namely, Chas. Mills, Clayton Benedict, Thos. Rosevear, A. Latta, W. Clarke, and A. Lemon.

FIETEENTH REGIMENT HAD A FIELD DAY

The Regiment paraded, under command of Col. Stewart at 7 a. m. yesterday and after refreshments had been served to the men, the regiment headed by the band, moved out. At the upper bridge, the right half battalion under command of Captains Brown, Allen and Wilson, with Lieut Wallace, of the 46th attached, crossed the river, with the object of securing the bridge at Cannifton. The left half, under command of Captains Cook and Doyle, with Lieut. Orr, proceeded up the left bank to Cannifton as the defending force. Major Marsh was referee attached to the defending force, and Major Barragar was referee attached to the opposing force. Col. Stewart was the umpire.

The scheme was well carried out the officers taking great interest in the work, the N.C.O's and men were well handled, and showed that they entered into the sham battle enthusiastically.

Refreshments were again served to the men under the care of Mrs. Rush and the Boy Scouts, but it was quite apparent that the folks of Cannifton were all interesting themselves in giving a good welcome to the citizen soldiers of Belleville.

The regiment returned home, all highly delighted with the outing, and without casualty of any kind.

Ot the Armouries Col. Stewart congratulated and thanked the officers and men, and while complimenting all on the good work, he said it was difficult for him, as umpire, to render a decision when all had done so well, still he thought the opposing force had failed to take the bridge, and he gave the decision in favor of the defenders.

A lad named Hughes, son of Mr. Ed. Hughes, residing on Murney Street, last evening met with a painful accident. CURRENT COMMENT

Verbose speakers are to be muzzled by law in the German Parliament. An excellent example for the City Council of Belleville to follow.

Why should dandelions be regarded as a pest? They are mighty easy to look at and there are spring ailments that their leaves will alleviate, while excellent wine is made from their flowers.

Now that the Commons has adjourned, the Opposition members will adjourn to their constituencies and become convinced—if they are open to conviction—that the people really want reciprocity.—St. Thomas Journal.

The members found it quite the other way during the Easter recess.

That the death rate from tuberculosis in Ontario has decreased in ten years from 11.8 per cent. of all deaths to 7.6 per cent., was one of the encouraging reports made by Dr. Geo. D. Porter, Secretary of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis at the eleventh annual meeting which was held in London. Other important developments were reported by various delegates and the Canadian Conservation Commission was commended for its work in undertaking the conservation of the public health as a national matter.

Anyone doubting the existence of the intake is now confounded by its actual appearance. We want an intake that will intake.—The Globe.

Intake what? Did not the old intake swallow, even if it could not digest, everything that came within its sphere of influence. Logs, trees, sand even a beer keg—empty, to the great regret of the finders—all were sucked into its capacious maw. What more could an intake be expected to take in?

THEATRE DONT'S

Advice that a Veteran Actor Contributes Without Charge

Don't arrive at the theatre late. You would not begin your dinner with the entree.

Don't keep your theatre bonnet on until the very last minute before the curtain goes up, and thus give the man behind you a fit wondering whether you are going to take it off or not.

Don't secure side seats and then glare at the people who have inside ones and pass you on their way out to see some man between the acts. Maybe you've done the same thing yourself.

Don't chatter during the play. The actors are paid to speak their lines for your entertainment.

Don't find fault with the part the actor is playing. He reads the author's lines.

Don't be afraid to applaud. Actors like enthusiasm.

Don't explain the story of the play to your companion. The man on the other side might want to hear it for himself.

Don't lose your temper if some persons come in late and you have to stand up to allow them to pass, and thus drop your hat, coat, bag, operaglasses, umbrella, and programme.

Don't leave the theatre before the play is over—a certain amount of courtesy is due to the players while they are talking.

GOAT WAS A GHOST

Mr. Alfred Tennyson Dickens, the eldest surviving son of Charles Dickens, relates how the servants at Gad's Hill once threatened to leave because they were terrified by a ghost. Dickens, armed with a gun, and his sons, armed with bludgeons, set out to find it, and saw a white object which emitted an awful noise. It proved to be an asthmatical old goat.

CAMP OF CARAVANS

How the Excessive Coronation Rents May be Overcome

To avoid the congestion and ruinous rents of London next June it is proposed to pitch a Coronation camp of caravans, quite in the gypsy style but far more luxurious, in one of the outer suburbs. The camp is being organized by the Caravan Club of Great Britain, which has 210 members, most of whom are wealthy, and a few titled.

The club has rented a four-acre field at Coulsdon among the Surrey hills, where the caravan will be assembled and where their owners will sleep after fatiguing days of "coronating" in town.

The usual plan for a family camp with a caravan is for the elders to sleep in the caravan itself, the girls having a sort of a canvas annex, while the young men are accommodated in tents. Given fair weather, such a picnic is very enjoyable and health-giving.

The caravan-dwellers will not be the only people sleeping in the open during the Coronation period. Huge camps will be pitched in Hyde Park and other open spaces for the forty-thousand troops who will be brought to London to line the procession routes.

FIRST QUAKER M.P.

Refused to Swear Usual Form of Oath —Descendant Elected

Joseph Pease, grandfather of the new Member for Darlington, was the first Quaker to enter the House of Commons. When he took his seat, in 1833, he refused to swear the usual form of oath. A Select Committee was appointed to inquire into precedents, and as a result of their report the new Member was allowed to affirm. When addressing the House Pease was careful to avoid the use of all titles. He dressed strictly in accordance with the rules of his sect, and refused to raise his hat on any pretext. After a time he instructed the doorkeeper to take his hat from him when he entered the House, and to replace it on his head when he went out. This saved him from appearing discourteous to the Speaker without wounding his own conscience.

KAISER AS A DOCTOR

Many of His Subjects Desire to Consult Him

It was recently stated by "The London Globe" that the Kaiser had received the degree of M.D. "honoris causa" from the University of Prague. In Germany, we are told by a Paris paper, people take things in earnest, butt he writer, who does not add that his confreres frequently draw upon their imagination, proceeds to relate an amusing incident relative to the Kaiser's honor. The other morning the Kaiser was inspecting one of his many regiments of which he is colonel-in-chief. One soldier fell out of the ranks, approached his Majesty, saluted, went back to his place, and put out his tongue. "What has he to say?" demanded the Emperor. "The man is wanting in respect." "No, sire," replied the soldier, "I am unwell, and respectfully ask your Majesty to prescribe for me. The fame of the new doctor of Prague University, who, by the irony of events, had to sign his name in the album immediately after that of the great—in every sense—opponent of Bismarchian policy, Virchow, has spread beyond the army. Outside the Palace at Potsdam, as soon as it was known that the Kaiser had become a doctor, crowds of the maimed, the halt, and the blind lined up, reminding one of the scenes outside a dispensary. Some even offered to pay a fee for the Kaiser's diagnosis. The Emperor was not only embarrassed, but annoyed, so he ordered the following notice to be put up: "The doctorate in medicine conferred upon the Kaiser is simply an honorary distinction, so his Majesty does not undertake the care of the sick either gratuitously or otherwise."

IRISH MIGRATION

A Parliamentary return of the migration of Irish agricultural laborers states that it is estimated that approximately 20,500 laborers went for temporary employment to England and Scotland in 1909. The estimated number in 1908 was 22,500, and that figure showed a decrease compared with the years immediately preceding. Of the total of 20,500, at least 500 or 600 were women.

COINAGE DESIGNS

An Interesting History of the Variations in Images and Superscriptions

The new British coinage is to maintain the present designs, with only the alterations rendered necessary by the new accession, but much historical interest clusters round the variations to which our coinage has from time to time been subjected.

The image will, as heretofore, consist of a bust portraying, with more or less accuracy, the features of the reign- however, has variedcmfwypusbrdlumf however, has varied with the fortunes of the country, and still more with the claims of the individual monarchs. Prior to 1715 the Stuarts were content with claiming, in Latin abbreviations, to be "By the grace of God King(s) of Great Britain, France, and Ireland." The first addition to this being the letters "F.D.," which, while they denote "Fidei Defensor," as granted to Henry VIII. by Pope Leo Q., were not used on the coinage until the year above named.

The accession of George I. brought about very considerable variations by that monarch adding designations of his Continental "Principalities and Powers" to his newly acquired British dignities. Thus we have introduced Latin abbreviations asserting his claim to be "Duke of Brunswick, Luneberg, Arch-Treasurer and Elector of the Holy Roman Empire," in addition to those mentioned above. The abandonment by Great Britain to all claims, real and imaginary, to be a Ruling Continental Power has been followed by the disappearance of all these, as well as of the title "King of France." It was not, however, until the year 1818 that the "Lilies of France" disappeared from our coinage, after adorning it for upwards of four hundred years.

From the earliest periods there has appeared upon the reverse of the copper or bronze coins a figure with a greater or less resemblance to the idea of the personification of "Britannia." The first known of such figures is found on the coins struck by the Emperor Hadrian about the year A.D. 122. Subsequent Roman-British coins display a similar figure with a shield, much as at present, but holding Roman symbols in place of the trident. The present figure dates from the time of Charles II., and it is believed that the model therefor was the royal favorite "La Belle Stuart" (the Francis Stuart, the Duchess of Richmond, immortalized by Lely's famous painting). At first we have Britannia, bareheaded, facing to the left, holding a spear in her left hand. In the time of George III. (1797) she bears a trident, and a three-masted ship is seen in the distance on the ocean, by which she is surrounded. With George IV. she appears helmeted, facing to the right, her right arm resting on the shield, but the ship and sea have disappeared. On the bronze coinage of 1860 the ocean reappears with a ship, but on this occasion sailing away from her, and in addition to this a lighthouse is introduced behind Britannia, whose right arm entwines the trident, supporting, rather than grasping, it. The authorized new designs are the same as those of the late reign. From these the ship and light house have both been eliminated.

The only exception to being a Britannia-bearing coin, amongst those of the bronze coinage, was the half-farthing. The reverse of this coin had across the centre in plain print the words "Half-Farthing," surmounted by a crown, the date being immediately underneath, while below that again was a spray of "rose, shamrock and thistle. These small coins, pretty in design, were issued as late as 1843, but are now extinct, except as curios.

MAN WITH SILVER RIBS

The story of a wonderful operation, in which silver ribs are said to have been supplied to a man, was told by Major A. T. Craig at a gathering at the premises of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society in London. The occasion was the distribution by Princess Christian of Christmas hampers subscribed for by public school boys and others. In one case, said Major Craig, there was a box of delicacies, intended for a man who was badly wounded in South Africa, and got practically all his ribs broken. He had been working in a sort of steel jacket since, until at a hospital in London a very wonderful operation had been performed. The man was said to have been supplied with silver ribs.

During a storm which broke over the Canaries a house on the island of Gomera was undermined by water and collapsed. Twenty-two persons, mostly children, were crushed to death.

The White Plague

An article by Dr. F. C. Walsh, entitled "Throwing Death Off the Trail," in the Technical World, gives some interesting views on the struggle of the human race against the ravages of tuberculosis. In Dr. Walsh's opinion, the physicians have had their time of opportunity for the prevention of tuberculosis and have failed. No cure for yellow fever has been discovered, and yet the disease has been very largely wiped out—simply by preventive measures. Tuberculosis can likewise be abolished, says Dr. Walsh, if proper methods are taken.

At present, Dr. Walsh says, consumptives are being bred hourly more rapidly than they can be cared for. Special hospitals and sanatoria cannot be built fast enough to meet the essential requirements, now and for the future. For economic as well as for practical sanitary reasons the present policy must be changed and means must be taken to check at the very source the increasing annual crop of consumptives. Dr. Walsh believes that the expenditure of a hundred thousand dollars or less annually is wise methods would completely exterminate the disease in less than five years.

Three examples are given: Brown, having been told that he has contracted tuberculosis, goes to Arizona, where he pitches a tent, as a more or less permanent abode. For a time he improves and makes no change in his location, but by and by he takes a turn for the worse and in less than a year is dead. Jones, in like circumstances, goes to Arizona, but lives with no fixed abode, sleeping here and there under the stars, rolled in a blanket. He recovers. Smith likewise goes and comes back looking the picture of health, but after returning home is, in less than four months, in the tenacious clutches of the disease. Dr. Walsh says the explanation is very simple. In the first place not one of the three should have contracted the disease. Secondly, the three could have been cured at home and Brown should never have died. Before Brown had contracted the disease he had moved in the month of May into a house in another part of the town. By the fall he had contracted tuberculosis. No attempt had been made to disinfect the house, although several previous tenants had had tuberculosis. Then, on going to Arizona, he set up a fixed residence—the ground under which night after night became saturated with germs from his coughing, so that he was continually at night rebreathing into his system the very seeds which caused the disease. Jones changed his location each day and so avoided this danger. Smith returned home feeling fine, but returned to a germ filled house and soon contracted the disease again.

The simple cure, according to Dr. Walsh, is that all houses newly entered should be disinfected, for it is never known for certain whether some former residents were consumptives or not. Every room should be fumigated with the vapor given off by heating formaldehyde. All floors, windows and woodwork should be washed with mild solutions of corrosive sublimate and water. For those who are afflicted, fresh air is, of course, the great necessity, but their rooms must be fumigated daily, if possible, or, at least, once or twice a week. It is a good plan for a consumptive to live in alternate rooms on alternate days, so that one can be fumigated while the other is used.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE RED MILL" HIGHLY APPRECIATED.

The musical comedy, "The Red Mill," scored a complete success on Tuesday evening, the audience, made up of our representative people, being one of the largest and most appreciative that has assembled in Griffin's Opera House this season. For two and a half hours the actors kept in pleasing touch with their critical patrons, the musical numbers, exquisitely rendered, receiving the heartiest of applause. The comedy is of a varied and decidedly intricate nature calling for a cast of fifty performers, whose unlimited success has been the result of perfection in voice and high class acting. The solos, duets and quartettes were without a flaw, but the grand chorus, composed of the entire troupe, drew forth a volume of sound and harmony that swept everything before it. Nothing equal to it has visited our city in many a day. Of the favorites, special mention should be made of James Crowley and William Moore as Con Kidder and Kid Conner, two young Americans doing Europe, whose financial catastrophies and perplexing experiences were of a unique, and at times laughable, nature, but invariably rising to the top in the end. Frank Harsh, as Jan Van Borken, the burgomaster; Bert Perry, as Wilhelm, the keeper of the Red Mill Inn, came in for an ample share of applause, who, with Gretchen, the former's daughter, and little Tina, the barmaid of the Inn, were alone worth the price of admission. Bertha, the burgomaster's sister, a young widow with a million, who married the governor of Zelland and Clyde Howland, as Capt. Doris Van Damm, whose nuptials with Gretchen were duly solemnized, were also prominent and interesting performers. On the whole the opera was a rare treat to our theatre-going people.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN."

With what are claimed to be the most beautiful stage settings and pictures ever shown on the stage, the Stetson revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," that famous classic of the American stage, comes to Griffin's Opera House Tuesday, May 30th.

The play has been seen in every section of this country and in almost every village of the north, east and west It has had and has retained a popularity never equalled and never known by any other play, and now comes in the most complete setting ever made for it, and a company of southern darkies, whose harmonious voices blend in the old plantation melodies and the southern slave songs that long ago touched the heart of a nation, making an effectiveness and realism never before known in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The company is said to be fully worthy of the elaborate scenic settings of the play. Its members have been specially selected for their experience in the parts assigned them, and from their adaptability to the characters. The result has been a rarely harmonious whole, it is claimed, and has done much to add to the effectiveness of the production. Plan at Doyle's Saturday.

MISER'S TRAGIC END

A Man with $1,500 in the Bank Starves Himself to Death in England

"Death from heart disease, accelerated by wilful starvation," was the unusual verdict returned at an inquest on Charles Bayliss, 68, of Newtown, Manchester, who was found dead in bed. A son-in-law said that Bayliss had about $1,500 in the bank, but he refused to buy food, and witness had given him meals on many occasions. Bayliss was found at the top of the stairs, having apparently fallen out of bed. Other evidence showed that Bayliss would not part with his money for food, rent, or coal, and he had refused to see a doctor. He had been strange in his manner since the death of his wife, twelve months ago. He would not change his clothes, and had lived in a miserly way, often depending on his neighbors for a crust of bread. He had even allowed a man out of work to provide him with food. A doctor stated that the body was very dirty and very emaciated. There was very little blood in the veins, and practically no fat on the body. Death had been hastened by insufficient food.

It is remarkable that the first apple in Paradise should have turned out the first pair.

IVERNIA RUNS ASHORE

Big Cunard Liner on a Concealed Rock in a Fog.

Passengers Are Safely Landed at Cork—Was Running Through the Mist When Suddenly Daunt Rock Loomed Up and the Steamer's Bow Was Crushed In—Water Kept Back by Bulkhead.

Queenstown, May 25.—The Cunard Liner Ivernia, which left Boston May 16 for Queenstown and Liverpool, struck Daunt Rock at noon yesterday during a fog as she was appoaching the shore after an eventless voyage.

The vessel is now resting at anchor close to the eastern bank of Kinloch Channel inner harbor with 25 feet of water in her fore compartment. Previous reports were to the effect that she had been beached, but these latter turned out to be erroneous. No one on board the steamer were hurt.

The first that was known of the accident was when the liner passed Roche's Point, at the head of Cork Harbor. The forward part of the Ivernia was sunk deep in the water, her stern was high in the air, and she had a bad-looking list to starboard.

The great hole in the fore part of the liner and the narrow margin, nine feet of free board above the water, sufficiently indicated what a narrow escape the Cunarder had from disaster. The water tight compartments, however, stood the strain well, and the water was confined to the forward hold.

The captain brought his damaged vessel safely into the inner harbor, where she was anchored at the edge of the eastern bank. The passengers, who numbered 758, were quickly landed.

The liner was within a mile of a tender which was waiting to take off the Irish contingent of passengers, when Daunt Rock suddenly loomed up in a dense fog, and before the vessel's way could be stopped the big ship struck.

The passengers were at luncheon at the time of the accident and quickly rushed on deck. The ship only hung on the rocks for a short time, and then slid off into deep water with a large aperture in her starboard bows, through which the water flowed and threatened to flood the liner.

Captain Potter and his officers, however, were prompt to close the bulkhead, and the inrush of water was confined to the forward hold.

The ship's officers were able to quickly reassure the passengers of their safety, and there was no sign of panic on board.

An examination of the steamer shows that the water is penetrating holds Nos. 2 and 3 as well as No. 1.

The Ivernia was built at Newcastle in 1900. She is of 9,058 tons net register, 582 feet long, 64.9 beam and 37.8 feet deep.

Daunt Rock, on which the Ivernia struck, is a pinnacle, with ten feet of water over it, and four and a quarter miles from Roche's Point, the Irish mainland. Vessels bound from the westward take special precautions to avoid the rock.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 24.—Wheat—There was a firm opening account strength in America. Following the opening there was some covering by shorts in May and July, which advanced a further ⅛d from opening, under speculative support. There was an improved demand for cargoes, which later were more firmly held, and predictions are for small Argentine shipments this week. Private reports received here continue to emphasize the dry weather in Russia with damage, and altho the market was dull around mid-day, the undertone was very firm with speculators and good interests on the buying side. At 1.30 the market was firm, ⅛d to ⅜d higher, with July leading the advance.

CHICAGO, May 24.—May wheat to-day rose to within ¼c of the dollar mark. Nervous covering of about 400,000 bushels on orders, said to have come largely from St. Louis shorts, put up the price nearly 2c a bushel, to 99¾c. The close, however, was at a net gain of 1c. Other months rose, but to a lesser degree and in the end were ⅛c to ¼c lower than last night. Latest trading left corn a shade to ⅛c to ¼c up; oats, at ¼c to ⅜c advance, and provisions unchanged to 12c to 15c increase.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"Look here, my good man," said Ellis, becoming excited, and lapsing into English, "you're hinting at a lot of things and telling me nothing. Just say what you really mean straight out and don't be so infernally mysterious."

The man, who had not understood a word of the harangue, smiled, doffed his sombrero again and disappeared into the house without another word.

Ellis stood waiting for a few moments to see if he would return, and then, turning away he muttered to himself, with all the egotism of the true-born Britisher, "What foolishness it is these foreigners not knowing English!"

The following day Guelfo and Ellis, who had from the first maintained a strict silence as to the mysterious symbol, left Cuzco for Mollendo, accompanied on their journey to the coast by Balbi, who had business at the port. When they embarked the old fellow accompanied them on board and bade them farewell there.

As he was being rowed back to the shore he waved his sombrero to them and muttered to himself through his teeth,—

"Your may think yourselves celver and take me for a fool. But it is not so. Piero Balbi knows a thing or two. He has got what he wanted, and now he can go to the great London and find the Signor Vipan who was not afraid to risk his life for a poor companion and who now shall—Ah! well, we shall see. Giuseppe Guelfo," as he muttered the name a look of terrible ferocity came into his eyes and he clenched his teeth till they ground together, "his money is his life. Through his money I will strike. Lucia! Lucia! You are not forgotten! He shall suffer as you and I have suffered. He shall pay his debt to the last fraction."

It was some days after this that, while walking near the harbor, he met a man whom he had not seen for months, and who, after greeting him, cordially remarked,—

"Have you been to the post office since you returned here, Balbi?"

"No, why do you ask?"

"There's a letter there claiming an owner. It is addressed to Piero Balbi, but the rest is so vague it has not yet been delivered."

"Is that so? I expect nothing. Is it from Italy? Has it an Italian stamp on it?"

"I don't know. I did not look particularly, but I think it was an English one."

"Thank you, I'll go and ascertain." And parting from his acquaintance Balbi made his way to the post office. Yes, there was a letter within the glass frame addressed:—

Signor PIERO BALBI,
Cuzco,
Arequipa. Mollendo.
Peru.

The envelope was dirty, frayed and travel-stained, and bore postal stamps of the three towns named, together with a note in pencil and ink made by numerous postmen stating their inability to deliver it on account of insufficiency of address.

Balbi applied for it, declaring that he had been recently travelling, and had had no fixed address for some time, but that in all probability it was intended for him. The postmaster raised numerous difficulties about handing it over and required proof of his being the person whose name was inscribed on it.

At length, however, after some delay, Balbi was able to satisfy the authorities, and the letter was handed over to him.

Without waiting to leave the office he tore the envelope open, and, turning the sheet over, read the signature "Pauline Spencer." A puzzled look came into his face, and he gazed at the paper without attempting to read the contents.

"Pauline Spencer! Pauline Spencer! Where have I heard that name before?" he muttered.

"Well, my good man, is it not for you after all?" asked the official. "You seem in doubt. Had you not better read it?"

"Yes, yes," and he glanced at the sheets. The first sentence, in rather ungrammatical Italian, was sufficient.

13a Mount St., London.

"Sir—Whether this letter will ever reach you is very uncertain, as I have no means of knowing your address beyond what I can gather from entries in the diary of the late Mr. Wallace Vipan—"

"The late! Ah, I knew it!" Then with a catch in his voice, "Yes signore, the letter is for me and contains the saddest news I have ever received." And thrusting the letter into his pocket, Balbi left the office, and it was not until he was in the solitude of his own room that he continued the perusal.

"—for," the letter went on, "I regret to say Mr. Vipan was murdered shortly after his return home, the motive of the dastardly crime being perfectly apparent to me to whom he was betrothed and to whom he confided all his prospects and intentions. I feel certain, from what Mr. Vipan has told me about you, that his death will be a sad blow to you, of whom he was extremely fond. At present his murderer has not been discovered, nor can I find any trace of your letter and enclosure among his papers, although he showed me the former the very day before his death, and then assured me he had shown them to very few. A second enclosure you sent is in my possession and has been seen by no one else. In case you should come over to England, pray see me, as it would give me the greatest pleasure to meet any one who was so highly seteemed by him so dear to us both. I may tell you that I have something which might lead to the discovery of his murderer, but which, at present, I am unable to make use of. Trusting this may find you, yours very truly,

PAULINE SPENCER.

That evening the mail bag for England contained the following letter:—

Strada Regia, Mollendo.

"Signorina,—Your letter has reached me. I leave for England at once. At present I cannot speak of the sorrow it has brought to my heart. I will see you. Yours in all respect, PIERO BALBI.

"The signore's death shall not go unavenged. I have sworn it."

WESTERN FARMER AND HIS PROFITS

A Typical Instance of the Receipts and Expenditures on 640 Acres in Ten Years

A farmer writing to a Toronto daily paper from Indian Head, Saskatchewan, under the nom de plume, Saskatchewan Farmer, refutes the statement made by many Westerners, that the farmers of the West have been ill-used by the Dominion Government, which is identified largely with Eastern interests. This Saskatchewan Farmer gives a typical instance of the expenditure and revenue connected with a section of land, 640 acres, from the year 1900 to 1910. He says:

"I will give you an idea of what a section of land, 640 acres, will earn, and how it will increase in value, in the most favored wheat producing districts of Saskatchewan under normal conditions, management and price of land, from 1900 to 1910, allowing the average price of land to be $10 per acre for that period. In so doing it should be borne in mind that 30 per cent. of the land in this Province was Free Grant.

Capital Expenditure.

Land, 640 acres at $10 per acre		$6,400.00
Cultivation, 440 acres at $6 per acre		2,640.00
Dwelling house		2,000.00
Stable for 12 horses, granary and implement shed		1,500.00
1901
12 horses and harness		3,000.00
Implements.	Duty.
3 seed drills	$33.00	330.00
3 plows	30.50	210.00
2 disc harrows	10.00	80.00
2 six-section harrows	6.50	60.00
3 7-ft. binders	53.00	465.00
4 wagons complete	72.00	360.00
One-sixth interest in thresher	125.00	500.00
Extras, say	20.00	455.00
	$350.00	$18,000.00
Crop for 10 years, from 400 acres at 25 bush. to the acre, at 75 cents		$75,000.00
Working expenses for 10 years at $5 per acre	$32,000.00
Interest on capital for 10 years at 6 per cent	10,800.00
		42,800.00
Surplus (not taking into account increase in value of land, which may be figured at $18,000)		32,200.00

Duty on Implements.

"Now note right here, that all a farmer working a section of land under these conditions would pay in duty on the implements required to earn this large profit, assuming the average life of same to be 10 years, comes out at approximately $35 per annum. This is no exaggerated statement of profits and increase in value of land, as thousands of farmers in Saskatchewan can testify, and hundreds who have specially applied themselves and taken advantage of the opportunities at hand, have realized far greater profits than are here shown. How, then, can the farmers of the West claim that they have been ill-used, or not given a fair deal?

"Of course we have had, and have, grievances, such as elevator monopolies, grain blockades, and grievances connected with grading and marketing of grain, and they are not altogether remedied yet, but what great industry has not had minor difficulties equal to or greater than these to overcome.

"In conclusion, I may say that many farms in the Indian Head district, which have been well cultivated, and have been cropped continually with a one-third summer fallow each year since the early 80's, last season produced 30, 35, 40 and even more bushels to the acre, in quality almost if not quite equal to the first crop; at all events not more than one per cent. lower."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies have done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctors said I had tumors, and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Your Liver Pills have no equal as a cathartic. Any one wishing proof of what your medicines have done for me can get it from any druggist or by writing to me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

BRAVE ACT OF 12-YEAR-OLD.

Rescues Her Infant Brother From Fire at Ottawa—Painfully Burned.

Ottawa, May 20.—The plucky rescue by a twelve-year-old girl of her baby brother, and the revelation of a dangerous fire trap in the shape of a spike fence erected near a lofty apartment house, were features of a fire on Elgin street yesterday. The fire originated in one of the apartments occupied by Mr. A. R. Shehyn of the civil service, on the third floor, where some children were playing with matches. The family were in the rear, all save the baby and a brother, and by the time they reached the front of the apartment the place was in flames. Simonne Shehyn, aged 12 dashed through the burning hall and carried the little one to safety, though a cushion on which it was lying was ablaze. The girl's arms and face were burned. The fire brigade was seriously handicapped by a thirty-foot fence erected by a neighbor to prevent the windows of the place from overlooking his lawn. Removal of the fence will be ordered.

HOPE TO REPEAL IT.

Unionists Expected to Let Parliament Bill Pass.

London, May 23.—Lord Lansdowne's bill for the reconstitution of the House of Lords passed its second reading in that House yesterday without division, after War Secretary Haldane announced that the Government would not divide against it. The Secretary said that he welcomed the evidence the bill afforded; the Conservatives were convinced of the need of the reform, but the Government held that the passage of the veto was essential before any steps were taken in that direction. Lord Lansdowne complained that the debate had not elicited any statement of the Government's plans for reforming the House.

The fact that there was no division on the bill prevents the disclosure of the revolt among the Unionist peers against the measure, but the speeches of the Duke of Marlborough, the Duke of Somerset, and Lord Killanin showed it to be considerable, and it is not expected that the committee stage will be proceeded with.

The second reading of the veto bill will be moved in the House of Lords to-day. The debate is likely to last for some days, but in Parliamentary circles it is generally believed that the bill will be given its second reading. Attempts to amend the bill will be made, but the Government will refuse to accept such amendments or disclose its own plan for reforming the second chamber. The Liberals confidently predict that the Lords will ultimately capitulate and pass the veto bill, with the expectation that it will be repealed when the Unionists return to power.

FREE FIGHTS IN PARLIAMENT

Some of the Memorable Combats that Have Taken Place in the British House of Commons

Vigorous hand-to-hand struggles are not common at St. Stephen's; but they are not by any means unknown. As a matter of fact, fights have taken place at the House of Commons ever since the time of Cromwell, when his soldiers had to clear the House at the point of the bayonet to prevent bloodshed and wholesale destruction.

"Judas"

Perhaps the most remarkable scene of this description within modern times happened on July 27th, 1893. Mr. Chamberlain was speaking against the late Mr. Gladstone, and at ten o'clock, when the closure fell, someone snouted out "Judas," and this very unparliamentary epithet was reported to the Chairman, who, however, declared that the offensive expression had not been heard by him. He ordered the division to be proceeded with, whereupon several members of the Tory party refused to leave their seats. A few seconds later war was declared by a Conservative seizing an Irish member by the coat-collar, and within a short time there was a regular free fight in the House, in which Colonel Saunderson was rendered hors de combat after he had scientifically "floored" one or two of the "enemy." John Burns, it is said, helped to pull the combatants asunder until the arrival of the Speaker put an end to the unseemly proceedings.

Colonel Saunderson took part in many disputes at Westminster. He fell out with Mr. William Redmond one day, and it looked as if the pair would settle their differences with blows. The Colonel, it appears, had commented very strongly on Irish violence, and Mr. Redmond took each and several of the comments as a personal insult, suggesting that the redoubtable Colonel should meet him in the Lobby after the sitting. The Speaker, becoming aware of this sent a note to the chief of police at St. Stephen's, asking him to take up a position in the Lobby and prevent a fight between the hon. members. The expected, however, did not happen, for when Mr. Redmond and the Colonel met in the Lobby they calmly talked matters over, and finally wished each other a cheery "Good day."

"It is a Lie"

Some years back, when the House happened to be in Committee, the Irish members refused to go into the lobbies for division. The Chairman sent for the Speaker, and that gentleman promptly "named" the offenders, and their suspension was moved and carried. The Irishmen refused to budge an inch until a body of police walked into the House. Even then it was as much as the constables could do to "move them on." As a matter of fact, the police and the Irish members had a regular fight before the former conquered and carried the latter bodily out of the House.

During the debate on emancipation in the Commons Mr. Brougham, afterwards Lord Brougham, turned towards Mr. George Canning and bitterly exclaimed, "You have exhibited the most incredible specimen of monstrous truckling for the purpose of obtaining office that the whole history of political tergiversation could furnish." Canning replied, very quietly, "It is a lie!" A deathly quiet reigned in the House for some minutes, and one could have heard a pin drop. Presently, however, a lively debate took place between the members present, some of whom advised Mr. Brougham to withdraw his remark and apologize, while others requested Mr. Canning to do the same. Finally it was suggested that the couple should be committed to the Serjeant-at-Arms. The necessity for this gentleman's intervention happily did not arise, for the two disputants settled the matter between themselves and peace was once more restored.

A terrible scene occurred in the Austrian Parliament some years ago. A member made a twelve hours' speech with the object of obstructing a Bill that it was proposed to pass into law. A member who had had enough of the "talk" made a grab for the President's bell, and was promptly seized by other members. A fierce struggle ensued, members being guilty of the most outrageous violence. One man had half of his hair torn out by the roots, while another was nearly throttled. Chairs were flung all over the place, and one member drew an evil-looking knife and, brandishing it aloft, shouted, "I will stab all who approach me!" The knife was wrenched from his hand before he could use it.

Off With His Head

In earlier times it was the custom to commit a British political prisoner to the Tower of London, where he was often shortened by a head by means of the ill-famed axe and block. More recently he was transported to the memorable Botany Bay, or one of the other British penal colonies, but now that transportaiton is a thing of the past he is either shut up in the House of Commons itself or in the ordinary jails of the Kingdom. There is room for two prisoners only at St. Stephen's, and any beyond that number would probably be boarded out at Holloway or Pentonville.

The Parliamentary "cells" are situated 30 feet up in the Clock Tower of the Commons, and they are replete with every modern convenience and command an admirable view of the Thames, the Embankment, and New Palace Yard. Each "cell" consists of a comfortably - furnished sitting - room, measuring about 19 feet by 14 feet, and a couple of bedrooms, one for the prisoner and the other for his jailer. All food is supplied by the refreshment department of the Commons, but the prisoners are obliged to pay for their meals.

WANT TO SMOKE

Several hundred London omnibus builders have gone on strike because they cannot get smoking at their work

A "herbarian" has opened a restaurant at St. Petersburg, where the staple dishes are of roots and herbs. A delicious and substantial "hay soup" is provided.

Successfully Rescued

Mr. Harry Gibson, of Kingston, was Rescued from an enemy that had relentlessly pursued him for years.

Mr. Gibson was born and brought up in Kingston. By profession he is a school teacher. He received his training in Queen's University, where he took a course in arts and medicine that well befits him to talk on almost any subject.

The enemy that for twenty-five years relentlessly pursued Mr. Gibson is a menace to our entire population—it is the demon, Catarrh.

Mr. Gibson says:—"For years I was never free from Catarrh of the nose and throat. It bothered me winter and summer and kept me so continually coughing and hawking that I found it a great impediment to the proper performance of my duties at school. I used every available means of obtaining a cure, took bottle after bottle of medicine prescribed by local doctors, but never got more than temporary relief. I consulted a well-known specialist in the States, but after spending a considerable amount of money with him to no advantage, was forced to look elsewhere for relief, which I first discovered from Catarrhozone.

I consider Catarrhozone a genuine cure for Catarrh. It drove that loathsome disease completely out of my system, and to-day I am as well as if I never knew what the word Catarrh implied."

A straightforward proof of cure, coming from a well-known gentleman like Mr. Gibson carries conviction of the fact with it that Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it. As a cure for Catarrh and Bronchitis it positively has no equal.

SEATS IN CHURCH

Baronet Claims Seventy-two Out of a Total of 380 in the Parish Edifice

A dispute as to whether Sir Oswald Mosley, Burton-on-Trent, was entitled to the exclusive use of seventy-two seats in the parish church was settled at Lichfield Consistory Court.

Sir Oswald applied for a faculty appropriating certain seats in the south aisle of the church. It was contended that the aisle had been in the possession of the family since 1615, and had been kept in constant repair, and from time to time various monuments had been erected.

When the Rev. and Hon. H. L. Tyrwhitt became rector the congregation increased, and people were placed in the south aisle, to the annoyance of Sir Oswald. The rector called upon Sir Oswald to prove his claim to seventy-two seats out of a total of 380 in the church.

A conference between the chancellor and counsel on the matter, together with the respective parties, took place. It was agreed that a faculty should be granted to the Mosley family, giving them the exclusive use of thirty-eight out of seventy-two of the existing seats in the south aisle, and also the right to erect monuments in the aisle.

A CRIPPEN MISTAKE

Cheiro, an Amazing Gentleman, Says the Doctor Did Not Avoid His Key Numbers

One of the greatest mistakes Crippen ever made in his life was in not avoiding his "key numbers." According to Cheiro, the amazing gentleman who can see through a brick wall as far as most people, if not farther Crippen's key numbers were fours and eights; so that, if he had only stuck to fives and nines he might have been a respected, honored, and unhanged citizen. It was his obvious duty to avoid the year he was born in, '62, for 6 annd 2 are 8; likewise, he should have stayed away from that dinner with the Martinetti's on January 31st for 3 and 1 make 4. He made his statement to Inspector Dew on July 8 and then, to make things worse, he lets Dew find the remains in the cellar on July 13th, for again 3 and 1 are 4. Then the foolish man called himself "Robinson," a name of eight letters when he might just as well have travelled as Brown or Smith. Not only so, but he sails in the Montrose, again a name of eight letters; comes back in the Megantic, for trial, eight letters again; and, worst blunder of all, he allowed his key numbers to come together in the year he was hanged, being 48 years old when he was executed.

PIT WORKERS ARE CARELESS

Many Mining Disasters are Caused by Neglect Which is Simply Astounding

In spite of the fact that it was fitted with every modern contrivance for ensuring safe and efficient working, the Pretoria Pit, near Bolton, Lancashire, proved the grave of 340 miners. "I should have thought," said the managing-director, after the terrible catastrophe, "that this was one of the safest collieries in the country, and one of the last for an explosion to take place in. There seems no explanation," he continued, "beyond the suggestion that it arose from a defective lamp or the striking of a match."

The latter may or may not have been the cause of the explosion which sent these 340 men to an untimely death, but it is a fact, fully recognized by mining experts, that, although coal-miners carry their lives in their hands, they sometimes act, in spite of the strict rules and regulations which govern the working of big mines, with carelessness which is astounding.

Error of Judgment

The president of the Staffordshire, Warwickshire, and Worcestershire Colliery Managers Association stated recently, for instance, that "a little more carefulness on the part of the miners and closer supervision and stricter discipline on the part of the management would do incalculably more good than all the rescue apparatus yet invented."

It is generally admitted that the terrible calamity at Hamstead, near Birmingham, in 1908, when twenty-five men lost their lives, and the Maypole disaster in the same year, resulting in seventy-six men being killed, were due almost entirely to some form of carelessness. The Maypole disaster was due to an ignition of fire-damp and coal dust caused by the firing of too heavy a charge of explosive. This was, to say the least, a grave error of judgment, but experts describe it as carelessness.

These twin evils of carelessness and slack officials are shown up in all their ugliness by comments made by the Chief Inspector of Mines—Professor Redmayne—when, in reporting on the Hampstead disaster, he clearly stated that it was primarily caused by workmen separating bundles of candles by burning the wicks or string instead of cutting them.

From personal experience in the Welsh and Midland coal-fields the writer has found that much of the carelessness is due to an excess of self-confidence. A veteran miner described it as "the working out of the old adage, 'Familiarity breeds contempt.'"

Fatal December

With the exception of the explosion at Oaks Colliery, near Barnsley, in December, 1866, when over 380 persons were killed, the disaster at Pretoria Pit is the heaviest in the mining history of the kingdom, and certainly the worst in Lancashire. The nearest approach to these disasters in the last fifty years were the Ebbw Vale disaster in 1878, when 268 lives were lost, and the disaster at the Albion Colliery in Glamorganshire in 1894, which resulted in the death of 286 persons. Over 200 lives were lost in the Hartley Colliery disaster of 1862, as well as in the High Blantyre disaster of 1877. We have had no disaster in this country, however, which has had such appalling results as that which occurred at Lens, in France, in 1906, when no fewer than 1,230 miners perished. It is a curious fact that December is a very bad month for pit disasters. Within the last forty years six disasters have occurred in Lancashire, and altogether since 1860 there have been twenty colliery disasters in different parts of the country in the month of December, resulting in a total death-roll of 1,500 miners.

DOUKHOBOUR SETTLERS

Ten Thousand Acres From Them in British Columbia

Some two thousand Doukhobour settlers belonging to the Russian collectivist community residing at present in the province of Saskatchewan are proceeding to Southern British Columbia, where ten thousand acres of fruit lands have been purchased for their accommodation at a point about 30 miles from Nelson in the Kootenay district. These people, who originally came from the Caucasus, are expert horticulturists, and their experience renders them suitable for the conditions that obtain in the valleys of the province in question. A thousand acres are already under cultivation and planted with extensive orchards of apples and pears, cherries and plums, peaches and apricots. A system of irrigation canals to utilize the water from the mountain streams will be carried out, which, when completed, will permit the whole area to be brought under cultivation. Fruit preserving and canning factories will be built. Unlimited markets for both fresh and preserved fruits are available in the prairie district.

HOUSING OF WORKMEN

The first step in an important scheme of housing has been taken in South London. A large island block of old-fashioned houses facing on Elsted Street, in the Rodney Road district, Walworth, has been acquired by the trustees of a fund for the better housing of the working classes, and within a year some 200 of these houses will be replaced by nine huge blocks of modern dwellings, capable of accommodating more than 600 persons. The ground acquired consists of 60,000 square feet.

In the sixteenth century no lady was considered in full dress unless she had a mirror in her breast. It was oval in shape, about four by six inches in size.

HIS MIND IS A BLANK

So Says Mr. Justice Middleton Concerning Michael Fraser.

Divisional Court at Toronto Concludes Its Inquiry Into the Mental State of the Eighty-Four-Year-Old Bridegroom at Midland—Justice Teetzel Says Old Man Is of Unsound Mind—Love Letter to Lawyer.

Toronto, May 23.—The contest between the relatives of Michael Fraser and Mrs. Fraser as to the sanity of the eighty-four-year-old Midland bridegroom, was concluded in the Divisional Court at Osgoode Hall yesterday afternoon. Judgment was reserved in order to allow the counsel for both sides to submit cases to the registrar in support of their argument.

During the evidence it was shown that Michael Fraser was addicted to drink and that he was on more than one occasion so intoxicated as to lose the use of his reasoning faculties. It was, however, shown that he had not been kept under the influence of drugs prior to his marriage to Miss Robertson.

John King, K.C., counsel for Mrs. Fraser, several times attacked the action of the court in examining Fraser while in an hotel at Midland. He claimed that it was the first time in history that such a course had been taken.

Prior to the visit of the presiding judges to Midland, they secured information regarding Fraser's actions, both in business and social life during the past year. When questioning the old man it was found that all matters, even those of greatest importance, were complete blanks to him.

"We found," said Mr. Justice Middleton, "that his recollection of affairs had entirely vanished and that he was practically a pensioner on Mrs. Fraser's bounty."

Mr. Justice Teetzel seemed to be of the opinion that Fraser was not of sound mind, and in support of this conviction asked Mrs. Fraser's counsel if a sane man would take a love letter proposing marriage to his solicitor, as was done shortly before the wedding took place.

Mr. King did not discuss the question.

Premiers Dined by King.

London, May 23.—The Imperial Conference was formally inaugurated by a luncheon at Buckingham Palace yesterday afternoon, at which King George and Queen Mary entertained the visiting colonial premiers and their wives and daughters.

Most of the members of royalty who are now in London were present at the luncheon, as were Premier Asquith and Mrs. Asquith and the officials of the Colonial Office.

King George was markedly attentive to the visiting statesmen.

The conference will open to-day at the Foreign Office, when Premier Asquith, in his address of welcome, will outline the Government's program.

One More Dance

It Turned a Bachelor Away From a Chit to a Woman

By GEORGE L. PARKS

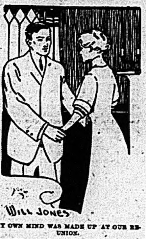
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

While there is no fixed rule respecting the comparative ages of husband and wife, there is a likelihood that a very young man will seek at least the companionship of a woman older than himself. But let him pass over ten or twenty years and ten to one he will be ambitious to win some girl in her teens.

At eighteen I fulfilled the first part of this statement. I was an oldish sort of fellow, fond of study and reading books that youngsters of my age seldom look into. I was half through college and taking a good stand in my class, but I was not tied down to the courses I pursued. I was rather thinking how I might utilize them. I had but little to do with the young ladies who were of an appropriate age for collegians. I found them mostly given to commonplace chitchat, with which I had no sympathy. They were schoolgirls only beginning to know how to entertain a grown man.

During my junior year in college I formed the acquaintance of Leona Whitney, a young lady of twenty-six. I think she was disposed to be interested in that freshness of youth there was about me, especially as it showed itself not in college pranks and athletics, but in a certain original way I had in looking upon a world just opening up to me. At any rate, she liked to chat with me, preferring evidently to hear me talk to talking herself. At first she treated me as a half grown man, but by the time I was ready to leave college I could see no difference in her bearing toward me and the other young men of her acquaintance.

All this while, though I was unconscious of it, Miss Whitney was exciting in me feelings other than those pertaining to friendship. I would call upon her in the evening when I should be studying, intending to do the latter during the later hours of the night. But on returning to my room and taking down my books I found myself going over in my mind the topics we had discussed rather than those I was to be called to recite upon the next day, or, rather, I would be thinking of Miss Whitney herself. She would thrust herself between me and my studies in an aggravating but at the same time pleasing way.



MY OWN MIND WAS MADE UP AT OUR REUNION.

However, I was assigned a part at commencement and acquitted myself fairly well. Meanwhile I had discovered that I wished Leona Whitney to be my companion through that career upon which I was about to enter. Immediately before leaving college I made her a proposition of marriage. I had a certain dread since I was so juvenile and she so mature of facing her and breaking over the line that had thus far separated us. So I wrote her a note in which in a very few words I asked her to be my wife.

I left college a couple of days later, and before having received an answer I left my address with the registrar so that any letters coming for me might be forwarded. Every day after my return home I looked eagerly for some word from Miss Whitney. None came.

With all the sensitiveness of a youngster who had offered himself to a woman considerably older than himself, and one, too, who was not without offers from mature men, some of them desirable parties, I made up my mind that the lady considered my offer in the light of presumption and had not deigned a reply. This view of the case was certainly not flattering to her, but when sensitiveness comes into a question valid reasons take flight.

Twelve years passed. One day it was announced that the government was about to erect a building in the town in which I lived. A year later it was finished and the postoffice moved into it. Going to the door one morning to receive my mail from the carrier, he handed me a letter, at the same time giving me an explanation with regard to it. In tearing away the fixtures of the old postoffice several letters had been discovered that from time to time had slipped down out of sight. The letter he brought me was one of these.

It was postmarked at the town where was located the college at which I was graduated, had been forwarded, and the date stamped on it was just twelve years before. It had been addressed to me at the college and forwarded. The handwriting was that of a lady, but unfamiliar to me.

I opened it without any thought whatever as to who had written it; but, looking first at the signature, I saw it was Leona Whitney. It was a reply to my proposal of marriage.

It is singular to be transported by some incident backward in time. Holding that letter in my hand, I was again a youngster of twenty, in love with a woman I considered far above me. Then it occurred to me that Miss Whitney must now be within a few years of forty, while I was thirty-two, and old at that.

While these thoughts were flashing through me I began to read the letter. It told me that the lady had been touched at the expression of the tender feelings I had avowed for her and considered my proposal, to say the least, an honor. But there were reasons why she should hesitate. While I was far more matured than most men of my age, it must be remembered that in ten or a dozen years I would still be a young man, while she would be past middle age. She confessed that this was her only reason for not returning a favorable reply to my proposal. She suggested that I was just at the beginning of my career and if as time passed I felt the same she would be pleased to hear from me again.

While I was reading this letter I was sensible of having passed from my youth to that period where a man begins to feel that young girls consider him old. I had been much flattered that my recent attentions to a girl of eighteen had been looked upon with favor. I had taken her out a number of times and persuaded myself that the tender passion was stealing into my aging breast. But I was not and never had been anything of a butterfly. I was and always had been a serious man. I found it somewhat irksome to go about as an escort to a young girl to amusements in which I took no interest. The very night before I received the epistle from a distant past I had attended my little girl to a ball where she had kept me for "just one more dance" till 3 o'clock in the morning.

It is not strange that I was affected by Miss Whitney's reply to a proposition made twelve years before. The dozen years she had spoken of had passed and while I was still on the lower side of middle age she had passed beyond it. Nevertheless my interest in bachelor life—if I ever had any—had died down until its pleasures had turned to gall. My recent attendance upon a society bud during the small hours of the morning was still fresh in my memory, while the insipid nothings I had been obliged to say and listen to nauseated me.

I wrote at once to a relative of Miss Whitney asking what had become of her, and received a reply that she lived in the house in which she had always lived, and in which I had so often called upon her while I was a student. She was beloved and respected by all who knew her and my correspondent wondered that though she had received many offers she had accepted none.

A few days after the receipt of this information I was in Miss Whitney's home and sent up my card with the letter I had so recently received, having underscored on the envelope the postmark showing the day it was mailed and another giving the day it was received.

When Miss Whitney came down to receive me, with considerable embarrassment in her manner and a telltale blush on her cheek, I was surprised that she did not show her years by half a dozen, and there was not a gray hair in her head. She looked much younger for a woman than I for a man.

However, I had not come to see her for beauty, but in the hope of a renewal of that companionship I had enjoyed a decade before. She told me that she had been at a loss to understand my silence, for since her letter had not been returned to her through the dead letter office she could not doubt that I had received it.

During an hour's conversation with her the fact became impressed upon my mind that I was not the man to marry a chit of a girl and that I would find the companionship I needed in Miss Whitney. I received a promise that she would correspond with me, and since my home was not a long journey from hers I made her a number of visits. But my own mind was made up at our reunion, and fortunately I had only to wait for the lady to be satisfied that I would not be likely to regret the step I was bent upon taking.

That regretting is one of the most improbable things in the world is manifest in the fact that we have been married twenty years and are more companionable by far than at the time of the wedding. More than this, our affection has increased steadily, and it seems to me that with us the period of romance has been inverted, coming as it has in our old age. Indeed, not a year passes but we find ourselves more dependent upon each other.

I never go by a certain building in the town in which we live without remembering that the old trap it replaced for a dozen years contained the first answer to my proposal to my wife. And associated with this remembrance is another—I think of the maiden who kept me till 3 o'clock in the morning waiting for that one more dance.

I feel very kindly disposed to that maiden, for it was her giddiness that kept me waiting, gapping, at times nodding, while she was flitting about like a butterfly. And was it not this lesson she gave me in the nick of time that turned me to a more satisfactory love?

COLOR PHOTOS NOW PRODUCED

Remarkable Achievements in a London Studio—A Talk With the Inventor

The secret of taking and printing photographs in color—a possibility sought after as eagerly by photographers as the Philosopher's Stone by the alchemists of old—seems now to have been achieved. At the Dover Street Studios numbers of photographs of well-known people in which the most delicate tints of eyes and cheeks and hair, of jewels and laces and silks, had been reproduced on paper, sensitized by an entirely new process, so as to be an exact facsimile to the actual colors seen by the "eye of the camera." "Although colored plates of a kind have been produced," said the inventor, Mr. Hamburger, "I can claim that this is the first time that a true color-photograph has been printed upon one and the same sheet of paper without any touching up or "transmitting.' Hitherto color photographs have been reproduced by the three-color process—the primary colors, red, yellow and blue, being laid one on top of another and blending into something that will pass for the real picture. With this method, however, it was hardly ever possible to get a pure black or a pure grey. This we have managed to achieve. I must not explain the exact way it is done as it is a patent, but the result is a photograph that can be true to the most infinitesimal details, and indeed 'cannot lie.' Take, for instance, this photograph," and Mr. Hamburger held up a portrait of a lady whose complexion did certainly seem a little too obviously compounded of the lily and the rose. "Now this lady happened to have 'made-up' her face, imagining that the camera would not know. We implored her not to, but she was obdurate. So here you are, paint and all. Sergent himself could not be more candid. At the same time where truth is beauty the picture will be beautiful. You see this portrait of Miss Lily Brayton. It was taken immediately after her Australian tour. You will notice that she is a little sunburnt, but not a whit the less charming. Here is another of our triumphs—a lady in a black satin dress, with sleeves of black lace. You see how the delicate flesh tints show through, yet without any blurring. If you were to look at it through a microscope you would see every thread of the lace.

"As yet, I am sorry to say, we have not been able to take any open-air photographs. Sunlight itself is too variable for our purposes, but a special flashlight of our own has the photographic power of sunlight, and the colors are exactly the same as if they were seen in the full blaze of the sun. Of course, if people want to be taken under different circumstances, 'in the dusk with the light behind them,' or in the glow of the fire-light, —well, we can arrange our lighting effects to that end. As yet, however, the atmosphere of landscape remains the painter's monopoly. For how long it will remain so is for the future to decide. Our method has the advantage of being a business proposition. There is no 'if' or 'when' about it—no interminable delays. Given our sitter we can deliver the colored plate in a few minutes, and can print off as many copies as are wanted in about three weeks. We have already had orders by the thousands."

Among the celebrities who have already sat for their color photographs are Prince Alexander of Teck, the Gaekwar and Maharanee of Baroda, Mme. Rejane, Lord Esher, Mme. Pavlova, and Sir Joseph Lyons.

A spoon which permits the most careless persons to sip soup noiselessly has been invented recently.

WOMAN'S WORLD

FASHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS CHIT-CHAT

Woman's Social Rule.

An English woman who has been to India, speaking of society there, and particularly of the native question, said that East and West will never amalgamate until the Oriental realizes that all social intercourse is arranged by women, and encourages his women to arrange his for him. The Hindoo may be allowed to visit freely at an English house, but unless his hostess and her husband, too, may call upon his wife, and the latter may move freely in the world, the gulf between the two nations must remain fixed. In Europe who chooses and welcomes the guests, who receives and ostracises, (men know numbers of persons in a sort of a way whom their wives do not know, which is really no better than not knowing them at all), except the mistress of the home? Women are the sovereigns of Western society—in fact, there can be no society as we understand it over which women do not preside. The grace of feminine manners, the swish of skirts the atmosphere of the drawing-room, satisfy certain aesthetic instincts and encourage intimacy in a way that no exclusively masculine gathering can ever achieve.'

Negligees Rich or Simple.

The picturesque and graceful drapery arrangements, the long, unbroken lines in vogue, the softness and beauty of the materials and the wonderful color harmonies all conspire to make the handsome type of negligee more beautiful than ever. The Greek and the Empire echoes of the classic inspire many of the most attractive negligees, and it is difficult to tell sometimes where the boudoir gown ends and the evening frock begins, so thoroughly have the picturesque and classic drapery ideas dominated the field of evening dress; but now one begins to find fichu and cape lines creeping into some of the dressy negligee robes, and combinations of Louis XVI. and First Empire succeed in being charming despite chronological incongruity.

A silk or satin slip, draped with voile of another color is a general model in buodoir gowns. An attractive robe of this character is in smoke gray chiffon, veiling a luscious yellow of ripe apricot tone. Lilac or violet over pink is often repeated in the French negligee robes; and a note of rich purple is frequently introduced upon robes of delicate hue.

Among the simpler negligee garments there are innumerable pretty things in lingerie materials, many of them taking on Empire lines instead of falling quite loose. Some particularly practical and dainty little robes are in striped challis, trimmed only by big fichu collars of fine embroidered musin and lace.

These big collars figure very prominently among negligee robes of all kinds, but while exceedingly dainty and becoming they muss so easily that they seem scarcely practical for very informal lounging wear.

Little loose draped robes of white India silk are made over colors, pink or yellow, or blue, or light green, made with hems stitched in fancy stitchery with floss of the color of the lining.

DELICATE CHILDREN

Made Strong and Healthy by Vinol.

"I wish I could induce every mother who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol.

"It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed. It tastes so good she loved to take it—not a bit of cod liver oil taste.—Mrs. C. W. Stump. Canton, Ohio." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up your puny, delicate ailing children is because it is a combination—the medicinal body building elements of cod liver oil, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron. It contains no oil, and children love to take it and it cannot harm the most delicate child.

If we could induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength creator for your child, and you do not find it all we claim, we will return your money on demand. J. S. McKeown.

SUNSHINE FURNACE
McClary's

We make Sunshine Furnace fire-pot in two sections—so constructed with fins that they throw off every unit of heat, so constructed with straight walls that it is impossible for ashes to gather and intercept the heat, so contructed that the upper section can expand independent of the lower, thus making it impossible in a Sunshine Furnace for any heat to loaf around the fire-pot, any heat to be nullified by ashes, any cracks to take place as a result of the shock following contraction or expansion.

The fire-pot naturally bears the brunt of a furnace's work, and it bears it just in proportion to its original strength.

Because steel is more powerful than gray iron, we make Sunshine Furnace firepot of semi-steel. This is an exclusive feature, and indicates that in Sunshine Furnace firepot alone you find smooth-as-glass surface, secure maximum fire-resisting strength, can rely on only minimum disintegration and can be assured of long life.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

SCIENCE OF GOVERNING

British Empire Has Contributed to World's Experience.

Duke of Connaught, In Speech at the Royal Colonial Institute, Says Science of Government as Developed by British People Should Be Given a Place in University Curricula—Sir Wilfrid Speaks.

London, May 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Duke of Connaught, presiding at the Royal Colonial Institute dinner, said that the Imperial Conference undoubtedly worked well, being a consolidation of the Empire, welding the parts into an indissoluble whole. The solution of self-government by the dominions was the most important British contribution to the science of Government. He earnestly hoped that the universities of the Empire would give this a full, definite and compulsory place in their curriculum. He alluded to the marvelous emigration to Canada, and congratulated Canada and Newfoundland in the fisheries award, which had been accepted loyally in the United States. In Canadian naval matters the closest connection with the British navy must and would be the aim of both Governments.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in responding, said that if any doubted he could assure them that Canada intended remaining a nation within the Empire. There was a condition that might be compared with an adolescent, having been no account, and suddenly developed into full vigor. The United States was the country of the nineteenth century, Canada of the twentieth, but Canada overshadowed every country.

By her neighbor there were on the soil of Canada to-day 500,000 who five years ago were American citizens and not loyal subjects of King George. If any one thought that therein lay danger to British connection he must have a poor idea of the value, force and strength of British institutions. So long as the latter spelt freedom and prosperity, so long would Canada remain what it is. Sir Wilfrid assured the Duke of Connaught of a hearty welcome awaiting him, not least from Americans who had taken up their abode in Canada.

Premier Fisher, also responding, said that the best thing he could wish to happen to Australia would be to be along side such a population as was Canada. If Australia had sixty or seventy millions of people of similar ideas on its borders, invasion would not be feared.

Sir Joseph Ward thought that the instructions issued by the Colonial Office to Governors-General throughout the whole of their terms should state that they ought not to remain in the bounds of the dominions, but from time to time make an exchange. Why should Connaught remain a whole term in Canada? Why not a few months in Australia or New Zealand?

A miniature cyclone, accompanied by thunder, lightning, rain and hail, caused havoc in the Norwood section of St. Boniface, Man., last evening, tearing up trees, overturning barns and sheds, breaking windows, and causing hundreds of dollars' worth of damage.

Killed by Lightning.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 25.—George Sayers, 21 years of age, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon by lightning, while engaged on cement floor work in the west end. Sayers was engaged by Kidd & Co., and while the storm was at its worst sought shelter with the rest beneath a tree. A bolt descended, killing Sayers instantly and prostrating three others of the men who were with him. The deceased is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Sayers of Bay street. He was unmarried.

Passenger Drops Dead.

Quebec, May 25.—Mrs. Sarah Turner, a third-class passenger on the steamer Royal George dropped dead in the immigration sheds just after disembarking from the vessel yesterday afternoon. She was going to meet a family named Matthews in Toronto. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of death. The coroner was notified and will hold an inquest.

BISHOPS ANGRY.

They Violently Protest at Portuguese Action.

Lisbon, May 25.—A collective protest of the bishops against the separation law has been issued. It consists of a long exposition in four sections under the heads of injustice, oppression, spoliation, and mockery, and concludes by declaring that the bishops, priests and faithful will always unite in manifesting their loyalty and fidelity to the country.

The violence of this protest has caused a sensation. It vigorously attacks the Provisional Government and declares that the law is not one of separation, but of annexation of the church. After being despoiled of all property and authority, the bishops declare the church has been placed in an abject position under the heel of the Government.

The protest is signed by the Patriarch of Lisbon; three archbishops and seven bishops.

The civil governors throughout Portugal have received orders from the central Government to inaugurate an inventory of all churches and chapels.

According to the newspapers here, the patriarch of Lisbon has informed Bernardo Machado, Minister of Foreign Affairs, that the report that the prelates had decided to close the churches in Portugal is untrue.

Pope Will Protest.

Rome, May 25.—The Osservatore Romano follows despatches from Lisbon concerning measures taken by the Portuguese Government as a result of the bishops' protest, by the announcement that an encyclical will shortly be issued in which the Pope will protest energetically against the persecution of the church by the Portuguese Government, and in a special manner against the unjust and oppressive law of separation.

Plotters on the Frontier.

Madrid, May 25.—The situation here is evidenced by the fact that the Government is despatching reinforcements to the north. The official explanation of this, as given out, is that the Government is aware that monarchist plotters, with 2,000 mercenaries, are on the Spanish frontier and intend to cross to Portugal at the first opportunity that the inhabitants will support their cause.

The Government, however, it is said, does not look for a revolutionary movement. It believes the disturbances will not go beyond rioting, but, nevertheless, all military precautions are being taken.

As next Sunday, which is election day, approaches, rumors of conspiracies, royal plots and Republican factional differences multiply. Nevertheless, order continues. The Government in its declaration issued yesterday regarding the elections, when members of the assembly will be chosen, recites the reforms accomplished by the Provisional Government and the improvement in the public finances. No loans have been made and offers of loans from British and French bankers have been declined. Portuguese consols have risen from 66 to 67.

SHOT WIFE AND SELF.

Toronto Man Arrested After Trying to Slay His Spouse.

Toronto, May 25.—Crazed with drink, which he had been taking for some days, J. B. Phillips, 264 St. George street, a mining engineer, 42 years of age, shot his wife in the right breast and then put a bullet through his own shoulder at his home at 01.30 last nght.

He was taken to the Yonge street police station, after being overpowered by David Johnston, 266 St. George street, who was summoned to the spot by the woman's screams. He was arrested by Chief Inspector David Archibald, who was called from his house at 273 St. George street, and is charged with shooting with intent to kill.

Phillips and his wife had been at the races yesterday afternoon. Phillips had been drinking heavily all week, and when his wife went up to the servants' room, having put their two little girls to bed, she heard her husband coming upstairs. When he reached the doorway, he leveled an automatic pistol at her and fired. The bullet entered the right breast and came out over the right shoulder. The man then turned the pistol on himself and put a shot in his own left shoulder. He then went downstairs. Neither the wounds of Phillips or his wife are dangerous.

Fires Threatened Village.

Halifax, May 25.—Forest fires at Hubbard's Cove Tuesday afternoon threatened the destruction of the village, but fortunately the efforts of a hundred men, who turned out to fight the flames and the circumstances of the wind, prevented a general conflagration. The fire started from a spark from a locomotive on the Halifax & Southwestern Railway, and was carried along by a northeasterly wind. A house and barn owned by Frank Schwartz was destroyed, at a loss of $2,000. Valuable trees fronting on Major, Drewin's property had to be cut down to save the house, and other minor damage was done. At six o'clock in the evening the fire was under control.

Asquith Won't Say.

London, May 25.—In the House of Commons, Mr. George Terrell asked the Prime Minister whether under the Government scheme of home rule for Ireland the Irish Parliament would have similar powers to those possessed by the self-governing dominions to enter on a preferential trading treaty with the United States to the detriment of British manufacturers.

Mr. Asquith did not feel it his duty to answer such a question.

Victoria Day at Halifax.

Halifax, May 25.—Victoria Day was celebrated with eclat throughout Nova Scotia. The flagstaff on the citadel was gay with bunting and the flagship Niobe was gaily decorated.

Business almost completely suspended and the people gave themselves up to recreaton and sport. Professional baseball matches were the chief attraction in the city and amateur matches were played in the province.

DROWNED AT TORONTO

Two Young Women Perish While Out in Sailboat.

While Out With Trinity Students Miss Blain, a Teacher, and Miss Hicks, a Pipil at Toronto College of Music, Are Thrown Into Water—Women Tire and Go Down, While Men Are Rescued by Steamer.

Toronto, May 25.—Once more a holiday sailing accident has claimed two lives and, once again, it is two young women taken sailing by two young men, and their bodies left in the waters of the lake. The fatality occurred when a hired dingy containing Miss Hazel Hicks, 18 years old, of Shelburne, Ont.; Miss Olive Blain, 22 years old, of Barrie; Harold Clark and C. J. Wolfe of Trinity College, was upset in Lake Ontario. The boat was upset while Clark, who was controlling the sheet and handling the tiller, was attempting to bring the little craft about in a heavy but steady wind.

The story of the tragedy, as told by Wolfe, is that the party left Dean's boathouse at Sunnyside at noon and ran out freely to the point where the accident happened. This was about 12.30. Clark decided to bring the boat about and come up into the wind, hauling in his sheet. Wolfe thinks that the girls did not shift as directed. He ducked his head to avoid the boom and a moment later felt the boat going over.

He threw all his weight to windward to try and maintain the balance, but was thrown into the water. When he came up, one of the girls was clinging to the boat to either side of him.

OLIVE BLAIN.

He was at the middle of the boat and Clark was at the stern. Each of them helped hold one of the girls to the boat and one of them was holding on to Wolfe. They seemed not to be very badly frightened and were calling for help and waving to attract attention.

Wolfe says that the waves were very high and kept them changing positions constantly as the boat rolled beneath them. All were at the open side of the boat as she lay half over in the waves.

After they had been hanging to the boat for about seven or eight minutes, Wolfe was washed off and went under. When he came up the girls were gone. He had no idea that they were about to let go. Clark was very weak and Wolfe was just going to help him when help came. The steamer was seen to alter her course in their direction and shortly afterwards sounded three blasts of her whistle and a moment later lowered away a lifeboat, which took the men off the boat. They were taken to the Turbinia, and from the dock were removed in the police ambulance to the university, where Clark was put to bed in a state of collapse.

Miss Hicks was a student at the Toronto College of Music and Miss Blain a teacher at the same place. Clark is a third year Arts student and Wolfe a third year Anglican divinity man.

When word of the drowning was taken to the girls' boarding-house, messages were sent to Miss Hicks' parents at Shelburne, and to Miss Blain's brother, at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

The bodies were lost in water too deep for dragging and it is likely that the friends will have to wait for the bodies to come to the surface. The spot where they were drowned it outside of the city limits and therefore comes under the jurisdiction of the county authorities.

One of the girls had been out with Clarke sailing on Tuesday night. The other girl met both men for the first time yesterday. Wolfe had met neither of the girls until yesterday. Both men could swim and Clarke is said by Wolfe to be an expert sailor, but Wolfe says that he himself knows nothing of sailing.

Miss Blain wore a blue suit and sailor hat and Miss Hicks a light grey striped suit.

Two Drownings at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, May 25.—Eber Jones, son, and Miss Maggie McLeod, sister-in-law of Rev. J. Phillips Jones, pastor of St. John's Park Presbyterian Church here, were drowned yesterday north of Kildonan Park while boating. Jones was writing for his matriculation. Both are well known.

George E. Hunt and his sister Jessie were drowned out of a canoe at Elm Park last evening. Miss Maud Steele and A. J. Hunt were in the canoe also, but escaped. The party had been out at the regatta and were swamped in the waves caused by a sudden wind storm. The bodies have not been found. They lived in the Bettses Block, corner of Portage avenue and Carlton street.

Drowning In Grand River.

Berlin, Ont., May 25.—Henry Kraemer, aged 24, was drowned in the Grand River at Bridgeport Tuesday night, and his brother, Albert almost met a similar fate in attempting to rescue him, being rescued by another young man named Hintz.

PRAISES RECIPROCITY.

New War Secretary Believes In Continental Policy.

Boston, May 25.—Henry L. Stimson, the Secretary of War, in an address before the Intercolonial Club of this city last night, endorsed the arguments in favor of the reciprocity agreement made by President Taft, as the arguments of "broad and lofty national interest," and as appropriate to the statesmanship "which, not content with mere lip service to party formulae, recognizes the economic and social facts and tendencies of to-day and makes wide provision in respect to them."

The speaker reviewed in brief the provisions of the agreement and urged its enactment into law on grounds of national and continental policy.

"It has been thoughtlessly suggested that such a trade agreement pointed toward political annexation of Canada. Nothing could be further from the real fact. There can be no surer preventive of agitation for political union than to remove the irritation inherent in trade restrictions. The strongest motive that has led men to urge political union between Canada and the United States has been the belief that in no other way could they secure mutual advantageous trade relations.

"But apart from social and political justification," continued Stimson, the reciprocity agreement stands firmly upon the rock of political benefit. I do not mean that some inconvenience, or even possible hardship, may not be caused to specific individuals or specific localities, but there can be no doubt that in the balance sheet of the whole nation the resulting benefits far outweigh such instances.

DEFERRED ACTION.

Diaz Refusal to Resign Starts Fatal Riot In Mexico City.

Mexico City, May 25.—Enraged by the announcement that President Diaz and Vice-President Corral would not resign before to-day, spectators from the galleries of the Chamber of Deputies late last night started a riot in the streets that resulted in at least three deaths and the wounding of many persons by volleys fired by police and troops.

In the midst of it all, President Diaz is on a sick bed. It was learned on good authority yesterday that despite recent optimistic reports of his condition the President has shown several degrees of fever for the last five days. He declines to see all visitors, including members of the diplomatic corps, and takes nothing but liquid nourishment. Madame Diaz told a visitor yesterday that the President's principal diet was warm milk. His condition is regarded as serious by members of his family.

Telegraphic reports were received last night stating that demonstrations are in progress in Tehuantepec, Guadalajara and Zacatecas. The federal governor of Jalisico, Manuel Cuesta Gallardo, was driven out. At Zacatecas the troops fired on the mob, killing four. Further details are lacking.

In Hamilton.

Hamilton, May 25.—Hamiltonians observed the holiday in a very quiet manner. Sporting events occupied the centre of the stage, with two road races, and a baseball game being pulled off in the morning, while a baseball game in the afternoon provided the principal entertainment for the citizens. The 13th Royal Regiment, in practically full force, spent the day in St. Catharines, and returned to the city at 11 p.m., while the 91st enjoyed the Scotch hospitality of the inhabitants of Fergus for the day. Both railroads and the steamboats did a rushing business, every train and vessel leaving the city being crowded. The weather was more or less threatening all day, but a light shower at noon was the only rainfall.

Will Deport Couple.

Quebec, May 25.—As the result of the examination by the special board of examiners appointed by the immigration authorities, it was finally decided that both Mr. D'Abbadie and Miss Helena Benoit, who were detained here on the arrival of the steamer Lake Manitoba last Monday on the technical charge of being undesirable citizens, have been ordered to be deported. Miss Benoit has appealed to the Minister of the Interior, denying that there had been any impropriety between her and her former employer. It is understood, however, that both will be sent back to England by the Lake Manitoba.

Wholesale Arrests In Montreal.

Montreal, May 25.—Fifty-eight boys and four men were arrested last night by the police and plainclothes men, for violating the controllers' orders against setting off fireworks within the city limits. Otherwise Victoria Day in Montreal was uneventful. There was little decoration in evidence except on the ships in the harbor.

Intermittent rain kept the crowds away from the various sporting attractions. Many factories and stores failed to close, as to-day, Ascension Day, is also a public holiday in this province.

Barns Burned.

Welland, May 25.—The electrical storm on Monday night caused considerable loss by fire in the section west of Welland. The following losses are reported: Ennie Priestman, Forks road, large barn and shed, with contents; loss $1,600, no insurance. Oakley Beamer, Boyle, barn, 80 by 40, and shed, cattle, buggies and grain destroyed; loss $2,800, insurance $1,200. William Lapp, Lowbanks, barn, with contents; loss $1,500, insurance $500.

On Sunday the mercury registered 92 degrees in the shade, and that was warm enough for May 21 any place. Monday the thermometer registered 11 degrees lower than on Sunday, and yesterday 17 1-2 degrees lower, which constitutes a drop of 28 1-2 degrees in two days.

Trees were stripped of their foliage and all crops were leveled to the ground. The fruit in this section will be a total failure.

Heart Failure From Heat.

Montreal, May 25.—Another death was recorded as a result of the sweltering weather that hung over the city.

"VICTORIA DAY" WAS LOYALLY CELEBRATED

Large Gathering at the Ball Games and Sports—Excellent Programme Was Marred by Rain—The T. A. S. and Steel Company Won the Ball Matches—Albert College Had a Large Margin in The Athletic Events—The Holiday Was Thoroughly Enjoyed by All

Another Victoria Day has come and gone, and its celebration was no less loyal than usual. In this city the day was generally observed as a holiday, but little business being transacted. In the early port of the morning many left the city for Toronto, Picton, Kingston and Madoc, where the day was commemorated in a most fitting manner. Those remaining in the city were entertained by witnessing two baseball matches and a programme of sports carried out in the afternoon on Victoria Park under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. The evening was given up to the younger element, who for some time made considerable noise and smoke by the discharge of fire crackers and other fireworks. During the day and evening only one accident was recorded, and that fortunately was not as serious as it was at first thought to be. That is recorded elsewhere.

No Road Race.

In the morning at 10.30 a three mile road race was scheduled to take place for a silver cup presented by the Daily Ontario, but the event failed to materialize for want of entries.

Baseball.

The baseball matches, the first of the city league schedule, attracted a good crowd and in both cases the spectators got the worth of their money. In the morning the T.A.S. and the Ontarios were the opposing teams. Mayor Ackerman pitched the first ball, and His Worship, although somewhat out of practice, landed the ball over the plate. The game was then proceeded with in earnest. Mr Wm. Cochrane, the official umpire was master of ceremonies. The Ontarios at the ninth innings were in the lead by one run, but the T.A.S in their half of the innings made two runs after two men were down. The game was snappy and both teams played good ball. The final score was 5 to 4 in favor of the T.A.S. The line up of the teams was as follows:—

Ontarios.		T. A. S.

Afternoon Game.

The attendance of spectators at the afternoon game was large and much interest was manifested in the match Coleman Flats and the Steel Company of Canada, better known as the Rolling Mills. The game was interrupted during its progress by rain and was not concluded until about six o'clock. The Steel Company of Canada, proved to be the victors, after a hard fought game, by a score of 12 to 11. In the early part of the game the Rolling Mills team took a decided lead but the Coleman Flats tied the score in the eighth innings. In the concluding innings they were blanked, whilst the Rolling Mills players secured one run, thus winning the game. During the game "Skit" Campbell, catcher for the Rolling Mills, split his thumb. The final score was 12 to 11 in favor of the Rolling Mills. The line up of the teams was as follows:—

Rolling Mills.		Coleman Flats.

ATHLETIC MEET

The score by innings was as follows

Rolling Mills—3 3 2 0 0 2 0 1 0 1—12.

Coleman Flats—1 0 0 3 0 3 2 1 1 0—11

The athletic meet held on Victoria Park in the afternoon was the means of attracting a large crowd of spectators, who enjoyed the sports, but not the rain, which for a few minutes came down in torrents, drenching not a few. The result of the various events which were carried out was that the representatives from Albert College succeeded in carrying off the bulk of the prizes, securing no less than three cups, in addition to some medals. The events and the winners were as follows:—

100 yards dash—Owing to the number of entries this event had to be run off in heats, three being necessary to decide the result. In the first heat C. Pritchard was 1st; G. Ketcheson 2nd, and W. Wood 3rd. In the second heat R. Smith was 1st, R. Vancott 2nd, and D. Rowe 3rd. In the final heat G. Ketcheson won by a narrow margin; C. Pritchard 2nd, and R. Smith 3rd.

The time of the first heat was 11 sec.; 2nd heat 11 2-5 sec; and 3rd heat 11 sec.

220 yards, Juniors—V. Ward 1st, J. A. Greow 2nd, H. Yeomans 3rd.

One mile run—There were eleven entries, but all the starters did not finish. R. McGorman, of Trenton, 1st J. Sherman 2nd, and H. Smith 3rd. The time was not taken for this event

Senior Relay Race—Only one team of four was entered in this event, namely, representatives from Albert College. The race was once around the track. Those competing were G. Ketcheson, C. Pritchard, R. Vancott and H. Smith.

Obstacle Race—Three boys entered in this event and were compelled to jump over some seats, run up the band stand and jump off. The result was: H. Yeomans, 1st; M. Hitchon, 2nd; C. Bowyer, 3rd.

Pole Vault.—Whilst this event was in progress rain commenced to fall in such abundance as to necessitate its discontinuance and it was not completed. G. and A. Steele tied for 1st place, both clearing 7 ft., 9 ins.

The officials were:—

FEED YOUNG GIRLS.

Must have Right Feed while Growing

Great care should be taken at the critical period when the young girl is just merging into womanhood that the diet shall contain that which is upbuilding, and nothing harmful.

At the age the structure is being formed, and if formed of a healthy, sturdy character, health and happiness will follow; on the other hand unhealthy cells may be built in and a sick condition slowly supervene, which, if not checked, may ripen into a chronic condition and cause lifelong suffering.

A young lady says:—

"Coffee began to have such an effect on my stomach a few years ago that I finally quit using it. It brought on headaches, pains in my muscles, and nervousness.

"I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk at my meals but at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum.

I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I heard of so many persons who had been benefitted by its use that I persevered, and when I had it made right, according to directions on the package—I found it grateful in flavor and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum!

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement—the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems also to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems brighter. I am, in short, in better health now than ever before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

STIRLING MAN VICTIM OF SERIOUS ACCIDENT

A Vehicle Fell On Him Breaking Six of His Ribs

Mr. Geo. Whittie, a well-known resident of Stirling, was on Tuesday the victim of an accident which caused him severe injuries. He was engaged in assisting to lower a waggon from the upper story of a barn to the floor when the vehicle fell upon him. The result was that Mr. Whittie had 6 ribs broken, shoulder and wrist dislocated, cuts about the head and face. The unfortunate man was unconscious for hours after the affair, but at present he is doing as well as could be expected.

A PRETTY WEDDING AT MADOC VILLAGE

A pretty wedding took place in St. John's Church, Madoc, on Tuesday last, when Frances Lister Stewart, of Madoc, and Mr. Richard Stephen Smith, of Perth, were united in holy wedlock. The ceremony was announced for 11 o'clock, and a large number of the congregation and friends greeted the arrival of the bride and groom. The church was prettily decorated with white lilacs. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a gown of white Ninon over satin, with pearl and silver trimmings, and a veil of old lace, which had been worn by her mother at her wedding. Miss Emily Stewart acted as bridesmaid and wore a gown of embroidered pink silk crepe. Mr. Cressmen, of La Toque, was best man. Miss Doris Benedict and Master Ned Cross carried a basket of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left by way of Ivanhoe for their home in Winnipeg.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. Maclaren, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. James Craig, Miss Isabel Henderson, Perth; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Benedict, Mr. Randolph Ritchie, Toronto; Miss Lister and the Misses Wallbridge, Belleville; Mr. W. H. Smith, Cobalt.

EMPIRE DAY IN THE CITY SCHOOLS

Empire Day was fittingly observed in the Octavia St. School Tuesday. In the forenoon the work was in conformity with the proper observance of the day. In the afternoon a concert was given by the pupils which was patriotic in character.

The addresses given by Col. Ponton, Messrs. Wm. Johnson and A. E. Bailey were thoroughly enjoyed by both pupils and teachers. Readings, recitations, songs and essays constituted the programme.

At the Grier St. School in the afternoon the children gave an appropriate programme, and Mr. D. V. Sinclair gave an address in keeping with the occasion.

There are about 28,000 co-operative associations in Germany, with more than 4,000,000 members, and these, with their families represent nearly a third of the total population.

DEATH LIST

THOS. BROWN.

Mr. Thomas Brown, a well-known G. T. R. engineer, who resided on Pine Street, died yesterday after being ill for some time. Deceased, who was in his 57th year, had resided in Belleville the greater portion of his life, and was a man who had many friends. Mr. Brown was a member of St. Michael's church, and besides being a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, was connected with the Catholic Order of Foresters. A widow and family of two sons and four daughters survive. The sons are Vincent and Edward, of this city, and the daughters are Mrs. Geo. Ray, Misses Agnes and Irene, all of this city.

MRS. JOHN O'HARE.

One of Belleville's oldest and most respected residents Mrs. John O'Hare passed away on Tuesday afternoon after a long illness. The deceased lady, who was in her eighty-third year, was a daughter of the late A. N. Buell, who was Master-in-Chancery at Toronto for many years, and her husband was the late John O'Hare, barrister, who was for several years County Attorney and Clerk of the Peace, and was one of the first mayors of Belleville, who predeceased her many years ago. Mrs. O'Hare, who came to Belleville in 1848 from Brockville, and had lived continuously here for about 63 years, was widely known and greatly beloved for her kindly disposition and many admirable qualities. She was a fine musician, a clever artist and an ardent worker in the various organizations connected with St. Thomas' Church, of which she was a devout member. Mrs. O'Hare is survived by three daughters, namely Mrs. Shaw, and two daughters at home, and two sons, namely, Messrs. Arthur, of Chicago, and Charles who lives in the west.

A curious profession for a woman is that of dinner taster. She is the product of Parisian refinement, and spends a portion of each day visiting houses and tasting dishes intended for dinner. She suggests improvements and shows the cook new ways of preparing dishes.

WANTED COMPENSATION

The Home Secretary Denied the Request of an Ex-Convict

An ex-convict complains that he has been refused compensation by the Government. This man was undergoing a sentence of three years' penal servitude at Dartmoor when he met with an accident. Whilst employed building a wall he slipped with a stone in his arms and sustained serious injury. The accident necessitated his going into the infirmary, but the medical officer could not cure him, and on his release he had to undergo an operation at the Middlesex Hospital, where he now lies. After the accident, and whilst still at Dartmoor, he petitioned the Home Secretary for compensation, but was informed by the governor that Mr. Churchill saw no grounds for acceding to his request. Apparently, the Home Secretary declines to admit liability on the ground that the man was at the time of the accident serving a sentence of penal servitude.

Canadian League.

HAMILTON, May 24.—Knotty Lee's bunch of ball tossers won their sixth consecutive game by taking a double-header from the Brantford Indians. The score of morning game was 8 to 4, and the afternoon game 12 to 5.

The Maple Leafs defeated the D. & D. Boys on their own grounds yesterday by a score of 20 to 11. In the first innings it was a tie and then "Chippy" Hay slammed out a home run with bases full.

Old Cy Young tells a story about Cobb's way of doing business on the bases which is typical of his methods and fearless style.

"It was when I was with the Bos- were oceans of time to nail him but the ing Detroit one day, Cobb came to bat and bounced one down in front of the plate. He was off like a shot for first base, but should have been comparatively easy at that. The pitcher, however, hurried, as a man always does when Cobb is marching, and threw slightly wild.

"The first baseman reached for the ball, and partially stopped it, but could not quite hold it and it carromed off his glove a few feet. Cobb just kept on going, making the turn at full speed and heading for second. Again there were oceans of time to nail him but the first sacker in his haste, tossed the ball too high. The shortstop, who covered second, had to jump for the ball. It bounded off his finger tips and rolled into left centre field for three or four yards.

"Cobb kept on going, never slackening his speed and dashing for third base with all his might. The ball was quickly recovered and once again there was certainty of putting him out again with good play.

"But all the infielders were now up in the air and none was sure of his aim. The shortstop's throw to third was low. The ball bounced off the shins of the third baseman and rolled into foul ground. Cobb kept right on going. He rounded third, still at the limit of his speed, and rushed along for the plate.

The fourth time he could have been headed off, for the throw was short and there was plenty of time to get him after the third baseman had recovered the ball. This time the throw was fairly good, but low, and Cobb, coming into the plate with one of his long feet-first slides, succeeded in kicking the ball out of the catcher's mitt, slid over the plate and scored his run."

THE TURF.

Won at Picton.

Mr. George Powell's string of harness horses which he has been training here were very successful yesterday at Picton. Dick Bryson won the named race, Edward the King was second in the three minute class and May Wax won the 2.15 race. All the events were half mile heats.

FEAR OF DEATH

A Well-Known Magistrate Doubts Its Deterrent Effect on the Criminal

The well-known magistrate, Mr. Plowden, contributes an interesting study in criminal psychology to the discussion on the death penalty which has been carried on for the past fortnight in the columns of the "Times." Incidentally Mr. Plowden pleads for a saner judgment of the character and motives of the murderer. He says:—

It is a popular fallacy to regard a murderer as the worst of criminals. The real truth is that in many cases it is hardly fair to describe him as a criminal at all.

No one who has not been through the fire can tell what may be the effect on his self-control of a long course of studied insults and provocation on the part of a worthless wife against her husband persevered in day by day, for months and even years at a stretch.

Sir Henry Smith, in his virtuous indignation with Crippen, makes no allowance for desperate circumstances like these.

He is angry with Crippen on account of his coolness in the witness-box, which he calls an outrage, and he apparently regards it as a distinct aggravation of his conduct that he should have sworn to love and cherish at the altar the wife whom he subsequently put to death.

It is somewhat amazing to me that considerations such as these should weigh for a moment in any just appreciation of Crippen's character. They were to me absolutely irrelevant.

What Crippen actually did, and for which he suffered death, was to kill a wife whom he hated for the sake of a woman whom he loved. Probably of all the murders that are committed under the sun, in one country or another, there is no more common type of murder than this.

It was the irony of Crippen's fate that he did not meet No. 2 until after he had met No. 1. Had such been his good fortune he would probably have lived a life not better nor worse than his neighbors, and have enjoyed with the best of them the reputation of a contented, law-abiding citizen. I am convinced from such experience as I have had of criminal courts, extending over many years, that what a man murderously inclined really dreads is not death, but pain.

The spectre of death, though it can always be conjured up, is too remote and shadowy to have much effect on the nerves of a man in the enjoyment of full and vigorous health. Not so with pain. There is no imagination so dull that it cannot take in the terrors of the "cat"; and I believe if such punishment could be made part of the sentence, even without abolishing capital punishment, the deterrent effect would be unmistakable.

I think even Crippen's courage, wonderful as it was, would have quailed on that dark and wintry morning, had he known that he would have to endure a flogging before he was hung.

And had he been asked which he feared most—the physical pain of the lash or the death to follow—can anyone doubt what his answer would have been?

ACT OF HOMAGE

At Coronation Will Not Be Performed by Lady de Ros

There is little possibility of Lady de Ros being selected to do homage for the barons of England in virtue of the seniority of the peerage she holds. Certain Coronation services have, indeed, been performed by women or by deputies appointed by them, but homage has never been one of them. The next in seniority, Lord Mowbray and Stourton, will represent his brother barons, just as Viscount Falkland at King Edward's Coronation represented his senior, Viscount Hereford, who was not present. It is remarkable that there is a difference of no less than 233 years in the dates of creation between the premier Marquis of England, Lord Shrewsbury, and the next in time, Lord Lansdowne.

The act of homage at the Coronation consists in swearing allegiance, touching the crown, and kissing the King's cheek. In earlier days it was counted of the highest importance. At the time of Henry VI.'s Coronation a plague was raging, and to avoid infection a Bill was passed in Parliament permitting the omission of the kiss in the act of homage. In this Act it was specially enacted that notwithstanding the omission of what was evidently an essential feature of the ceremony, the peers were entitled to receive the official letter acknowledging that they had performed homage. Macaulay, who was present at William IV.'s Coronation, gives an amusing picture of political partisanship while the peers were going up to do homage. "Some of them," he writes, "were cheered, which I thought indecorous in such a place and on such an occasion. The Tories cheered the Duke of Wellington and our people in revenge cheered Lords Grey and Brougham."

SENSIBLE HORSES

The Almost Human Intelligence Which is Developed in Them by Van Work

A curious illustration of the sense displayed by horses was given in London during the hearing of a claim by Henry Thorpe, an ex-soldier, and a porter, employed by the Post Office, against James Allen, to recover $250 damages for personal injuries. It appeared that the defendant's van was backed against a platform at Mount Pleasant, and the plaintiff proceeded to unload it. Before he had finished the doors of the van next to him were slammed, causing the defendant's horse to start off, and the plaintiff was flung to the ground, injuring his shoulder. A witness said the horses engaged in this kind of work had so much sense—almost human, in fact—that no warning was necessary to say the van was unloaded, and it could start off. Directly the doors were shut and the bolt put up the horses would start away just as if they had been told to do so, and it was a rare thing for them to make a mistake. It was contended that the defendant was not liable for damage done by a startled horse that bolted. The jury awarded plaintiff $75 damages and costs.

CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM
NOW IN PERFECT HEALTH THANKS TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"
VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 1st, 1910.
"I am well acquainted with a man, known to thousands in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, who for nearly a year was practically a cripple from Rheumatism. He was so troubled with the disease that he found it difficult to even turn over in bed. His heart appeared so weak that he could hardly walk up stairs.
Last June, he received a sample of "Fruit-a-tives". He used them and dates his recovery from that time. To-day, there is no man in Vancouver enjoying better health.
He was building a house this fall and shingled a good part of the roof in a driving rain, without suffering any bad effects". JOHN B. LACY.
Mr. R. E. Mills, (assistant postmaster at Knowlton, Que.,) also writes:
"I honestly believe that "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world". Try it yourself.

LUMBERING SCENES

Graphic Description of the Felling of a Great Tree in British Columbia

British Columbia is Canada's great timber preserve. In no other province do the chief varieties of commercial timber arrive at greater perfection. The exports of timber form the main staple of British Columbia's maritime trade, and the whole of the Northwest depends for its timber supply on the forests of that province. A writer in the "Daily Province" of Vancouver contributes the following pen picture of a typical lumbering scene in a valley of the Cascade Range leading down to Howe Sound:—

"All around is the deep forest broken by slashings thick with giant stumps standing amidst a green ruin of tops, limbs and young hemlocks and cedar swept down by the colossi when they crashed to earth. Two big fellers stalk down a brown-shadowed aisle chewing tobacco. They carry double-bitt axes with straight handles like the battle tools of the knightly days, a 15 foot cross-cut saw, and two spring boards. The mighty bulk of the rough-barked tower of fir into which their flashing axes dart like serpents' fangs, cutting stepping notches for the chopping boards, make these two brawny, hairy-armed loggers, 15 stone apiece and a good fathom each in their old 'cork' boots, look like pygmies. The butt of the monster looks like 20 feet in circumference and 8 feet through, and its broken-ridged bark looks a foot thick. A tangle of alder grows man-high around the rugged bole. The massive obelisk of its shaft towers over 200 feet in the air. But Yukon Pete and Tacoma Jack, the careless axemen, are not awed by this. They merely bite off fresh chews of black plug and mount their chopping boards, spit on their big palms (Tacoma, the bunk house says, can hold a pound of loose tea in one open hand), and Pete, the one with the slits in his hat with matches shoved through them, takes a nick from the red-brown bark. Then with a steady rhythm they swing their bright blades for half-an-hour, making their undercut, and the knocking of their axes travels far through the forest. Skilfully they chop the great notch 3 feet deep, so that the tree will fall where they want it to, for it is the undercut that governs the fall of the tree. Then they lay aside their axes, shifting their chopping boards to the other side of the tree, and take up the long, lean saw. With a snarl it bites into the corrugated bark, and swaying and rocking their slouching shoulders, Tacoma and Pete pull the long blade back and forth, pausing only to throw a few drops of coal oil on the steel to free it from pitch. Now the axemen, yellow with sawdust, have rasped their way through 4 feet of solid white wood and they withdraw the hot saw. The mighty column still stands solid on its great base and gives no sign of yielding. The fallers place wedges in the saw-slit and drive them in with furious strokes of a sledge. Just as the last sledge-blows ring through the woods we jump with surprise and back away, and the fallers leap from their chopping boards, shouting their long, hoarse, warning yell as a sharp snapping, like rifle explosions, startles the nerves. A shiver thrills through the colossus. Then there resounds through the woods a storm of grinding, rending, tearing, splintering noises. The titan sways slowly and with stately majesty at first. His kingly head, far up in the lofty roof of the forest, rocks as if in a hurricane, letting in great beams of sunlight through the green ceiling. Now he falls, fast sweeping through the air, smashing down other trees in a snarl of wreckage, snapping off his own branches, striking the earth with a great jarring, appalling thunder of sound which roars in hoarse reverberations through the valley. Earth and woods tremble as with an earthquake, and the enormous fir lies prone, like a bridge across the forest. The buckers, with their saws, are already on the ground to cut the giant into 20 and 30 feet logs, which may yield 10,000 feet of timber."

MATRIMONIAL HOAX

Would-be Husbands and Wives in a Paris Cafe Who all Wore White Roses

A well-planned hoax had an amusing result at a Paris cafe. A few days ago two advertisements appeared in the newspapers. One of them was supposed to be from a rich woman who was looking for a young husband who need not necessarily have any money; the other from a rich man who was looking for a young wife. In this case also there was no need for the woman to have means of her own.

Answers to these advertisements came in by hundreds. Both had been written by the same person. To each one of them a reply was sent, asking the man or woman, as the case might be, to meet the "advertiser" at the cafe. It was also requested of each man and woman that a white rose should be worn for identification purposes.

Having made these plans, the advertiser then wrote to the police saying that there was to be a big demonstration of Royalists at a certain cafe. Thirty detectives were accordingly on the scene.

Soon large numbers of young men and young women began to assemble at the cafe. At first the white rose that each one wore was regarded as a coincidence, but it soon became evident that they were the victims of a hoax, and after a little embarrassment, followed by hearty laughter, the crowd dispersed.

POSTMEN'S HEADGEAR

Glasgow Carriers Will Have a Double-Peaked Cap

Next spring will see many Glasgow postmen in all the glory of the new double-peaked cap. There is a difference of opinion among the men as to its beauty and its comfort, but its adoption will not, we understand, be compulsory, as the "fore and aft," as the cap or shako has been termed, will be supplied only to offices where the three-fourths of the staff are in favor of it. The cap has the advantage of being fairly light, with the weight well balanced, the rear peak coming somewhat low in order to protect the wearer against the dripping of rain down the neck, which is the great discomfort with the present style of shako. In large cities where distinct offices are established the new style of headgear will be supplied only if the vote is for the city as a whole. It is proposed to supply knickerbockers and puttees to rural postmen who go their rounds on bicycles, an innovation of which it is said the men are unanimously in favor.

WENT FOR A SWIM AND IS MISSING

Mr. Lucian Dafoe, who resides in the Township of Huntingdon, reports to the police that on Saturday last he came to the city and was accompanied by James Drayton, a lad about 17 years, who worked for him. The boy in question intimated that he intended to go and have a swim while in the city, but whether he did so is not known. At all events the lad has not since made his appearance at Mr. Dafoe's place, and he is naturally alarmed at Drayton's disappearance The boy, who came from England some months ago, has been with Mr. Dafoe for some time. The police are making enquiries in an endeavor to locate the boy.

"NE TEMERE" PROTESTED

Reformed Episcopal Synod Adopted a Strong Resolution in Opposition to it

A very interesting meeting of the first synod of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada was held in St. David's church, Ottawa, on the 23rd and 24th of May, presided over by Rev. Bishop Samuel Fallows, D. D., LL. D.

The following resolution was passed unanimously:—

Whereas, it seems by recent developments in the Province of Quebec that the canon law of the Church of Rome has power to override the civil law in relation to the solemnization of marriage, and

Whereas, since the issuance of the "Ne Temere" decree, the Roman church is interfering seriously in cases of legal mixed marriages, in Canada and other parts of the Empire, defying civil law, and

Whereas such conditions seem out of harmony with British principles of impartiality and freedom—

Resolved, that this Council put on record a hearty protest against the "Ne Temere" decree, that we give our hearty support to an imperial movement now on foot to oppose it, and to press such opposition before the proper tribunals to have the working of the decree frustrated.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Brantford has had a very successful building campaign. They raised $120,000.

Rev. C. G. Smith will address the Young Canadian Club at the Association rooms to-night at 8 o'clock —subject "Essential." The Victoria Day field day prizes will be presented during the evening.

BURGLAR TRAPPED, STRANGLES TO DEATH

Corpse of Unfortunate Marauder Greets Mrs. Surrut Dangling from Skylight When She Reaches Home

NEW YORK, May 25.—The body of a man dangling from a skylight was the sight that greeted Mrs. Elias Surut when she returned yesterday to her home in Harlem after a five-weeks' stay out of town. She fled and returned with a policeman, who took the body down.

Investigation showed that the man was a burglar, trapped while trying to break into the house. He had raised the skylight cover, which weighs about 150 pounds, propped it up with a lath and started to let himself down into the house with a rope, one end of which was tied to the chimney. As he lowered himself the cover dropped and caught him by the neck, and he strangled to death. He had been dead at least four or five days.

Skeleton keys and a loaded revolver were found in the man's pockets. He was later identified as Joseph J. Teur but two weeks out of Sing Sing and with a long prison record.

CURRENT COMMENT

The attention of the Canadian public is equally divided between Reciprocity, the Coronation, and Swatting the fly.—Brockville Times.

A Porcupine gold mine has just shown the gold bearing vein at a depth of 200 feet. This is repeating the history of the Cobalt silver finds almost identically.

In answer to the suggestion that next year we celebrate a "Fathers' Day" as well as a "Mothers' Day," comes the reflection that father already has a day when the family especially remembers him—that is 'pay day.'

A variation from the bomb-throwing which has marked the war between factions of New York gamblers is the holding up of one party with revolvers and robbing them of $16,000 which they had just gained from an easy Westerner to whom they had been showing the town. And the authorities complacently insist that there is no gambling in New York.

Each season brings its own necessities. The seasonable advice for the present seems to be something like this: Banish the fly, don't rock the boat, drink pure water, hoe the weeds keep the windows open, clean up the back yard, eat plenty of fruit, try and get a holiday to go fishing. Each man and woman can add to this as individual necessities dictate.—Ottawa Journal.

Cable advices say that the chief feature of the new aerial torpedo, on which the Krupp firm has taken out American patents, is the absence of recoil. The new weapon is self, propelling, can be fired from a dirigible, or aeroplane against the hostile balloon without disturbing the stability of the machines. Experiments have been carried on since November, 1909. Ranges of five thousand yards, with a torpedo carrying a six-pound load of explosives were attained in the early stage of the developments. The torpedo, which acts on the principle of the ordinary skyrocket, is composed of two parts, the explosive head and a rear chamber containing a slow burning powder charge, the gases from which issue through tubes at the rear and drive the projectile through the air.

The victim was taken to the hospital, where the fracture was reduced. Pilington, who is evidently a tramp, gave United States as his home.

STILL ANOTHER MEDAL CONTEST

Pleasing Programme Was Given Last Night at Cannifton

One of the best Medal Contests took place last night at Cannifton church Rev. Mr. Kemp occupied the chair.

After singing and prayer the following double contest was given. This is the second singing contest and the 5th Junior elocution contest of the "Y" series.

Chorus—"For God and Home and Native Land," Miss Rush's pupils.

Recitation—"The Fence or the Ambulance," Grace Pound.

Solo—"Christ the Good Shepherd," Margaret Phillips.

Recitation—"The Sisters on Strike" Harold Lawrence.

Solo—"Blossom Bells," Myrtle Archibald.

Recitation—"Who is my Neighbor," Marguerite Kellar.

Solo—"I Would Like to be a Sunbeam," Percy Palmer.

Recitation—"The Price of a License," Hilda Turner.

Solo—"Jesus Loves each Child." Marie Brenton.

Chorus—"We are a Temperance Band," Mrs. Lawson's pupils.

Recitation—"Drink or Let it Alone" Clarence Hearns.

Solo—"Children's Praise," Florence Farnham.

Recitation—"Come to Stay," Helen Farnham.

Solo—"Just a little Pansy," Inez Palmer.

Recitation— "Good-night Papa," Edith White.

Solo—"Bird, Flower and Star," Julian Brook.

Recitation—"A Goose Tale." Helen Archibald.

Chorus—"Some Glad Day," Miss Bush's boys and girls.

While the judges were out Rev. Mr. Kemp spoke briefly. He was proud of the boys and girls, and he certainly had good reason to be.

The following were elocution judges—Messrs. Shorey, Henry, Bragg, J. A Marsh and Miss Steele; and for singing—Mrs. P. J. Smith and Misses Delina Hayward, F. Adams, Louie Steele and K. Sheffield.

The judges reported the contestants all good and nearly equal in merit. The elocution medal was awarded to Miss Helen Archibald, with Mr. Clarence Hearns only two points behind. Miss Nettie Ketcheson, one of the 'Y' girls, presented this medal and the pins.

In the singing contest Mr. Julian Brook won the medal and Miss Agnes Palmer was a close second. All the trained have a bright prospect if they keep in improving. Miss Queena Smith presented the pretty singing medal. The medals and pins any one may be proud to wear. Great credit is due Miss Rush and Miss Lawson, teachers of the Cannifton school for their trouble in training the contestants.

An enjoyable programme was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

MARMORA MAN CHARGED WITH THEFT

A young man named Herbert Houtland, of Marmora, was to-day on trial before Judge Deroche, charged with theft. It is alleged that the accused stole some wrenches and other tools belonging to the Belmont Mining Company. Houtland pleaded not guilty and the case was in progress when we went to press. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

Later.

Houtland was found guilty of the charge preferred against him and was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison.

CHARGE OF SPEEDING WAS NOT PROVEN

A well-known citizen who is the owner of an automobile was this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with exceeding within the city limits the speed limit of 10 miles. It was proven that, whilst the machine is owned by the party charged, he was not in the car at the time when the alleged offence took place, but some members of the family were. Considerable evidence was submitted, which naturally was somewhat of a contradictory nature in reference to the speed the car was going at the time. The Magistrate, while dismissing the case, gave some timely advice as to speeding, and his intention of enforcing the law regarding the same. Mr. Mikel, K. C., for the city, and Mr. F. E. O'Flynn for the accused.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, until at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

MICHIGAN MASONS HAVE APOLOGIZED

They Invaded Canadian Territory and Now Express Their Regret

Michigan state grand lodge of Masons has at last tendered an apology to the grand lodge of Canada in Ontario for ivading the jurisdiction of the Canadian grand lodge last year, and matters are well under way towards a reconciliation and a restoration of intercourse with the brethren over the border. That was the announcement made yesteday by R. L. Gunn, secretary of the grand lodge of Canada in Ontario.

The whole trouble arose over the Port Huron Masons invading the jurisdiction of a Canadian lodge and taking charge of a funeral that they had no right to attend in a body without being invited. Intercourse was at once barred with the Canadian lodge and the invasion was fully investigated. Apparently the investigation in the United States resulted in the Michigan Masons realizing that they were in the wrong, for quite recently a strong resolution of regret at having offended was received by Mr. Gunn from the grand lodge in Michigan.

This was satisfactory to the Canadian Masons and it is likely that intercourse between the Michigan and Ontario Masons will shortly be restored and the usual amicable footing between Ontario and Michigan Masons once more established.

THEY STOLE A RIDE AND WERE REMANDED

Two young men who gave their names as Albert O'Brien and Wilfrid Turcott, and Kingston as their home were arrested here last night. The parties, with others, were stealing a ride on a G.T.R. freight train, and it is alleged that when spoken to by a G.T.R. official, used insulting language. Some others who were upon the same train jumped off before the train reached the station. Turcott and O'Brien were remanded to jail until Monday.

The Spitting Snake.

A snake found in Africa is called the spitting snake by the Boers. It is between two and three feet long and is especially bold and active, readily attacking every one who approaches it. In confinement it is very savage, opening its mouth and ejecting its fangs, from which the poison may be often observed to drop and even sometimes to be forcibly ejected; whence the name given it by the Boers.

"Benefits Everybody." How

Everyone who advocates the reciprocal compact, into which Canada's diplomats, Fielding and Paterson, entered with the President of the United States, from Premier Laurier down to his humblest follower, cry aloud its adoption will benefit everyone, agriculturist, manufacturer, artisan and laborer. How, not one of them has as yet informed those whom they address in what way this wonderful result is to be accomplished. Even the American Minister of Agriculture, Mr. James Wilson, has been indulging in the same line of declamation, or, if we were to indulge in what one of Belleville's distinguished citizens would term that with which he did not agree, "twaddle" would be the word to use. In addressing his people, he said:

> "I am firmly convinced that it would be to the advantage of both countries for us to take the export wheat of Canada, mill it, and send the flour to the markets of the world, because the dairymen of the United States would then get the by-products of the mills; and, as the population of the United States increases, the dairy market will be greater and greater. We will get those by-products then, instead of having the wheat go as wheat to foreign countries where the by-products would be sold and used to great advantage by dairymen in those countries."

So far as his argument affects the United States, he is beyond doubt correct, but how the adoption of the treaty is to be "to the advantage of both countries" Mr. Wilson fails to point out.

It is clear enough, as a contemporary points out, where it will be to the advantage of the United States. But where does Canada come in? If the Americans get our wheat as a raw material, grind it in their own mills, keep the by-products for their own farmers and ship the better flour it makes to Britain, they profit by it. That is plain enough. But how about Canada? She loses the profit of grinding her own wheat; she loses the by-products for her farmers; she loses the high repute of her wheat and wheat products; she loses the haul from her wheat fields to the sea; and she loses that much encouragement for her shipping. What does she gain? The American Minister of Agriculture did not think it worth while to point out; which is a pity, for Canada still remains in ignorance upon that point.

Commenting upon the subject, the Minneapolis "Northwestern Miller"—the organ of the American millers—said a while ago: "The miller who is able to grind this enormous crop (the Canadian wheat crop), will be the miller of the future; and, where he is, there will be the great mills of the world." This journal furthermore pointed out that the grinding of this crop, meant for the nation which did it, new railways, increased bank deposits, more mill operatives, more mill machinery and supplies, more money in circulation, more elevators, enhanced real estate, a bigger home market. These things all "look good" for the United States, but should they be secured at the expense of Canada? No true Canadian will say yes.

He Was "Amazed"

Such was the exclamation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on rising to reply to a toast at a dinner given by "The Pilgrims Society," on the 22nd inst., in London, in honor of the overseas Premiers, who are now in England to attend the Imperial Conference.

A despatch from London of the 23rd inst., reports Sir Wilfrid as "expressing amazement that during his three days' stay in Britain he "had heard so many people of standing voicing their doubts concerning the designs of the United States regarding Canada. He scoffed "at the idea of the possibility of annexation being seriously considered "on either side of the border."

"If the United States," he continued, "attempted to annex Canada, it would not be by force of arms, but by seduction."

Why Sir Wilfrid should be "amazed" at hearing so many "people of standing voicing their doubts" upon the question of annexation will surprise people in Canada; that is, if any utterance of Sir Wilfrid at times when necessity demands it could surprise Canadians, accustomed, as we are, to his "sunny ways" and honeyed words.

Sir Wilfrid, when he gave expression to his "amazement," must have been laboring under the impression that those whom he was addressing were ignorant of the utterances of the public men of the United States, from the President to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and of the public press of the United States. When the people of England read the declaration of President Taft that Canada was "at the parting of the ways" and that the acceptance and adoption of the trade compact entered into between himself and the Canadian Commissioners was absolutely necessary to prevent a closer alliance of the mother country and Canada, they came to the conclusion that he meant what he said, and when they considered, in connection with his declarations, the utterances of Senators, representatives of the people and the press, is it any wonder that a feeling of uneasiness took possession of the thinking people of the Empire?

Sir Wilfrid might use all his eloquence and sunny smiles in declarations that "annexation was not seriously considered on either side of the border," but he knows better, and he also knows that annexation is the bait now held out to the people of the United States by her statesmen and the press to induce them to cast the hook in the hope that Canada would bite, and enable them to draw the much coveted prize into their basket. This is not to be done, says Sir Wilfrid, by the "force of arms, but by seduction." Yes, and the offer, so readily and greedily accepted, of a trade policy which will seductively draw the two countries into so close an alliance that the octopus will extend its tentacles, and firmly close them around the northern part of this continent and hoist the Stars and Stripes. Is this the "noon-day dream" of which Laurier boasted when "Canada would separate from the parent stem as does the fruit when ripe"?

Reject the whole scheme and save the country.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Hot weather kept wheat on the rise to-day. Threats of a short yield in the southwest helped give the bulls an advantage which they used to the limit. New crop months made a net gain of 1 3-8 to 1 1-2. May proved fractive and scored only 1-8 cent advance. Other cereals and the provision list all went skyward—corn up 7-8 to 1 1-8; oats 1 1-4 to 1 5-8, and hog products 5 to 22 1-2. There was also considerable investment buying, based upon signs of the July delivery having passed under the control of the concentrated holdings in May. During the session July ranged from 87 7-8 to 89 5-8, and closed steady 1 1-2 net higher at 89 3-8 to 1-2.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ½d higher than yesterday on wheat, and unchanged on corn.

MONTREAL, May 25.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable continues dull, there being no demand whatever, but there was an improved enquiry for oats at firmer prices, but as they were still ½c per bushel under Winnipeg prices, no business was done. There was a firmer feeling in the local market under an improved demand, and if the advance in prices in the west is maintained, values here will be marked up. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour showed some improvement, but no business was reported. The local trade is fairly active and prices firm.

Cheese Markets.

WOODSTOCK, May 25.—At the meeting of the Woodstock Cheese Board, it was decided to-day to secure incorporation. To-day ten factories boarded their cheese, consisting of 959 boxes colored and 125 boxes white, all of which was sold on the board. Prices to-day had taken a drop. The first factory called sold at 10¼, eight secured 10¼, while one secured 10 11-16.

BROCKVILLE, May 25.—10¼ was the best price bid for the offerings of the cheese salesmen at to-day's meeting of the board. The offerings totalled 2080 boxes, 2120 of which were colored. After a long siege of bickering, the Webster combination of 400 boxes sold to Mr. McHugh at this price. This was the only sale recorded, but on the street the factory men came to terms with buyers on a basis of 10¼. At this figure between 5000 and 6000 boxes were sold.

The Children's Room.

Every nursery should have furniture of the simplest design, so that it can be washed daily. The lines should be low and broad, so that the children can clamber into the chairs easily and when they fall not have far to go.

A broad low window seat is a good idea, for children who play too long on the floor are apt to get cold. This should be near windows that are protected with wooden bars, so there is no possibility of falling out. It should be less than a foot high and have washable cushions.

Every nursery should have a dresser for the toys. The lower drawers of such a dresser could be used for the nursery linen.

Though some mothers object to flowerpots in the nursery, there is much to be said in their favor. They make a window ledge so gay that it is hard to resist them. If they are used they should be highly glazed, either in blue or white, and should hold simple springlike blossoms.

Babies' Bonnets.

The newest bonnets for babies are made of white liberty satin. They are close fitting, but the satin is fulled on the crown, the band around the face being plain. Embroidered side pieces are set in, the most attractive design being tiny forgetmenot wreaths. Where the ribbon ties are set on there are rosettes of the white satin, in the center of which are tiny rosebuds.

There are other bonnets also of the liberty satin which have full crowns and the satin draped over the straight piece which forms the front. These are trimmed with narrow pink or blue velvet ribbon.

Embroidered batiste caps have the tiniest bouquets of pink and blue flowers set on the left side of the front.

CHAPTER X.

Taker of Antiques.

"A most curious and unique collection of valuable relics are now on view at Messrs. Pond & Verulams, jewellers, of George Street, Hanover Square, consisting of some very ancient gold and silver regal ornaments and also some sacred vessels of great beauty and exquisite workmanship. We are given to understand they were discovered concealed in an old mine near Caxamalaca, in the heart of the mountains of Peru, and in all probability formed a portion of the regalia of the chiefs of the nation of the Incas who owned that section of the country until they were decimated and reduced to slavery and worse by the treachery and cruelty of the Spaniards, under the leadership of Pizarro, in the sixteenth century, when, taking advantage of the internecine war which was then raging between two rival chiefs, he poured his legions into the country and conquered it.

"Though the Spaniards obtained vast hoards of treasures it was well-known at the time that much had escaped their avarice, and the articles to be seen at present in George St. without doubt formed a portion of this remainder. They have been examined by experts who are unanimous in their conviction that the various works of art are genuine. We would call particular attention to a circlet, or tiara, in gold, which in all probability formed the symbol of sovereignty of the reigning chief. The workmanship displayed in the delicate tracery is exquisite, and although the design is very unlike anything in modern times, the general effect is unique and striking. Art lovers would do well to take advantage of this opportunity of examining the goldsmith's work of the past age. The exhibition will only remain open for a few days longer. It is a curious coincidence that this galaxy of art treasures should have come before the public just at the time when the attention of the mining world has been arrested by the flotation of "The Queen of the Corderillas," the new Peruvian Mine, in which Mr. Giuseppe Guelfo is the moving spirit."

"There, Gerald, what do you think of that?" said Dora Colvin, throwing down the paper which she had been reading. "Have you time to spare this afternoon to take me to see them? We might call for Pauline, in case she would like to go too."

"By all means, though I doubt it. They would only be painful to her. You see Vipan's last trip was all through that country, and the little gold image he gave me the last time I met him was something he had discovered in one of these places."

"Very well. Perhaps you're right. Though Pauline is certainly very much better than she was, still it will be a long time before she gets over the shock of poor Wallace's death. I suppose nothing more has come to light?"

"Nothing. Scotland Yard is just as much in the dark as ever. One never knows what they may be doing, but to all appearances they have given over the search, and the murder will be added to the long list of undiscovered crimes. But go, get your things on and let's be off. Poor Vipan! how he would have enjoyed inspecting the antiques."

Dora Colvin and Gerald found their trouble had not been expended in vain. The collection at Messrs. Pond & Verulam's was quite equal to the description given in the paper. The designs were unlike anything that they had seen before. Some of the sacred vessels, so described, were of very delicate and graceful form, though in this case the workmanship was rude, while on the other hand the circlet and the regal ornaments were marked by the intricate labor and minute excellence displayed in their every part.

"You would hardly believe they were as old as stated, would you!" said Dora, gazing at a golden boss or shoulder ornament. "They show so few signs of age or wear."

"That is accounted for by the careful manner in which they were packed. Each separate article was wrapped in coarse linen and laid by itself in the box or chest, masses of grass or rushes being used as pads between each to keep them from touching," said an attendant, who kept guard over the glass case in which they were exhibited.

"And you have a chest as well?" inquired Dora.

"Unfortunately no. Directly it was removed from the soil in which it had been buried and was exposed to the air it crumbled into dust and nothing remained but the iron corner clamps and the handles and the lock which you see lying in that corner of the case," pointing out the same.

"What a pity! I should like to have seen whether the joiners of that dead age were as good workmen as the goldsmiths."

"It is a pity, miss, but it cannot be helped. Nature will have her way."

That same evening, seated in a little back room in Frogmore Street, Wandsworth, were two men. The one was smoking cigarettes, which he rolled himself with a speed and dexterity that bespoke long practice. The other was more sedately enjoying his tobacco through the medium of a "churchwarden."

"Fill up your glass, Balbi," said the latter, pushing the whisky bottle across the table. "I can't tell you how glad I am to welcome you to England. I mean to do you to rights as long as you honor us with your presence, for I haven't forgotten what you did for me years ago in Florence when I was there studying your antiques without knowing a word of your lingo. That was before you set off to that forsaken place, Peru."

"Ah, we were both of us poor men then! Eh, my good Mr. Taft"

"Poor, I should think so: I'd hardly two sixpences to jingle on a tombstone. But times have altered for both of us since then, I take it?"

"Yes. I've made money, and I'll make a great deal more directly. But you. How do you grow rich?"

"Out of the folly and ignorance of silly people."

"Ah! that's a rich land to cultivate! But how?"

"Now Balbi, I like you. And what is more, I trust you. I'll let you behind the scenes of my show."

"Your show, eh?"

"My business."

"Ah! I understand."

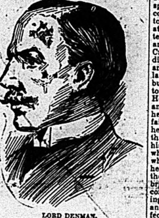
AUSTRALIA'S VICEROY

NEW PRO-CONSUL IS A TRAVELER AND A HUSTLER.

To Act as Representative of the Crown in the Antipodean Empire Is No Easy Thing Because the Provinces in the Commonwealth Are Not Very Good Friends Yet—He Will Be Missed In London.

It is well that Lord Denman is young and active; for the Australians like a Viceroy who is a "hustler," and fond of traveling. Although federation has been accomplished, the old provincial jealousies survive to some extent, and each of the six constituent states think it has a claim on the time and presence of the Governor-General. New South Wales and Victoria, in particular, the two leading states, are particularly sensitive on this point, so much so that the Viceroy has to maintain a permanent residential Government House in each of the rival capitals—Sydney and Melbourne—and to take care not to favor one over the other. Lord Northcote was the record Viceroy for traveling. He journeyed even to the wild and largely unexplored Northern Territory, where a member of his staff sat down upon an alligator in mistake for a log of wood.



LORD DENMAN.

Lord Denman is known as one of the most public-spirited of the few Liberal peers. He will be missed in politics, as will also his wife, who has been a leading Liberal hostess—a political field in which the Liberals are sadly handicapped.

An All-Black Holiday.

Perhaps it may interest readers throughout the Empire to know how the natives on the Rand enjoy themselves in their spare time, and how curiously they conduct themselves on holidays.

Every Sunday morning they gather together at some appointed place—usually one of the mines— and prepare for their weekly march out. (I have seen as many as six hundred at one meeting.) They are all dressed very funnily. Some have soldiers' old jackets, other old football jerseys, while others, again wear little more than their smiles!

Most of them have an instrument of some sort, including cheap concertinas, melodeons, tambourines, tin-whistles, and other such classical instruments. Those who cannot afford the luxury of an instrument commence to "sing." The terrible din when they all start playing different tunes at the same time can be imagined! They march for miles in this manner through the open veldt, and return in the afternoon, highly delighted with their outing.

The Kaffirs are a very happy-go-lucky class of people. Nothing seems to worry them, and they do not believe in too much work. They may work for about six months in one of the mines, save up most of their pay, and go home to their kraals for the rest of the year.—Answers.

Bishop and Coachman.

The late Archbishop Tait was driven by a coachman of the old-world sort, of whom Dr. Benson used to tell this good story.

One day a clergyman who called at the palace asked him whether he still had as much to do as ever. The answer was sublime.

"There's always a goodish bit doing, sir; but it has been a trifle easier since we took young Mr. Parry into the business." The Right Rev. Edward Parry had then recently been appointed Bishop Suffragan of Dover.

Another story he used to tell of a coachman will be new to many.

A gentleman living in the neighborhood of Addington, finding that the stablemen were not in the habit of attending church, spoke to his coachman about it.

"They ought to go," he said.

"That's just what I say myself, sir," was the rejoinder. "I says to them, 'Look at me. I go, and what harm does it do to me?'"

ROMAN RELICS.

Interesting Discoveries Have Been Made at Southampton.

The site of the Roman station of Clausentum at Bitterne Manor, Southampton, England, is yielding up the story of its greatness to diligent searchers after relics. Coins, pieces of pottery, and other British and Roman remains have been discovered, the coins including those of the reigns of Claudius, Nero, Vespasian, Antoninus, Alexander, Severus, Constantius, and others, which comprehend nearly the whole time that the Romans were masters of Britain. "Clausentum, the Entona or Anton of Claudius," Mr. C. F. Cooksey, of Southampton, told a press representative, "has been regarded by many people as a mere camp of occupation, but my recent discoveries dispel that idea. They include two large coping-stones of the enclosing wall of the city. They were found partly imbedded in the gravel foreshore of the River Itchen, close to the side of one of the walls. They are bow-shaped in section, and weigh about three hundredweight each. The stone of which they are composed is broken from the upper bed of the Bembridge limestone of Quarr Abbey, in the Isle of Wight. This discovery proves that Clausentum was a Roman city in the full sense of the word, and had a big enclosing wall. Owing to the building operations that are now taking place the site is being rapidly built over, but there is still time for excavations to be carried out if sufficient interest were being shown in the work. Every day fresh finds are made, and occupiers of new houses are turning up coins and other things as they dig up their gardens." In the case of the coping-stones the Corporation of Southampton have undertaken to look after them. They will be placed for public inspection on a heap of masonry on the Western Esplanade, close to a big gun given to the town by King Henry VIII.

Wife Saves Upset.

When Col. Mark Lockwood, C.V.O., M.P., of Bishop's Hall, Romford, Provincial Grandmaster of Essex Freemasons, lays the foundation-stone of St. Saviour's Church, Westcliff-on-Sea, England, with full Masonic honors on the 24th inst., it will, of course, be accompanied with a good deal of speechifying. As is well known, the colonel is now quite a first-rate orator and debater, but his experience at the first political meeting he attended to address was far from pleasant. It was at Epsom, and Lord Cross, then Secretary of State for India, went down to speak. He made an exceedingly long address, for it lasted over an hour and a quarter, but when Col. Lockwood's turn came to speak he could hardly say a word. He talked for about three minutes and then sat down with a raging headache and a sense of shame at his failure. During his political career he has several times had to get through a window in order to make his way from a meeting, and once when he was speaking from a wagon which he had to use as his platform he noticed an unmistakable spirit on the part of some of his listeners to bring his address to an ignominious conclusion by upsetting the cart. Seeing this, he secured the vicar's wife and got her into the cart. That effectively prevented the putting of the plot into execution.

The Oldest English Barrister.

Hundreds of congratulatory messages have been showered on Mr. W. A. Gordon Hake, the oldest living English barrister, who recently celebrated his hundredth birthday. Mr. Hake still retains all his faculties, being, until recently, able to read without the aid of glasses. In his youth he was a great believer in walking as a health-builder. He thought little of a twenty-mile jaunt, and to his passion for open-air exercise he attributes his longevity. A good story is told of his economical toilet. Dr. Charles Hanson once called upon him at his chambers, and asked permission to put on his barrister's wig and gown. "Now," said he, "lend me a looking-glass." He was handed a razor, as being the nearest approach to a mirror possessed by Mr. Hake.

How Sandow Became Strong.

Mr. Eugen Sandow, who has been appointed to the new post of Professor of Scientific Culture to the King, an indication of the importance His Majesty attaches to the subject of physical development, made the interesting confession a short time ago that as a child he was "pale, frail, delicate—even weakly. I inherited no abundance of health," he continued, "or extraordinary physique, for my parents were not exception in this respect. That I have acquired health and strength is due entirely to the fact that I have exercised regularly and systematically—not spasmodically and erratically—from the moment I first determined to emulate those heroes of old, when I set my eyes upon their sculptured forms in Italy's galleries of art."

From Carpenter to Editor.

A striking illustration of the versatility of modern man is furnished by the career of Mr. Ramsay Colles, whose new book, "In Castle and Court House" (Werner Laurie), is attracting so much attention. Mr. Colles began life as a carpenter's apprentice, and among the first things he made when he became proficient was a coffin. This he fitted with shelves and drawers, and kept standing in his room at Dublin as a cupboard. Then in turn he became manager of a bank, a timber importer, managing director of a cycle company, then newspaper founder and proprietor. Ultimately he became editor of a popular London journal, and devoted much of his time to writing books and editing a series of poetical works.

The Same Name.

At a recent London inquest, the name of one of the witnesses, and also of the coroner's officer, was Thomas Courtain Rivers, and, though both men lived within five minutes' walk of each other, they had never previously met.

Stools for Coronation.

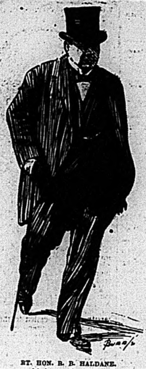
For the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey, tenders for 8,120 chairs and stools of special design have now been placed by the British Works Office.

A BIG MAN MOVES UP

VISCOUNT HALDANE IS A PARADOXICAL LIBERAL.

He Has Been a Militarist and the Friend of Lloyd-George at the Same Time and Is an Important Factor in the Liberal Party—Inaugurated the Territorial Force—Will Relieve Morley of Hard Work.

King George, a short time ago created the Right Hon. R. B. Haldane, Secretary for War, a Viscount. To be a member of a Cabinet pledged to a curtailment, which, in the opinion of many well-informed politicians, will practically amount to an abolition of the Peers' Veto, and, at the same time, to have accepted a peerage; to be a strong, though never blatant, militarist; to be a warm, personal friend of Mr. Balfour, and an official colleague of Mr. Lloyd-George, has been the lot of few. But it has been Mr. Haldane's. It is one of the ironies of public life that a man is, at times, forced to assume a position for which he seems to be little qualified. But in Mr. Haldane's new sphere of labor he will certainly find nothing uncongenial. For his is pre-eminently the type of mind to which a second chamber appeals. He has all the judicial mental attitude, all the reflective capacity, all the tempered enthusiasm for the British Constitution, which go to make the ideal peer. Ever since the outbreak of the Boer War there have been speculations as to which man would leave the Liberals. And Mr. Haldane's name has always enjoyed a pre-eminence in this regard. Nevertheless, he remains to-day a pillar of the Liberal party, for he retains in a singular degree the confidence of the non-party politician—the man who feels that there must be some people left in the land who are careless of the catchwords of party—who believes that, in the forthcoming contest between peers and Commons, his voice will be heard in the Cabinet, and his influence exerted in Parliament, to ensure that the counsels of moderation shall prevail. He has suffered, to some extent, from having served two masters. It used to be said of him that he had to make his choice between being Lord Chancellor or Prime Minister. He has not been—nor is he likely to be—either, but, at one time, on neither the legal nor the political side of his career, was either of those high offices seemingly beyond his grasp.



RT. HON. R. B. HALDANE.

The elevation of Mr. Haldane to the peerage has been expected for some time. The reason for it is to strengthen the Government in the Upper House, the intention being to relieve Lord Morley of the heavy task of leadership in the House of Lords during Earl Crewe's absence on account of illness. The help of the new viscount is particularly required in the coming session during the passage of the measures for Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment, and also in connection with the Veto Bill.

The Right Hon. Richard Burdon Haldane was born in 1856. He was educated at Edinburgh Academy and at Edinburgh and Gottingen Universities. He was a brilliant student and won several scholarships. He obtained his M.A., with first-class honors in philosophy, from Edinburgh University, and has published several scholarly essays.

Mr. Haldane inaugurated the Territorial army system. He has been Secretary of State for War since 1905, and he has represented Haddingtonshire in the House of Commons since 1885. His becoming a peer leaves vacant the Haddington seat. At the last election it gave a Liberal majority of 543.

The Duke of Connaught as a Shot.

The fact that the sporting trophies that fell to the rifle of the Duke of Connaught during his visits to South Africa are now being placed in position in Bagshot Park, his country home in Surrey, reminds one that His Royal Highness is a capital shot, and runs His Majesty close in this direction. When he was in Uganda the Duke shot some splendid lions. His Royal Highness shot his first lion in India some years ago.

Largest Dry Dock.

Begun eight years ago, the largest dry dock in the world, which measures 886 feet by 100 feet, has just been completed at Belfast.

To the Scrap Heap.

For the obsolete cruiser Retribution, built in 1889, at a cost of £186,000, the sum of £3,800 was recently realised by auction at Portsmouth.

Montreal, 22nd February, 1909.

I Hereby Certify that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-99/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

Haldane a Dane?

Viscount Haldane claims to belong to an ancient Scottish family of Danish origin. In the North the Secretary for War is best known as a theologian. He is one of the best German scholars in England.

Taking Him Down.

George Grossmith had had remarkable success with his readings in America and on his return to England somewhat boastfully compared the art of entertaining with that of acting. "You fellows," he said to Charles Brookfield, "have to take out scenery, properties, plays and a large company when you want to perform, while I—look at me. I landed in New York with just my piano and a dress suit, and I made $150,000."

"I dare say," snapped Brookfield. "But we don't all look so —— funny in our dress suits as you do in yours."

[illegible]

"Yes, I had ten children. They all grew up and married off."

"I suppose it is lonesome now at home?"

"Oh, no. Every once in awhile one of them gets a divorce and wanders back."

Not a Question of Comfort.

"I thought you were trying to economize on coal?" said the perspiring tenant of an apartment.

"Only in the winter," said the janitor. "Now, we're trying to burn up what's left, 'cause we need the room it takes up."

While notices to the public are usually made with little reference to politeness, the traveler being likely to meet with a warning or a caution couched in strong but curt terms, here is one place at least where the regard of the passerby is taken for granted and is acknowledged. At the hospital just opposite the East India docks in London notice boards are set up asking drivers, for the sake of those who are ill within, to walk their horses past the building. That is a common enough request, but what gives it peculiar interest here is that the driver, having complied or not with the modest demand, is confronted at the other corner of the building by another board, reading "Thank, you driver."

GOES TO CORONATION

GEORGE E. M'CRANEY REPRESENTS SASKATCHEWAN.

Saskatoon Man Is a Prominent Member of the Government of the Prairie Province and Is Expected to Go Up to the Top—He Comes From Bothwell, Ont., and Went West Nineteen Years Ago.

At the coronation the Province of Saskatchewan will have a worthy representative at the ceremonies in George Ewan McCraney of Saskatoon. He is an Ontario boy who has made good in the west and who is now recognized as one of the foremost Liberal politicians of Saskatchewan and a possible successor to Hon. Walter Scott in the Premiership of that province? He is a young man of splendid ability and thoroughly well informed on public questions. He is a hard student and has forged rapidly to the front as an able and forceful debater. He was born at Bothwell, Ont., in 1868 and was educated at Upper Canada College and Toronto University and was called to the Ontario Bar in 1895. He practiced his profession for some years at Milton, Ont., and went west in 1892, settling in Saskatoon. He is a B.A. and an LL.B. and went into politics shortly after moving to the western town. In 1906 he was elected by acclamation as Liberal candidate at the last general election in 1908.

Stag In Station.

The meet of the Surrey Staghounds at Crowhurst, England, the other day had a remarkable finish at Upper Warlingham Railway station. The stag took a course across country till it ran on to the main railway line towards London. It continued along the track until it arrived at Upper Warlingham station, where it mounted the platform, and ran into the waiting room, where it dropped to the floor exhausted. One of the hounds was close upon the stag, and also reached the platform, but dropped before it could enter the doorway, being as exhausted as the quarry. The station officials closed the doors and thus kept out the remainder of the pack that came up several minutes later. The stag was eventually taken to a stable and lodged there till it was fit to be removed.

Objected to Theology.

Owen Seaman, editor of Punch, was the principal guest at a dinner of the London Authors' Club recently, which was followed by a discussion on "Humor." Mr. Seaman began with a story deprecating the spoiling of a good dinner by any discussion at all.

There were three characters in the story, a bluebottle fly and two Scotsmen. The story at once struck a note of probability by showing the Scotsmen drinking whisky. The bluebottle buzzed on the pane; otherwise silence reigned.

This was broken by one of the Scotsmen trying to locate the bluebottle with zoological exactitude. Said the Scotsman:

"Sandy, I'm thinking if yon fly is a birdie or a beastie."

The other requied. "Man, don't spoil good whisky with religious conversation."

A Story of Kitchener.

Lord Kitchener is sometimes accused of a lack of humor, but the following story, which is going the round of the London clubs, goes far to show that such an accusation is unfounded. He happened to be lunching, not long ago, with a friend at a well-known club, when a rising young politician, who is not noted for his lack of self-confidence, entered the room.

"Mornin', Kitchener," called out the youthful politician, genially.

The victor of Khartoum, who does not love to have liberties taken with him, stared at him without a smile.

"Mr. So-and-So," he replied, "I wish you wouldn't call me Kitchener. It's so beastly formal. Call me Bertie."

Dickens' Mementoes.

Many relics of Charles Dickens are to be seen in the chambers of his son, Mr. Henry Fielding Dickens, K.C., who has expressed his approval of the Dickens' Stamp movement. He possesses the desk upon which the famous novelist wrote many of his stories at Gad's Hill, several quill pens which Dickens was in the habit of using, as well as paper-weights, inkpots, and the novelist's favorite chair. The novelist was very proud of his son's success at Cambridge, and Forster, in his "Life of Charles Dickens," doubts if anything more truly pleased him than when the future K.C. won the second scholarship at Trinity Hall.

NERVOUS SINGERS.

Some of the Greatest Never Overcome Their Qualms.

Some people professed to be astonished when Signor Caruso recently declared: "I am excessively nervous every time I sing, and when I am finished I am almost in collapse." The general idea is that it is only the young and inexperienced artiste who suffers from what the Germans call "lamp fever." As a matter of fact, nearly all artistes, from the greatest down to the rank and file, have more or less of this paralyzing feeling.

Gounod, the composer of "Faust," was the most nervous of men. He positively dreaded the ordeal of directing one of his own works. It was the same with Tschaikovsky, the Russian composer, whose "Pathetic" Symphony has been the [illegible] for years. Even Wagner, when he came to London to conduct at the Albert Hall, was so completely unnerved at the rehearsals that he could not convey his wishes to the orchestra, and he had to get Dr. Richter to relieve him of the baton.

All the great pianists suffer, too. Von Bulow, in one of his letters, refers pathetically to "the abominable fright which prevented me from playing as well as I can play." Rubenstein and Clara Schumann were always nervous. Henselt finally abandoned the concert-playing because he always had "the shivers." Chopin detested playing in public because, as he said, the very breath of the audience stifled and intimidated him.

Spohr, the great violinist, declared that he always lost about 20 per cent. in finish through nervousness. Another violinist, Ferdinand David, was often known to be so ill as to take to his bed some time before a public appearance; while Wieniawski, in the same circumstances, would go for days without food. Of Paderewski it has been said that he shakes like a leaf before going on the platform, though once at the keyboard entire forgetfulness of surroundings comes to him. Eugen D'Albert whistles softly to cover his nervousness before a recital.

Singers have an idea that players have the advantage of them in this matter of nervousness. They think that the muscles of the fingers are not so easily disturbed as the vocal cords. But the difference is more in kind than degree. The sudden chill in the hands and the stiffening of the fingers, or the unexpected outbreak of perspiration, causing a swelling of the hands, are sources of nervousness of which the singer has no experience.

Still, the singer does suffer, and badly enough sometimes. Many really capable vocalists, outwardly calm and perfectly at ease, are affected with raging torrents of emotion at every public appearance. To some artistes whose names are as household words, whose talents place them in the very front rank, every public appearance is an exquisite torture. Before a performance Patti used to drink black coffee to steady her nerves. Melba is a prey to excessive anxiety before singing to a strange audience, and Ben Davis acknowledges to nervousness under like conditions.

It is recorded that when Titiens and Giuglini were singing at the opera they were both "horribly nervous"; and when Titiens heard that Queen Victoria was coming she clasped her hands convulsively and whispered, "Heaven grant that nothing may occur to spoil our success." Mme. Christine Nilsson so suffered from nerves that when she was rehearsing her part with the opera conductor she used to tear the trimmings and laces off her skirts by continually tugging them.

Something Like a Plague!

A locust invasion is an event not easily forgotten, says The Cape Colony Argus.

The first sign of the approaching army is usually a long, dark cloud on the horizon. As it comes nearer, it is seen to be composed of countless millions of locusts on whirring wings. Soon the cloud appears overhead, and is sufficiently thick to obscure the sun. Now we are in the midst of a dense swarm of flying, whirring locusts, which dash into our faces, enter our houses, and fill our rooms with their presence; the air is simply alive with them. All open wells must be instantly covered, or they will be polluted by the insects.

Fowls and turkeys, however, welcome the advancing hordes; they simply fatten on the locusts. But their flesh becomes so tainted by this diet as to be quite unsaleable, and even their eggs have an unpleasant taste. As soon as locusts make their appearance in a locality, the price of eggs drops to one-half or one-third of its former value.

Pigs also feed on locusts, and their flesh also becomes affected; in fact, all animals seem to be adversely affected, for horses have a strong aversion to grass which has been polluted by locusts, and, unless very hungry, will not touch it.

No-Man's-Land.

Far away down the river, beyond the docks and the wharves and the warehouses, the low banks of the Thames are left much as nature made them, and for miles and miles a drear waste of mud and swamp stretches out on either side. Here is the region known as "The Flats," and many a weird tale is told concerning it in the bar parlors of the riverside inns. Dark deeds are the most commonplace features of these wild, trackless wastes, where wooden shanties, half submerged in the mire, give shelter to coiners, anarchists, and the criminal outcasts of London's underworld. It is to be feared that many an undetected murder is committed in the heart of this horrible "No-Man's-Land."

Sanford Juvenile Clothes HAMILTON ONT.

That Boy of Yours

The mother who realizes the importance of giving her boy the "right start" will not request the clothing salesman to show her "something dark and cheap," saying "he is so careless with his clothes—most anything will do him." She knows that one of the first principles in home training is to teach the youngster self-respect and the important part that good clothes play in engendering this quality. This does not necessarily mean paying more for his clothes. But it does mean that his clothes will reflect the discriminating taste of a mother who considers "most anything" will not do for her boy.

Sanford Juvenile Clothes are built for mothers who care—mothers who insist on good clothes as well as good manners.

Sanford Juvenile Clothes are necessary because they are an indispensable part of your boy's education in teaching him to esteem those virtues which promote true refinement and manly self-respect.

The foremost clothing or dry goods merchant in your town knows the value of Sanford Juvenile Clothes. Ask him to show you the new Spring models; they will do the rest.

WOMAN'S WORLD

FASHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS CHIT-CHAT

With every change of reign there comes a remodelling of some of the social institutions which, although well suited to the times in which they flourished, become partially or wholly obsolete as the years go on. Of these the substitution of the splendid evening court for the Victorian afternoon drawing room is perhaps the most notable example.

The first drawing rooms held by Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace took place in 1868. The occasion was of peculiar interest as in marked the return of Her Majesty to public life after the first years which succeeded her widowhood. It was called the white drawing room, as all the ladies who attended made a point of abstaining from colors out of deference to the bereaved Sovereign. There was a grandeur in the very simplicity of a Victorian drawing room, reminiscent of the days when court ceremony was everything, and such adjuncts as music and refreshments were looked upon as negligible quantities. Those who went forth in the garish light of day to make their curtsey to the Sovereign knew that hours of unrelieved tedium lay before them; but so great was the affection and reverence in which Queen Victoria was held by her subjects that on the occasions when it was known that Her Majesty would be present in person as early as half-past eleven a long line of carriages would be seen in the Mall although the actual ceremony only begun at three.

For hours before the gates of the Palace opened to admit the stream of vehicles their occupants had to run the gauntlet of the vast crowd assembled in the Mall, whose outspoken comments, though generally good humored, were always embarrassingly personal, whether laudatory or otherwise. Few, indeed, are those who could with impunity face the broad daylight in full evening dress, with train, feathers, veil, and all the paraphernalia of court costume.

The debutante of the present day can have but little idea of the ordeal that awaited her Victorian prototype. Well might the latter feel some inward trepidation as she approached the chair of state where sat the small figure, so strangely dignified withal, clad always in black, relieved only by the deep blue of the Garter Ribbon, recalls a London daily paper. The diminutive hand which retained its shapeliness to the end was slightly extended towards her, and raised to hre lips as she bent the knee before her Sovereign. Nor was the ceremony ovre then, as a series of curtseys had to be made to the long line of royal personages standing in order of precedence on the left of the Queen. It was customary for those members of the Royal family to whom any individual had happened to be known to shake hands with her, and perhaps say a brief word before she backed from the presence—very brief, necessarily, for her train was already being gathered up and folded over her arm. In the case of a peeress the Sovereign bent forward and kissed her on the cheek. If, as often happened, Queen Victoria was not present in person, and her place was taken by the Princess of Wales, a separate curtsey was made to the Princess and to the Heir-Apparent, and one to every two of the other royal personages, but the kissing of the hand was omitted.

May Weddings and Omens.

The freedom of the modern girl from old superstitions is evidenced in the fact that many girls now choose their wedding day in May. This used to be deemed a most inauspicious month for marriages, but no one seems to worry about that now. This year there are a larger number of May weddings than usual, one of the most generally interesting being that of Miss Margery Spencer and Mr. Homer Greenwood, at St. Margaret's, Westminster. The discrimination against the month, usually so delightful in itself, is said to have come down from Roman times. Those who hoped for happiness in their wedded life were specially warned against May, because the month was held to be under the influence of spirits averse to happy households.

Such superstitions have happily ceased to trouble those who are about to marry, but there are other and more pleasant traditions connected with the day that many brides cherish though they would be loathe to acknowledge themselves superstitious. The old distich that promised happiness if something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue, were worn is remembered by many a modern bride when she dresses upon her wedding morning, for the good fortune promised is easily secured if acts of implicit obedience go for anything. The beautiful lace worn by many a bride is usually old and very often borrowed for the occasion, while the something new is the rest of her toilette, and the something blue may be added to the underskirt, or to the lingeries that are worn, in the form of ribbon or embroidery. It took a long time to combat the instinctive dislike that was felt for black dresses at a wedding. Nowadays the colors in which the bridal guests are habited are displayed in brilliant relief against the many black toilettes that are seen, and it is no uncertain choice for a bevy of bridesmaids to wear black hats. In short common sense has triumphed over superstition, and traditional omens no longer exercise tyranny over the practical, healthy, modern girl who is planning her wedding day arrangements.

The Bryans' Younger Daughter Expected to Be a June Bride.

MISS GRACE BRYAN.

When June comes around with its roses there will be another wedding in the family of the great commoner, and Lincoln, Neb., is delighted, since it means the keeping of the younger of the popular Bryan girls with them. Perhaps the Bryans are delighted, too, for Miss Grace, the youngest child, is to marry no stranger, but a young man who has always been known to them and whose parents have long been their friends. Richard Lewis Hargreaves is the prospective bridegroom. The young man is only a few years older than the bride to be, who is about nineteen.

Presumably the wedding will take place at Fairview, the family home on the outskirts of Lincoln, or else in one of the local churches. Miss Grace Bryan resembles her mother in appearance and has the same charm of face and manner. That she is clever goes without saying, for the children of such parents could be nothing else. Her special talent is music, as that of her elder sister is literature.

The Bryan girls have always been great favorites with the American people. Like their mother, they are simple and democratic and put on no undue airs, although their father's great position in the world would excuse them for so doing. When Miss Ruth Bryan was married to W. H. Leavitt in 1903 the marriage could scarcely have been a matter of more public interest had her father been president. Every one felt sorry for her, and particularly for her parents, when the marriage turned out so unhappily. Certainly the younger daughter will have the best wishes of the American people in her new life.

Although so prominent, the Bryans have always insisted on keeping the particulars of their private life from the public. That their daughters are good looking, healthy and wholesome American girls is obvious. They are well educated without being representatives of the modern higher education for women. Miss Grace attended a school for girls in Virginia and afterward studied in Germany. She is fond of dogs and horses, a lover of the outdoor life and in most respects a thoroughly typical American girl. She is the last of the three Bryan children to marry, her brother, William J., Jr., having married Miss Helen Berger, daughter of a wealthy Milwaukee business man, about two years ago.

WARD'S SCHEME FAILS

New Zealander Argues For an Imperial Council.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Favors the Idea of an Advisory Council, But Says What Sir Joseph Ward Is Aiming at Is a Legislative Body With No Means of Getting Revenue—All the Delegates Are Against Proposal.

London, May 26.—The Imperial Conference, which is holding its sessions at the British Foreign Office, yesterday turned down the proposition of Sir Joseph Ward, the Premier of New Zealand, favoring the constitution of an ex-imperial council of state, with representatives of all the self-governing British Dominions to act in an advisory capacity to the Imperial Government.

Sir Joseph Ward's proposal met with no support and was withdrawn after a debate lasting two days.

The first step in the direction of the federation of the British Empire was thus postponed.

At yesterday's meeting of the Imperial Conference a message of thanks was read from the King for the loyal assurances conveyed at the first meeting.

Sir Joseph Ward resumed his speech on the imperial council. The question became more urgent and emphatic, he said, when it was remembered that at least two of the greatest dominions had already embarked on a naval policy of their own. Such action emphasied the need of some imperial council, accredited to co-operate and harmonize the policy of naval defence, a still greater question than that of naval supremacy. He would prefer to call the suggested body an Imperial Parliament of Defence, as defence, above all questions, was one in which every party of the Empire was vitally concerned. It could be treated satisfactorily only by a properly constituted council of state or Parliament. At present the different parts of the Empire had no voice whatever on questions concerning peace or war.

The question of an imperial council of defence was even more important to the United Kingdom than to the dominion, in view of the burden imposed on her navy by the necessities for protection of British ships, goods and people on the sea. The local provision by Canada or by Australia, however good it might be as far as the local portion of the dominions were concerned, would not be adequate. What was wanted was uniformity of system for the preservation of the whole overseas interests.

Laurier pointed to the resolution in favor of the creation of a council. Advisory to the imperial authority, but the arguments of Sir Joseph Ward were in favor of something very different. What Ward proposed was not an advisory council, but a legislature, a body elected by the people of the United Kingdom and the dominions, with power to create expenditure, but no responsibility for providing the necessary revenue, to meet the expenditure. Such a system was indefensible. The body might say five, ten or twenty millions of pounds were necessary, so much for each of the different portions of the Empire, and then the respective Governments would be dumb agents, carrying out the decision. They would simply have to provide the money asked for. Suh a proposal was absolutely impracticable.

Premier Fisher agreed as to the impracticability of the proposal.

Premier Asquith said the scheme would impair, if not altogether destroy the authority of the Government of the United Kingdom, in such grave matters as the conduct of foreign policy, conclusion of treaties, maintenance of peace or declaration of war.

As the whole of the representatives were against him, Sir Joseph Ward withdrew his resolutions.

On Ground of Self Interest.

Sydney, N. S. W., May 26.—The Morning Herald says it has become obvious to the meanest understanding that the destiny of the Dominions is bound inextricably with Britain, no possession of the crown overseas is in a position to maintain its independence if once the might of England were destroyed. It will be a generation before Canada, Australia or South Africa are able to face even a second rate European power. Putting it on the lowest ground, self interest, the Empire must hang together.

Lynching In Oklahoma.

Okema, Okla, May 26.—Laura Nelson, a negress, and her 16-year-old son were taken out of the county jail yesterday by a mob which had first gagged and bound Jailer Payne. The bodies were found hanging to the timbers of a bridge across the Canadian River.

The Nelsons were charged with the murder two weeks ago of Deputy Sheriff G. H. Loney, who went to search their shanty for stolen goods.

Skyrocket In Church.

Big Cocking-Main Pulled Off.

Brockville, May 26.—A big cocking-main was pulled off on Old Man's Island, between Ogdensburg and Brockville birds. Twelve battles were fought, the majority went to the Ogdensburg birds, also a considerable quantity of Brockville hard-earned cash. One of the battles lasted nearly an hour.

Panama, May 26.—The steamer Taboga, which it is reported has been wrecked, had a cargo of cattle and was on her regular coastwise trip. The scene of the accident is about 100 miles from the nearest telegraph station.

DROPPED OFF BOAT.

Young Man Drowned In Lake Erie Under Remarkable Circumstances.

Welland, May 26.—Edward Vandervere, a fisherman, was drowned in Lake Erie off Windmill Point, under peculiar circumstances, on the afternoon of Victoria Day. At the time of the accident he was with his brother, who ran a gasoline fishing tug. He was sitting on the rail. His brother thinks he fell into a doze and dropped into the water. He is said to have been a good swimmer. The two men left Port Colborne harbor at noon with a cargo of fish for Buffalo market. They had sold their cargo and were returning home shortly after four o'clock. Aaron was attending to the engines and Edward was sitting on the rear rail steering.

Aaron made the following statement: I noticed that the boat was following her own way, and looking that way saw that Edward was asleep. I warned him up and then I turned to work on the canvas. It might have been half an hour afterward that I noticed the boat dropping again, and looking back saw that he was gone. I grabbed the tilled and turned her over so hard I broke the shoe off of her. I cruised around for over an hour in the hope of picking him up, but there was no trace of him. Quite a sea was running, but not nearly so heavy as we often have been out in.

Pennsylvania has already, at its own cost, made a forest reserve larger in area than in any other eastern state. Its forest reserve on the 1st of January a year ago was 916,560 acres.

DIAZ RESIGNS AT LAST

Mexican Dictator Gives Place to De la Barra.

President Sends a Letter to Chamber of Deputies In Which He Says He Does Not Understand the Revolution, But Will Bow to the Will of the People—Madero's Lieutenant Becomes Provisional Ruler.

Mexico City, May 26.—President Poriforo Diaz, in a letter read by the president of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon, resigned the Presidency of the Republic of Mexico, and at 4.54 o'clock the acceptance of the resignation by the deputies was announced.

Vice-President Ramon Corral's resignation was also accepted, and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Farncisco Leon de la Barre was chosen Provisional President, to serve until a general election can be held.

Everyone had expected an uproar when the announcements should be made, but within the chamber the words announcing the event were followed by silence. The deputies seemed awed by what had taken place.

In the streets, black with people, the news that Diaz was no longer the President was the signal for wild shouting and manifestations.

There was no violence or destruction of property. On the motion to accept the President's resignation 167 deputies voted aye, while no expression was made by Benito Jaurez, a descendent of President Jaurez and Concepcion Del Valle. As their names were called all other legislators rose and bowed their affirmation.

EX-PRESIDENT DIAZ.

In similar fashion the resignation of Vice-President Corral, now is France, was unanimously accepted, and similarly Senor de la Barre, recently Ambassador to Washington, was chosen Provisional President. Senor de la Barre will take the oath of office at noon to-day in the Yellow Parlor of the National Palace.

Of scarcely less popular interest than the resignation was the assumption of military control of the federal district by Alfredo Robles Dominguez, Madero's personal representative, insuring the handling of popular demonstrations by a leader of the new regime.

Personally Dominguez commands only a small body of local rebels, but the federal garrison is under orders to make no move whatever without his approval. Senor Dominguez said that he could bring 5,000 organized rebel troops into the city within three hours. Their baggage and horses are aboard trains, furnished by the Government, at Cuernavaca, Pachuca and Tlalnepantla.

Dominguez last night said that the troops would remain at their present stations until they should be needed in Mexico City to control the situation.

The President's letter of resignation read as follows:

Sir,—The Mexican people, who generously have covered me with honors, who proclaimed me as their leader during the international war, who patriotically assisted me in all works undertaken to develop industry and the commerce of the republic, establish its credit, gain for it the respect of the world and obtain for it an honorable position in the concert of nations; that same people, sir, has revolted in armed military bands, stating that my presence in the exercise of the supreme executive power is the cause of this insurrection.

"I do not know of any fact imputable to me, which could have caused this social phenomenon, but permitting, though not admitting, that I may be unwittingly culpable, such a possibility makes me the least able to reason out and decide my own culpability. Therefore, respecting as I have always respected the will of the people, and in accordance with article 82 of the federal constitution, I come before the supreme representatives of the nation in order to resign, unreservedly, the office of constitutional President of the republic, with which the national vote honored me, which I do with all the more reason, since in order to continue in office, it would be necessary to shed Mexican blood, endangering the credit of the country, dissipating its wealth, exhausting its resources and exposing its policy to international complications.

"I hope, gentlemen, that when the passions, which are inherent to all revolutionists have been calmed, a more conscientious and justified study will bring out in the national mind a correct acknowledgment which will allow me to die, carrying engraved in my soul a just impression of the estimation of my life, which throughout I have devoted and will devote to my countrymen."

Mexico City, May 26.—The police fired on a crowd in front of the Department of Foreign Relations. One man was killed.

OVERCOME BY GAS.

F. G. Jones of Ayr Perishes at Foot of 75-Foot Well.

Ayr, May 26.—A tragic occurrence marred the holiday Wednesday for the people of Ayr and vicinity, and resulted in the death of F. G. Jones, a well-known resident of the town. The scene of the tragedy was the unoccupied farm of William McRour, fifth concession, South Dumfries. On this farm there is a 75-foot well, with windmill. Something had gone wrong with the piping, and Mr. Jones, who had dug the well about nine years ago, was called upon to make the necessary repair, in which undertaking he was assisted by Mr. McRour, shortly after the noon hour.

Mr. Jones descended into the well a short distance to make a joint on the piping. He had been down only about ten minutes when Mr. McRour heard him utter an exclamation. Looking into the well Mr. McRour could see nothing of him, and he thereupon started descending. He had gone down but a few feet when he suddenly felt that he, too, was being overcome by gas, and he hastily retreated, but was so weak that he had some difficulty in getting out. An alarm was given over the nearest telephone, and help was speedily secured. Mr. F. Nunan volunteered to go down and made three unsuccessful trips, each time plainly showing the deadly effect of the poisonous gas. On the last trip he succeeded in fastening a rope around Mr. Jones' body, but it slipped and Mr. Harry Barrett, who also made a previous unsuccessful effort, finally succeeded in effecting the recovery of the body.

C.N.R. Changes Plans

Montreal, May 26.—The presence yesterday of D. S. Hanna, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway, in Montreal is considered of the utmost significance in railway circles.

It is stated that a general reorganization of the company's system, consequent upon the amalgamation of the Canadian Quebec with the Canadian Northern proper as a transcontinental line, is now in progress, the effect of which will be to switch the centre of gravity, so far as the Canadian Northren Railway is concerned, from Toronto to Montreal. It is in connection with this reorganization that Mr. Hanna has come here, and important changes in the local staff, involving several promotions, may be expected in the near future as the outcome of the visit.

Wanted to See Hanging.

Montreal, May 26—Seats or windows for the hanging of Francesco Creola, which took place this morning were eagering sought after. For two weeks past the residents of Delorimier avenue, from Erie up to Dorchester, whose windows overlook the courtyard of the jail, have been approached by men desirous of renting windows for a few moments. Anywhere from 50 cents up to $10 was offered. Two dollars and five dollars were the favorite prices. Among the applicants were several Italians. They did not offer any great sum, but seemed quite anxious to obtain almost any place from which the execution might be viewed.

Australian Mail Service.

London, May 26.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Chronicle's Melbourne correspondent says that Premiers Fisher and Laurier are expected to arrange a Vancouver service in such a form as to pave the way for the initiation of their allied scheme. The Commonwealth Ministers, however, are unable to agree to join in a new contract between Canada and New Zealand owing to the arrangement for a New Zealand port to be visited after Sydney is left by outward liners. The Sydney Labor Ministry is pressing the Federal Government not to allow the service entirely to lapse in July.

Wedded Peer's Niece.

London, May 26.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The wedding of Mr. Claude Bryan, son of Canon Bryan of Toronto, and Miss Annette Furness, niece of Lord Furness (almost better known as Sir Christopher Furness, the well-known north of England shipbuilder), took place at St. Mark's Church, North Audley street, London, yesterday. The Bishop of Ripon, Dr. Boyd Carpenter, officiated, assisted by Rev. J. Cronshaw, rector of St. Mark's. A reception was afterwards held at 23 Upper Brook street, the residence of the bride's uncle.

Brockville Methodists Protest.

Brockville, May 26.—In view of the "ne temere" decree the Brockville Methodist district, at its annual meeting, placed on record it strongest protest against any branch of the church making encroachment upon the domain of the state, and pledged themselves to resist in all legitimate ways all attempts to lessen the validity of the principle of organic union, of Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian Churches.

Incendiarism Suspected.

Kingston, May 26.—The entire stock of Samuel T. Kirk, grocer, was destroyed by fire, which started from an unknown cause. The building was saved, loss $6,000. This is the third fire to occur under mysterious circumstances, and it is believed a firebug is at work. Sunday night two five-cent theatres in the same block caught fire.

Class for Census Enumerators.

Berlin, May 26.—R. Y. Fish of Linwood, census commissioner for North Waterloo, held a class of instruction yesterday for the twenty enumerators who will take the census in Berlin. It is expected the population to be 15,000, in which event Berlin will apply for a city charter.

Child Perished In Fire.

Ottawa, May 26.—In a fire near Fort Coulongne, Quebec, which destroyed the home occupied by two families named Ladouceur and Kingsbury, a daughter of the former, aged three years, perished. The fire was caused by lightning.

ONLY ONE MAY FINISH

Vedrine Is Likely to Win Paris-Madrid Race.

Aeroplane Contest From the French to the Spanish Capital Proves to Be the Hardest Test Ever Put on the Air-men—Vidrine Passes Over Burgos and Gets an Extension of Time Limit.

Madrid, May 26.—With the exception of the crossing of the Alps by George Chavez on Sept. 23, 1910, a feat which ended in his death, the third stage of the aviation race from Paris to Madrid for the Petit Parisian prize of $20,000 and $10,000 additional offered by the Spanish aero clubs, proved to be the most severe test the aeroplane yet has been subjected to, and two of the three contestants, it would now appear, have been forced to abandon the flight.

From the latest despatches reaching the committee in charge it appears that Vedrine alone is likely to finish. He passed over Quintanapalla and crossed the city of Burgos at a great height, but later was forced to descend. He telegraphed to the aero club saying that he could not proceed for some hours and the club authorized an extension of time for the completion of the race.

Gilbert landed at Olazagutia, about 40 miles from Sansebastian, but when he attempted to make a fresh start his machine was capsized and partly wrecked, although the aviator was not hurt. There is little probability that he will be able to repair the aeroplane within the time limit.

Garros is stalled in a mountainous spot near Andoain, six miles from Sansebastian. The nature of the ground makes a restart practically impossible, and, it is understood that he has abandoned the contest.

To Welcome Earl Grey.

Berlin, May 26.—Elaborate preparations are being made for to give a royal reception to His Excellency the Governor-General and party on their visit to Berlin, on Monday next. A troop of the 24th Grey Horse will act as an escort, and a hundred boy scouts will be guard of honor. The purpose of the visit is to unveil a monument erected by the Daughters of the Empire to Queen Victoria in Victoria Park.

Ex-Mayor Huber Poisoned.

Berlin, May 26.—Ex-Mayor Allan Huber is seriously ill at the General Hospital with blood poisoning. Last winter he wore a pair of rubber moccassins as footwear, and it is believed he was thereby poisoned. He was at present promoting an old settlers' reunion for August, but his physician fears he will not live to celebrate the event.

Mr. Moberly Bell's Walking Stick.

There is a curious story told of Mr. Moberly Bell, the manager of The London Times, who died the other day. Some years ago, while running to catch a train, he overshot the end of the platform and fell heavily. On trying to rise he found that one foot had been twisted completely round, the toes printing straight behind him. For many months he lay in hospital, where at length it was found necessary to take out a bone. "Well, if it won't support me one way it shall in another," he said, cheerily, and he had the severed bone mounted as the knob of a walking-stick, which he constantly made use of.

SERIOUS SKIN ERUPTIONS

Are Ended by Zam-Buk.

Mr. William Purser, of 1385 Elgin Avenue, Weston, Winnipeg, says: "As a cure for skin diseases there is nothing to equal Zam-Buk. Some pimples and sores broke out all over my face and defied various remedies which, from time to time, I applied to them. Not only were these sores unsightly, but they were very painful. For over two months I was afflicted in this way until I was advised to try Zam-Buk. I found this balm was entirely different to the ordinary remedies. It reduced the irritation and the smarting pain. The sores from first being anointed with the balm, grew less and less angry, and then began to dry off. In a short time they all disappeared."

Finest known remedy for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, ringworm, children's rashes, chafings, cuts, burns, scalds, insect stings, sore feet, etc. Also cures piles. 50c. a box at all drug stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. WAS TREATED WELL BY OLD BELLEVILLIANS

Mr. John Fitzgerald, of this city, who was in Chicago a few days ago for the purpose of bringing back here the remains of his brother, Edward, who died in that city, is loud in his praises for the hospitable manner in which he was treated by many of the old Belleville boys of the Windy City. He received from them every attention and was treated in a most kindly manner. In this connection he refers especially to Henry Cullen, A. James, M. Wilkinson, O. Malyea, M. Cummings, Capt. Robertson, A. Cummins, T. Lynch and J. Elliott.

WAS POISONED BY WOOD ALCOHOL

A young man named Joseph Frederick Angell, died on Saturday, at Healey Falls, as a result of taking a dose of wood alcohol in a mistake.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has upset the judgment of an Ontario court which awarded damages to a man who was injured while riding without authority on a railway train. The Privy Council held that while a railway by its sale of ticket contracted to safely carry the holder, it had no contract with a man who had no ticket, and was in fact a trespasser, who might have been prosecuted for his act.

The case in point happened on a train which was backing from one station at London, Ont., to another in a different part of the city and on which a trespasser jumped on the rear platform to steal a ride between the two stations. There was a collision and the man was seriously injured, resulting in a suit against one of the railways. The Higher Court reversed this judgment and the railway appealed the case. The Court of Appeals in Ontario sustained the Higher Court, after which it was taken to the Privy Council and the Lords of the Judicial Committe reversed all the judgment, but the trial Judge. The defendant had to pay the costs in all the appeals.

Occasionally it pays a railroad to fight a damage claim. It may get the case before a Court which gets at the sense of the situation." 1tw,1td

LACROSSE IN THE LONG AGO

Some Old-Time Recollections Which Will Interest Belleville Readers

Of the numerous exchanges which come to The Intelligencer, none is more welcome than "The Belleville Club News," of Chicago, the monthly visits of which are looked forward to with pleasing anticipation which never fails of realization, as it always contains much matter of interest to the people of the City of the Bay, particularly the recollections of the old-time sports and sportsmen of Belleville. The latest of these breezy sketches, of which Maurice D. Lynch is the author, is reproduced herewith:

WHEN STICKS WERE CROSSED IN THE LONG AGO.

"Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horse," "Spotted Dog," "Bald Eagle," "Scar-Faced Charley" and their pals were the only lacrosse players of any account in Canada prior to fifty years ago, but in the last half century many an "Indian" who never drew Government rations has played in Belleville. I knew a big tribe of them.

Lacrosse made its bow to Belleville in 1868; our old friend W. H. Garrett being one of the original promoters of the game. Associated with him were: C. J. Starling, Thomas Holden, E. R. Benjamin, I. B. Graham, Charley Henry, Bob Roy and others. These gentlemen set a good example for those who followed, for they were among the best Canadian players of their day and won much fame for Belleville and themselves.

Like other games, lacrosse improved as it became more popular, and, doubtless, much greater skill was shown by those who came after them than the fathers of the game possessed. The greatest team that ever represented Belleville was the OKA Lacrosse Club, and, in the slang of the day, it was sure some club. The OKAS cleaned up everything around Central Ontario for years and left a record which I do not believe has been equalled by any Belleville team.

Last Christmas, in Belleville, I met several staid business and professional men who were ex-OKAS, but, bless you, one would never think, to look at them now, that they were members of that band of fleet-footed runners who carried all before them on the lacrosse field in the days of long ago.

And what daredevils they were. I can see them now, as often I have seen them, at the Grand Trunk Station, starting off to Bowmanville, Oshawa or Peterborough, to play. White plug hats, linen dusters, sunflowers in buttonholes (Oscar Wilde had been through Belleville about that time and had popularized the big yellow flower), raising fifty-seven different varieties of ructions around the depot and letting everyone know they were on the job.

Do you remember these?—Billy Greatrix, "Honto" Burdette, Wilse Henderson, "Manti" Coleman, Harry Beasley, Ownie Jones, Horace Yeomans, Billy Roberts, "Kil" Kenny, Charley Gillen, Billy Garrett, "Paddy" Lazier, Ab Overell, "Oxen" Forin, Frank Lewis, "Spice" Newbery, Fred Redick, Bob Benjamin, "Jose" Gillen, Harry Wallace, "Chip" Sherwood, "Freezer" Friend ('member Freezer?), Benny Dickens, Jack Taylor, Frank Wallbridge, Jack Garrett, Frank Phippen, Archie Way and others.

The Young Okas were another great team. Among those who composed that club were: Jack Moore, Ernie Lingham, Tom Kelso, Harry Burrell, Fred Greatrix, Tommy Warham, Stuart Wallbridge, Frank Garrett, Bob Newbery, Pete Forin, Harry Hambly, Jim Cummins, Herb Hulme, Parker Thomas, Jack Tannahill, Bill Schultz, Billy Lingham and Fred Henderson.

"Jack" Moore, who nowadays is Dr. John M. Moore, of Chicago, was probably the youngest player ever protested by another team on account of professionalism. Along in the early '80's, Jack was one of the Young Okas who were drafted into the regular Okas to play against Peterborough, and the latter team protested Jack, because, they claimed, he was a professional runner. Jack was only 14 years old at the time, so you see "the Doc" started on his "professional" career at an early age.

Another club that flourished in the early' eighties was the Maple Leaf Lacrosse Club. Some of the best remembered players were: "Nancy" Burns, Jim Faulkiner, Johnny Gibson, Jack Baker, Billy Cronkright, "Chicken" Meagher, "Gordie" Bradford, Jack Rankin, Jack VanAllen, Jimmy O'Brien and our old friend and Belleville Club member, George Brown.

I could name many others if I had space, but a list of the lacrosse players of thirty years ago would be like a directory of the male population of Belleville between the ages of 14 and 30 years, and The News, being a family journal, can't spare an old sport much room for ancient sporting gossip.

LOVED LADY WAS INTERRED TODAY

This afternoon the funeral of the late Mrs. John O'Hare took place, and many friends were present at the obsequies. At St. Thomas' Church the burial services of the Anglican church were conducted by the rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, who also officiated at the grave. Upon the casket were placed a number of floral tributes. At the Belleville cemetery the interment took place. The bearers were Messrs. J. W. Walker, P. J. M. Anderson, J. Taylor, C. M. Stork, J. N. Lazier and Col Ponton.

MIRACULOUS RESULTS IN DUNVEGAN, C.B.

GIN PILLS Brought Relief

"I suffered untold misery even when under treatment from the best doctors for over ten months, and nothing seemed to do me any good or relieve my painful condition. My trouble was Inflammation of Kidneys and Bladder.

I finally determined to go to the Victoria Hospital, Halifax, for treatment.

Two days, however, before my intending departure, a neighbor called and happening to have a GIN PILL in his pocket, insisted on my taking it. I did so and six hours after taking it, the results and benefits I derived were simply nothing more or less than miraculous. Instead of going to the hospital, I sent for a box of GIN PILLS with the result that I am a cured man. I recommend GIN PILLS to everyone suffering from Kidney Trouble."

OBITUARY

CHARLES M. WRIGHT.

Charles M. Wright was born March 5th, 1839, in the city of Kingston and departed this life from his home in Stockdale, April 29th, 1911.

Our brother was soundly converted to God when about fourteen years of age during a Methodist revival meeting held in Sidney Township at Wallbridge. While yet a very young man his church expressed great confidence in him by appointing him a class leader and local preacher, which positions he efficiently held for about fifty years to the time of his death. He often stated that in early manhood he had received a call from God to preach but circumstances hindered which he rgeretted much, of entering the ranks of the regular ministry of the church, which, considering his burning zeal, ready address, and self-denying energy, with a liberal sducation, he was eminently fitted for.

Mr. Wright was married November 9th, 1863, to Miss Sarah Fry, of Thurlow, which union was blessed with six sons, all of whom, with their sorrowing widowed mother, remain to mourn the loss of a faithful father and true husband.

When married Mr. Wright moved with his winsome bride and settled in the 7th concession of Murray, where they lived until about five years ago, when they retired to Stockdale.

Through the earnest solicitation of Mr. Wright and Mr. Jno. Phillips a revival was started over 30 years ago in the little frame school house in the 7th concession of Murray, where Methodist services were held.

Just at this time the Rev. A. M. Phillips and the Rev. Matthew Robinson, then young men, arrived home from College for a short vacation and were pressed into service especially through the influence of Mr. Wright, and a great revival broke out. Within one week some forty wept their way to the cross and though in harvest time people turned out in multitudes, impelled by a wonderful spiritual conviction until the little school house became incapable of holding the great congregation. Rough lumber was secured and willing hands and glowing hearts were soon upon the scene and on the site of the present Murray Tabernacle Church a large building was erected, and at once named The Tabernacle.

The great revival swept on during the busy harvest time and over one hundred were converted to God.

That fall the pesent Tabernacle Church was commenced, which has been noted for many revivals and conversions during the years since those days, in all of which Brother Wright rejoiced and labored until stricken suddenly one week before his death. Prayer, praise and thanksgiving were ever upon his lips as the sun of life went down. Amid the golden glow of the evening day well spent, he said adieu to earth and ceased to work and live.

The funeral was largely attended the Stockdale church being overcrowded.

The services were conducted by the Rev. J. S. McMullen and Mr. C. G. Williams, the pastor preaching from Job xiv:14.

The Chosen Friends—Mr. Wright being a prominent member—marched in procession, and participated in the service at the grave. Tabernacle and Stockdale choirs united for the occasion.

The five sons present—George, on the farm; William, an M. E. minister of Grand Island City, Nebraska; Frank and Fred, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; John, of Vermont, and a half brother of the deceased, Mr. B. Frederick, of Belleville, were the pallbearers, carrying with loving hands the remains of a revered father to his last resting place in Stockdale cemetery, where they rest awaiting the Resurrection Morn.

The floral tributes to the memory of our brother were most beautiful and fitting, particularly a pillow of roses with the word "Tabernacle", and a most lovely wreath of carnations placed upon the casket by the six noble boys.

Not gone from memory—
Not gone from love,
Only gone to our Father's home above.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Coming to Griffin's Opera House.

Manager James Malone has booked Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for one night only and this popular company will appear there on Tuesday, May 30th. This should be a welcome announcement to patrons of that popular play house as well as to the general public, that love this charming old drama. It is a well-known fact that the Stetson Company is one of the best that has ever presented this great play, and this season will but add to its popularity with young and old, for it is even better that what it has been, if such a thing could be possible to so good a company. New features have been added, the old ones given better interpretation. It is said to have the heaviest scenic equipment of any company travelling. A monster street parade will be given at noon. BASEBALL.

Hurst's Hardest.

I asked Tim Hurst what was the closest and hardest decision he ever made was. "It was in Baltimore" he said. "Jennings was on first, McGraw on second and Stenzel at the bat. They started a double steal. Jennings, as he passed Long, hit him, and Long tripped him, after which Jennings went on, and jumped into Collins. Tenney tried to hold McGraw but he broke away, reached second and kicked the ball out of Lowe's hands. Stenzel swung this bat and hit Robbison on the hand trying to keep him from throwing. Robby tripped me and poked me in the back to keep me from seeing, and Stenzel spiked my foot."

"How did you decide it?" I inquired.

"I called it a foul ball, sent the runners back and kicked Stenzel on the shins." —H. Fullerton, American Magazine.

"Chasing" Disagreeable.

Says an outfielder:

One of the most discouraging parts of an outfieler's work is "chasing." With one, two or three men on bases and the score close, someone hits a ball past me, on the ground or on the fly. I turn my back to the diamond and start running as fast as I can go. My one idea is to recover the ball and get it back to the infield before everybody has scored. I know that everything depends on my speed but still I don't know just how far the runners have gone nor how much chance I have of stopping any of them. Nevertheless, I must keep on going. The drive may have been ticketed "home run" the minute it was hit, but usually I don't know whether or not until I have recovered it and thrown it back. You see the work may be entirely useless, or it may be opposite. Whichever it is, I've got to do it, if I want to hold my job. If there's one thing a manager or a fan hates to see, it's an outfielder loafing after an extra base hit.

VETERAN JOURNALIST DEAD AT PICTON

J. W. Conger, aged 72 died at Picton yesterday afternoon after a lingering illness. Dropsy caused his death. Mr. Conger was 52 years part owner of The Picton Gazette which is now in its 81st year. He retired three years ago. During his lifetime he took an active part in municipal, was warden of the county and held their important offices.

COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE

MADOC.

The sudden death of Mr. W. J. Moore was a surprise to many. Mr. Moore was notably kind and generous in nature, brilliant on platform and able in law.

Mr. J. A. Kerr, of Belleville, met with an accident to his auto in which he was ditched. He had to hire a farmer to take him to Madoc. The accident may have been one of the causes for the drop in the price of cheese.

Mr. Wm. Ault was helping his dog to catch a weasel, and as he raised the stone the animal jumped out. This frightened the team, causing them to run away. No damage was done, except to the harness.

Mr. Geo. Dugan had a narrow escape from death. He was pitched from the seat of a field roller which passed over him causing severe injuries.

Mr. W. A. Hungerford, has found a new mineral on his place at Eldorado.

Bush fires have done much damage. The welcome rain of a few days ago put them out. The country is looking fine and the prospect for a good crop is excellent.

Mine host Cockram has lost interest in the horse, the auto takes all his spare time, the working of which he is getting to fully understand.

The district meeting of the Methodist church was held Tuesday and Wednesday. It was a large gathering for the district. The reports showed so far as the money part, that it was a prosperous year.

The funeral of Mr. W. J. Moore took place Sunday afternoon and was large.

OPENS BREACH TO U. S. MANUFACTURES

The New Secretary of War Says Reciprocity is But The First Step

Boston, May 25—Hon. Henry L. Stimson, President Taft's new Secretary of War, signalized his first public utterance as a member of the Cabinet, in a speech here last night, in which he warmly defended the agreement for reciprocity with Canada. The point of Mr. Stimson's speech was one that other Taft defenders have been careful to to suppress, namely that the ratification of the agreement, and the operation will be but a step to free trade in manufactures with Canada.

On this point Mr. Stimson said—

"Our friends say this agreement does not remove the barrier on the bulk of manufactured imports into Canada. My answer is, that it opens a breach wide enough to insure the extension of our natural trade. Our Government has offered to Canada free trade in all commodities; the Canadian commissioners, representing a younger country with younger industries to protect, have felt compelled to decline free trade as to these industries. But the step once taken the tendency will be irresistible. Nor is our benefit as producer confined to the foreign market which we will receive in Canada. The stimulus which will be given to our industries by the larger Canadian market will furnish a new home market, a new American demand for our producers."

Gherkin Sauce.

Gherkin sauce, which is often preferred, when a sauce of this description is required, to caper sauce, may be made by adding some chopped gherkins to some good white sauce which has been sharpened with a few drops of the pickle in which the gherkins were preserved and a small quantity of tarragon vinegar.

Anchovy Sauce.

For a rich anchovy sauce make half a pint of melted butter and add half an ounce of fresh butter which has been worked up with two teaspoonfuls of essence of anchovy and stir in three or four drops of carmine to improve the color, or, if preferred, fish stock may be used instead of milk.

MATRIMONIAL HOAX

Would-be Husbands and Wives in a Paris Cafe Who all Wore White Roses

A well-planned hoax had an amusing result at a Paris cafe. A few days ago two advertisements appeared in the newspapers. One of them was supposed to be from a rich woman who was looking for a young husband who need not necessarily have any money; the other from a rich man who was looking for a young wife. In this case also there was no need for the woman to have means of her own.

Answers to these advertisements came in by hundreds. Both had been written by the same person. To each one of them a reply was sent, asking the man or woman, as the case might be, to meet the "advertiser" at the cafe. It was also requested of each man and woman that a white rose should be worn for identification purposes.

Having made these plans, the advertiser then wrote to the police saying that there was to be a big demonstration of Royalists at a certain cafe. Thirty detectives were accordingly on the scene.

Soon large numbers of young men and young women began to assemble at the cafe. At first the white rose that each one wore was regarded as a coincidence, but it soon became evident that they were the victims of a hoax, and after a little embarrassment, followed by hearty laughter, the crowd dispersed.

POSTMEN'S HEADGEAR

Glasgow Carriers Will Have a Double-Peaked Cap

Next spring will see many Glasgow postmen in all the glory of the new double-peaked cap. There is a difference of opinion among the men as to its beauty and its comfort, but its adoption will not, we understand, be compulsory, as the "fore and aft," as the cap or shako has been termed, will be supplied only to offices where the three-fourths of the staff are in favor of it. The cap has the advantage of being fairly light, with the weight well balanced, the rear peak coming somewhat low in order to protect the wearer against the dripping of rain down the neck, which is the great discomfort with the present style of shako. In large cities where distinct offices are established the new style of headgear will be supplied only if the vote is for the city as a whole. It is proposed to supply knickerbockers and puttees to rural postmen who go their rounds on bicycles, an innovation of which it is said the men are unanimously in favor.

ACT OF HOMAGE

At Coronation Will Not Be Performed by Lady de Ros

There is little possibility of Lady de Ros being selected to do homage for the barons of England in virtue of the seniority of the peerage she holds. Certain Coronation services have, indeed, been performed by women or by deputies appointed by them, but homage has never been one of them. The next in seniority, Lord Mowbray and Stourton, will represent his brother barons, just as Viscount Falkland at King Edward's Coronation represented his senior, Viscount Hereford, who was not present. It is remarkable that there is a difference of no less than 233 years in the dates of creation between the premier Marquis of England, Lord Shrewsbury, and the next in time, Lord Lansdowne.

The act of homage at the Coronation consists in swearing allegiance, touching the crown, and kissing the King's cheek. In earlier days it was counted of the highest importance. At the time of Henry VI.'s Coronation a plague was raging, and to avoid infection a Bill was passed in Parliament permitting the omission of the kiss in the act of homage. In this Act it was specially enacted that notwithstanding the omission of what was evidently an essential feature of the ceremony, the peers were entitled to receive the official letter acknowledging that they had performed homage. Macaulay, who was present at William IV.'s Coronation, gives an amusing picture of political partisanship while the peers were going up to do homage. "Some of them," he writes, "were cheered, which I thought indecorous in such a place and on such an occasion. The Tories cheered the Duke of Wellington and our people in revenge cheered Lords Grey and Brougham."

SURF TO MATRIMONY

A celebrated American billiard player who rescued a lady from drowning in the surf at Atlantic City some months ago has now plunged with her into the sea of matrimony.

THE CORONATION NEXT

For the Crown Prince of Germany—He and Princess Home from Asia

The Crown Prince and Crown Princess, of Germany, are at home again, much to Potsdam's joy, after their long five months' sojourn in Ceylon, India and Egypt. Like the ardent soldier that he is, the Crown Prince went promptly back to his military duties, as major of a battalion of the Guards at Doberitz, to be warmly welcomed by his comrades, among whom he is extremely popular. The Crown Prince's next trip abroad will be in June, when he goes to London to represent the Kaiser at the Coronation.

GREAT FIRE AT CONEY ISLAND

Many Places of Amusement Burned—Loss Three Million Dollars

(Intelligencer Special.)

NEW YORK, May 27.—A fire which started in a side-show in "Dreamland," destroyed one-third of the amusement places at Coney Island to-day, causing a loss estimated at over three million dollars. No lives are reported lost, but it is not yet known if there were any casualties. Many thrilling rescues were effected, including the saving of six tiny mites of humanity from the baby ncubators. Captain Ferraris' big animal show was completely destroyed seventy-nine animals being shot or burned to death. A bear, leopard, and a huge lion dashed into the crowd of spectators and were riddled with bullets by policemen. Luna Park, the great amusement place adjacent, was saved.

A NEW ARCHBISHOP

ROME, Italy, May 27.—Edmond Francis Prendergast, auxiliary bishop of Philadelphia, has been appointed archbishop of that diocese to succeed the late Archbishop Ryan.

BISHOP'S VISIT TO PARHAM MISSION

Altar Dedicated At Parham—Services Were Also Held at Arden and Olden

Bishop Mills made his annual visitation to Parham Mission on May 24th and 25th. The Bishop was driven to Arden by Mr. Cuddy, of Harlowe. While in a bad place on the road the clevis holding the whiffle tree to the double tree broke. Forutnately the pole did not fall. The Bishop and Mr. Cuddy escaped a serious accident. The team was a spirited one. Service was held at St. Paul's Arden, at 8 p. m. Rev. J. W. Forster read the service. Rev. Mr. Irvine, of Flinton, read the lessons. The Bishop preached a grand sermon on the "Divinity of Christ,"—text, Col. ii:9-10.

The Bishop, in answer to a petition dedicated the fine oak altar with bross standards. After the service was over the Bishop paid a visit to Mrs. Williams. The Bishop and Mr. Forster were entertained at the Pringle House Rev. and Mrs. Irvine were entertainby Mrs. Williams. Claude Williams drove the Bishop over to St. John's Church. Mr. Gendron took Mr. Forster over There was a celebration of the Holy Communion. The Bishop was celebrant. The epistle was read by Mr. Forster.

The Bishop's sermon was on the curing of the Impotent man—St. John v:6. "Wilt thou be made whole?" He showed how religion was a personal matter, and how Christ's question should be applied to each individual soul. Mr. and Mrs. A. Fraser entertained the clerical party at dinner. Mr. Fraser and son, John, took the Bishop over to Parham, wehre service was held in St. James' Church. The service was read by Mr. Forster. The Bishop preached a fine sermon frour Eph. iv:20-24.

The congregations were good at Arden and Olden. The people were pleased to see their Bishop once more listening to his sermons with rapt attention and meeting him after the services were over.

AN EASY LESSON IN HIGH FINANCE

System by Which Robin, Banker, Took People's Money As Fast as It Came In

The strange ins and outs of high finance as they are displayed in the narrative of the collapse of the Carnegie Trust Company of New York are detailed at length in an article in the June Hampton,s entitled "Where Is Your Money?" by Frank Parker Stockbridge. Equally interesting are the life stories of some of the men concerned in that huge failure. Of Robin, the immigrant who became a powerful banker, Mr. Stockbridge says:

"Deposits accumulated in Robin's Northern Bank, where he was chairman of the executive committee, until more than $8,000,000,000, mostly the funds of small tradesmen doing business in Harlem and the Bronx, were in its coffers. His Riverside Bank was prosperous. People were flocking to put their money into his Washington savings bank and he began to look around for other ways of getting the money.

"He got into the Fidelity Development Company, a real-estate concern which owned the old Morris Park race track, and soon controlled it. He acquired control of the Bankers' Realty and Security Company. To carry out his schemes he needed a title insurance company. The Aetna Indemnity Company of Hatford, which had formerly been one of Fritz Heine's concerns owned the Title and Guaranty Company of Rochester. Robin bought control of the Aetna and from it purchased the Rochester concern.

"The savings bank could lend money on real estate owned by the realty companies. The Title and Guaranty Company could guarantee the mortgages to satisfy the bank examiners and the two commercial banks could lend on the capital stock of any other. With all these institutions under his control Robin could take money out as fast as the public put in.

"His personal tastes were luxurious, even oriental. He established himself in luxurious apartments, gorgeously furnished, in an expensive house in Gramercy Park. Like other players in the big game, he wanted a country palace. He built a magnificent mansion at Wading River, Long Island One of the important details of 'Driftwood Manor' as he called his place, was its well-stocked wine cellar.

"Robin entertained house parties of kindred spirits men and women. The residents of the little village of Wading River talk of the things that went on at these house parties. They tell the stories of the 'Snow Waltz,' in which after a night of revelry, the dancers would whirl out through the open door and regardless of low necks and thin slippers, would finish their dance on the snow-covered verandas. Other tales are of a summer sport of a somewhat similiar nature in which the pond near the house took the place of the veranda.

"No matter how fast the money came in, Robin needed more. There was no end to his schemes—and for the most part they were good and perfectly legitimate schemes. He conceived the idea, for example, of running a trolley line across the new Queensborough Bridge and through Long Island City to Jamaica. Such a line would tap a large, undeveloped section of Long Island and be of real public service. He obtained a franchise for this line, including the only available route to Jamaica. Organized the South Railroad Company and a couple of construction companies to carry out the project.

"Down Wall Street, men who profess to know say that if he had located his railroad anywhere else except on Long Island, he would never have got into trouble. Long Island is one of Wall Street's 'clover patches.' And his was the begining of his dow-fal."

BOYS PLAYED BASEBALL

Two Matches Took Place Yesterday for the Yeomans Trophy

Yesterday afternoon after the close of school two baseball matches took place between teams representing Queen Victoria, Cannifton Road, Octavia street and St. Michael's schools.

These were the first matches of the season for the possession of a handsome trophy presented by Dr. Yeomans for competition between the Public Schools and St. Michael's School. Last year the latter team were the victors. In yesterday's contests the Queen Victoria lads defeated St. Michael's boys by a score of 15 to 7, and Octavia street school won over the Cannifton road boys by 25 to 4. The former game was played on Pine street school grounds and the latter on the Coleman Flats grounds.

Q. V. S. vs. St. Michaels.

Newton and Fenn of the Q.V.S. make a nice battery, and they certainly had the Indian sign on St. Michaels most of the time. Sanford at 3rd base and Roblin at short did some pretty work. Hitchon at 1st and Caldwell at 2nd, and also all the rest made some very good plays. Hays, for the St. Michaels did some fine catching, grabbing the hot flies bare-handed. Patterson, for the losers, did some good catching. He got most of the balls pitched far or near. The line up of the teams:—

Q.V.S.—W. Ross, l.f; S. Caldwell, 2nd; H. Fenn, p; G. Sanford, 3rd; A. Hitchon, 1st; W. Roblin, s.s; S. Newton, c; R. Arnott, r.f.; L. Arnott c. f.

St. Michael's—M. Patterson, c; S. Deacon, l.f.; F. McNab, r.f.; D. Doran p&1st; S. Mannahan, p&1st; L. Hayes, 2nd; H. McDonald, W. Gorman, K. Brown.

Score by innings:—
Q.V.S.—20510700x—15.
St. Michaels—030012001—7

Mr. E. Thomas made a saticfactory umpire.

Octavia vs. Cannifton Road.

This game was played on Coleman Flats and was too much one-sided to be interesting. The boys from No. 2 school, at the start took a very decided lead and held it. At the conclusion of the eighth innings the game, was called, the score being 25 to 4 in favor of Octavia street boys. Mr. G. I. Soveriegn was the umpire.

The line up was as follows:—

Octavia street—Bell, p; G. Harris, c. T. Harris, 1st; Ostrom, 2nd; Minns 3rd ;Delong, s.s.; Adams, r.f ; Dockstader, c.f; Green, l.f.

Canifton Road—French, p; Wrightmyer, c; Phillips, 1st; J. Casey, 2nd; Weese, 3rd; G. Casey, s.s.; Mather, r.f.; Barrage, c.f.; Cook, l.f.

LOW PRICES IN U. S. FOR CHEESE

Canadian Cheese Would Have a Poor Chance With it Under Reciprocal Trade

The following dispatch to the Ogdensburg News sheds a deal of light up on the dairy market of the adjoining State of New York and ought to make the advocates of Reciprocity in Canada keep silent since Canadian cheese is approximately a cent a pound higher

Gouverneur, May, 20—The lowest prices for cheese prevailed on the local dairy board to-night since its organization five years ago. The ruling price was 9 1-2 cents, and though eight lots went to A. B. Birkler for 9 3-4 cents, and four to B. Cleveland for the same figure. The price committee met as usual but failed to accomplish results and left the disposal of cheese to the salesmen. It was after midnight before prices were finally agreed upon.

Orders to the Montreal buyers were not to pay over 9 1-2 cents. There were three more factories represented than last week. Pastures were reported good and the supply of milk increasing daily. Butter remained at 21 1-4c. the same as last week. The 2,470 boxes of cheese offered brought prices from 9 1-4 to 9 3-4 cents. Last year the price was 14 1-2 cents and butter sold at 27 1-2 cents.

Watertown, May 20—Cheese ruled here to-day at from 9 5-8 cents to 10 cent.s

Canton, May 22—Twelve hundred tubs of butter sold at 21 1-4c.; 1,100 boxes of cheese sold at 9 3-4c.

THEY HIRED A BOAT—DIDN'T COME BACK.

Mr. Jack Robin reported to the police last night that the day previous two young men engaged a boat from him and they had not returned. Mr. Roblin was not so apprehensive that any mishap had befallen the parties as he was it was a case of securing a boat. He did not know then their names, but gave a fair discription of one of the parties.

CURRENT COMMENT

The recall would be a good thing to work on the ward system in Belleville.

The only virtue displayed of late years by ex-President Diaz of Mexico, was the virtue of "resignation," which, however, he was very loth to give effect to.

An English novelist is suing for divorce from an English novelist, and both of them are becoming known to the public at last.

Why do not the manufacturers of the common variety of lawnmower pattern by the makers of automobiles and produce noiseless machines?

Rev. Dr. Gundy has just retired from the ministry after more than half a century of faithful service, yet a mush-room, sensational evangelist, like ex-ball player Billy Sunday, cleans up more hard cash at the gospel game in six weeks than the trained interpreter of the scriptures after five decades of labor and sacrifice. Things don't seem to be evenly balanced.—St. Thomas Times.

The Marconi wireless telegraph has become a success in the transmission of long distance messages. A telegram of the 25th inst., states that communication has been established between Cape Breton and Africa, and a message sent from the Glace Bay Marconi station direct to the Eiffel Tower, Paris, has been relayed within one hour to Dakar, on the coast of western Africa. A large staff of operators are in duty handling press and commercial business sent for the old country and that transmitted from the mother country.

An exchange gives the following excellent advice: Those who cannot swim should never venture where the lack of the art may mean death. Non-swimmers take a risk when they go in a canoe; and they cannot compel their companions to share that risk when others are along. The light skiff is almost as pleasant for those whom a more moderate pace satisfies; and it is infinitely safer. Moreover, swimming is one of the most fascinating of sports; and there is no greater fun than learning it at practically any age. Hhose who have lacked the opportunity to acquire it when children, cannot better enjoy their summer by the water than by starting in at once to learn to swim. In that way they get a new "game," a matchless exercise and a passport to such sports as canoeing. Every man and woman should know how to swim. Every man and woman will add to their joy of life in this glorious summer weather if they know how to handle a boat or a canoe, and practice both arts. The more of us who are at home on the water, the fewer will figure in the terrifying tragedy of drowning accidents. And we have lots of water in Canada, and easy access to it for everybody. We are not fenced away from the best stretches as they so often are in Europe. And there are none of us who cannot get a chance to learn to swim if we genuinely try for it.

THE DOCTOR'S QUESTION

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorder.

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "are your bowels regular?" He knows that ninety-eight per cent. of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver and that this condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Rexall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly, and have a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Two sizes 25c. and 10c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

A Thoughtful Man.

Mr. M. A. Kennedy, manager of the Ontario Motor Car Co., is a Toronto business man, with two distinctions. In the first place he presides over the finest automobile establishment in Canada. Secondly, his courtesy is so remarkable that everybody who comes in contact with him goes away and talks about it. Here is an example of this characteristic.

A certain firm of photographers in the city do a lot of "rush" work. Mr. Kennedy is one of their commercial customers. Recently one of the camera men met with an accident, and for a few days orders were not executed as promptly as usual at the studio. The accident was recorded in the papers, but most of the firm's patrons did not care what had happened. They wanted their work done, and they said so over the telephone.

But from Mr. Kenndy—whose work was as pressing as anybody's—came a most courteous letter, expressing regret at the accident, and adding that he knew that the photographs in hand for him would be delivered as soon as possible in the circumstances.

The members of the firm think of having this letter framed.

Father Vaughan on Canada.

Father Vaughan, who was in Canada at the time of the Eucharistic Congress, and visited Toronto, has been conducting a mission among the London costermongers. In his closing services he talked to his audience about Canada, and described it as a fine country to migrate to.

"I have lately returned from my first visit to the Dominion," he said, "and more fervently than ever I recommend any among you who can do so to get your bits of things together and make for the Northwest of Canada. If you are a worker, skilled or unskilled, and will take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, and put your back in your job, you are sure to come out on top. It is 'dogged' that does the trick and make the fortune."

Did Not Bother Him.

"I don't see how you can like to go to his church."

"Why not?"

"He fairly roars his sermons."

"I know, but I never sleep daytime, anyhow."

Quebec Treasurer Loses.

Richmond, Que., May 27.—Fire last night destroyed the carriage shed and farns of the Hon. Peter S. G. Mackenzie, Provincial Treasurer. The residence, horses and live stock were saved with much difficulty. The loss is estimated at $3,000.

What Is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

It is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, and as none but sound, clean grain can be malted, Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has for its base the most carefully selected grains of the field. It is predigested liquid food in the form of a medicinal whiskey; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It is a gentle, invigorating stimulant and tonic that influences for good every important organ of the body. It is a remedy that should be in the family medicine chest.

What Does It Do?

It builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces; it makes digestion perfect and enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains.

It strengthens and sustains the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

It is a wonderful remedy in the prevention and cure of nervousness, typhoid, malaria, all stomach troubles, diseases of the throat and lungs, and is recognized as a medicine by doctors of all schools.

All liquor dealers, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Refuse substitutes and imitations; they are impure and dangerous. Medical booklet and doctor's advice sent free.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

"Something Just as Good."

A discovery can be made but once. After that all similar acts become emulation, imitation or an attempt at substitution.

Newbro's Herpicide is a discovery. It was the first remedy ever given to science to kill the dandruff germ. Other preparations have since been offered to the public, some similar in appearance, some in odor, but all bringing the daring promise of doing the same things that Herpicide has been doing for years.

Every article of this kind is merely one more instance of vicious emulation vile imitation or a base attempt at substitution.

The "somthing just as good" story is old, why give it a thought? Herpicide is the Original Remedy. It kills the dandruff germ and prevents the hair from falling. Itching of the scalp stops almost with the first application.

Don't be deceived with "Something just as good." If your own druggist does not keep the genuine dandruff germ destroyer, Newbro's Herpicide, go to one who does.

One dollar sized bottle are sold under an absolute guarantee.

Send ten cents in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. Applications may be obtained at good barber shops —J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Menace of the Salmon.

But there is one danger that threatens the salmon fishing industry of British Columbia, the same danger that threatens always when game or fish are too easily taken, and that is, that with so many clever devices for capturing the salmon before they enter the rivers, not enough may reach the spawning grounds to keep up the supply. Restrictive legislation has been attempted, but has not proven very successful. To lessen the danger the Canadian authorities have established several fish hatcheries. The first was built at Bon Accord on the Fraser River in 1884, and since then nine others have been established, and the Dominion Fisheries Commission has recommended the establishment of several more.

It would seem that it would not be necessary for a large number of fish to reach the spawning grounds, for it is estimated that each female salmon deposits not less than 35,000 eggs, so that, if all were hatched, and came to maturity, no river would be large enough to hold them. But it is likely that not more than four per cent. are even hatched, and of these a large number come to grief before their four years of life are over, and they return to perform their function in the perpetuation of the race.

Wonderful Location.

That he lives in the midst of Scotland, England and Ireland is the way his location in Guelph, Ont., is described by Mr. John Taylor, president of the Taylor-Forbes Co.

The explanation is simple, but interesting.

Many of the streets of the Royal City are named after cities in the Old Land, and the streets which bound three sides of Mr. Taylor's residence are called Glasgow, Cambridge and Cork.

SIX MONTHS SESSION—NOT ALTOGETHER BARREN

The work of a six months' session of Parliament, not yet closed, was productive of some good measures, and, so far, prevented the passage of some bad ones, among them the reciprocity compact. What will be the result of the combat when Parliament reassembles at the close of the adjournment on the 18th of July is problematical.

Among the most important measures that became law are:

THE ANTI-COCAINE LAW.

This act makes it an offence to sell cocaine or opium or morphine or any of their salts or compounds except for medicinal or scientific purposes. This bill was inspired largely by the havoc wrought in Montreal by the cocaine habit.

THE FOREST RESERVE.

Of far-reaching import is the act which enlarges the forest reserve of Canada from three to sixteen million acres. The intention is to adopt a general policy of economic use and conservation combined. For the present there will be no re-forestation, but the older trees will be cut and the younger carefully protected.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

A Government measure was passed guaranteeing the bonds of the Canadian Northern from Montreal to Port Arthur to the extent of $35,000,000, and a second act authorizing the Government to lease the St. John Valley Railway, which will be built by the Province of New Brunswick.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS.

There are two acts affecting international relations. One establishes the International Joint Commission to administer the Waterways treaty with the United States, in which, as usual, Canada gets the worst of the bargain. The other empowers the Government to make a favored nation arrangement with Japan for two years. Our present treaty expires in July, and in the interval of two years an effort will be made to secure a new general trade treaty. The clause in the old treaty which surrendered control over Japanese immigration is dropped, but the friendly arrangement with Japan in that regard by which the Japanese Government undertakes to limit emigation to Canada, is continued.

THE RAILWAY ACT.

A half dozen amendments were made to the Railway Act. One of the most important provides for a railway court to hear disputes between Provincial and Dominion railways and to control interchange of traffic between them. It was made as a result of co-relative legislation in Ontario, but it applies to all provinces which have a Railways or Public Utilities Commission. It would thus apply to Quebec. Another amendment authorizes the Government to take over any railway which is allowed to fall into dilapidation and to sell it and recover the subsidy paid to it. Whether this act will enable the Government to compel the Grand Trunk Railway to put the line between Madoc village and Eldorado in operation is doubtful.

POST OFFICE CLERKS, ETC.

Another act of considerable importance provides salary increases in the city post offices. A similar act in reference to the outside customs yet remains to be dealt with after the House resumes.

REGULATION OF EXPLOSIVES.

Of much public interest is the proposed regulation of the trade in explosives. The bill is wide in its terms, and regulates the storage of explosives even on a small scale. Mr. C. J. Doherty raised the vital question whether it did not interfere with provincial rights. There has been objection from the provinces; but, as Mr. Doherty pointed out, this would not save the act, if the manufacturers of explosives or any one of them chose to raise objections and the courts upheld them. Neither of these two last-mentioned measures is likely to pass this session. The Dominion Parliament of late has paid very little respect for provincial rights.

COPYRIGHT ACT.

The Commoners have disposed of the Copyright Act, but it is still before the Senate. This measure is part of an Imperial scheme of copyright, which is expected to put an end to the long dispute between the Dominion and the Imperial Government over this subject. It gives Canada the control of her own copyright for the first time, and it applies the principle of reciprocal rights within the Empire. One of its effects will be to take away the right of American authors to obtain a copyright in Canada without printing or publishing; while on the other hand, Canadians can obtain copyright in the United States only by having their works not only printed and published, but set up in that country.

STAND OVER.

A quintette of Government projects of a large range have been left by the wayside for the present. One of these is a radical attempt to wipe out the evil of phosphorus poisoning, or "phossy jaw," as it is commonly called. The act prohibits the use of phosphorus in the manufacture of matches. Similar legislation has been passed in Great Britain, Germany and the leading European countries. The United States is expected to follow suit.

Two other acts which stand over are the Grain Act, and the act to empower the Minister of Railways to take over a number of branch lines in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. These are both before the Commons.

The Grain Act is the Government answer to the western farmers' request for the nationalization of terminal grain elevators; it creates a board and gives it power to take over and operate the elevators, if thought advisable after investigation by them. These last three projects have a fair chance of becoming law this year; the Grain Act has already passed the Senate.

Bank charters have been extended for a year from July 1 next. The main change proposed in the Bank Act by the Minister of Finance was the creation of a shareholders' audit. He did not adopt Government inspection of banks. The failure of the Farmers' Bank has greatly increased the pressure being brought to secure government inspection, and it may form part of the Government Bill next year.

SOME PRIVATE BILLS.

The only act of public importance, introduced by a private member which has become law is Dr. Black's bill to revise the machinery of the Roddick Act. The object is to secure a Dominion registration of doctors, and Dr. Black's bill provides for a Dominion board of examiners. Mr. F. D. Monk introduced a radical measure to limit water power leases to fifty years; and re-introduced his co-operative savings act, but neither bill made much progress.

Mr. Alphonse Verville's eight hour day law passed the Commons in a much amended and dilapidated shape, and is now before the Sen-

Completes Flight to Madrid.

Madrid, May 27.—Pierre Vedrine, the French aviator, arrived at the Spanish capital from Burgos at 8.06 o'clock yesterday morning, being the first contestant to complete the third stage of the Paris-to-Madrid aviation race, and the almost certain winner. He covered the distance of 140 miles between Madrid and Burgos, where he landed Thursday from St. Sebastian, in two hours and forty-five minutes. Gilbert and Garros are still stalled in the mountain fastnesses, and it is not thought probable that they will be able to finish within the time limit.

Horse Ate Her Rat.

Chatham, May 27.—A farm horse tied near the Central Drug Store yesterday reached out at the head of an unknown young woman, who was passing and pulled the rat from her hair. The screams of the lady brought the owner of the horse to the rescue, but the horse had devoured most of the rat before it could be taken away from him. The lady made a quick disappearance.

Chatham Overcrowded.

Chatham, Ont., May 27.—The house famine has reached such an acute stage in this city that vacant lots are renting for high prices on the north side, where newcomers are erecting tents to live in till such time as they may be able to secure houses. Many families have already established themselves in tents in North Chatham.

AT THE BEEHIVE

Chas. N. Sulman.

The Editors Fought.

Charleville, Queensland, has been inaugurating its new gymnasium in a decidedly novel fashion—a boxing contest between the editors of the local Liberal Times and Labor Guardian. There was a crowded attendance, and much bitter partisanship was displayed. Both men "fought fiercely," and there was a great deal of clinching and wild hitting. The contest ended in the triumph of the Liberal editor, his Labor opponent at the end of the final round "hanging over the ropes in a dazed condition."

Their Fault.

"My dear sir, you may be an expert floriculturist, but you know nothing of society.

"What has that to do with it?"

The following story is told of Dr. Arnold of Rugby, England:

One night the great doctor went for a stroll in the grounds after the boys of the school had retired to rest, and all were supposed to be snug in bed. To the doctor's surprise, a boy crossed the terrace where he stood, made to a certain window, and began to climb up to it. The good doctor grasped the boy by one of his coattails, but the boy escaped by leaving the coat-tail in the doctor's hands.

The doctor said to himself, "Well, I'll know who it is in the morning, for he will have but one tail to his coat."

But in the morning, when the school assembled, to his astonishment the

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

FLEES FROM CAPITAL

Gen. Diaz Leaves Mexico City in Dead of Night.

Muffled Up to the Ears and Followed By a Few Friends, Deposed President Takes a Special Train For Vera Cruz, Where He Is Reported to Have Taken Ship—Madero Resigns Post to De la Barra.

Mexico City, May 27.—Porifiro Diaz, for whom during thirty years all Mexico stood to one side, early yesterday, hat in hand, stole from the capital. Only a few devoted friends, whom he dared to trust, followed him to the station at two o'clock yesterday morning, shortly after the celebration over his resignation had quieted down.

Diaz was bound for Vera Cruz to take ship for Spain. In the distance he could hear the voices of a few of the more enthusiastic citizens who were still acclaiming the new President, Francois Leon de la Barra and shouting "via Madero."

Travel between Mexico City and Vera Cruz usually is over the Mexican Railway, a standard guage line with modern equipment. Rails along this route, however, frequently have been removed of late by bandits who were determined that Diaz, for reasons best known to themselves, should not leave the capital. They are reported to have harbored the idea that Diaz would follow the precedent of other Latin-American Presidents and carry the national funds with him.

There is also a narrow guage, railroad to the coast. Taking it for granted that Diaz would take the more luxurious route, the bandits did not molest the narrow guage road. For this reason, it was chosen by Diaz for his trip.

The general should have reached Vera Cruz yesterday afternoon, but whether he arrived is not publicly known here.

General Diaz, still feeble from his illness and far from being a well man, left his home under dreary circumstances. Rain had fallen earlier in the night and by the time the former President emerged from his house, the air was chilly. He was closely muffled. To aid in the disguise a borrowed automobile was used. The trip to the San Lazaro station was made over unfrequented streets. By a prearranged scheme, at the last moment, police were scattered along the way. At certain points close friends of the former chief executive, including those who are to accompany him across the Atlantic, fell in behind the Diaz automobile.

Three trains were used, the first as a pilot. The Diaz special followed. A third train, occupied by a detachment of the Twenty-Fifth Infantry, brought up the rear. The cars of the fugitives' special were occupied as follows: First car, Gen. Diaz and Mrs. Diaz, Mrs. Romero Rubio de Terresa, Col. Porfirio, jr., a son, Lieut. Lorenzo Elizaga and their families. Second car, Gen. Fernandino Gonzales, Manuel Gonzales, Col. Santa Cruz, Major Espinosay Rondero. Third car, Francisco S. Garcia, Ignacio de la Garita and a kitchen crew. The trains ran without orders, for fear the bandits along the line might tap the wires and get news of the flight.

Just when or on what ship Gen. Diaz will sail is a matter of conjecture. The French ship Espagne was due to leave Vera Cruz yesterday, but may have been held at the disposal of the party from Mexico City.

Diaz Off For Europe.

Mexico, City, May 27.—Private telegrams received here last night, report the arrival of General Diaz at Vera Cruz at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

According to these advices, Diaz boarded the Ypiranga, a Hamburg-American boat last night. The Ypiranga is due to sail south to Coatzacoalcos to-day. She will return to Vera Cruz and sail for Europe next Wednesday.

Madero Resigns.

Jaurez, Mexico, May 27.—Francesco I. Madero, in a manifesto to the people of Mexico, last night resigned the position of Provisional President conferred on him by a convention of revolutionists at San Luis Potosi last October, and called on all Mexicans to support Senor de la Barra as the sole executive of Mexico.

Soñor Madero placed his forces at the disposal of Senor de la Barra and paid tribute to the character of the new executive, pointing out that he might well be regarded as "one of us." The manifesto was Senor Madero's last act as Provisional President.

Motor Boat Lantern Explodes.

Brockville, May 27.—John Ferguson was cleaning a motor boat at Dark Island when an explosion occurred from a lantern in the boat. His arm and hand were terribly burned.

One of the first river accidents is reported from Crossman's Point. Walter Seaman started in his motor boat to cross to one of the islands and collided with another "put-put," which struck his craft amidships, cutting it partly in two. Seaman was thrown on the deck of the other boat and escaped with a few bruises.

Cows Electrocuted.

Brockville, May 27.—Five thoroughbred Ayreshire cows belonging to Thomas Jones, a farmer, living just across the line, were electrocuted by the dropping of a live high tension transmission wire which crossed the farm. The animals were valued at $100 each.

Six Killed by Lightning.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 27.—During a thunderstorm yesterday lightning struck a building on a banana estate on the western end of the island, killing six laborers and injuring seven.

A Sudden Death.

Peterboro, May 27.—The wife of ex-Mayor T. H. G. Denne died suddenly from heart trouble yesterday, aged 43. She had breakfasted with the family.

MUNRO DIDN'T KNOW.

President of Farmers' Bank In Dark He Declares.

Toronto, May 27.—After the examination of a number of witnesses, including W. R. Travers, former manager, in an effort to establish that Col. James Munro of Embro, president of the Farmers' Bank at the time of its suspension, had wilfully signed returns falsely showing the position of the bank, the crown concluded its case late yesterday afternoon. Judgment was reserved by Judge Winchester. H. H. Dewart, K.C., appeared for Col. Munro, and Louis Monohan represented the crown.

The accused banker, while acknowledging the signatures as his, stoutly maintained that he had signed the returns believing them to be correct. The evidence of Mr. Travers and Accountant Fitzgibbon supported this testimony, each declaring that the president had attached his name to the reports without, as far as they were aware, any idea that they did not truly represent the bank's status.

Somewhat of a sensation was caused by the introduction by the crown of a private letter written by Col. Munro to Travers in December, 1909. It referred to "rumors" which the writer thought the bank could not afford to disregard, and suggested that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt be compelled to pay his indebtedness to the bank, "as many people seem to know of it and claim he was worth nil."

F. W. Stair testified that he had warned the colonel a year before the collapse that the bank was unsound. Col. Munro admitted this, and said he had spoken to Travers about it, and had been assured that all was well.

Unusual Accidents.

Toronto, May 27.—Two men are in a serious condition at St. Michael's Hospital as the result of two unusual accidents yesterday.

George Carter, learning to be a conductor on the street cars, comes from Peterboro, Ont. Yesterday afternoon he was riding on the knife-board of an open Avenue road trailer. Geo. A. Graham's big touring car was standing in the roadway at Avenue road and Cottingham street. It was not fairly against the curb and, the hood being down, this part of the machine struck Carter, knocking him to the pavement. One rib was broken and pierced the lungs.

Charles Barker, a teamster, living at 111 Berkeley street, while backing his team in a line in rear of the Ontario Woollen Mills, was impaled upon the tonge of the wagon. The tongue pierced the abdomen when he was jammed against the wall. He walked to his home holding his hand over the wound, which was bleeding profusely.

On the Warpath.

Montreal, May 27.—Hon. Mr. Fisher was in Montreal yesterday en route to his home in Knowlton for a brief rest, preparatory to a series of important meetings throughout the eastern provinces.

The first meeting is to be held at Farnham on Saturday afternoon, May 27. The chief topic for discussion will be reciprocity and the speakers will be Hon. Mr. Fisher, Hon. Mr. Lemieux, H. E. Allan, M.P., and D. P. Meigs, M.P.

Another meeting is to be held on Thursday, June 1, at Sherbrooke, where the speakers will be Hon. Mr. Fisher, Dr. Beland, M.P. for Beauce, Dr. Pelletier, A. B. Hunt, M.P., C. H. Lovell, M.P., and E. W. Tobin, M.P.

Expects Vote by June 15.

Washington, May 27—Vice-President Sherman, to a White House caller yesterday, declared that he expected a vote to be taken on the Canadian reciprocity bill in the Senate by June 15, and said he would not be surprised to see Congress adjourn long before October. Mr. Sherman did not say whether he expected the reciprocity bill to pass.

The vice-president's optimism as to an early vote on reciprocity is not shared by a number of Senators. President Taft told callers yesterday that while he still is of the opinion that the bill will pass, he is not counting on a vote as soon as June 15.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE

Sir Wilfrid Is Satisfied With Present Conditions.

Harcourt Presents British Government's Proposals Regarding Imperial Council Making Its Functions Purely Advisory—Canada's Premier Says Arrangement Would Be Cumbersome—Fisher Favors Scheme.

London, May 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—When the Imperial Conference yesterday considered the New Zealand proposal for reorganization of the Colonial Office, Harcourt submitted the changes the Government was prepared to institute. The standing committee of the conference would be absolutely advisory and not executive.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that Canada was quite satisfied with the present system. If the other parts of the Empire were disposed to press the suggestion of a division of the existing organization of the Colonial Office, Canada would not raise any objection. The standing committee had, however, raised a more serious difficulty. If it was proposed to submit to that committee matters affecting one dominion regarding which there might be differences of opinion between the Home Government and the Government concerned, he thought it would prove cumbrous and unsatisfactory. The status of the high commissioners, was somewhat delicate. They were not only the representatives of autonomous Governments to Britain, but also confidential agents, able to have confidential conversation with the Secretary of State and press matters which it might be undesirable to include in an official despatch. The standing committee might make recommendations suitable to one part of the Empire and not to another. He did not see what good purpose would be served.

Premier Fisher said that the standing committee would seem to extend the functions of the commissioner into those of consultative authority. A feeling existed in favor of Dominion matters coming under the Foreign Office. On the general question, as Laurier had said, the old constitution had rubbed along very well up till now, but Sir Wilfrid represented a great Dominion which had not hesitated to make innovations. He might very well give a lead in this matter by endeavoring to give the high commissioner, through a resolution of the conference, definite and distinct authoritative power to enter into negotiations and discussions as officers of Dominions responsible to their Governments.

Premier Morris was satisfied with the present arrangements.

Premier Asquith said he did not wish to press the suggestions unless they should meet with general approval. He felt it would satisfy the real want of the conference if they postponed decision.

Police Hoaxed.

Hamilton, May 27.—A hoax — the structure of which was built in the imaginations of two boys — is now thought to have been played on the local police department. It was reported to the police that Charles Freeman, a boathouse-keeper, had seen two suspicious-looking Italians heave a heavy bundle into the bay near the foot of Simcoe street. Thinking that the recovery of the bundle might possibly open up a murder mystery, dragging operations were carried on at the spot where the bundle was supposed to have been thrown into the water. Nothing, however, was brought to the surface. It has now been learned that Mr. Freeman did not see the men himself, but was told of their alleged actions by two small boys, who claimed to have seen them dispose of the bundle. While the police do not place much faith in the story, dragging operations will probably be resumed to-day in an effort to thoroughly test the truth of the report.

Locomotive Works Change Hands.

Kingston, May 27.—Yesterday afternoon the Canadian Locomotive Works of this city practically passed from the control of Hon. William Harty. At a special meeting of the stockholders held here the offer of English capitalists, made through Aemilius Jarvis & Co. of Toronto, was accepted. The amount paid could not be ascertained, but it is understood to be large. Mr. Harty may remain with the new company, but this is not definitely known. The capital stock of the company is to be increased very largely. M. J. Haney of Toronto was one of the chief stockholders. The new company will shortly be organized.

Taft's Message to Scots.

London, May 27.—Attending the assembly of the Church of Scotland are Dr. Sedgwick, Nova Scotia; Rev. J. A. Macdonald, Toronto; T. H. Boyd, New Brunswick. Dr. Macdonald gave a message from President Taft which said that no desire of his life was more sincere and resolute than that the two sections of the English race should join in a treaty-making war between them impossible. Our sincere desire is that Canada may continue to prosper flying the British flag on the American continent.

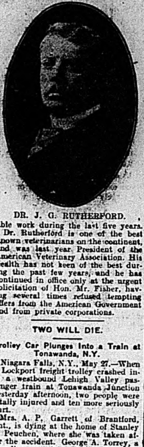
RUTHERFORD RESIGNS.

Live Stock Commissioner Decides to Go West.

Ottawa, May 27.—Dr. J. G. Rutherford, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner and Veterinary Director-General of Canada, one of the most valued officials of the Government, has tendered his resignation to the Minister of Agriculture, and intends to go to British Columbia to reside. His resignation has not yet been accepted, and it is still hoped that he may be prevailed upon to continue in the office in which he has done invaluable work during the last five years.



DR. J. G. RUTHERFORD.

Dr. Rutherford is one of the best known veterinarians on the continent, and was last year President of the American Veterinary Association. His health has not been of the best during the past few years, and he has continued in office only at the urgent solicitation of Hon. Mr. Fisher, having several times refused tempting offers from the American Government and from private corporations.

TWO WILL DIE.

Trolley Car Plunges Into a Train at Tonawanda, N.Y.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., May 27.—When a Lockport freight trolley crashed into a westbound Lehigh Valley passenger train at Tonawanda Junction yesterday afternoon, two people were fatally injured and ten more seriously hurt.

Mrs. A. P. Garrett of Brantford, Ont., is dying at the home of Stanley C. Peuchen, where she was taken after the accident. George A. Torrey, a traveling man from Boston, Mass., is so seriously injured about the head that physicians declare he cannot recover. He is in a temporary hospital that has been arranged. The injured, who are being cared for by local physicians, are: H. N. Travel, Buffalo, internally injured; Miss Evangeline Travel, his daughter, head injured; Alex. Ross, Buffalo, right arm broken; J. H. Frayer, Galt, Ont., left leg broken; Ira Scott, Buffalo, 10 years old, face cut, internal injuries; Mrs. Catharine Scott, Buffalo, hip broken; Chester McLaren, both arms injured. Several others were also slightly injured.

Motorman W. E. Bradley of the freight trolley said after the accident that the brakes refused to work. He and Conductor L. E. Mertaugh saved themselves by jumping. At the scene of the accident the tracks of the Lehigh Valley and the one on which the freight trolley was operating run at right angles.

The trolley struck a coach of the train and hurled down an embankment, reducing it to kindling.

Wants Detective Arrested.

Montreal, May 27.—Declaring they were being shadowed and in one case assaulted by private detectives, a delegation from the Labor Temple waited on Chief of Police Campeau yesterday, seeking redress from him, and were advised to seek legal advice, with the result that a warrant for the arrest of one detective on the charge of assault is to be issued.

Mr. Sinclair, a labor organizer, who has been in Montreal for some time, claims to have been shadowed continually by a pair of sleuths, and at a meeting in the Labor Temple yesterday morning an appeal to the police authorities was decided upon.

"I cannot go to my private house," said one labor man, "without being shadowed, and directly I come out the next morning, there is the detective waiting for me."

RATE WAR IS LIKELY

Atlantic Shipping Trade Arming For a Conflict.

Canadian Pacific Has Served Notice on Its Rivals That It Will Not Join Again in the "London Agreement" Concerning Immigrants—Pact Had Effect of Giving Too Much Profit to U. S. Lines.

Montreal, May 27.—The prospects of a rate war in the Atlantic shipping trade, was the principal topic of discussion in shipping circles yesterday.

It now appears that the Canadian Pacific, which occupies as influential place in the National Conference as the Irish party does in the British House of Commons, has been a leader in the insurgent movement, and a considerable time ago gave notice that it would not again be a party to the agreement, under which all the principal shipping lines on the North Atlantic have been working. This agreement, which is known as the "London agreement," has since been extended temporarily on two occasions, but it expires finally on June 30.

This agreement not only forbids shipping lines from running to ports served by their rivals, but not up to the time of the agreement served by them, but also brought into effect an arrangement by which all the immigrant traffic—which is a huge paying business—was pooled, each vessel getting such percentage of the total proceeds of such traffic as was alloted to her by the conference, regardless of the number of immigrants she carried. Thus, if a boat was allowed a percentage on the basis of 500 immigrants per trip, her owners would be paid for 500 passengers whether she carried 900 or only twenty—This applied to all the vessels running to North Atlantic ports, from Baltimore to Halifax.

The effect of the agreement is considered to have been detrimental rather than otherwise to Canadian shipping. There has been such a boom in immigration to Canada that the Canadian vessels have been loaded to capacity with immigrants on almost every trip, and the result has been that good money earned by the Canadian lines has in effect been handed over by them to their American rivals.

And the man who tells tiresome stories usually manages to finish them in spite of interruptions.

CHICAGO BELLEVILLE CLUB ENTERTAINS

24th of May Event a Brilliant Success—Large Crowd and Fine Programme

The second annual Queen's Birthday entertainment given by the Belleville Club of Chicago took place at the magnificent new Hotel LaSalle on Wednesday evening. The night was a perfect one and the scene presented by the gathering of former Bellevillians and their guests was one long to be remembered.

The programme was started about 9 p.m., after the company had enjoyed an hour's visit renewing old acquaintance and talking over old times. The first section of the programme was devoted to songs, readings and music. Messrs. Walter Fanning, jr., and Frank Perkins, Miss Loretta Wilkinson and Mrs. John Johnston each sang in a pleasing manner and very graciously responded to encores. Miss Lizzie Cummins, the little daughter of Michael Cummins, played a piano solo, which was heartily applauded. Miss Ethel James gave two readings, each of which was exceedingly well received and encored. The song by Mr. Frederick W. A. Hanson, former leading tenor with the Burgomaster and Prince of Pilsen companies, was of unusual merit and called forth very vociferous applause. Mr. Hanson possesses a voice of great range and power. It is a musical voice and very carefully cultivated. His singing was a feature that would grace any programme in any company.

The second part of the programme was devoted to a talk on "Belleville Past and President, the talk being made by Mr. Thos. F. Lynch, Secretary of the Club, assisted at frequent and continual intervals by the audience. The views, of which there were nearly 130, including the bulletins flashed from time to time, were well received, and found response in the continual cross fire of conversation concerning each view as it appeared. The history of the city from 1816 to the present was related and plentifully illustrated. During the evening addresses short in length and friendly and laudatory in text, were delivered by Mr. James Reid, President of the Kingston Association of Chicago: Mr. A. C. Mowat, Secretary of the Stratford Association of Chicago; President Wm. Robertson, of the Belleville Club, and Mr. Joe Fahey, of Winnipeg. Joe left Belleville 31 years ago and has prospered considerably in the west. He made a big hit with the audience. He is good nature personified, has a ready wit, a bland and wholesome smile, and is a good two-handed talker. Joe is all right with the Belleville Club. It was a great night for Belleville. All the big city papers, as well as the press associations, had their representatives present. The Belleville Club has ample reason to feel proud of the splendid gathering and of the organiation which promoted it and so successfully carried it out.

FEED YOU MONEY.

Feed Your Brain, and It will Feed You Money and Fame.

"Ever since boyhood I had been especially fond of meats, and I am convinced I ate too rapidly, and failed to masticate my food properly.

"The result was that I found myself, a few years ago, afflicted with ailments of the stomach, and kidneys, which interfered seriously with my business.

"At last I took the advice of a friend and began to eat Grape-Nuts instead of the heavy meats, etc., that had constituted my former diet.

"I found that I was at once benefited by the change, that I was soon relieved from the heartburn and indigestion that used to follow my meals, that the pains in my back from my kidney affection had ceased.

"My nerves, which used to be unsteady, and my brain, which was slow and lethargic, from a heavy diet of meats and greasy foods, had, not in a moment, but gradually, and none the less surely, been restored to normal efficiency

"Now every nerve is steady and my brain and thinking faculties are quicker and more acute than for years past

"After my old style breakfasts I used to suffer, during the forenoon from a feeling of weakness which hindered me seriously in my work, but since I began to use Grape-Nuts food I can work till dinner time, with all ease and comfort." Name given on request by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BUTTER HAD A FALL ON MARKET TODAY

Prices Generally Showed Little Change—Hay Has Also Taken a Jump

The attendance upon the market this morning was not by any means as large as a week ago. In spite of this fact considerable quantities of farm produce were offered for sale and buyers were present to purchase same. Prices generally were the same as those that prevailed a week ago.

Butter was a plentiful article and it was sold at a slightly lower price. While 20c. per pound was generally the price paid, a few basket lots were procured at 18c. and 19c. per pound. A few choice rolls were sold at 22c. per pound.

Eggs were not plentiful, and those offered for sale were readily picked up at prices ranging at 18c. and 19c. per dozen.

Dressed poultry was scarce. While a few pairs of chickens sold at $1.20 and $1.25 per pair, in most cases $1.50 was secured.

During the week there has been no change in the grain market.

In the hide market deacons have taken a drop from 90c. to 75c.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

The announcement that this famous play is to appear is always welcomed by the people of any community, be it a great city or a cross-roads town, for the stor of Uncle Tom and of Little Eva is one that has perhaps never been equalled in pathos and heart interest in the history of American literature. Since the great story that is admitted to have been one of the most potent causes of the civil war and the consequent liberation of the southern slaves was first produced as a drama, it has been seen at one time or another by practically every American citizen, rich or poor, young or old, and yet to-day it is as popular, as largely patronized and as interesting as it was when it made its first appearance. It is one of the very few plays that have appeared on the American stage that can be seen over and over again and each time with increasing interest, for it is a drama that has its foundation in the heart strings of suffering humanity and appeals to the great and kindly heart of this mighty commonwealth of America. At Griffin's Opera House Tuesday, May 30. Plan at Doyle's Monday.

LIGHTNING'S FREAKS IN THE NORTH

An electric storm of unusual severity passed over this section early on Friday morning last and a number of narrow escapes are reported. Mr. Jno. Clark's residence, a couple of miles from the village, was struck, and Mrs. Clark was badly stunned, but fortunately no serious damage was done. A dog, which was near the house at the time, was killed.

The stable belonging to Jos. McCormick, of Montengle, was struck, and Mr. McCormick had barely time to get his horse to a place of safety before the building was in flames.

The windmill at the C. O. R. station came near being put out of business, and the sectionmen who had taken refuge from the storm under the tank, got a bad scare. The accompanying rain was just what the country needed, and the growth of vegetation has been very rapid.—Bancroft Times.

BIG STEAMER STRUCK BOTTOM

According to reports in marine circles, some of the vessels are having trouble in the Telegraph Island channel, fifteen miles east of Belleville. It is claimed that the Government had taken soundings in this channel, where there was a good deal of difficulty last year, and that they reported that it would take fourteen feet. The other day the steamer Mapleton came through the channel, and it is claimed that she hit bottom several times, and that as a result the vessel will have to undergo some repairs. It was rumored that if repairs were necessary, the Government would be asked to foot the bill on account of the bulletin issued stating that the channel could take fourteen feet. Marine men say that about all the channel will stand for is ten feet.

MILITARY PARADE LAST NIGHT

The Fifteenth Regiment paraded last night and the turnout was a fair one. Headed by the band, the men were paraded through a number of streets and upon returning to the armories were drilled for some time. Col. Stewart was in command.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The last address of the season to the Young Canadian Club was given last night by the Rev. C. G. Smith. It so happened the theme was "Essentials," and in the way presented it proved a very fitting close for the series of addresses.

Some of the definitions given of "Essentials" were the inner heart; to be; that which makes a thing; that which it is; examples, breath is essential to life, a foundation is essential to a house. In beginning the lecture Mr. Smth said he would take for his subject "Essentials for Young Canadians," and would divide his subject into three parts, namely viewpoint, vision and venture. Gladstone's viewpoint in life took this form. Who am I? and the answer was "A child of God." What am I here for? To do God's will. Who will show me the way? Christ. In referring to his second thought, vision, we should see things in the distance. Marconi's ideal was not just to be able to send messages without the aid of wires, but to be able to speak around the world, and his ideal is being reached. Only a few days ago Marconi had sent a message from Canada to Africa with only one relay at Eiffel Tower. Then when we have the right viewpoint and a vision of things right, we should act or venture, and the goal, a perfect Canada, would be reached.

PROOF THAT PROVES

If one person more than another should know the value of medicine, it is the retail druggist.

Therefore when ten thousand retail druggists of the United States recommend Vinol, the delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, as the best strengthening tonic known, and are willing to return their customers' money in every case where it fails to give satisfaction, there can be no room for doubt.

Among others, one of the most reliable druggists of Lynn, Mass., Mr. Warren Toppan, says, "From personal experience I know what Vinol will do. I had a chronic cold all winter, and was so weak I could hardly get about Nothing seemed to help me until I tried Vinol—the change was magic—and what surprised me most, Vinol not only cured the cold but built me up and cured me of a severe stomach trouble that had bothered me for twenty years Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

For all run-down, weakened conditions, and to cure chronic coughs, colds and bronchial troubles, Vinol is unexcelled. We sell it always with the understanding that if it does not do all we claim for it, we will refund the money paid us for it. J. S. McKeown.

The Growth of English.

There are now 400,000 words in the English dictionary, exclusive of foreign languages. Back three centuries Shakespeare carried about in his head five times as many words as the dictionary then contained. To-day it has a hundred words for every one which a good writer will use. The greatest gains in the number of words recorded within the last fifty years have, of course, come from a minute raking over of all accessible English documents and from special branches of human labor, particularly the sciences, in which changing conditions have made necessary hosts of new terms.

A Society Worth While.

The Arboricultural Society of St. John, N.B., is showing good reason for its existence. At a recent meeting of the society it was announced that two hundred trees had been purchased for spring planting. The trees will be protected by galvanized tree guards, and on the guards will be signs bearing the words: "Protect the trees; help beautify your city."

is about the Belleville team,
And the style of some of the members
is the funniest ever seen,
First we'll speak of Greatrix, whose trade is pounding dough,
At playing Lacrosse he takes the cake
the man who fears no foe.

Chorus—
Then tip the ball over to Honto,
Beasley, look sharp now, I say,
Make a good goal shot now, Manti,
Jones, knock that man's stick away.

He'll take a ball from any man, let him be great or small,
He stands six high in his stocking
fett, the greatest of them all.
But wait till he gets his spangled suit,
his arm-pads, hat and plume,
And his silver Lacrosse, then he's the Boss, give him lots of room.
(Chorus.)

The next we'l speak of—Honto Burdett and Brother Jones at Law,
These men pay home on this wonderful team, both have lots of jaw.
The one is tall, the other small, they do their work up grand,
They never get left, these two men, when sticks are in their hand.
(Chorus.)

And now we'll speak of Coleman, and
Billy Roberts, too,
They are the men who play defence,
and play it clever too.
They body-check like demons, and when they get the ball,
To the other end of the field it flies,
three cheers for them all.
(Chorus.)

The next one is Kil-Kenny, the man who plays in goal,
With Charley Gillen to the fore, you bet he is no fool.
This Gillen is a solid man, and "Kil" is not behind.
Taking the ball from these two men is very hard, you'll find.
(Chorus.)

And next comes Billy Garratt, and also Paddy Lazier,
When they are out upon the field they make things look so queer.
The greatest slashers in the club,
they'll pound you black and blue
They throw flip-flops around the ground for they're the wonderful two.—(Chorus.)

The last who play upon this team are Lewis and Overell.
Although they both are very young they do their work quite well.
They play way out upon the field, for dodging they are smart,
And if the game we chance to lose,
it almost breaks their hearts.
(Chorus.)

And now our song is ended and we can sing no more,
We've told you things about the boys
you never knew before.
And after playing in a match if we are beaten fair,
We'll treat you right and never kick,
you'll find us on the square.
(Chorus.)

BRONCHITIS

SCIENTIFICALLY TREATED

The Best Authorities Agree That Bronchitis is Treated most Scientifically by Catarrhozone, which Goes Right to the Root of the Trouble.

Bronchitis can be treated successfully only by a remedy carried direct to the affected parts along with the air breathed

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic and is inhaled at the mouth, and after passing through all the air passages of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, it is exhaled through the nose

Th healing vapor of Catarrhozone goes wherever the air you breathe is affected. No matter how deep-seated the bronchial irritation may be Catarrhozone is sure to reach it.

Catarrhozone protects and heals the mucous membrane, stops the cough, heals up the sores, and is guaranteed to bring speedy relief and sure cure.

By means of the inhaler Catarrhozone treats the local symptoms of bronchial trouble very effectually. The poisons and impurities of the blood are driven off by Ferrozone, which is a wonderful tonic, and stimulant for the entire system

Ferrozone is a muscle and tissue builder, increases the appetite, aids digestion and makes the body so healthy that bronchitis goes away for good

A prominent steamboat owner, well known throughout Eastern Ontario, Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, was perfectly cured of Bronchitis by Catarrhozone The Captain had suffered for more than 20 years, and says that Catarrhozone is the best cure for Bronchitis on the face of the globe

Mr. A. J. Calhoun, a prominet citizen of Neepawa, Manitoba, speaks very highly of Catarrhozone as a specific for Bronchitis, and states that his wife could not get along without it.

Everyone that has used Catarrhozone is satisfied that it is superior to all other remedies. It is delightful to inhale, simple and convenient to use, and relieves from the first breath taken through the inhaler.

Better try Catarrhozone. All druggists sell and recommend it. Complete outfit, price $1.00; trial size, 50c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Child Were Willing.

The new medical department of Toronto's Public School system has donned the official harness, and already a preliminary canter has been pulled off, so to speak.

The children have welcomed the innovation with much zest, and, incidentally, have sprung more than one surprise on the medical staff.

One young woman was telling a roomful of the importance of hygiene; and she emphasized the necessity of proper care of the teeth. She may not have informed her charges that toothless persons spoke a language of their own—gum Arabic — because she was very much in earnest, but her remarks were interesting. They must have been, because, when she asked, "Children, would any one here like to lose her or his teeth and be compelled to wear false ones?" every little hand went up.

A receptive and imaginative mind has the little child.

DIZZY SPELLS

CAUSED BY WEAK KIDNEYS.

Dizziness is largely the result of disordered kidneys. Mrs. Hall, 84 Flora Street, St. Thomas, Ont., says: "I suffered for years with spells of dizziness that would leave me unable to attend to any house duties. My back was weak and caused me much suffering through the night. I had doctored for years, but all to no avail. Nothing benefitted me and my condition became worse. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills. One box gave me a complete and lasting cure. I have not had a headache or a dizzy spell since and I feel like a new person.

Don't think it is woman's lot to suffer always, this is not true. A box of Booth's Kidney Pills will convince you of this. Send for a free trial or secure a box for 50c. at your dealers. Postpaid from the R. T. Booth C., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Remember, these pills are guaranteed.

SEATS FOR PROCESSION.

Hundred Thousand Places Set Along Coronation Route.

Although the coronation is a long way ahead, London is already beginning to ring with the hammers of the grand stand builders.

It is safe to say that not fewer than 100,000 seats on grand stands will be provided, at prices ranging from one to 15 to 20 guineas.

The route for the coronation procession does not lend itself to much enterprise on the part of the grand stand builder as most of the open space is Government property.

A notable exception is the frontage to the Westminster Hospital, where a stand for 2,000 persons will be erected. Prices here range from five to 20 guineas, including breakfast and lunch and seatholders here will, of course, obtain a view of the procession both arriving and departing from the abbey.

Stands for the naval and military departments will be erected behind the Admiralty building, near to the Mall archway, while Parliament square and New Palace yard will be devoted to the use of members of Parliament.

One of the few private sites is the piece of vacant land adjoining Messrs. Drummond's Bank, close to the Mall Arch, and here 600 seats are to be placed at prices from three guineas upwards.

Along the Pall Mall and St. James street part of the route small stands will be wedged in between the legal and the material frontages of several premises, and here seats in front rows are fetching 15 guineas each, and "standing up" room behind is offered at three guineas a head.

The royal progress on the second day offers more scope to the stand builder, and one firm alone have secured sites for about 50,000 seats.

These include the space available at:

St. Clement Danes (Strand).
St. Mary-le-Strand.
St. Mary, Aldermanbury.
Christchurch, Westminster Bridge road.
St. Thomas' Hospital.

Other sites are situated in Piccadilly, Pall Mall, and St. James street, and here the prices range from three to 15 guineas.

The large Strand site at the Aldwych corner will be occupied by a stand for members of the London County Council.

A novel and welcome departure has been made by one firm, who, having secured the space around St. Martin's Church for a stand for the royal progress on June 23, have decided to let no seat at a higher price than five guineas. Three thousand seats are offered at prices from five guineas down to a guinea, although at King Edward's coronation front seats were sold at 15 to 20 guineas.

Black China a London Fad.

Though the women of London are having their gowns made up of the same brilliantly colored stuffs as their fashionable sisters in other countries, they are surrounding themselves with a setting of black. For some time black wall papers have been a fad of the wealthy English women, but more recently carpets and upholstery in the same sombre color have become the craze and now follows the latest development in a fancy for black china. Black tea services are being made by London firms. The cups are lined with white and have gilt edges. Other tea services are lined with color.

About 30 years ago black china was exceedingly fashionable. Then came the demand for china in lighter colors. The black china then in vogue used to be lined with a color to harmonize with the scheme of the room. If there were turquoise curtains and upholsteries the cups were blue inside and black outside. In the same way bedroom sets of black were sold. These frequently had the name of the owner engraved on the outside in gold or some color. Thesa black bedroom sets will probably come into use again if the fad for black tea sets continues.

Campbellton's Recovery.

Campbellton, N.B., the town which was nearly wiped off the map by fire, is rapidly growing up again. Building operations on a very large scale are being undertaken, and as the new fire laws prohibit the erection of frame buildings in the centre of the town, the terrible conflagration of several months ago is not likely to be repeated. Among improvements planned is the construction of a modern electric power plant to replace the present temporary structure.

Such Extravagance!

Imagine an editor having his office towel stolen from the clothes line. This is what happened to Bro. Neelands of The Hensall Observer. The only proper way to dry a printing office towel is to stand it up against the back fence. Any editor who can afford to own a clothes line ought to be robbed at every opportunity.—Zurich Herald.

The Oldest Member.

In a short while Mr. Samuel Young, British M.P., will enter on his ninetieth year. He is the oldest man in the House of Commons, though it is hard to believe it, for he is wonderfully active. Mr. Young was hailed the other day by an old friend, who congratulated him on looking so well "for a man who must be at least 75." With a twinkle in his eye the aged M.P. replied: "Yes, I am at least 75, for in a short time I celebrate my 89th birthday." He has sat in Parliament since 1892.—Westminster Gazette.

London's Oldest Lady.

Mrs. Bristow, mother of Canon Bristow, and the oldest woman in London, Eng., recently celebrated her 104th birthday at Lee.

As a Pleasant Surprise.

I like the man who stands around
And doesn't do a thing
But see what faults are to be found,
What trouble he can spring.
I like it even better still
If I his blood can gayly spill.

CROSS ATLANTIC BY MOTOR VESSEL

Eight Ocean-Going Ships, With Oil Heaters, Instead of Steam Boilers, are Under Construction

If everything goes as now planned, the first motor vessel to cross the Atlantic will leave Hamburg for New York early in December.

Eight ocean-going ships, equipped with oil motors instead of steam boilers, are now being constructed in Germany, and they are expected to inaugurate a new era of sea travel. The new ships will be devoid of funnels, so that their appearance will add a new and strange feature to the maritime highways of the world. They will be giant motor boats.

Two motor boats are being built for the Hamburg-American Company; the German Levant Line have ordered a motor ship of more than 3,000 tons; and five motor ships, all exceeding 2,000 tons displacement, are in course of construction for other German shipowners.

Both the motor ships being built for the Hamburg-American Line will be employed for Transatlantic carrying; one of them will make her maiden voyage in December, 1911, the other, a year later. The larger of the two, with 6,500 tons displacement, will be equipped with two oil motors of the Diesel system, each of 1,800 horse power, whereby a speed of 13 or 14 knots per hour will be attained. The smaller of the two, with 5,500 tons displacement, will be equipped with two motors each of 1,500 horse power, producing a speed of 12 or 13 knots.

The advantages of the new motor ships are the economy of the enormous space now devoted to boilers and coal bunkers, the reduction of expenditure on fuel, and the diminution in the number of engine-room hands. The motors of each of the Hamburg-American Company's ships will require only five chauffeurs to tend them; stokers and trimmers, who form such a large proportion of the crews of steamships, are entirely superfluous. Owing to the economy of space and weight due to the absence of boilers and other encumbrances that have become superfluous, the new motor ships will be able to carry considerably more cargo than steamships of the same size.

If these freight motor boats prove a success, the Hamburg-American Line will immediately begin the building of several fast passenger motor boats for their New York service which in magnificence and comfort will surpass any vessel the world has ever seen.

BALLOON ACCIDENT

German Lieutenant Jumped Out When 120 Feet from the Ground

A German balloon which made an ascent from Constance, attempted to descend again near Buchs. The balloon and car drifted against the electric wires of a high-power station, and the car was immediately enveloped in myriads of sparks. One of the passengers, Fritz Ultermann, a German lieutenant from Berlin, was so frightened that he jumped out although the car was over 120 feet from the ground. When picked up he was found to be terribly injured. Both his legs were broken. He had evidently struck the ground feet first, for his feet were crushed, and the bones of one foot were protruding through his boot. The balloon came to earth a few minutes afterwards on the edge of a neighboring wood, and the pilot in charge had his shoulder dislocated.

EXTENSIVE FRAUDS

A man named Horstmann, in a high position in the Lichtenberg suberb of Berlin, has decamped after committing frauds to the extent of $30,000. He was formerly a member of the town council and a church elder. His frauds are not so remarkable for their extent as for the ingenious way in which they were thought out.

PREACHER MET COLORED BOXER

Rev. Harold Gibson, Sheffield, Took Two Rounds Out of Jim Johnson

The Rev. Harold Gibson, the Sheffield clergyman who, the other day, met in public Jim Johnson, a colored boxer of some renown, is the curate at Christ Church, Attercliffe. His decision to fight Johnson was, he said, purely spontaneous. No one seemed inclined to take up the man's challenge, and this appealed to Mr. Gibson's sporting instinct. They boxed two rounds. "I consider Johnson a very smart man," said Mr. Gibson. "He has tremendous chest and arms and is very powerful. Johnson is rather light on the legs, and probably, in a long contest that would be his weak point. He is a thorough sportsman and took no advantage of me, although he had an easy opening in the first round. He complimented me on my hard hitting and a vicious 'jab' with the left which I have cultivated." Asked as to his boxing experiences, Mr. Gibson said that this was the first match he had had since he was ordained, just four years ago. Unfortunately, they had not a gymnasium in connection with the church. Before he went to Cambridge he had a good deal of boxing practice at Bournemouth, and at the university he was trained by one of the professionals, Coey Fordham.

EXPLORE THE ANTARCTIC

Establish the Relations of the Lands East and West of South Pole

Lieutenant Filchner, leader of the German Antarctic Expedition which left Hamburg for Bremen, and then for Buenos Ayres, has communicated the following details of his plans: "As to the general objects of the expedition," says Lieutenant Filchner, "these are to explore the innermost recesses of the Antarctic, and in particular to establish the relations of the masses of land lying west and east of the South Pole. Much work of a general scientific character will also be undertaken." Lieutenant Filchner's plan is generally to strike into the Weddell Sea and attack the Antarctic from the side opposite to that explored by Sir Ernest Shackleton. The expedition is timed to arrive at the ice in November, so as to take advantage of the most favorable ice conditions for forcing a way into Weddell Sea.

The ship will follow the outline of Coatsland and establish as far as possible the base of the expedition, where 11 men will be landed and a scientific station will be erected.

From here four members of the party, with Nansen sledges, will make a dash for the south. The ship meantime will work its way along the coast, carrying on coastal exploration. The scientific work of the expedition is to be prosecuted with great vigor. Ice conditions and formations will be studied in detail. Investigations of great advantage to the whaling industry will be carried out. Atmospheric conditions will be studied by means of kites, pilot and captive balloons, and the problems of atmospheric electricity will be closely examined. The expenses of the expedition are estimated at $500,000. The expedition is very completely equipped.

Its ship, the Deutschland, is a converted whaler, with auxiliary steam, of about 300 horse power. She is specially fitted with a view to the comfort of the explorers, both in the tropical and polar regions, and carries a wireless telegraphy installation. Three motor vehicles and one motor boat are being taken out. Dogs are also being carried, and the example of Sir Ernest Shackleton in the use of Manchurian ponies for sledge work is being followed.

HUGE RESERVOIR FOR OLD LONDON

One That Will Hold a Thousand Million Gallons Has Been Constructed

London will shortly come into the possession of another large reservoir holding a thousand million gallons of water, and covering 120 acres. This new artifical lake, which will be opened in the summer, is situated in Surrey, about twelve miles from the city. It will be one of the largest reservoirs constructed in Europe, and has taken nearly three years to complete. The actual work of building the reservoir has cost about $760,000, the engines, pumps and turbines about $250,000. The connecting river between the Thames and the pumping station, which is a quarter of a mile long, twenty-two feet wide, and eight feet deep, cost, with the pumping station, just about $350,000. Modern methods of building open reservoirs of this character prescribed the laying of ten miles of railroad track on and around the site. Three steam shovels "bit" out a hundred and twenty acres of soil to the necessary depth, and with the aid of 1,200 men, shifted as much as 70,000 cubic yards of earth in a month. The sand and ballast taken out were used to make concrete slabs and blocks for the walls of the reservoir, and the London clay was utilized to make a solid foundation for the embankment, which is over a mile in length. A million cubic yards of earth, sand, ballast and clay were taken out by the steam shovels. With the exception of the concrete lining the inner slope of the embankment wall, the work is ended. This lining will, however, be completed very shortly and the great reservoir will be filled and ready for use.

HIS LIFE STORY A ROMANTIC ONE

The Prime Minister of New South Wales was Born on a British Sailing Ship

The Prime Minister of New South Wales, the Hon. James Sinclair McGowen, has arrived in London to attend the Coronation ceremonies. Mr. McGowen's life story is a peculiarly romantic one. He was born somewhere in the Pacific. It was in the days of sailing ships, and the Western Bride lay becalmed. But in the hour of the future Premier's birth a breeze sprang up, and in three weeks the ship had arrived at her destination. The babe was hailed by the crew as an omen of good fortune, and christened after the captain, whose name was Sinclair. "Captain Sinclair prophesied that I should have a fair wind all my life," Mr. McGowen adds, laughingly. Mr. McGowen's birth was registered at Stepney, as he was born at sea under the British Flag in a ship belonging to the Port of London. Here comes a strange coincidence: Mr. McGowen was never out of Australia till he left for the Coronation, and the taking of the census coincided with his voyage. While on the high seas his name was counted among British-born citizens, and once more the fact was recorded at Stepney. The Premier of New South Wales is a big, rugged man, who has followed his father's trade of a boilermaker. He has been a member of the New South Wales Parliament for over twenty years.

BRITISH MATRON STILL

Her Sterling Common Sense and Cheery Thrift Unhidden by Finery

Ransack the ages and the climes though she may for her attire, the British matron is the British matron still. As one glanced at the recent suburban bevies of "modest women dressed out in all their finery," one saw through those fantasies of ribbons and of silken flowers the health, the air of sterling common sense and cheery thrift, that makes our English world go.

SHOT A PRISON INSPECTOR

After Firing Five Shots in a Theatre a Girl Escaped

Details have been received of the shooting of M. Efimoff, prison inspector at Vologda, Russia, where political prisoners were severely flogged. Profiting by the panic, the girl, who was dressed in black, escaped into the street by an emergency exit, explaining her flight by crying "The theatre is on fire!" She has not yet been arrested though the theatre was full of police and detectives were guarding M. Efimoff. She had gone to Vologda from St. Petersburg.

COAL TO BURN.

Northern Alberta Reveals a Wealth of Fuel.

Surveyors have just returned from Northern Alberta, whither they went in the interest of large American speculators. They traveled to a point 2,000 miles distant. They state that all along the Athabasca, Mackenzie and McLeod rivers there was indisputable evidence of petroleum, said the chief of the party.

"There is good fuel burning peat from Fort Murray to Fort Smith, and there is oil-bearing land all the way from Pelican Portage to Smith Portage, 1,000 miles north of here. The whole country on each side of the river is capable of agricultural development of the highest kind, and equal to the very choicest land in Southern Alberta district.

"Around Fort McMurray are veins of coal and anthracite which are capable of producing good fuel for this country for 100 years to come. Natural gas is also existent in superabundance.

"There is sufficient power in the Grand Rapids of the Athabasca River to light and heat a big city.

"There are also large deposits of copper, coal, antimony and aluminum.

"I confirm everything that Jim Cornwall has said about the country. I have traveled through Central Africa and Russia and in parts of Australia, and I want to say that the country north of here is the richest in the world. If railroads are put through this country it will create great cities in Alberta, equal to Chicago. I have been surveying for 20 years, and I know what I am talking about."

None of the party would say what the ultimate outcome of their trip north would be. Parties of surveyors are being sent out nearly every week for some point north to stake out claims on land where the choicest minerals abound.

One hundred companies have recently been incorporated within the province to develop Northern Alberta oil fields. After lying for years in the province, waiting for someone to discover its value, and come with capital enough prepared to develop it successfully, one of the greatest oil fields in the world is to be opened up, and opened up by capital gathered together from all parts of the globe. Frenchmen, Germans, Englishmen, Canadians and Americans are interested, and Calgary men, too, have been optimistic enough to put their money into a venture that promises to return millions of dollars. The City of Calgary views these immense prospects with much satisfaction. They mean vast population and wealth to the young metropolis.

Queer Ways of Old Days.

Interesting reminiscences of St. John, N.B., are being given in the St. John Globe, by Clarence Ward.

Telling of the treatment of people in the asylum for the insane nearly four score years ago, he says:

"Blood-letting and restraint appear to have played a prominent part, and light and bathing to have been considered luxuries. Amongst the items charged for maintenance are the following: Paid W. McBay, for twelve hogshead of water (for one month), one pound, fifteen shillings. W. Hammond, for thirty pounds of rush lights, one pound, five shillings. Harvie and Allan, for eight tin bleeding cups and one tin pan, seven shillings and sixpence. D. Collins (saddler), for three hand mufflers, one pound, fifteen shillings. G. T. Ray, for twelve strait waistcoats, at twenty shillings each, twelve pounds.

"The twelve hogsheads of water above mentioned must have been for drinking and cooking purposes—'tea water,' as it was called in old times. The item for rush-lights gives one the impression of people living in the 'dark' ages—and the reason for their use must have been a rigid economy. It is difficult to conceive how they managed after dark to follow their occupations with no other light than that furnished by a rush light—which was made from the pith of a rush dipped in tallow, the flame of which was not much brighter than the glimmer of a match."

Mistaken Identity.

A story is going the rounds of Winnipeg just now which may or may not be original. It appears that a number of financial people were floating a company which was to be European in character, but which was also to have a Winnipeg board of directors. One man was sent to London to organize that end, while his business associates arranged the domestic portion. He reached London and did his work there; then went on to Berlin and thence to Paris. Arriving there with his arrangements complete, he sent a code message to the following effect: "Just arrived. Send names best men for local directorate." When this message reached Winnipeg, it was handed over to a clerk to translate. He either used the wrong code or was a blunderer, and produced the following translation of the code words: "Just arrived with shaft out of level and engine strained."

Debate on Population.

"Resolved that city life is preferable to country life" isn't a sufficiently exciting subject of debate for Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, so, a few night ago, debating teams representing those places got together at Medicine Hat, in a Southern Alberta Debating League event, and fought a wordy war on the subject: "Resolved that Medicine Hat will have a larger population than Lethbridge in 1916." Medicine Hat won, but Lethbridge hopes that the next five years will prove that the decision reached in the debate was mighty poor prophecy.

A PIONEER WEDDING.

First Knot Tied at Twin Lakes in the Grande Prairie.

First events in new localities are always of interest, and very often they are also significant. For instance, the first settling of the new western north of Canada means the making of good history, and as part of an important chapter in that history some place is due an event so socially unique as the first white wedding.

In a little log cabin at Twin Lakes was recently celebrated the first white wedding in the Grande Prairie district of the new western north. The example has been set, and more events of this kind may be looked for in due course. The north is getting more like other places. Bye-and-bye there will be wedding style and hymeneal pomp just like the rest of the world, but the first wedding is the one that marks real social history.

The houses in Grande Prairie, which is a part of the famed Peace River country, are all log structures and built after the same general plan. The walls are caulked with mud plaster, the roof is of wood or sods, the doors are of rough boards, and the whole dwelling is one story in height. But a log house of this kind is warm if built well, and a reasonable amount of housekeeping skill will make it cosy. In this particular log house at Twin Lakes there had been neighborhood parties and such like, but never before anything of the importance of a wedding.

The ceremony was brief. A northern homesteader will not tolerate too much formality, and the man who will now go down to history as the first white man to get a white wife in the Grande Prairie is a splendid fellow. The bride fixed up a little, as brides always do, but there were no fancy incidentals on either side. That the groom appreciated his good fortune is beyond doubt, for, instead of answering "I will," he said "Sure," and that is infinitely more expressive as well as more western. The "sky pilot" accepted it at par and secretly registered his approval of the innovation. And so the names of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Craiger are added to the list of immortals. In Grande Prairie they head the list. There were presents for the bride, who is immensely popular, a wedding supper for all, and a honeymoon sleigh-drive in a big box-sled for the happy couple and some of the party. After all, weddings are much the same west or east, north or south.

The movement of people into the new north, bringing with it the whole round of social conventions and social relationships, is one of the most significant features of our expanding Canadian life. The wonder of it does not wear off—that away up there in the wilderness a settled and ordered society is forming, making the waste places into a land of homes and home delights. The tide of settlement is only just getting under way. In the Grande Prairie district, for instance, there is at present a total population of only 250 white people—including 113 bachelors and 41 women—but every week is making it larger. The trek is on and men and families are moving in from everywhere. Many, like the man who got married, are from across the border, and the influx of American settlers, most of them bringing cash and effects with them, will be more than usually large this year. The approved time of going into the country is in the last half of the winter, before the rivers and lakes break up, for the trail is then harder and smoother and easier to travel than in the summer. It is a picturesque procession that is kept moving along the trail all the way from Edmonton to the Peace River during this trekking season. It is made up of a long line of freight-sleds, propelled by stout horses or clumsy oxen and loaded with miniature department stores. Some of them are the supply teams, some of them the passenger coaches, the latter most often being little canvas or wooden houses on runners, in which the people live, eat, sleep en route.

In human interest there is not anything in Canada that excels this peopling of the last west. The country itself is interesting, its future is inviting, its settlement is a whole book of modern history. Homes, schools, churches, weddings are transforming the wilderness.—The Globe.

Day for Killing Gophers.

Days are set apart in various places for a great variety of objects, and certainly one of the most unusual days is one set apart for killing gophers. Keho, Alberta, recently held its second annual gopher day. Owing, probably to there still being several inches of snow on the ground, the gophers killed this time were fewer in number than those slaughtered a year ago. However, enough were destroyed to give this season's crop a better chance for growth. The supper and entertainment following upon the day of killing were well enjoyed, and it is said that there will be no difficulty in celebrating gopher day every year—if the gophers can stand it.

The man who won the prize for the greatest destruction killed five hundred and fourteen gophers, and the winners of second and third prizes accounted for two hundred and one hundred and fifty-five, respectively. The winners seem to be in the same class as several royal hunters in Europe who are noted for getting great bags in their vast hunting grounds.

Still In Harness.

Threatened men live long. In his early days, when he announced his intention of becoming a minister of the Gospel, that wonderful old man, General Booth, who, at the age of eighty-two, is still in harness, forming schemes for the reformation of the world's outcasts, was told by the doctor that "it would be sheer suicide. You would be dead in a year," said the physician. But young Booth would not be deterred. He went ahead with his ideas, and, although he was the sole support of his mother, found time to conduct evangelistic meetings in the slum districts after business hours. And when he married he and his wife separated from any recognized body and went out to catch their converts from public-houses and gambling dens.

Friends were found who sympathized, and one invested a small capital—about $25,000—in William Booth's interest. It is from the income this sum brings in that the general has brought up his family, and at present his only personal moneys are derived from the same source. He does not draw a single penny from the funds of the army, merely receiving his traveling expenses from that source. The original capital returns to the friend who invested it on the general's death.

Racing to the South Pole.

Captain Scott has a rival in his dash to the South Pole in the person of Captain Amundsen, the famous Norwegian explorer, the first man to accomplish the navigation of the Northwest Passage. It is in connection with the latter expedition that the captain tells an amusing Eskimo story. Having lost several dogs, Captain Amundsen, in his best Eskimo, intimated his desire to purchase one from a certain tribe. To his surprise, however, the request was promptly refused. An explanation was demanded, and the man applied to returned next day with a chubby, laughing boy on his back. "Such we do not sell," said the native. The explorer was astonished; something was wrong. "You wished to purchase one," said the man, seeing Captain Amundsen's perplexity. Finally, it was discovered that the Greenlandic term for "dog" was equivalent to "child" in the Netchillie language.

Electrical Tree.

There is a peculiar tree in the forests of Central India which has most curious characteristics. The leaves of the tree are of a highly sensitive nature and so full of electricity that whoever touches one of them receives an electric shock. It has a very singular effect upon a magnetic needle and will influence it at a distance of even 70 feet. The electrical strength of the trees varies according to the time of day, it being strongest at midday and weakest at midnight. In wet weather its powers disappear altogether. Birds never approach the tree, nor have insects ever been seen upon it.

"Nurse Grimston."

Aristocratic nurses in hospitals are no novelty, but few ladies have adopted the nursing profession more wholeheartedly than Lady Sybil Grimston, fifth daughter of the Earl and Countess of Verulam, who is known at the London Hospital Nurses' Training Home at Bow as "Nurse Grimston." Upon the dormitory list appears the simple notification, "11, Grimston, Sybil." By the way, Lady Sybil's father in appearance closely resembles the late King Edward, and was frequently mistaken for him in the streets of London when his majesty was alive.

England's Oldest Bachelor.

This distinction belongs to Mr. Robt. Crichton, of Caterham, England, who has just entered his 100th year, and is descended from the Crichtons of Cluny, the same branch as the "Admirable Crichton." Born in Perthshire in 1812, Mr. Crichton has lived in six reigns. He first tried the law, and then went to Australia, where he was one of the first settlers. He is a splendid shot and a keen billiard-player.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"Just now there is a rage for the antique old furniture, old pictures, old jewellery, old plate. Anybody who sets up for anybody must cram his house with them."

"And you find them for him?"

"No, I don't; I make them for him. What do you think of that?"

"Make them!" And Balbi took the cigarette from between his teeth and stared at his companion.

"Yes, m-a-k-e them. If they want a sixteenth century chest they can have it, with the initials of an ancestor and the date on it thrown in."

"But the look—the age."

"Nothing, my dear Balbi; nothing! A little stain, a little acid, some glass paper to take off sharp edges, a crack or two here and there with a heavy hammer and plenty of wormholes bored, and there you are!"

The Italian chuckled to himself.

"I've got a fourteenth century one on order now. It's intended for the Earl of Mansfield," said Taft.

"And he ordered it? Madonna mia!"

"Bless you no! A firm in Wardour Street ordered it. They'll find it in a lot of old lumber in a farmhouse near his seat, and will write him telling him of the discovery. He'll come and see it, and it's a hundred to one he buys it, sepecially as there's a little bit of a coat of arms with some of his quartering still to be seen."

"And if he doesn't buy it?"

Taft shrugged his shoulders. "Then the coat of arms must come off or be altered into somebody else's."

"Wonderful! And pictures?"

"Child's play. Bit out of one, bit out of another, smoke, dirty varnish, a broken frame and a frayed canvas. But they're not like furniture—more risky—and they are too common."

"Ah, and jewellery?"

"Finest game of all, easiest worked and brings in most money. Why, thanks to what you sent me some months since, I've got as magnificent a show of Inca fakes on exhibition up at Pond's in George Street as ever those rascally Spaniards saw. All London's wild over them. Big nobs have been to see them and pronounced them genuine. There won't be one left in a week or two. And the worst of it is, I shall have to stop for a bit. I dare not turn out too many. We must not discover finds like that one too often or they'd smell a rat. Ah Balbi, mine's a better game than yours."

"Not if you get hold of the right thing. I have got hold of the right thing and that is why I have come to your wealthy London."

"What! You've got a mine?"

Balbi nodded.

"Good for anything?"

He nodded again.

"Then when the time comes put me on to it. I've got a pound or two to spare just now. But mind none of your rotten affairs that will dry up in a couple of years and leave the shareholders with nothing but a lot of worn out machinery on their hands."

"No, my friend, this is nothing like that."

"By-the-bye, I had a prospectus of one the other day somewhere in your part of the world, but where I put it I don't know. I'll look for it directly."

"Ah!"

"I didn't like the names on the board. Too many guinea pigs for my taste, and there was that man Guelfo."

"Ah!!" And he sound Balbi made had no inflection of an interrogation about it. It was far more like an angry growl so fierce that Taft looked around astonished.

"What's the matter? Do you know him?"

"Yes; do you?"

"Saw him once at an inquest I was on, nealy a year ago—a poor young travelling fellow who was murdered."

"Not Signor Vipan?"

"The very man. You didn't know him?"

"He was the best friend I ever had. He saved my life. Tell me about it—everythin, everything!" And in his excitement Balbi rose, went across and seized Taft's hand.

"My dear man, I'll tell you everything. But what has it to do with you?"

"Everything! I'll hang the man who killed my friend."

"Is it so bad as that?"

"Only let me find him. But tell me all you know."

For the next hour Taft did nearly all the talking, Balbi only throwing in an interjection now and then or asking a question. And when at length Taft paused, having pretty well exhausted the subject, Balbi said,—

"And what do you think—Guelfo or Ellis or both of them the murderers?"

"No, I'd bet my life on it. If they wanted murder done they'd hire somebody to do it for them. They'd never risk their necks; they're not made that way. But now," rising, "we've had enough of it for one night, and I want to see if I can put my hand on that prospectus for you." And, taking the almp in his hand, Taft led the way upstairs where the various rooms were converted into workshops, and in one of which were placed his desk and safe. Unlocking the latter he took out some specimens of nacient Venetian jewellery in the course of "fakement," and lighting one of the gas jets over the workman's bench headed them to Balbi to examine while he searched for the prospectus.

"Here it is!" he said at length drawing out the paper and glancing at it. "It's no longer agethan I thought—six months since—so there's no chance of getting any shares now."

"I don't want them. I would'nt have them if they were given to me. They were offered me at one time."

"Offered to you! How'sthat?"

"Only I found that mine. At first I thought it was a good thing, but later on I learnt what it really was. It is almost worked out. A few months and there will be nothing more in it, and then—" And the Italian shrugged his shoulders in a manner that expressed more than words could convey.

"Look here, Balbi, you seem to be well in with Guelfo and his lot. Mind you don't burn your fingers. He's not got as good a name as he might have here in England."

"Good name! Dio!" cried the little man, with a world of contempt in his voice. "He's devil. You know not what I owe that man. But I'll pay it. I'll pay it to the last atom." He's ruined thousands, body and soul. But he has to reckon with Piero Balbi now, though he knows it not at present. He shall though, one day. I tell you signore, that man shall go on his knees to me, but I shall not spare him. I will crush him as I would crush—Ah!" And with a cry of pain the Italian quickly raised his hand which he had thrust downward on the bench in illustration of his threat, to find a sharp piece of metal had entered the flesh.

(To be Continued.)

Pen, Chisel and Brush.

Edward W. Bok, the editor, was born in Holland. At the age of twenty-one he could not speak a word of English.

Mme. Bouguereau, widow of the famous French artist, William Bouguereau, at the age of seventy-three still occupies herself with her brush at her home, the Villa Camisse, at Royat-les-Bains.

Winifred Graham, the author, is known in private life as Mrs. Theodore Cory. Her home is on the Thames, at Hampton, in a mansion that was once the residence of Nell Gwyn and the Dukes of St. Albans.

Miss Belle Kinney, the woman sculptor, has the contract to make ten statues as memorials of the women of the Confederacy. These statues are to cost $10,000 each and are to be placed in the capitol of every Confederate state with the exception of South Carolina.

Explained.

"Did you ever have a cold," inquired the plain citizen, "that you couldn't get rid of?"

"No," answered the purist. "If I had I would have it now."

Thus the coolness arose.

Good Credentials.

Lady (at a bird fancier's)—And you guarantee that this parrot can talk?

He Gave Up Shooting.

A novelist and dramatist who has had an exceptional career is Mr. John Galsworthy, who has been asking, apropos of the preparations being made by nations for aerial warfare, if "water and earth are not wide enough for men to kill each other on without disturbing the peace and beauty of the air and sky." At Harrow he was an athlete and a monitor, and began life as a barrister. But the work was distasteful, and ultimately he commenced to write, his first book being published in 1898, when he was thirty-two years of age. A delightful sidelight is thrown on Mr. Galsworthy's character by the fact that though once a keen sportsman, now he never touches a gun. Watching a dying bird one day, he suddenly found sport ugly, and gave it up foreverr.

From the Ranks.

Within eighteen years Col. Carter, who has been promoted to the command of the 2nd Scottish Rifles, has risen from the ranks to his present position entirely by merit and without interest, his career furnishing a striking illustration of what a capable man can do in the army. Col. Carter failed in his early days to get a commission and enlisted in the 4th Dragoon Guards. He was promoted to sergeant, and in a little over three years obtained a commission in the Black Watch at the age of twenty-four. He served with distinction in various wars, and five years ago obtained a brevet-colonelcy at the age of forty-two.

A Beautiful Rug.

From Turkey there has arrived a wonderful carpet, manufactured for a peer, which was copied from the seventeenth century Persian example in the South Kensington Museum. It contains 22,500,000 stitches, and took eighteen months to make.

Upholders of British Law In Various Colonies Would Make an Army.

The world's police force is made up of a motley array of men for practically every race, color and creed are represented among those who uphold the majesty of the law on our wicked planet.

Wherever the British flag floats will be found an excellent police system after the model of the Mother Country. In India there is a force of more than 160,000, and this does not include the native village police, who are twice that number. In Siam and British Burma there is an additional police force of perhaps 147,000. It is the duty of every village head man at once to give information of any offence occurring in his village, to secure the offender if possible and to turn him over to the proper representative of the Government. In the Asiatic and African colonies it is the custom to employ natives in police service, but the higher officers are Englishmen.

The Sikhs of India have developed into the best native policemen that Great Britain has yet discovered. These handsome, stalwart men may be seen all over the British Oriental possessions. A good Sikh is a fine specimen of the Oriental and his knowledge of the Oriental nature is greater than an Englishman could hope to acquire in years of residence. The Sikh likes police duty and his loyalty to the white man is unquestioned.

The northwest mounted police have a world-wide reputation for efficiency. In that vast and thinly-settled region less than 1,000 men maintain such order that travel is as safe as in the older provinces along the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes. It is peopled mainly by Eskimos and Indians, with several thousand whites, including many adventurers who used to think that no law was in effect so near to the North Pole. The motto of the Northwest Mounted Police, "Get the man," taught them differently. To secure one necessary witness in a murder case a few years ago two of the police traveled 400 miles by dog team and 1,200 miles by canoe.

The police of the various English colonies generally wear a uniform adapted in some way from that of the English "bobby," but with some modification for climate. The helmet is usually a part of the outfit, and the barefoot Zulu police officer would not consider himself dressed without it. In the country and smaller towns these Zulu policemen carry native weapons, including spear and shield. Nevertheless, they are commissioned officers of the law, duly authorized to arrest any person who may be caught disturbing the peace of his Britannic Majesty's empire.

The police of the entire British empire, if joined together, would make an immense army. Following in the lead of the city of London police, who are generally six-footers, would come giant Chinese policemen from Hong Kong, thin-legged and turbaned East Indians, tall Zulus and Natal (the aristocrats of the black race), negro police of Jamaica and Belize, dark-skinned Egyptians, tattooed Maoris of New Zealand and the incomparable white policemen of Cape Colony, Canada and Australia.

Queer Trade Unions.

The general idea of a trade union is of a huge army of men, all joined together under the watchword, "Union is strength." Sheer weight of numbers constitutes one of their greatest powers.

But there are unions whose strength cannot possibly lie in mere numbers. The barometer, thermometer, and tube-blowers, for instance, have a trade union membership of thirty-one.

Then there is the membership of the Canal, River, and Dock Watchmen's Union. All told, they muster thirty-four, and have an income from subscriptions of $155. Coffee-stall keepers also boast a union, which has existed for eleven years, and can count on thirty-eight members.

The United Kingdom Street-sellers and Hawkers can show a membership of forty-two, while the Street-Traders' Brotherhood has only thirty-two.

Though it has only thirty-nine members, the Tincanister and Preserved Provision Casemakers' Union had an income in 1909 of $2,985; while the Paper-Stainers' Union possesses forty-seven members, after fifty years' existence.—Answers.

In the Good Old Days.

Those sightseers who cannot afford to pay twenty guineas or more a head for seats on the route of the coronation procession must wish they had lived a few centuries back.

For at every coronation the prices have gone steadily up. When Edward I. was crowned, the fee for a seat on the route of the procession was only a farthing. By Richard II.'s time it had risen to a penny. It was a shilling when Elizabeth came to the throne; on the day of Charles II.'s coronation, the price had risen to half-a-crown. One might have had a comfortable seat on William III.'s great day for five shillings, on George III.'s for half-a-guinea. When George IV. was crowned, seats had risen in value to from three to five guineas. Thousands of seats are being booked just now for from ten to twenty. Even the most moneyed of sightseers must be glad he does not live later.

Oil Propelled Battleship.

In some corner of the world an oil propelled battleship is now being built. Heretofore all reports of the building of the battleship have been denied, but Dr. Diesel confirmed the rumors before the conference of the London Institution of Naval Architects. He said, however, that he was not at liberty to give details.

Dr. Diesel is the inventor of an oil engine. He said that fully 250 ships, naval and commercial, are now fitted or are being fitted with oil engines. If the 9000 ton cargo ship now being constructed in Hamburg proves a success, Dr. Diesel said, there would be a general tendency toward the adoption of oil as a motive power for all kinds of vessels, including warships.

In Great Britain there are 11 daily express trains, making runs of from 50 to 118 miles without a stop, whose average speed is from 51 to 59.2 miles an hour.

GOVERNING THE SAVAGE

SIR PERCY GIROUARD DISCUSSES HARM THAT IS DONE.

Canadian Who Rules the East Africa Protectorate Sees Serious Danger Arising Out of the Christianization of the Blacks—Their Own Customs and Traditions Must Be Observed in Handling Them Well.

Sir E. P. Girouard, the Canadian who is Governor of the East Africa Protectorate, in his last report to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the administration of that country, deals in the course of a series of articles on the conditions of life and the best way of ruling the savage and semi-savage population. All the tribes, he says, at present hold their lands under communal conditions, and difficulties have arisen as to the position of native Christians within the reserve. It will undoubtedly be impossible for them to obey some of the native laws and customs, more particularly with regard to marriage, divorce, and inheritance. At the same time grave troubles might arise if these native Christians were allowed to individualize themselves in native reserves and to be withdrawn from the control of their chiefs in regard to native law and custom applicable to their changed conditions. Although it is premature for me, after so short a stay in the country, to lay down a fixed policy, or to dogmatize on the lines to be followed with regard to the administration in native reserves, I place on record, he goes on, some notes giving my views on methods to be employed, which, having been successful in other parts of Africa in dealing with people of a somewhat similar character to those living in East Africa, may be useful as guiding principles.

The fundamental principle, and the only human policy to be followed in dealing with peoples who have not reached a high stage of civilization, and are still dependent on a communal system of government, is to develop them on their own lines and in accordance with their own ideas and customs, purified in so far as necessary. Whilst retaining all the good in their government which makes for manliness, self-respect, and honest dealing, only that which is repugnant to higher ideals of morality and justice should be rejected. All authorities on African native government have deplored the great harm that has been done, not purposely but unwittingly, by administrative officers possessing little or no knowledge of the language, habits and customs, institutions, and traditions of the people they are called upon to administer. Impatient for so-called progress, they have at times trampled under foot the very institutions which should have been preserved if they had had any regard for the essential advancement of the people.

Great and enduring patience is therefore expected from all administrative officers, for exasperating though it may seem to see things go slowly, it is worse to upset ideals and customs so little understood. It is not from the present generation that we may look for much — the succeeding generation are in the hands of administrative officers, and it is for them to mould the people as best they can with the educative means at their disposal. It must certainly be their endeavor to lift the natives to a higher plane of civilization, but this can only be achieved by gradual methods and by observing existing conditions. Every improvement must be by a natural process of evolution which will cause no extreme dislocation of present circumstances. We should support the authority of the chiefs, councils of elders, and headmen in native reserves, and the prestige and influence of the chiefs can be best upheld by allowing the peasantry to see that Government itself treats them as an integral part of the machinery of the administration. Native tribes vary greatly, and whilst some have a natural genius for self-government, others are more primitively constituted.

Many of the tribes in East Africa have no chiefs of recognized authority, but where this is the case tribal or family authority is vested in a chosen council of elders. By upholding the authority of the chiefs and elders it is not intended to imply that officers should sit down and enforce blindly all orders issued by these men who, after all, are in a sense savages. The main object of administering the people through their chiefs is to prevent disintegration amongst the tribe; but active interest, supervision, and guidance on the part of the officers of the administration are all necessary for the prevention of abuses. There are not lacking those who favor direct British rule, but if we allow the tribal authority to be ignored or broken it will mean that we, who numerically form a small minority in the country, shall be obliged to deal with a rabble, with thousands of persons in a savage or semi-savage state all acting on their own impulses and making themselves a danger to society generally. There could only be one end to such a policy, and that would be eventual conflict with the rabble.

The policy to be pursued with regard to natives in European settlements and towns is a more difficult subject to deal with, and its solution is one of the most important tasks before us. The elaborate structure of native custom and belief is apt to fail when we touch it, and yet we express surprise at the disorder of our own creation. We hold out inducements to natives to leave their homes, and yet we are astonished that these natives will not always return to their reserves. We cannot comprehend why, because they have tasted the sweets of town life, they will not carry on their former occupation in their own villages or hamlets under the rule we are endeavoring to maintain and strengthen. We forget that by bringing the native into contact with civilization his mind may be rudely awakened; he discovers that he is naked; he finds that his chief is, after all, not so important nor so rich as he imagined.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA

Strong Testimony of Emigrant Commissioner the Hon. George Starr, as to the Power of Radway's Ready Relief in a Case of Sciatic Rheumatism.

Van Ness Place, New York.

Dr. Radway—With me your Ready Relief has worked wonders. For the last three years I have had frequent and severe attacks, sometimes extending from lumbar regions to my ankles, and at times to both lower limbs. During the time I have been afflicted I have tried almost all the remedies recommended by wise men and fools, hoping to find relief, but all proved to be failures. I have tried various kinds of baths, manipulation, outward application of liniments too numerous to mention, and prescriptions of the most eminent physicians, all of which failed to give me relief.

Last September, at the request of a friend (who had been afflicted as myself), I was induced to try your remedy. I was then suffering fearfully with one of my old turns. To my surprise and delight the first application gave me ease, after bathing and rubbing the parts affected, leaving the limbs in a warm glow created by the Ready Relief. In a short time the pain passed entirely away. Although I have slight periodical attacks, approaching a change of weather, I know now how to cure myself and feel quite master of the situation. Radway's Ready Relief is my friend. I never travel without a bottle in my valise. Yours truly,

GEORGE STARR.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

The Fate of "Charlie Beresford."

Mr. George Leyton, the popular actor-vocalist, who recently petitioned the King to grant the Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans a special view of the coronation procession, has been instrumental in causing something like $25,000 to be distributed amongst the old soldiers. His philanthropic efforts are warmly supported, amongst others, by Lord Charles Beresford, who also takes a great interest in boy scouts. He told Mr. Leyton the other day of an amusing experience which befell him recently at the hands of some small patrols. The Portsmouth corps was founded by Lord Charles, who lately decided to personally test their ideas regarding scouting. Driving over the Portsmouth hills, where the youngsters were engaged in manoeuvres, his motor-car was smartly confronted by three youths, who exclaimed in chorus, "We take you prisoner, Lord Charles!" "Well, what are you going to do with me, now that you have got me?" inquired the distinguished captive. There was a brief pause, after which one of the lads replied, in a grave tone, "H'm! Well, when the guv'nor comes back, I 'spects we shall shoot yer, sir!"

How Cloves Grow.

Cloves are the unexpanded flower buds of a beautiful evergreen tree which grows only in tropical countries. The buds are at first a pale color and gradually become green, after which they develop into a bright red, when they are ready for collecting.

During the drying process they are exposed to the smoke of a wood fire and then to the action of the sun, which accounts for their dark brown color when ready for the market.

The clove tree, which attains a height of 30 feet, is a native of a small group of islands in the Indian archipelago called the Spice Islands, but in the last four centuries it has been carried to all the warmer parts of the world.

Cloves were one of the principal oriental spices which early excited the cupidity of western commerce communities, having been the basis of a rich and lucrative trade since the early part of the Christian era.

BIRTHMARKS REMOVED.

Another Notable Achievement of Modern Surgery.

After less than a year's experimenting, a new treatment, known as the carbonic acid snow treatment, for the removal of warts, rodent ulcers, birthmarks, etc., has gained an accepted place in modern therapeutics. The treatment was first introduced at the Charing Cross Hospital, London, Eng., and so successful have the experiments been that now practically every hospital in the country, as well as thousands of general practitioners and skin specialists, is making use of the new medimament. The snow is prepared by allowing a thin spray of carbonic acid gas, liquefied under pressure, to escape into a felt covering slipped over the tap of the iron cylinder containing the gas. The gas is deposited on the felt as a very fine powdered snow at a temperature of about 100 degrees below zero. The snow is then solidified into an icy pencil by being tightly packed into a hard rubber cylinder with a plunger. Treatment consists of pressing this intensely cold pencil of carbonic acid ice for a few seconds against the birthmark, wart, or rodent ulcer to be removed. The resulting intense cold freezes the part, setting up severe local inflammation, which leads to a breaking down and absorption of the frozen tissues. There is very little pain, and the wound heals naturally in a few days, leaving the skin practically normal. "Warts are readily removed in one application," said one of the surgeons at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, to a reporter, "and the results in small non-vascular birthmarks—that is, without large blood-vessels—are marvellous. In early rodent ulcer we have also been very successful." In St. Bartholomew's dispensary, where the snow is made in bulk, the whole apparatus used consists of a ruler, a heavy piece of felt, and an iron cylinder containing 40 pounds of liquefied gas. The felt is first tightly rolled about the ruler, which is then withdrawn, leaving a long hollow tube. One end of this tube is then tightly strapped over the tap of the cylinder, a cork is put in the other end, and the gas is turn on. In a few seconds the tube is filled with a carbonic acid icicle, ready for use on unrolling the felt.

HELD THE POSE.

The Bridegroom Model Even Held His Breathing Apparatus.

Sir Luke Fildes, who has been commissioned by the County of Surrey, England, to paint a copy of his portrait of Edward VII. in Buckingham Palace for a county memorial to the late King, is one of the favorite painters of royalty, and has done splendid portraits not only of the late King Edward but of Queen Alexandra and the present King and Queen.

Sir Luke first gained repute as a painter of English and Venetian subjects, afterwards turning his attention to portraits. His first picture, "Fair, Quiet, and Sweet Rest," was exhibited at the Academy thirty-nine years ago, and is separated by an interval of thirty years from the state portraits of King Edward. His celebrated picture, "The Doctor," took the artistic world by storm, and is regarded as one of the most striking of modern works.

Sir Luke tells an amusing story of an inquisitive visitor to a picture gallery. Observing a man standing in rapt attention before a certain painting, the visitor ventured to put the query: "Did you paint that picture, sir?" "Paint that picture?" echoed the enraptured one contemptuously. "Not me. I made the frame!"

Sir Luke also has a good story of a rustic whom he employed as a model for the bridegroom in "The Village Wedding." Soon after the drawing began, the artist noticed that his model became very pale. He made him rest, and presently work was resumed. The model soon became more ghastly than ever. "You don't seem well," said Sir Luke. "I'm a'right, zur," answered the model, "only for holding me breath so long!" The poor rustic imagined it was necessary for the portrait to be taken, that he should hold his breath the while!

The picture was painted for Mr. (afterwards Sir) Henry Tate. Sir Luke had thought over the subject for several years before he made a start, although eventually it proved the quickest painted picture he had ever done. The artist traveled to many places, from Devon to Inverness, to get thoroughly acquainted with the character of the cottages and people. He made many sketches, and on his return to town had the room built up exactly to size at the end of his studio. Even the massive rafters shown in the picture were there.

Courage In the Weaker Sex.

In high police circles woman's trait of courage that exceeds her physical strength is regarded as no new manifestation in the proverbially weaker sex.

"Ever since I became associated with police work," said one experienced officer. "I have noticed that women seemed always ready to help any one in apparent difficulties. Perhaps because they are weak themselves they are disposed readily to help the weaker side without thought of consequences to themselves."

A highly interesting explanation of this undoubted bravery in women was vouchsafed by J. W. Slaughter, the eminent English sociologist, who assigned female courage largely to the maternal intinct.

"Nothing on earth," he said, "can be more ferocious, more dangerous, and more courageous than the female animal defending her young. The maternal instinct in woman is in itself an inspiration to courage. You will never see a woman on the edge of a crowd taking the side of the upper dog. Women, moreover, act more directly than men. They are more impulsive and less calculating.

"We are accustomed to think of women as afraid of this or that, but it is because they have not really had experience. Courage is, after all, a matter of experience. One is not afraid of things one is used to or knows how to deal with."

Fifty Years of Song.

The approaching retirement of Mme. Albani recalls the prima donna's interesting confession that she began to sing before she began to walk. "As a baby," she says, "I was remarkable for the power of my voice, if not for its quality. My parents recognided this, and at the age of four I began my musical studies. I have been singing ever since." Mme. Albani will celebrate her fifty-ninth birthday in November next, and made her first appearance on the concert-platform when she was eight years of age. Her most cherished memories hover around her intimate friendship with Queen Victoria. The great singer was a frequent visitor to Buckingham Palace and Windsor, and was a welcome guest at Balmoral. When she sang before the Kaiser once in Berlin he afterwards shook hands with her and said, "Good-bye. When you see her, give my love to grandmamma."

An All-British Lord Mayor.

"When I got out of bed this morning I left behind me Irish linen sheets and Witney blankets. I went into the bathroom and used English soap and Irish towels. I dressed in Scotch tweeds and put on English-made boots, and went to breakfast supplied wholly with British produce. As far as I am concerned, everything I eat, drink, and wear comes from the British Empire." Such was the interesting confession made a few days ago by Sir T. Vezey Strong, Lord Mayor of London, in connection with the movement for an all-British shopping week.

Family Records In the Peerage.

The fact that the Marquess of Donegall has lately made his first platform appearance at the mature age of seven reminds one that he has been fatherless since birth, yet were his father, the fifth marquess, alive to-day he would be within a few weeks of entering on his ninetieth year. The Duke of Norfolk will be well over eighty when his son and heir attains his majority, while between the eldest daughter of the Earl of Abingdon—Lady Edmund Talbot—and his youngest—Lady Betty Bertie—there is an interval of nearly forty years.

HELPING THE SLEUTHS

MONTREAL HAS A FINE MEDICO-LEGAL LABORATORY.

Doctors McTaggart and Dugas of the Quebec Attorney-General's Department Spend Most of Their Time Unravelling Mysteries, Examining Bloodstains and Making Analysis For Poison—Solved Pope Riddle.

There are few cities ahead of Montreal in the completeness of the medico-legal departments connected with the detection of crime and pursuit of the criminal. This department is a part of the Attorney-General's office, but all the work is done in Montreal, and the great majority of the cases come from the city.

A little of the interior workings of this department, the heads of which are Dr. McTaggart and Dr. Dugas, were revealed by the investigation into the Pope case, Pope being the merchant of Bromptonville who disappeared leaving a coat and hat covered with blood. It was the medico-legal department which showed that the man had not been murdered. After a series of long and difficult experiments it was shown that the blood which had flowed so profusely was not that of a man, but one of the lower animals.

Few people appreciate the real value of this department. Few know what it is, how the work is done and what an aid it is to the detectives. All the stories of detectives which have of late years flooded the market have been of the Central Office man or the private sleuth who tracks down his man in various impossible ways. The modern criminal has more than the detective office to fear. He has to pit himself against the research and investigation of years by some of the cleverest scientists who have made seemingly impossible things possible. Many of these men are never heard of, outside the select circle who watch their work.

Ten years ago, a group of such scientists in Germany, headed by one, Wasserman, ended a series of experiments which made it absolutely possible to distinguish human bloodstains. Hitherto there had been tests but they had never made the result a certainty. The serum test, as it is known, is the last word. It is absolute.

The experiments which are usually made to discover whether stains are of human blood number six. They are:

1. Gross examination.
2. Microscopical examination.
3. Gylac test.
4. Haemin test.
5. Spectroscopic test.
6. Serum test.

The gross examination requires an intimate knowledge of the manner in which it coagulates and the changes in appearance which are visible to the naked eye, such as changes in color. Iron rust very frequently resembles dried blood, but it seldom presents a dark red and glazed appearance. Knives used to cut acid fruits may present dark reddish stains, but these contain vegetable cells colored with iron salts. By the microscope, which is the second test the absence of red blood cells is noted. This entails a knowledge of the comparative morphology of cells and the process of staining them properly for examination.

If the blood is dry it is sometimes rather difficult to restore the red cells. A great variety of expedients are suggested, and if one fails another may succeed. Selecting some part of the blood clot which has dried rapidly, a portion is scraped off with a clean knife. This substance is transferred to a glass slide. To this should be added one or two drops of a fluid which will isolate the coherent cells and tend to restore their original form. The specimen then is covered with a cover-glass.

There are various fluids used to isolate the coherent cells. When they are isolated the cells are measured. At one time this measurement was the one way in which human blood cells were distinguished from those of other mammals. The determination of the size of these cells was for long one of the most essential as well as difficult problems of the medico-legal department. This test, however, has been reduced to a secondary position since the introduction of the serum test, as being much less certain. In extremely minute stains, however, it is the only practicable test.

By the gross and microscopical examination the investigator should be fairly certain whether the stain is that of blood or not. To make certainty surer, however, there is the guiacum test. The substance under examination is treated with guiacum and old oil of turpentine. If it gives a blue color it is quite safe to assume that it is blood.

There is still a further test and this is a standard one, the haemin test. It depends on the formation of certain characteristic crystals of haematin. These crystals cannot be mistaken for any other object in nature occurring under the same conditions. The method followed is to take a small portion of the substance, supposed to be blood and place it on a glass slide. It is then moistened with a drop of 8 per cent. solution of common salt or a dilute solution of iodide of potassium. By a gentle heat the mixture is dried. A cover glass is then put on and a drop of glacial acetic acid is run under the glass. The specimen is then gently heated until bubbles of acid appear, at which temperature it is held until the acid is slowly and completely evaporated. By this procedure the blood pigment is dissolved by the acid, and combined by the chlorine of the salt to form the hyrochloride or the anhyride of haemetin which crystallizes on evaporation.

But it is not only in the testing of blood that Dr. McTaggart performs interesting experiments. The examination of the tissues and contents of the stomach for poison entail many intricate and delicate experiments.

TOWNS MADE TO ORDER.

The Canadian West Is Now Engaged In a Serious Job.

A hundred and seventy new towns are to go up along the railway lines of Western Canada this year. The probability is that these towns will look as much alike as peas in a pod. Western towns don't grow when they begin. They are made to order.

In a majority of cases there is no particular reason why a certain Western town should be built, except that it's ten miles to the next; and ten miles between towns along a Western railroad is supposed to be far enough. So every ten miles along the new lines of the three transcontinentals the traveler sees a town; a water tank and a red elevator; a big hotel at the front-door corner, a livery barn, a lumber yard, an implement yard, fire hall, town hall, and a church.

The entire civic scheme is planned in a single summer. There is no time for mere growth, which comes when the new buildings begin to settle down and the streets begin to pack. Then bye-and-bye one town boosts another by knocking it, when there's really little or no difference between one and another, except in the people that make the town.

But if people are to make a town, they should see to it early in the race of town-building that the town gets some character more than it ever gets from a red elevator. They will need to look after such points as architecture, the width of streets, and the laying out of parks.

It is but natural that in the race to prosperity these towns should give less heed than they otherwise would to points that make an attractive town. Growth is the keynote, and so, unless care is exercised, they are likely to run into difficulties which will be somewhat like those of the slower-grown cities of Eastern Canada. Could the men behind the Western towns realize how great a problem Toronto is facing in the oft-proposed widening of Yonge street, and what great difficulties many cities are having through not making provision early for enough park space, the Westerners would probably strive hard to prevent repeating in their cities the problems facing the cities of Eastern Canada.—Canadian Courier.

Gus Porter's Miracle.

The re-nomination as Conservative candidate for West Hastings of E. G. Porter, M.P., brings to mind the first time that he was the party standard-bearer in that riding. Mr. Henry Corby had retired owing to ill-health and there was a lively skirmish for the honor of succeeding him as the constituency was a certain win for the Conservatives. Mr. Porter was looked upon as a very young man, and it was thought by some of the other and older aspirants that he could well afford to wait for Parliamentary honors. Jealousy cropped out to a certain extent, but Mr. Porter, however, carried the convention. He was speaking one night at a mass meeting in the Belleville Opera House, and took occasion to refer to what some of his opponents were saying about him. "I am told," he remarked, "that I am too young, that others would have more influence than I could have, and I should learn to bide my time. It has been said that I am a comparatively unknown party man after all, and a former friend insinuated the other day that, when I get to Ottawa, I could not hope to accomplish much for West Hastings. It has been charged that I cannot perform miracles, but, gentlemen, I give that scurrilous statement a flat contradiction."

Here Mr. Porter halted and calmly poured from a pitcher on the table some water into a glass. He leisurely took a draught and his move was natural and deliberate. His hearers thought that he was thirsty and looked for nothing more than a temporary pause in his address.

"As I have said," resumed Mr. Porter, "it has been alleged that I am unable to perform miracles. Gentlemen! I have disproved that false assertion by my recent action for have I not just turned water into Porter. I challenge any man here to do that."

The speaker got no further.—Star Weekly.

His First Stump Speech

Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, and Sir James P. Whitney, Premier of Ontario, each made his first political speech at a meeting in the little town of Morrisburg, where they were young men together. It was during an election campaign when the National Policy was the issue, and the occasion was recalled this week by a Torontonian who was present. He recalls that young Graham, in his maiden effort on the stump, was almost as easy and witty as he is after long years of practice. Talking was natural to him. His words came "just like water out of a pail," we are told by the man who remembers the meeting.

At that time there was much smuggling of goods from the American side across the river, to Morrisburg. Coal oil was a favorite commodity with the duty-dodgers, and almost every night cans were set out by householders and secretly filled with good American oil at a low price by men who had regular routes. This was in George Graham's mind when he brought down the house with this remark:

"A lot of men in this town could howl for protection and patriotism with better grace if they were not daylight protectionists and dark-night free-traders."—Star Weekly.

Chose Execution.

Probably the most extraordinary case on record of a man who sought to die a felon's death was that of a Quebec citizen who passed himself off as a murderer for whom the police were searching. When the matter was investigated it was found that the self-accused man had nothing whatever to do with the crime. "No," your right, "you're right. I'm not the murderer; but my wife leads me such a miserable life at home that I thought I would escape from matrimonial wretchedness by getting the Government to hang me."

While the exports of human hair from China are very large, it is denied that any comes from corpses.

A Technicality.

It has been charged once more that Magistrate Denison and Crown Attorney Corley make Toronto's police court a house of jesting. And certainly both of these gentlemen often make in court remarks calculated to raise a laugh. It may be that their motto concerning the people to be jailed is "always have them laughing when they say 'Good-bye'."

Not all the laughter in court is caused by these officials. The accused people sometimes intentionally bid for laughter. And sometimes the folk who are in trouble cause broad smiles without meaning to do so.

One of the funniest of the many funny incidents in Magistrate Denison's court happened in connection with a non-support case.

"John Smith," rattle away the magistrate in his usual quick fashion, "your wife says that you and she have been married sixteen years, that you have eight children, that you contribute nothing to their support, that you drink to excess and assault and abuse her, and that she is afraid to live with you. What do you say to all that?"

"It's all wrong, your worship," said the prisoner. "We've been married seventeen years."—Courier.

Ye Bad Black Knight.

Thousands of people visited Ashton-under-Lyne, near Manchester, to witness a pageant founded on the local tradition of the riding of the Black Knight. For centuries it has been the custom of people in the surrounding districts to visit the town on Easter Monday and, by the burning of an effigy of a knight, to express the feelings of detestation, which the inhabitants of the town entertained towards wanton acts of cruelty practiced by a feudal lord of the 15th century who resided in Ashton-under-Lyne, and one of whose pastimes was to place his victims in a spiked barrel which was then rolled down a hill. The pageant was this year arranged for the first time on a grand spectacular scale. At night there was a fancy dress carnival, and an effigy of the Black Knight was burned.

GREENLEAF & SON

CORONATION LETTER

Hundreds of Canadians Will Be Required For the Pageant of The Festival of Empire

(Special Correspondence)

London, May 16.—The glorious sunshine of these early days of May are promising well for the coming great Coronation celebration. Although as yet little is being said of the coming events, the daily increase in the overseas crowds, who are arriving in London, is eloquent of the fact that not only is the British Empire, but the whole world, on the qui vive of happy expectation. During the winter of their discontent it is the custom of Londoners to grumble about their grey city and its gloomy skies; but when the summer sun is shining no great city in the world is more picturesque, and certainly none so cheerful.

To-day the sight of the shops in Regent Circus, the rolling traffic of gorgeous carriages, and the fashionable throng, tell of the opening of the Coronation season. It is plain that this is indeed the home of the world. Two courts in the week have attracted the great ones of the earth. The heart of the Empire is again rejoicing, for the season of mourning for the late King Edward is past, and to-day there is published King George's message to his people: "I take courage and hopefully look into the future, strong in my faith in God, trusting my people, and cherishing the laws and constitution of my beloved country."

Now that the stands to view the procession are ready, the extent of the crowds for which London is prepared are the most appalling ever witnessed. Looking down the historic Whitehall, facing Westminster, are towering barricades covering the great square. The famous statues outside the Abbey and the Houses of Parliament are hidden and the smaller Church of St. Margaret. The passion of curiosity and the whole world's love of sightseeing are dominant, and London is one vast pageant. In the crowded streets Colonials, and especially Canadians, are conspicuous. The visitors are like children home for the holidays. It is doubtful which is the more impressive—the Colonials' pride and amazement as they gaze on the streets of London, or the Londoners' pride in the happy English people of the new countries who have come home to show their devotion to the rooftree of their ancestors.

Canadians are preparing for the pageant of the Festival of Empire, in which they are to take so proud a part. The picturesque scenes in Canadian history, which are to be represented, will require some hundreds of Canadians, and to-day Canadians in London are volunteering for the costume parts. This Canadian pageant will be one of the most fascinating sights of the Festival. It is to be performed every day from 4.30 to 6 p.m., and from 8 to 10 p.m., on the terraces of Sydenham Hill, and no doubt all England will thus be brought into more intimate contact with "the new nation born in the west."

Strangers bent on sight-seeing will be interested in the arrangements made for the accommodation of the crowds who will flock to Westminster Abbey for the ten days following the Coronation. The thrones and the scene, as nearly as possible as it was at the Coronation, will be preserved, so that the masses who have not been spectators at the great historic scene, may have an idea of what it was. There will be admission to the Abbey to satisfy the popular curiosity, and five shillings, two shillings and sixpence, one shilling and sixpence will be charged for seats. It is expected these crowds will replenish the church funds, for at last coronation the visitors who came sight-seeing and paid for cards of admission numbered 100,000.

It has now been announced that of course Queen Alexandra will be absent from the ceremony and all the fantastics of the Coronation. It would not be becoming that the widowed Queen of the late King Edward should be required to take any part in the Coronation of King George. Her residence at Marlborough House will be vacated to accommodate some of the King's guests. Her place in the Coronation must know her no more.

The music at the Coronation ceremony at the Abbey is arranged, and to music lovers from abroad it will be a superlative treat, for among the performers there will be the greatest English tenor, Edward Lloyd. He is the most popular of our singers whose fame belongs to a past generation. It is years since he bade farewell to the concert stage, and in the Abbey he is to pay his respect to the King by singing once more in public.

In the streets of London these days it goes without saying that fashion holds its sway, and the ladies and gentlemen of England are vying with those from all over Europe and the Empire. It is significant of the simple manners which will set the fashion in the Court of King George and Queen Mary that in all public gatherings in the open where the Queen has influence some of the most absurd of the present fashions will be rigorously tabooed. The big hats, the tight skirts and tight bodices and low collars, which ladies most affect, will be strictly forbidden. This may be a law, but if it be opposed to the spirit of the age, the frivolous or foolish fashion may be trusted to make the biggest show.

King George's first Court presented a brilliant scene and perhaps set the tone of the new world of fashion. It is safe to say that under the new regime common sense and good taste will be supreme. The Court splendor will at least lose nothing as compared with the Court of King Edward, which showed a marked difference as compared with the simple afternoon function of Queen Victoria.

The Court of King George opened by the Guard of Honor at 8.30, and at midnight was at the zenith of its splendor. In all its details it was a replica of the function in the good King Edward's time. The King wore his uniform as Colonel of the Grenadier Guards, and was surrounded by a brilliant gathering of Ministers and Ambassadors. Pale grey and silver embroidery, and white and mauve and pale green were among the quiet toilettes of the ladies, and of course there was no longer any sign of Court mourning.

The entrances to Westminster Abbey will be opened at 6.30, and the the gates of Hyde Park will be opened to carriages at the same hour during the morning of the Coronation. With the exception of Storey's Gate, the gates of St. James's Park will be closed to all carriages other than those of members of the Royal Family until after His Majesty has returned to Buckingham Palace. The royal procession will leave Buckingham Palace at 10.30 in the morning, and the line of route to Westminster Abbey will be kept exclusiv yelorthe bey will be kept exclusively for the free passage of the King from 8.30 and until His Majesty has returned. The royal procession will form up at a quarter t oten. Barriers are to be erected on the streets impinging on the line of the procession. They will be kept open as far as possible, but will be so constructed that in the event of the crush becoming too great they can be readily closed.

The approaching Coronation is lending its brilliance to the whole appearance of London. Every jeweller's shop has its Coronation gifts, every hosier's its Coronation tie or particolored sock. At every turn, too, are already stands or rumors of stands, and staid old family mansions, of our revered nobility, decked out in new paint, and announced as "To be let for the Coronation season, with view of procession."

Word has been received from the Palace that the intended promulgation of honors on the King's birthday will, contrary to the usual method of procedure, be postponed. The reason for this is the imminence of the Coronation. From time immemorial it has been the custom of the English Monarch to confer upon his subjects upon the anniversary of his birthday, the titles, honors and degrees for which they are candidates. In order, however, both to escape the arduous ceremonials attendant upon this function and to add, if possible, to the impressive magnificence of the Coronation, His Majesty, King George V., has decided to postpone the usual ceremony until Coronation Day, June 22.

BIG ESTATE IN COURT

What Will Be Done With A. L. Pointing's Quarter Million?

A quarter of a million dollar estate left by England's famous anti-blushing, anti-fat and anti-lean remedy manufacturer, Arthur Louis Pointing, is now in the courts of London subject to the litigation of his heirs who claim him to have been of unsound mind during the period when he was most actively engaged in piling up his somewhat extensive fortune. It is asserted by the plaintiffs that though Pointing was able to turn his vagaries into the cold currency of the English crown, his conduct was such as to indicate that he was incapable of making a final disposition of his property. The defence, on behalf of Mr. Pointing's advertising agent, to whom he left the bulk of his estate, contends that any man who could amass such a fortune was perfectly sane and fully capable of making his last will and testament. The case has not been closed.

Chinamen's Superstitious Fears

Chinamen engaged at Liverpool for a vessel called the Wearmouth, found on arrival at Sunderland that her name had been changed to Silverbirch. They thought this was due to some devilish agency, and struck work when refused permission to light a joss-fire in the forecastle to scare the Evil One away. Finally they were appeased.

SPANISH BULL FIGHTS

Hundreds of Thousands of People Were Entertained

Twenty-four bull fights is the record made by the the city of Madrid, Spain, at the recent celebration over the anniversary of the struggle in 1808 of the Madrid people against the French troops of Napoleon. A veritable army of toreadors flooded the bull ring of Madrid and entertained hundreds of thousands of the populace by baiting savage beasts brought fresh from the hills surrounding this ancient city. There were three arenas in operation, all of which were crowded to the topmost seats by the excited populace.

DWARF'S RASH ACT

In a Fit of Jealousy the Lilliputian Threw Himself from a Window

A Lilliputian tragedy was narrowly averted when the dwarf, Euclid Jondin, of Berlin, Germany, carried away by an ecstasy of adoration for his still more diminutive wife, threw himself from an upstairs window into the street. He was removed on an ambulance to the hospital. The rash deed ensued after a matrimonial dispute caused by his jealousy. Fortunately, his injuries are not dangerous, and he will be able to fulfill a contract to appear on view next month. His wife says she is determined to leave him.

The old notion that women are more emotional than men has been discredited by a celebrated authority of Europe.

Dear Sirs,— It gives me great pleasure in testifying to the general excellence of your pianos. Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

FASHIONS ETIQUETTE RECEIPTS CHIT-CHAT

Queen Mother's Pictures.

Through the gracious initiative of Queen Alexandra in lending a group of photographs taken by herself and some others that she has valued for their memories, the Royal Photographic Society has been able to form a most appropriate nucleus for a Memorial collection of the life of King Edward. The society, on receiving through its president, Lord Redesdale the intimation that Queen Alexandra had consented to the exhibition of her work, brought to gether as many other suitable prints as possible in short time, and has formed a representative group covering more than half a century. The collection affords unique opportunity of following the regular development of character from youth to age as illustrated in the various portraits. The transition is gradual, but very decided, from the boyhood of 1855, through the happy period of early marriage, and the growth of succeeding responsibilities, to the time when the state cares and declining health left their mark; and the remarkable point is not to be over looked, says the London Post, that King Edward's features gained in comeliness and dignity till very late in life, reflecting a progressive movement towards a high ideal.

The pictures made by Queen Alexandra herself reveal a side of her own individuality that the public with all its affection for Her Majesty has had little opportunity of appreciating. Her sympathetic attitude of mind is shown not only in her intimate portraits of King Edward, but also in her rendering of scenes and incidents associated with his memory. Her Majesty has been a zealous photographer for many years, and much of her work has naturally been done at Sandringham, where the beautiful gardens have evidently been a delight to her, and on the Royal yachtt, where her hereditary love of the sea has found full pictoral scope, particularly in the glory of the poetry of of sunset over the waters. A picture unsurpassed in historical interest in the collection may be referred to in the distant future as the representation of three generations of kings. It shows King Edward VII, the Prince of Wales and his two children, depicted as they were standing naturally and unconcerned on the deck of the yacht.

A Pretty White Kimono.

A negligee kimono that is very simple but has an artistic note about it is made up in white sheer material lightly embroidered in color. The kimono is loose, and held to the figure by ribbons drawn through eyelets at the side seams.

Persian lawn, or batiste is serviceable, the edge finished with a German Valenciennes an inch wide.

A rayed design is drawn as a border around the neck and each side of the front. It may outline the entire negligee. For drawing the disks the end of a large spool serves. These disks are worked alternately in pink and deep baby blue, the straight rays running from a centre of five French knots in black or sometimes from an outline the color of the rays, with the black knots inside.

A finish is given by adding to the outside edge a quarter-inch blue ribbon sewed on with machine stitch in black silk and on the under side a pink ribbon that extends beyond the blue.

Good Sauces.

There is hardly any branch of cookery which does the cook more credit than the preparation of good sauces. To obtain the best results she must study the art both in theory and in practice. A cook who can make good sauces is never at a loss in cases of emergency, for a delicate sauce is capable of converting a plain dish of either fish, flesh or fowl into a dainty entree and a plainly cooked vegetable into a high class entremets de legume.

In many households the preparation of such a "simple" sauce as melted butter is left to an ordinary maid, and the result is often a compound which more closely resembles underdone paste than sauce blanche. It is the little details of the kitchen—of which the sauce in question is a good example—which bring discredit or the reverse on both mistress and cook. When properly made melted butter is one of the most useful sauces prepared in a modern kitchen, owing to the variety of which it is capable. The failure in making it is usually due to the fact that an entirely wrong method is adopted, which admits of insufficient cooking of the flour and a too scanty supply of butter.

Hollandaise Sauce.

There is no sauce which gives a more decided piquancy to a dish than well made hollandaise. There are several ways of preparing it, but to make hollandaise as it should be the process is not a very easy one. The following is a good recipe: Reduce two tablespoonfuls of vinegar in a saucepan with a pinch of salt and pepper until only one teaspoonful remains; draw the pan to the side of the stove, where the heat is only very moderate, and pour in two tablespoonfuls of cold water and the yolks of two eggs (taking care that no portion of the white adheres to them) and stir with a wooden spoon, watching the eggs closely, and directly they show signs of thickening take the pan at once from the stove and stir in quickly one ounce of fresh butter. When it has quite melted place the pan again on the stove, but only for a few seconds, to reheat the mixture, then take it off and add another ounce of butter, and when it is worked in reheat as before and continue in the same way until four ounces of butter have been amalgamated with the yolks of the eggs. After adding the second and third portion of butter pour in a dessertspoonful of cold water, and when the last ounce of butter has been stirred in add another dessertspoonful of water. So doing will make the sauce less liable to curdle. When ready the sauce should be of the same consistency as a thick mayonnaise.

Melted Butter.

To make melted butter sauce put into a saucepan two ounces of butter, and when it has melted add by degrees one ounce of flour and stir with a wooden spoon until a smooth paste is formed, taking care that the roux acquires no color. Pour in by degrees half a pint of warm milk or milk and water, working the mixture quickly all the time with the spoon. Place the pan on a hot part of the stove, so that the sauce may boil up, and continue to stir until it is thick and creamy; then add salt and pepper and let it simmer for ten minutes. Pour it through a fine strainer into a hot sauce boat and just before serving add a small piece of fresh butter, stirring it lightly into the sauce. In the event of the sauce being required for fish, fish broth which has been flavored with vegetables and herbs may be used with advantage in place of the milk, but in this case a tablespoonful or two of cream should be added the last thing.

Bearnaise Sauce.

Bearnaise sauce, which is usually much appreciated when served with a filet de boeuf, or veal cutlets, is merely hollandaise with a teaspoonful of finely chopped tarragon, a small quantity of chervil and a few drops of tarragon vinegar added the last thing before being served. It is well to note that a delicate sauce of the above description would be likely to curdle if poured into a tureen which has been made very hot.

The Expressive Face.

The most expressive face is not one which writhes or agonizes with every sorrowful feeling or twists and squirms with every amusing situation. It is rather the one which retains a calm exterior while the strongest emotions of the soul play upon it with their lights and shadows.

The face should be the smooth curtain on which the heart exhibits its various pictures without disturbing it, not the stage which requires the shifting of scenery for every act.

The reason why so many beautiful faces are to be found in a convent is, in a great measure, due to the daily habit of composing the features in long hours of meditation and prayer. Unmarred by contending emotions, the features are gradually molded into harmonious outlines. Train your features to composure and avoid all grimacing habits.

Help For Lispers.

Lisping is sometimes caused by the shape of the tongue, sometimes it is due to habitual self consciousness when talking and sometimes to ignorance in enunciation. In this case lessons from an elocution teacher will often overcome the trouble entirely. The pupil will learn for the first time in her life how to place her tongue when pronouncing certain letters and combinations of letters, and with constant practice the lisp will disappear. If the lisp is due to nervousness or self consciousness, as stammering often is, instruction in elocution will help a great deal.

Soda For Bad Breath.

A fourth of a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda taken in half a glassful of water before each meal will help to correct the kind of indigestion that gives a bad breath. The bicarbonate of soda granules, that you can obtain at any druggist's, are good for this purpose and are excellent for the teeth as they dissolve in the mouth. Charcoal tablets are also good and are taken after meals in the same way. Another splendid remedy is a tablespoonful of glycerin in a wineglass of hot water after each meal.

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.

Maitre d'hotel sauce can be quickly made in the same way as anchovy sauce by substituting one ounce of maitre d'hotel butter for the anchovy butter, but for this milk without water should be used for the white sauce.

BABY ATTRACTED ATTENTION

People Stopped His Mother On The Street.

"Our eldest boy, Maurice, was born at Cheddar, Somerset, England. We put him on Neave's Food when one week old, and he never tasted anything else until his first birthday. When he was 15 months old, we came to Canada, and we kept Maurice chiefly on Neave's Food until he was nearly two years old. And he is one of the bonniest boys I have ever seen. Hundreds of people have remarked on his size. When he was a big baby, people stopped me on the street and in the stores to ask how old Maurice was and what he was fed on. He is very bright and intelligent, and has never had an illness.

Our youngest child, Douglas, is two years old and we put him on Neave's Food when he was a week old and he did just as well on it as Maurice, and is a fine, strong, healthy boy."

SPRING TAILORED GOWN.

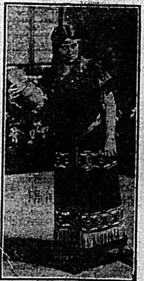
If you contemplate ordering a new street dress consider well the features of the new tailored frocks that are being shown by those who cater to advanced tastes in fashion. Notice the shortness of the coats, many of which are sloped from the front after the manner of a cutaway coat. Large buttons—two or three, perhaps five—will keep the front of the coat closed, while collars are more ample than ever.

The illustration shows a typical tailored gown of white cloth finished with bands of silk braid.

THE NEW INDIAN FAD.

Artistic Stage Women Make Barbaric Costumes the Fashion.

Two clever women of the stage, Miss Mary Garden, the prima donna, and Miss Ethel Wynne Matthison, the actress who appears in "The Arrow Maker," have succeeded in so adapting the inharmonies of the redskin costume that they appeal to the eye of the paleface. In both these plays the picturesque possibilities of Indian life are made the most of. Not only are the costumes singularly pleasing and graceful, but the stage fittings are so artistic as to insure Indian decorations becoming a fad. Indian baskets, robes, Indian pottery, tomahawks, quivers, bunches of arrows, beadwork, feather beaddresses, all may be made to play a part in designing an Indian decoration.



MISS MARY GARDEN AS NATOMA.

A well known literary woman whose husband's business takes him frequently through the west and into the reservation country has had her hall fixed up with the various Indian souvenirs which he has gathered. Recently she gave an Indian luncheon in which a miniature tepee made of bark was set on a bank of moss in the center of the table. Over it vines were trailed, and the edge was set off with a rather flat arrangement of low growing ferns. The place cards and souvenirs carried out the Indian idea.

The King of England is in severe training to get ready for coronation hardships.

A Graceful Gait.

Practically every woman walks too rapidly for grace.

A tall woman for some reason walks more slowly than a short one. Her elbows, shoulders and hips move from side to side.

To be graceful don't look at your feet, but hold your head well up in the air. Don't shuffle. A little thoughtfulness and practice in high stepping will soon break you of this ugly habit. Don't bend your back at the waist under the impression that you are thereby walking erectly. It throws the stomach forward and is almost as inimical to grace as round shoulders.

Don't allow yourself to walk "pigeon toed"—that is, with the toes turned in or straight.

It is always hard to tell what to do with the hands. The natural way, to have them hanging at the sides or loosely clasped in front, is not beautiful. And to have them glued to the sides as far as the waist line and then bent in at the elbow is not only awkward in itself, but elevates the shoulders in the most unlovely way. Therefore most women try to obviate the difficulty by carrying something.

Sachets From Cut Flowers.

Girls who receive a number of bouquets during the winter may preserve the scent of the roses and violets by means of two ordinary fruit jars, one for each variety of bloom. While the flowers still are fresh cut off their stems, place the petals and stems in the jar and pour over them an equal quantity of cornmeal. Instead of packing the jar tightly leave almost a third of the space unoccupied, so that when the lid has been screwed on the contents of the receptacle may be shaken together. Then set the jar outside of a window or in some cool and convenient place, as every day it must be gently shaken and the top removed for just long enough for a very little fresh air to touch the contents. When the rose and violet leaves are perfectly brown the cornmeal will have absorbed their odor, and the entire mixture may be transferred to an ornamental potpourri jar or used for various sorts of sachets.

Massage Cream.

An inexpensive massage cream may be prepared of almond oil, six ounces; lanolin, one ounce; spermaceti, two ounces; white wax, one ounce; balsam of Peru, one dram. Scent as desired, using a few drops of attar of rose or any other perfume preferred.

Melt spermaceti and wax, add oil, lanolin and balsam and beat till cold.

Cheap Sachets.

Bath sachets which are refreshing and beneficial for the skin when used in the bath or wash basin may be made as follows:

Take equal quantities of rosemary, orange peel, lemon peel, bay leaves, dried lavender and add a few cloves and a little cinnamon.

Mix and tie up in small muslin bags.

Tucked Pillowcases.

Run a row of stitching about three-quarters of an inch from the closed edge of pillowcases, forming a sort of tuck. It looks well on the pillow, gives something to hold to when slipping it on and off the pillow and is a great convenience when turning the case in the laundry. The corners are immediately adjusted without the customary poking; hence pillowcases never wear out at the corners.

FOOD COLORS.

If You Like Brown Victuals You Are a Person of Refinement!

An extraordinary food theory has been brought forward by Dr. J. S. Goodall, lecturer to the Middlesex Hospital Medical School. He declares that when you enter a restaurant and select a chocolate-colored food you unconsciously show yourself a man of taste and refinement; but if, on the contrary, you show a partiality for yellow-colored foods, your taste is most probably low and vulgar.

Dr. Goodall, in explaining his strange theory, says that he first made experiments with animals. "A cat, for instance," he says, "is very much influenced by the color of its food. In one experiment I placed a number of pieces of meat, each tinted a different color, before a cat. The animal looked at each piece carefully, and then selected the red-colored meat. Dogs, on the other hand, do not appear to use their visual sense like cats. If the food smells all right a dog will eat anything.

"Human beings are very sensitive as to the color of their food. By making inquiries among caterers I found that chocolate-colored foods were easily the most popular among the educated classes. The poorer classes have a liking for yellow. One of the reasons of this may be that they think such foods are richer than others."

Pink is by far the most popular color with children. If a child is offered the choice of a pink and a yellow sweet, the pink variety will invariably be selected. Curiously enough, however, foods artistically colored green appear to be avoided by all.

Dr. G. Norman Meachen, the well-known dietetic specialist, upholds the view that diners-out are largely influenced in their appetites by the color of the foods which are brought before them.

"Certain colors," he says, "stimulate the appetite and digestion, while others have the reverse effect. White foods, such as white fish, are stimulants to the appetite.

"Personally, my appetite has often been stimulated by certain colors. I have entered a restaurant with very feeble appetite and ordered a steak. The steak has come up a crisp, reddish, chocolate-brown in color. I look at it, and immediately begin to feel hungry. Brown baked potatoes have also this effect on me.

"It is my theory that brown and blue are not conducive to a healthy appetite, and to sit down to dinner in a green-papered room aften destroys one's desire for food at all."

Only Enough For One.

Sheridan was once staying at the house of an elderly maiden lady in the country, who wanted more of his company than he was willing to give. Proposing one day to take a stroll with him, he excused himself on account of the badness of the weather. Shortly afterward she met him sneaking out alone.

"So, Mr. Sheridan," said she, "it has cleared up."

"Just a little, madam—enough for one, but not enough for two."

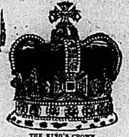
Quaint Ritual of Coronation

Entire Ceremony of Crowning of King and Queen is Symbolic of a Wedding to the British Nation.

Some of the Emblems Are Old and Have Strange Legends Associated With Them.

On June 22nd King George V. will be crowned in Westminster Abbey with all the quaint rites and elaborate ceremonials which, with the exception of certain minor alterations, have been religiously observed at the coronation of every sovereign in England since the time of William the Conqueror. The ceremony is more splendid, elaborate, and emblematic than in any other country of Europe. Every day for many weeks past the London newspapers have recorded the progress of the preparations for the supreme event, and announced fresh additions to the round of brilliant functions which will make London—usually sober and absorbed in business—the gayest capital in the world this coming midsummer.

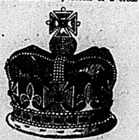


THE KING'S CROWN.

Though the discontinuance of the banquet in Westminster Hall has robbed the coronation of some picturesque feudal customs, the ceremony in the Abbey has been most jealously guarded in every detail of its impressive ritual. From beginning to end it is intensely symbolic; the series of acts presenting the King in his triple capacity of priest, soldier and civil magistrate. Each article of the regalia symbolizes one or other of these functions, all being summed up in the crown itself—"the round and top of sovereignty." The richly-jeweled sceptre with the dove recalls the peaceful days of Edward after the expulsion of the Danes, and the gloves are a reminder of his abolition of the Danegelt—a token that the King's hands should be moderate in the taking of taxes.

The coronation ring of pure gold, with a magnificent ruby carved with a St. George's cross, and surrounded by diamonds, typifies the marriage of the sovereign to his people, and has been poetically called "England's wedding ring." The anointing with oil is traced back to the setting apart of the first King of Israel. The ampulla, the vessel of pure gold in which the consecrated oil is contained, is in the shape of an eagle with outstretched wings, the oil being poured out of its beak. The spoon into which it is poured is of silver, richly gilt, and adorned on the handle with four large pearls. These two articles, it is interesting to note, are supposed to be the sole relics of the original regalia of England demolished by the ruthless Cromwell at the time of the Civil War.

The existing emblems were made on the old models for the coronation of Charles II. The curtana, or sword of Mercy, is the principal one in dignity of the three which are carried unsheathed before the King. It has no point, its blunted blade being a token of mercy. The sword of Justice to the Spirituality, is pointed, but somewhat obtuse; and the sword of Justice to the Temporality is sharp pointed. The scabbards of all three are covered with a rich brocaded tissue of cloth and studded with gilt ornaments. The sword of State is a two-handed weapon, with a scabbard of crimson velvet, decorated with gold plates of the royal badges.

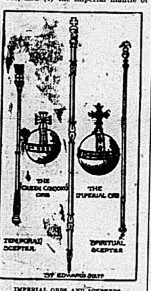


THE QUEEN'S CROWN.

The orb, the symbol of dominion, which is placed in the King's hand immediately before the crowning, is a ball of gold six inches in diameter, surmounted by a fine amethyst, which forms the pedestal of a cross of gold studded with precious stones. The right of holding the orb is the sole prerogative of reigning kings and queens, a custom adopted by the early Saxon sovereigns from the Roman emperors. An amusing story is told of the late Queen Victoria, who, it would seem, was not duly impressed by this great privilege. When Lord John Thynne, who was acting for the Dean of Westminster at her coronation, presented the orb to the Queen, she asked: "What am I to do with it?" "Your Majesty is to carry it, if you please, in your hand." "Am I?" said the Queen, "it is very heavy."

Legend and mysticism surround more than one object associated with the ancient ceremonial. The coronation ring, according to the "Golden Legend," was given by Edward the Confessor to a beggar who asked alms of him. Not long afterwards two English pilgrims in the Holy Land met an aged man who gave them the very ring, and asked them to return it to the King and tell him that the supposed beggar was none other than St. John the Evangelist. Another quaint mediaeval story recounts how the anointing oil was miraculously delivered to Thomas Becket by the Virgin Mary. The object, however, to which most mystery and interest attach is the coronation stone, or "Stone of Destiny," in the famous King Edward's chair, in which the actual crowning takes place. It was brought to London in 1296 by Edward I., from Scone in Scotland, where the Scottish kings had been crowned upon it for generations. According to the legend, the stone is actually that on which the Patriarch Jacob pillowed his head at Bethel. It was conveyed to Egypt, from whence it was brought to Spain by Gaethelus, the founder of the Scottish nation, finding its way afterwards to Ireland, and eventually to the church at Scone. On its removal to Westminster Abbey, Edward had the present chair made to receive it, and dedicated it to the Confessor, and since then every English sovereign has been crowned in the historic seat, which is richly draped for the occasion.

The chair known as Queen Mary's chair, which was made for Mary II. and in which the third sovereign of that name is about to be crowned, is a close imitation of its ancient consort. On one occasion this royal seat was usurped by a Westminster schoolboy, who secreted himself over night in the Abbey, and scratched on the back of it this brief record of his temerity: "P. Abbott slept in this chair, July, 1800."



IMPERIAL ORBS AND SCEPTERS.

The vestments which the King will put on after the ceremony of anointing will consist of: (1) The colobium sindonis, a simple lawn garment; (2) the supertunica or dalmatic, a long coat of cloth of gold, with wide sleeves; (3) the armilla, or stole, a band of cloth of gold three inches wide, and (4) the imperial mantle or pall, resembling a cope, and fastening in front with a morse or clasp. King George will not wear the imperial mantle used by the late King, as was his first intention, having been given by Lord Ancaster, whose great-grandfather, Lord Gwydyr, was formerly Lord Great Chamberlain, the vestment of singular beauty and richness worn by George IV., whose coronation exceeded all others in magnificence and cost no less than $1,215,000. The garment is of the finest cloth of gold, and a beautiful example of the handloom industry of the Spitalfields weavers. Into its service are woven the badges of the three kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

The interior will represent a baronial hall, with its timbered roof supported by wooden pillars and arched beams, and its walls covered with tapestries and arms. The great carpet, which will stretch from the west door right up to the dais, or "theatre," on which the King will sit enthroned after he has been crowned, is woven in two shades of blue, the foundation being of royal blue, on which are emblems of the noble orders and the initials "G. and M.," surmounted by a crown. The design is no less than 42 feet in length. On the "theatre" itself and in the royal boxes the carpet is to have no design, being of a plain royal blue. For the seating of the vast and brilliant company, chairs of Chippendale pattern, upholstered in silk, will be provided throughout the Abbey

On the evening preceding the coronation, the regalia will be conveyed from the Tower to the Jerusalem Chamber of the Abbey, and left in charge of the Dean of Westminster, being closely guarded all through the night by the picturesque Yeomen of the Guard. Early next morning they will be laid on a table in the vestibule, so as to be distributed to those privilege persons who carry them directly before the princes of the blood royal, who precede the King in the procession up the aisle. The vestments will be deposited previously in a special place in the Abbey convenient to the altar.

RED BLOOD IN THACKERAY.

His Novels Are About Real Live People That Everybody Knows.

The centenary of Thackeray is an appropriate occasion for a declaration of faith. Not that there has been any substantial heresy, but of late the curious may have noticed a persistent campaign of deprecation among the minor critics. All Grub Street would seem to have formed a bearing trust. No one would wish to be hard on them. After all, critics have to live. To live they must write, and if, as we are told, people do not read Thackeray's works, they have always been ready to read about them. One generation had exhausted the language of appreciation. The next, ready with sharpened quills, waited only for inspiration. Unfortunately, it requires some literary craft to make an old story readable and inspiration halted. Then some glowworm of Grub Street discovered Thackeray was a sentimentalist, and ink ran almost in a spate.

We all know the unpardonable sin in literature is sentiment. You may be obscene, dull, even historical, and be respected and possibly read, but venture sentiment and you are damned, unless, indeed, you happen to be a Scotchman. It is a little hard for an author to be resented in one age as a cynic, only to be rejected in the next as a sentimentalist.

Now, Thackeray's sentiment was never false. Of all these kindly touches giving that intimate charm to the green volumes, there is not one that after all the years does not ring true. But he wrote decently and like a gentleman, and what is more unpardonable, with a sense of his responsibility as a power for good or evil.

The best criticism I have heard of Thackeray's works was oddly enough, my introduction to them. Years ago, in a certain house library at Eton, some boys were discussing, and I need hardly say adversely, the books in it, and one of them, pointing to the green volumes of Mr. Thackeray, said, "Fancy anybody buying stuff like that," to which another said, indignantly, "They are very good books." "What are they about?" he was asked. "About people," he said.

Like Mr. Pickwick's famous remark on the management of crowds, "volumes could say no more." They are about people—live people—uncannily alive—it is almost impossible to believe they haven't actual existence. I declare, when I saw "Vanity Fair" on the stage I was almost frightened when our old friends came on. Yes, you may dislike the books, you may criticize their philosophy and methods, but never were books written whose characters were so full of red blood.—London National Review.

Consolation From Ghost.

Lord Kilmarnock, son of the Earl of Erroll, who was injured by the accidental discharge of a gun while out with the royal party near Abergeldie, Scotland, is heir to one of the oldest earldoms in the kingdom and in time will become twenty-fourth Hereditary Lord High Constable of Scotland, an office which has been held by members of his family for over six hundred years. The Hays trace back their lineage to the Norman De La Hayes, who settled in England at the Conquest. Thirty-four years of age, Lord Kilmarnock is second secretary in the diplomatic service, and he married in 1900 the only daughter of Sir Allan Mackenzie, of Glen Muick. His lordship is the author of a terribly tragic story, "Ferelith," in which the heroine, who is unhappily married, consoles herself with the family ghost! The scene is laid in his ancestral castle of Slaines; but the only ghost story they have there is that the head of the Kilmarnock who was executed after the '45 rebellion occasionally rolls about the room. The Earl of Erroll was born in Canada fifty-eight years ago, and succeeded his father in 1891. For some years he commanded the Royal Horse Guards.

Humor Under Difficulties.

Some of His Majesty's "boarders" seem able to get amusement from their enforced visits to the state "hotels." At least, it would seem so from remarks found written on walls and on the slates provided in the cells, after their departure.

Here is a set of rules drawn up by one humorous prisoner, which are good reading, even if they are not good discipline:

RULES FOR PRISONERS.

1.—Prisoners wishing to rise early, will find ladder and self-raising flour in the kitchen.

2.—If the cell is too dark, take a feather out of the pillow; that will be "light" enough.

3.—Prisoners should make sure that there is plenty of water in their cans, as there is no "spring" in the bed.

4.—Any prisoner wishing to go "driving," kindly ask the officer for hammer and nails.

5.—If the bell should be out of order, take your towel and "ring" it.

6.—If the cell is too hot, break the windows and see the "fire-escape."

7.—Do not trouble about the rent, as the hotel is supported by its "foundation."—London Answers.

Trustworthy.

The late Lord Young of the Scottish Bench was responsible for enlivening many a dull case. One of the best remarks that ever fell from his lips was the reply to a counsel who urged on behalf of a plaintiff of somewhat bibulous appearance: "My client, my lord, is a most remarkable man, and holds a very responsible position; he is manager of some water works." After a long look the judge answered: "Yes, he looks like a man who could be trusted with any amount of water."

Indian Census.

The Indian census has been successfully taken. The country was divided into 2,000,000 blocks with elaborate plans, showing railways, roads, and rivers. The Shan States, Sikkim, and the Andaman Islands were included in the return. The savage tribes of the Nicobar Islands delivered notched sticks, indicating the strength of their fighting men.

SALUTE ROUND THE WORLD.

Crash of Artillery Will Announce the Placing of the Crown.

Not only in Canada, but in every part of the Empire, guns will boom forth simultaneously at the exact moment when the crown is placed upon the head of the King in Westminster Abbey on Thursday, June 22. The shouts of "Long Live the King!" as they resound through the abbey, will find an echo in the most distant parts of the world.

Although no definite arrangements have yet been made, it can be anticipated that royal salutes will be fired in the usual places at all regimental headquarters in Canada boasting artillery corps or cannon.

The Colonial Office has made a request to the Earl Marshal to be informed of the exact minute the crown will be placed upon the King's head, and the information—it is expected that the time will be within a few minutes of two o'clock—will be communicated by the Colonial Office to every part of the Empire, so that arrangements for saluting the King can be made well in advance.

In those parts of the Empire where it is daytime when it is two o'clock at Westminster guns will be fired, and in those places where it is night rockets for bombs will be let off. Taking two o'clock as the actual time, when the King will be crowned, the coronation salutes will be given at the following hours in the places mentioned:—

SUNSHINE FURNACE

There is no dust nuisance in connection with the Sunshine.

Because the Sunshine is fitted with a dust flue (see illustration.)

When you rock down the ashes (no back-breaking shaking with the Sunshine) what dust arises is drawn from the ash-pan up the dust-flue, then across the fire-pot to the smoke-pipe, as shown in illustration, where it immediately ascends to the outer air.

Only two things to remember in connection with this operation :—open both the dust and direct draft dampers.

Sunshine is just the cleanest, simplest, easiest managed, greatest labor saving furnace that you can buy

MR. PRICE TELLS STORY OF TAX LOT DEALINGS

Advised His Wife to Invest in Lots as She Could Make Money by Doing So—Allowed Her to Make the Selection—Lots Sold Her Had been Offered to Others, but Not at a Higher Figure—Messrs Marsh and Ackerman Knew She Was Purchasing—Money was from a General Account Furnished by Him—Sold Lots to His Son-in-Law—The Money Came from $600 Paid to Mrs. Price for Lots—Details of the Transactions—Marsh Has a Page from the Diary—It Has Not been Returned

The tax lot sale investigation was continued on Saturday afternoon before His Honor, Judge Deroche.

Mr. Mikel read a letter from Mr. Hy. Taylor, who was subpoenaed and who was in Prescott, stating that he knew nothing about the matter and asked to be excused.

Judge Deroche—The letter had better be filed.

VARIOUS WITNESSES.

Alderman Anderson was examined by Mr. Mikel. He testified he was a member of the City Council, but all he knew about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Price and Marsh was what he saw in the newspapers.

P. Harrison, examined by Mr. Mikel, stated that personally he knew nothing in reference to the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price.

Mr. W. D. M. Shorey, barrister, was examined by Mr. Mikel. He drew a power-of-attorney from Mrs Smith to Mrs. Marsh. He thought he received his instructions from Mrs. Marsh. On the 4th of October the power-of-attorney was drawn. He also drew some deeds on the 18th of October. He handled $300 of Patterson's money for some lots. He had nothing to do with sales previous to this time. The money was paid over to Mrs. Marsh. In all $875 was paid her. The firm were paid for what they did. He knew nothing of the sale of lots to the relatives of Messrs Marsh and Price. There was nothing about the transactions at the time that excited his attention. Two or three weeks after he was led to believe that the lots in question were the lots referred to in newspaper articles as belonging to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price.

To Mr. Carnew—He had been a member of the firm of Clute, Morden & Shorey since August last. Could not say whether Mrs. B. E. Smith did any business with the firm before the 4th of October. The account was charged up to Mr. Marsh. Mr. Marsh was present when the power-of-attorney was drawn. The power-of-attorney was drawn while the parties were present. He felt confident he drew the entire blank. He heard Mrs. Marsh say her mother was going to dispose of some lots. Mrs Marsh took the power-of-attorney with her, with the intention of sending it to her mother. The date was left a blank when the power-of-attorney was drawn. The affidavit of execution was made some time after the 4th of October.

To Mr. Mikel—Could not say who suggested the power-of-attorney, but he was advised to prepare the same.

To Mr. Carnew—The cost of registering the power-of-attorney was, with the other matters, charged up in one bill.

Miss Cook was examined by Mr. Mikel. The witness said she was a stenographer in Clute, Morden & Shorey's office. She remembered seeing Mrs. Marsh in the office several times, but could not tell the dates, and remembered hearing a conversation about the power-of-attorney being drawn up.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness never was to her recollection at Mr. Marsh's house in reference to this matter. She never had occasion to be at his house on matters appertaining to the office. She witnessed a document signed by Mrs. Marsh.

In answer to a question from Judge Deroche—Mr. Shorey said he charged everything to Mr. Marsh because that gentleman haw an account with the firm.

THE CITY TREASURER.

Mr. D. Price, City Treasurer, was examined by Mr. O'Flynn—Witness was appointed City Treasurer in April, 1903. He was one of a committee from the City Council to sell tax lots. He always submitted to the committee any offer that was made for a lot. He made his entries in a daily journal of 1910. The first entry of an offer for a lot for the year was on Feb. 28 Mr. W. Rothwell made the offer for a lot on Gordon Street of $40, which was accepted on March 4th and a receipt given. On March 11th Mr. E. T. Cherry offered $80 for a lot on Commercial Street, but the committee thought it was worth more. The offer was not accepted, and the lot is still in possession of the city. "On Aug. 25th Mr. J. P. C. Phillips made an offer of $8 for each of lots 5, 6, 7 and 8 south Russell Street, and lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 west McDonald Street. The offer was submitted to the committee, which declined it. Witness saw Mr. Phillips afterwards and he seemed aggrieved because he could not get the lots at that price, and he went and saw the other members of the committee. Some of these lots were adjoining some farm property owned by Mr. Phillips. Later on witness saw Mr. Phillips, who enquired about the lots and witness said they had been sold. Mr. Phillips was apparently angry and told witness he had better look for another job. Mr Phillips never made to witness more than the one offer. On Sept. 7th Mrs. H. A. Price (witness' wife) made an offer of $25 for a lot on North Pine Street, which offer the committee accepted. He suggested to Mrs. Price that she could make some money by investing in some vacant lots. Mrs. Price had been a taxpayer in the city for a number of years. He allowed her to make the offer. The lot she bought had been offered to other parties, but not for a higher figure. He considered his wife had a perfect right to make the purchase the same as other citizens, so long as she paid what the lots were worth. Mr. Marsh and Mr. Ackerman knew Mrs. Price was the party making the offer. On the 9th of September the money for the Pine Street lot was paid, namely $25. The taxes against the lot was $12.88. The deed for that lot was given on the 9th of September, the day of payment. The money came from a general account deposited by him. Mr. John McIntosh on the 20th of September paid $600 for property on Rear Street and this was deposited in a general account. On the 13th of September Mrs. Price made an offer of $80 for lots 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 on west Alice Street. There was no record that any other offer had been made for these lots. On the 15th of September the $80 was paid for these lots. The taxes against them were $37.74 On the same date the deed was made out to Helen A. Price. The lot on Pine St. was on Sept. 15th sold to Mr. T. W. Rainbird for $75. The money was paid to witness and was deposited to Mrs. Price's credit. There had been no dealings with Mr. Rainbird previous to the selling to him of this lot. Mr. A. Skinner bought one of the lots on McDonald Street for $75 and Mr. Calcutt bought two lots for $75 each. Mrs. Price still holds the other two lots. Mr. H. A Davidson was his son-in-law. Witness wrote to Mr. Davidson about procuring from him a power of attorney.

The first offer made by Mr. Davidson was for 3 lots on east Alice St. These lots were sold to Mr. Davidson for $45, and the taxes against them was $16.97. The sale was on the 16th of September, 1910. The deed for these lots was given on the 16th of September, 1910. The deed was issued to Harry A. Davidson. On the following day Mr. Davidson made an offer of $40 for two lots on north Myers Street, the taxes against them being $19.72. The offer was accepted and the deed was made on the same day. On Sept. 17 Mr. Davidson made an offer of $85 for lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 on west McDonald Street. The taxes against them was $37.89. The deed was given on the 20th of September, the day of payment. The deed was made out to Harry A. Davidson. The money for the lots came from the $600 paid to Mrs. Price for lots she had sold. Witness on the 28th of September made an offer of $25 for lots 7 and 8 and 4 and 5 Russell Street. He directly had no interest in the money received from the sale of these lots. The money is in the savings bank account in the Montreal Bank. He opened an account when the first payment was made. On Oct. 7th Mr. R. H. Ford purchased lots 4, 5, and 6 east Alice Street and lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 west McDonald Street for $500. On the 4th of October Mr. R. H. Ford bought lots 7 and 8 south Russell Street, 4 and 5 Russell Street and 1 and 2 north Myers Street, paying for them $450. The only benefit witness received would be through the benefit his wife might receive through the transaction. Witness denied that there had been offers for these lots previous to the sale to Mrs. Price or Mr. Davidson. On the 24th of September Mrs. B. E. Smith offered $100 for four lots on Russell Street, the taxes against them being $22.66. He knew who Mrs. Smith was. There had been no previous offer for these lots. If an offer equally good had been made it would have been accepted. On the 15th of September Mrs. Smith purchased two and two-thirds lots on Bleecker Ave. for $400, the taxes against them being $116.34. There had been no other offer during 1910 for these lots. On October 5th, 1909, these lots had been offered to Mr. F. S. Solmes, who considered the price too high. In the same year lots 6e and 7e Bleecker Avenue were offered to Mr. Burrell for $477.96, and lots 47 and 48 on Bleecker Avenue for $124.30. The latter lots were subsequently sold for $150. There was no concealment whatever in the transactions of sales of lots to Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Price and Mr. Davidson. The sales were checked over in the regular way by the auditors. Witness was anxious, together with the committee, to sell vacant lots. The city had about 100 lots on hand for sale yet. During the year 1910 no better offer was made for the lots than what they were sold for. Witness never told Mr. Ford that the lots purchased by Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Price and Mr. Davidson were under offer. Did tell Mr. Ford about lots being under offer by a Mr. Humphrey, and was probably confused about the lots. The witness was confident there was some misunderstanding between him and Mr. Jas. Moon in reference to a conversation they had about a lot on Chatham Street. Witness made every effort to get vacant lots into the hands of taxpayers. He had maps in his office and by a brass-headed tack designated where lots were for sale in the city. Some parties would come in about lots and he would explain where they were, and in some cases the lots they wanted had been sold to other parties.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

To Mr. Carnew—Had been Treasurer since 1903 and the by-law under which lots were sold was passed in 1904. The day he made the first offer for lots, Sept. 7th, 1910, the idea came to him that it would be profitable to procure some city lots, and so told Mrs. Price. He had no further source of information than the public had. Up to the 7th of September he had not personally visited any of the lots. The offer he made on the 7th of September was accepted immediately by the committee, to whom it was referred. All offers were dealt with as soon as it was possible for the committee to get together. Mrs Price bought a lot on the 7th of September and sold it to Mr. Rainbird a few days after. Witness made an offer for a lot prior to any offer being made by Mrs. Smith.

Being questioned about a page being missing in the diary produced, Mr. Price said a page out of the 1910 diary was taken away, but could not tell the date. Mr. Marsh took the page, and although witness had asked for it, it had not been returned. Witness bought with the intention of holding the lots a year or more, but it was a fact they were re-sold a few days after the sale was made. This sale was to Mr. Rainbird, who paid $75. Mrs. Price left the matter of sale of lots entirely in the hands of the witness. Mr. Rainbird paid the money at witness' house and the deed was given to him at the house. Up to the 13th of September there was no entry in the book to show any offer. Mr. Burrell made an offer for some 17 lots on September 2nd, 1909. Among the lots were some subsequently purchased by Mrs. Smith. The price asked Mr. Burrell for the lots purchased by Mrs. Smith was $477.86.

Mr. Carnew—How was it that Mr. Burrell was asked $477.86 for lots which were sold to Mrs. Smith for $400?

Mr. Price—The offer made by Mrs. Smith of $400 was considered to be a fair offer. This was some months after Mr. Burrell had spoken about the lots in question. Witness was not paid any money by Mr. Davidson for lots purchased in Davidson's name. The witness never dreamed that Mr. Davidson would come along with the money. It was purely a family matter. There was about two weeks delay in having the matter of power-of-

CURRENT COMMENT

What about the experiment of street oiling vs. street watering?

A seat in the Montreal Stock Exchange is of some value. That belonging to the late Senator Forget was sold recently for $30,000, the highest price on record.

Parliamentary returns show that 10,300 persons in the United Kingdom have incomes exceeding $25,000 a year. They paid the income tax for the year 1910, upon $650,000,000.

Ireland's population is still decreasing. The Green Isle has a population according to the census returns made public on Friday of 4,381,051. This is a decrease since the census was taken ten years ago of 76,824.

The completed return of British railways last year is out, showing gross receipts of $619,485,000, against $600,870,260 in 1909. The net receipts were $236,485,000, in 1910, and $225,682,320 in 1909.

The vulture that attacked the aviator was probably deceived by the odor of the gasoline into thinking it was a fine, ripe carcass he had to deal with, suggests the Montreal Star.

One public holiday doth tread upon another's heels so quickly do they come King's birthday, June 3, coronation June 23; Dominion Day, July 1st. In future years there will not be, of course, coronation, but it would be well to consolidate King George's and Queen Mary's birthday observances June 3rd and May 26th, respectively with that of Victoria the Good, o the 24th of May.

The fire losses in Canada for the first four months of the current year total $5,361,75, an average of $1,340,468 per month. This is equal to a daily loss of $44,682. In other words $1,861 worth of property has been burnde every hour since the new year dawned, or $31 every minute. This in an appalling loss, remarks the Monetary Times, and little is being done to check such extravagant waste of capital.

United States papers profess never to have heard of the battle of Chateauguay. This, however, is not to their discredit. It only shows how scientifically garbled Yankee histories are. One of these productions tell us that during the entire conflict in which Queenston Heights, Chateauguay and Lundy's Lane took place, the only reverse the United States met with was in the naval engagement between the Chesapeake and the Shannon, and this disaster was the result of an accident of some kind or another, and did not amount to much —Mail and Empire.

BURGLAR MADE A GOOD HAUL

Stole Money, Clothes and Jewelry from Mr. S. A. Lockwood's Residence

HIS PROMPT CAPTURE

Tried Today Before Magistrate Masson—Given Four Years In the Penitentiary

On Saturday afternoon whilst Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Lockwood were absent from their residence, at their place of business, a burglar visited the house and made a good haul. Fortunately the culprit was caught and the booty he had taken recovered. An entrance to the premises, which are situated on the brow of the hill off Gt. St. James street, was effected by the breaking of a bolt on a screen door at the east side of the premises. Once inside the house and finding no one at home, the intruder commenced to help himself. He toook $50 in money, a gold watch and chain silver knives, forks and spoons, and some oher small souvenirs. In addition a suit of clothes, belonging to Mr. Lockwood was purloined.

Returning home about 6 o'clock Mr. Lockwood soon discovered that an intruder had been in the house and had taken considerable of value.

The police were informed of the affair and later in the evening Sergt Naphin arrested at the east end of the Grand Trunk yards, a man just as he was about to board a freight train. The suspect, when taken to the police station, gave his name as Robert Lawrence, and his age as 55 years. He was wearing the stolen suit of clothes belonging to Mr. Lockwood, and when searched the money watch and chain, and silverware were found in the pockets. He had taken , including the money, about $150, which was a good haul.

Sergt. Nephin did well in so speedily capturing the culprit, as had he been given opportunity of boarding the train, in all probability he would never have been caught, as the description of the man was meagre.

This morning Lawrence was brought up before Magistrate Masson and four charges were prefered against him, namely breaking into S. A. Lockwood's residence with intent to steal and stealing money, clothes, gold watch, etc. To these indictments Lawrence pleaded guilty and claimed that at the time he was under the influence of liquor. In answer to questions Lawrence said that he would be 57 years of age on the 21st of this month, that he was born in Yorkville, Ont., but in late years had been living in various parts of the States, the last place being Detroit Mich. He claimed to be a bartender and hotel porter. He was not a married man and had no relatives in this country. He had nothing to say why sentence should not be pronounced on him.

Magistrate Masson, before pronouncing sentence, said it was evident Lawrence had been ingenious in the transaction and must have known what he was doing. He was liable to 21 years in the penitentiary for the offeences committed, but considering his age he would be lenient with him.

The sentence of the court was that he be incarcerated in the penitentiary for a period of four years.

The prisoner did not seem to be much effected by the punishment meted out to him.

LOST BOAT FOUND

In a Class by Himself.

Mayor Hopewell, of Ottawa, is going to the coronation. So are also many other Canadian mayors, but Mayor Hopewell hopes to rank in a class by himself, because forsooth he is the mayor of the capital of Canada! This is a point that Toronto and Montreal are apt to forget sometimes, but the fact is incontrovertible nevertheless. Now, Mayor Hopewell can argue that if it is the custom to honor the Lord Mayor of London at coronation time because he happens to be Lord Mayor of the capital of Britain, there ought to be a similar hand-out for the mayors of the capitals of the "sister nations." This is ingenious as far as Mayor Hopewell is concerned, but it does not help Mayor Geary and Mayor Guerin.—Toronto Star Weekly.

attorney to buy and sell. Witness paid all expenses incurred in this matter. Davidson has not had any money on account of the sale of lots, but a gift was sent to witness' daughter, Mrs. Davidson. Mrs. Price had received personally the profits she received on the sale of lots. Witness did not ask Mrs. Price for any money to buy lots. Witness did not consider he had done anything wrong in this transaction. Mr. Marsh and witness did not discuss the matter about the power-of-attorney, neither were they in collusion in the matter. Witness did have a conversation with Mr. J. P. C. Phillips about some lots. Mr. Davidson bought some of the lots mentioned by Mr. Phillips, and Mrs. Smith also purchased some. Mr. Phillips made an offer of $9 per lot, which the committee declined to accept. Mr. Phillips should have known about the city having vacant lots for sale in the same manner as other citizens. All entries made in the book are the same as when they were made.

To Mr. Mikel—Witness said it was false that Mr. Phillips had been insulted when he spoke to Mr. Phillips about certain lots he made an offer for. When the lots were sold to Mrs Price and Mr. Davidson witness was not aware any other person wanted the lots. If they did they did not make their wish known. His idea of purchasing the lots was for the purpose of benefiting his daughter, Mrs. Davidson. Witness said that Mr. Burrell had made an application for lots in 1909, but never made an offer for lots in 1910. Had he done so he might have procured lots cheaper than he did. In every case the price received for lots was more than Mr. Burrell offered for them. Mr. Burrell made an offer of $254 for 15 lots and these lots were subsequently sold for $330. The city had never, to his recollection, received a higher offer than $100 for the 2 2-3 lots sold to Mrs. Smith. Mr. Ackerman made his first signature of the sale of lots to Mrs. Price at witness' office. All the purchase money for lots sold to Mrs. Price, Mr. Davidson and Mrs. Smith was paid in before any of the lots were re-sold by them. The City Solicitor had nothing to do with the preparation of the deeds of sale of city lots.

ALD. RIGGS.

Ald. Riggs was examined by Mr. Mikel—All witness knew about the sale of lots to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price was what he saw in the newspapers.

The investigation was then adjourned until Saturday, June 10th. Mr Mikel intimating that he would possibly call more witnesses.

VARSITY'S QUEER LEGACY.

President Falconer Got a Pleasant Surprise and a Handsome Gift.

At the Alumni dinner in Toronto recently, President Falconer related an interesting story about the way Toronto University received its latest legacy. He was getting ready one afternoon not long ago to leave the city and, like most men who want to catch a train, had very little time at his disposal. A visitor was announced—a Mrs. Marfleet, whose name was quite unfamiliar to him. The president told the maid to ask her if she could not come to see him later in the week. However the lady insisted that she wanted to see him then and now. "I've come a thousand miles to meet the president of Toronto University," said she.

So President Falconer went down to the reception room to interview his visitor. The lady explained that she was an American, whose husband had died recently. "My husband," said she, "was during his lifetime greatly interested in Canada and was particularly impressed with the fine work being done by the University of Toronto. He followed its progress with the deepest interest and often expressed the wish that he could do something to associate his name with it. He died intestate, but, knowing his wishes in the matter, I want to offer you some money, which might be used in any way you thought well to perpetuate his memory in your university. Will you accept $5,000?"

The president promised to lay the matter before the board of governors, assuring her that the board would hardly be likely to refuse so generous an offer. It has been decided that the money thus romantically donated shall be used to found a lectureship to be known as the Pearson-Kirkman-Marfleet lectureship. Every three years some prominent man, preferably an American, will be secured to deliver a series of lectures on some phase of public or international life. The first lecture will probably be given next year.

Canada's Trade Commissioner.

The report issued in 1907 by Mr. Richard Grigg, the Trade Commissioner to Canada, on the trade of the Dominion attracted a great deal of attention. A further exhaustive report by Mr. Grigg on the same subject was recently issued by the Board of Trade as a Bluebook. This, also, says the English publication "Canada," British exporters and others would do well to read, mark, and inwardly digest. For while, as Mr. Grigg remarks, increased experience has confirmed the opinion already expressed, that there exists throughout Canada a keen desire both on patriotic and business grounds to better understand differing points of view, and to draw closer the bonds of commercial union, "although a marked improvement has occurred in the attention given to the Canadian market by British manufacturers, the impression still remains that British knowledge of the Canadian market and appreciation of its great future, is much less extensive than in the case of our friendly American rivals." The Canadian market, Mr. Grigg points out, as a field for present and future British trade, is governed by certain conditions which give to the economic life of the Dominion a character of its own. Canada has for a decade past been undergoing and seems destined to undergo for a considerable period, a great industrial and financial expansion.—Saturday Night.

Mrs. J. A. Falle, of Bowmanville, is visiting in the city.

THEIR LITTLE GAME

The reason why the American millers want Canadian hard wheat was thus set forth in an illuminative statement which was made by Mr. McRae, of Detroit, before the U. S. Senate committee on reciprocity, as reported by the Washington correspondent of the Detroit Journal. He said:

"Both Canada and the United States are wheat exporting nations. It is a matter of indifference whether Canada shall market her surplus wheat through Americans mills, or whether her surplus shall be thrown upon European markets in competition with the flour exported by America.

"European mills have had access to the Canadian wheat supply and have been enabled to wrest from the American miller a large percentage of his export trade. The increase in Canadian mills in the last 10 years has also been startling. Previous to 1900 there were few, if any, Canadian mills of greater than 2,000 barrels daily capacity. There are now Canadian mills with daily capacities of from 4,000 to 10,000 barrels. In 1900 Canada's export of flour was 771,000 barrels; in 1910 it was 3,051,000 barrels; in 1900 the United States exported 18,700,000 barrels; in 1910 the United States exports of flour had fallen to 9,041,000 barrels. In other words, United States has lost 50 per cent. of its export trade in flour within ten years.

"The wheat crop of the United States has been practically stationary throughout the past ten years, ranging from 550,000,000 bushels to 750,000,000 bushels annually. The present production of Canada is from 100,000,000 bushels to 150,000,000 bushels. It is safe to assume that Canada's surplus wheat in the immediate future will range from 40,000,000 bushels to 100,000,000 bushels. It will find a market somewhere, and will compete with whatever surplus United States may have to sell. The Canadian surplus will be less of a price depressing factor if handled through American mills than if dumped directly into the markets of the United Kingdom and Europe. Practical millers say that a mixture of 20 per cent. Canadian hard winter wheat with 80 per cent. of the softer varieties grown in the States, makes much better flour (and obtains a correspondingly higher price) than a 100 per cent. mixture of American wheat. It is certainly helpful to the American farmer to be able to combine four bushels of his wheat with one bushel of Canadian wheat, and sell the resulting mixture at an increased price. American wheat farmers have never taken time to analyze their relation to the miller who converts wheat into finished goods."

Mr. McRae's argument affords the strongest possible reason why Canada should "stand pat" in regard to reciprocity in wheat. History can be made to repeat itself for the benefit of our farmers, millers and transportation companies.

Many years ago, but not so long ago as to be beyond the recollection of many people who are now living, Canada entered into competition with the United States in the cheese business with the result that the latter country, which had a very long start of the Dominion, is to-day trailing hopelessly behind, Canada's export of that article now being about twenty-five millions of dollars per year. So may it be with the milling business, as is indicated by the great increase of Canadian and the enormous decrease of American exports of flour during the past ten years, as is shown by the statistics quoted by Mr. McRae. Five years hence, if Canadians are true to their own interests, Canada will lead the United States in the export of flour and will be deriving the very great advantage of manufacturing her own produce, which otherwise will be enjoyed by a foreign country, which has never shown her a single favor, or even fair play, in matters of commerce.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Is Canada to be governed by her own Parliament or by the U. S. Congress at aWshington? The negotiations were brought about by a threat of tariff hostility at Washington. And Laurier yielded. Now Senator Root proposes to kill the proposed bargain unless the Governments of Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick remove their restrictions on the export of pulpwood, and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts demands that Canada shall cease paying bounties to her fishermen And it may be that Laurier may, so far as he is able, yield to these demands. The people had better not give him the opportunity of finishing his work in that respect.

It is now stated that the Hon. A. G. MacKay, leader of the Opposition in the Legislature, is to have the next Ontario vacancy in the Ottawa Cabinet. In such case what will become of Guthrie's aspirations? Mr. MacKay's campaign in behalf of the pact gives foundation for the rumor.

The silly season was inaugurated a short time ago, by a shallow doctrinaire, who has been airing his absurdities concerning "economic thinking" in short would-be smart editorial paragraphs published in The Globe. His latest reads as follows:—

"The men who have been levying on their neighbors do not like the idea of tariff relief. But their neighbors are growing wiser."

If the manufacturers, to whom covert allusion is above made "have been levying on their neighbors," then Sir Wilfrid must be equally guilty, for he lordly declared in Parliament, speaking of the proposed agreement "we have not hurt the manufacturers."

Conscious of Rectitude.

"Mens conscia recti," having been one of the quotations used in a letter published in the Canadian newspapers fifty years ago, by Mr. McMicken, M.P., a prominent politician, addressed to the Hon. George Brown, a political opponent accused the first mentioned member of Parliament of having stolen it from a shoemaker's sign, and told the following story of it. In a certain English country town, where rival shoemakers plied their respective trades on the same street, immediately opposite each other, one of them hit upon the plan of attracting notice to his business by placing the above quotation on the sign over his door, above the words "John Brown, shoemaker." Customers flocked to his shop in goodly numbers, which the rival shoemaker across the way attributed largely to the merit of the unusual inscription on the sign. He finally managed, as he thought, to go one better than his rival, by placing over his own shop door the inscription, "Men's and women's conscia recti."

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Rains and cooler weather west of the Missouri River made the wheat market easy most of the time to-day, but in the last half hour a smart rally occurred on account of renewed buying for an interest which has been conspicuous of late in taking the bull side. Closing figures varied from a shade lower than last night to ¼c up. The day's trading left corn unchanged to ⅛c down; oats the same as 24 hours previous, or ⅛c to ¼c decline, and provisions strung out from 12½c down to a gain of 2½c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ⅛d higher on corn.

Elgin Anecdotes.

The biography, "The Earl of Elgin," by Prof. Wrong, contains several anecdotes of especial interest at this time, when "trade agreement" with the United States is being so generally discussed. "Once when the Earl of Elgin, then Governor-General of Canada, was entertaining some American visitors at a great banquet in Toronto, they prepared themselves for the dull platitudes of a noble lord, who, since he was an aristocrat, was supposed to owe his high post to anything but personal merit. But as the stately periods poured forth an amazed guest whispered, "He ought to be on our side of the line! We would make him mayor of our city." A little later he was constrained to say, "We'd make him Governor—Governor of the state," and a brilliant passage called forth the final exclamation, "By heaven, if he were on our side we'd make him President, nothing less than President!"

Medal for Patience.

Sir Henry Hawkins was once presiding over a long, tedious, and uninteresting trial, and was listening apparently with great attention to a very long-winded speech from a learned counsel. After a while he made a pencil memorandum, folded it, and sent it by the usher to the Queen's counsel in question, who, unfolding it found there words: "Patience competition. Gold medal, Sir Henry Hawkins. Honorable mention, Job."

Such Extravagance!

Imagine an editor having his office towel stolen from the clothes line. This is what happened to Bro. Neelands of The Hensall Observer. The only proper way to dry a printing office towel is to stand it up against the back fence. Any editor who can afford to own a clothes line ought to be robbed at every opportunity.—Zurich Herald.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"Here, let me get it out for you," said Taft, and while he did so, Balbi's eyes fell upon the bench itself.

"Taft!" he exclaimed suddenly, "who sit at work here?"

"A sour-tempered fellow called Raynor."

"What does he do?"

"Works in metal."

"Does he design?"

"A little at times."

"Did he do that?" pointing to some pencil marks on the woodwork of the bench.

"What is it? A circle round some figure. It's nothing."

"I tell you it is something, and something you should take heed of. It's the badge of a club or an association. They thieve, they rob, they kill, for themselves alone. They live for themselves. They do not recognize love, honor, loyalty, virtue, virtue—nothing. Once they have joined, their own fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers are nothing to them. They will rob or murder relatives just the same as they would anyone else. If you have one of them with you get rid of him or you will regret it."

"Balbi, my dear fellow, you seem threatened with the jumps."

"I was going to ask you to take charge of my papers and documents in your safe till I want them, but while you have one of these fellows on the premises I'd rather keep them myself."

"You mean that?"

"I do. And now I'm off. I shall probably come round and see you tomorrow." And the pair descended to the door. Taft was a moment or two in opening it—the latch rather stuck—and as he did so the scuffle of feet was heard and a figure disappeared round a neighboring corner.

"Did you see that?" whispered the Italian.

"Yes, some skulking blackguard! There are plenty about here."

"Then take a ward of advice—see to your doors and windows every night. Addio!"

CHAPTER XI.

In Memory of Wallace Vipan.

The following morning Balbi knocked at Lord Oxendale's door in Mount Street and inquired if the Signorina Spencer were within. On giving his name he was immediately shown up to Pauline's boudoir.

The little man was strangely excited. For the first time in his life he was about to meet an English lady, and more than that, the lady to whom his dearest friend had been betrothed; and the manner in which he had been at once admitted showed him his coming was looked for and that he was welcome. Small as this incident was, it went straight to his heart and intensified the feeling of attraction he already experienced towards this unknown lady.

He had not waited more than a minute or two when the door opened and Pauline entered! The first sight of her sad and pathetic beauty completed her conquest over the Italian's heart.

"Mr. Balbi—Signor Balbi, I suppose I should say!" she exclaimed with a sad smile, coming towards him with her hand extended in welcome, "I cannot tell you how glad I am to see you and make your acquaintance"

"The Signorina is very good," exclaimed the Italian, seizing her hands

"Not at all. It is you who have conferred a great favor upon me and at the same time given me a most pleasant surprise. For it is so long since I received your letter saying you were coming to England at once that I feared some misfortune had overtaken you."

"That was so, signorina. The day after writing you I was struck down with fever and for some weeks had a battle with death, and it was a long time before I was permitted to take the voyage."

"And are you quite strong and well again now?"

"Quite, thanks to the saints, and ready to embark upon that task I have undertaken."

"Ah, Mr. Balbi, in that lies a strong bond between us. But before we talk of it, tell me something of your companionship with him of whim we both have been so cruelly robbed."

"Signorina, it is hard for me to speak of him. He was more to me than a brother, the truest, firmest, most loyal friend a poor man ever had. He ventured his life for me, and Piero Balbi can never forget that And though it is now impossible to show him gratitude in life, vengeance remains, and his humble friend will demand—ay, and exact—it to the last fraction. This is the chief reason for my visit to England."

"Yes, yes, I know it. But tell me something of your travels together. Anything, everything concerning him is all of the greatest interest to me. And you were such close companions, you know more of those last few months of his active life than anyone."

"Si, signorina, indeed that is so." And for the next hour that fair English girl and the rough, true-hearted little Italian miner, seated side by side, conversed about the man who was so dear to both of them.

At length Pauline said,—

"And now, Mr. Balbi, that you have been so good in answering all my questions, it is not fair to trouble you any more to-day. It is now your turn now to question me, and be sure I will try and give you any information wihch lies in my power. First of all let me say to you that the second letter which you sent to Mr. Vipan at the time you sent him the half of the vichaya leaf he handed to me, and no one, now that Wallace is gone, knows of its contents, save myself. If you would like to have it back I will get it for you in a moment." And Pauline half rose.

"No, signorina, I ask that it should be in no safer custody than yours. Keep it if you will so far oblige me."

"Certainly, but there are two things connected with my dear one's murder which I shold like you to see. The police overlooked the one. The other no one but myself has seen. I will get them." And Pauline left the room.

"Corpo di Bacco!" muttered the Italian to himself. "My purpose is doubled now. Not only will the Signor's death be avenged but the Signorina's grief shall be paid for. Every tear she has shed, every pang she has suffered shall exact its price."

"Now, signore," said Pauline, returning, "this broken sleeve-link was found, half on the floor of his bedroom, the other half in the drawer containing his papers. Te me it reveals nothing—"

"To me it tells a very great deal!" exclaimed the Italian, excitedly, examining the scraps of white metal. "I can almost feel my fingers on the throat of the murderer of my friend. He has spun the rope that shall hang him. Look! Look! Arrant fool that he was to let his conceit sign his death warrant! Do you not see the sign?" pointing to a roughly-engraved circle enclosing a pentagon on each flat surface.

VOTER'S CONFUSION.

Was Hamlet a Tariff Reformer or a Free Trader.

Viscount Esher, who fears that the days of the voluntary principle of the Territorial force are numbered, and that in the army, as elsewhere, the time may come for compulsory service, is recognized as one of the most versatile of English peers. He speaks German with the fluency of a native, he has written several notable books, and he possesses a wonderful collection of Court swords from the days of Queen Elizabeth to the present day. He spends a great proportion of his time at Windsor, as he is Constable and Deputy-Governor of the Castle, and his official duties necessitate his living close by. Orchard Lea is full of interest. In the old garden stands the ivy-covered pump-room which George the Third used often to visit to drink from his own mineral spring, while there is also a rosary which was beautifully designed by Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll. Lord Esher was M.P. for Penrhyn and Falmouth from 1880 to 1885, and chairman of the War Office Reconstitution Committee in 1904. He is an accomplished and convincing speaker, and during election times has been in great demand by Parliamentary candidates. He had an amusing experience on one occasion while speaking for a young politician, fresh from college, in the south of England. The candidates' speech, perhaps, was more than judiciously besprinkled with quotations from "Hamlet." After a fine peroration containing huge chunks of the play, he announced that Lord Esher was prepared to answer questions. A man stood up: "I can't quite make it out," he remarked, "whether he is a Tariff Reformer or Free Trader." "Who?" asked Lord Esher. "The man this speech was about." Puzzled, he again asked what man he meant. "Hamlet," was the reply. Viscountess Esher was Miss Eleanor Van de Weyer, daughter of Mr. Van de Weyer, Belgian Minister at the Court of St. James, before her marriage in 1879.

Oratory In Australia.

It would appear from what Sir George Reid says about the taste of Australians in the matter of public speeches that they like pretty much the same kind of public speech as Canadians do. Sir George advised Lord Denman, who is going out to Australia as Governor-General, to give up the "cold, rigid, calculating style of speaking that obtains in the House of Lords," and impart more life, warmth, and enthusiasm into his addresses. Lord Denman regretfully replied that he feared he could not do it.

"Humor is the most important quality in a speaker who wishes to interest Australian audiences," said Sir George. "The people have an intense love of amusement, and will listen patiently to a speaker if they think he will show some humor before he quits.

"Pretty frequently the interruptions by members of the audience are extremely clever, and a speaker has to decide quickly whether he can find a better retort or pretend not to hear. I well remember an interruption which caused me much momentary perturbation. I was getting out of the humorous into a very sad vein of thought (it was towards the close of my public career in Australia), and I was referring to the time when I should be passed to that bourne whence no traveler returns, when a voice rang out from the audience: 'By Jove, George, the fat will be in the fire then!'—a subtle allusion to my good eighteen stones of avoirdupois. My only safety lay in joining heartily in the general laugh."

BOYHOOD AND ALCOHOL

There are some things too awful to contemplate—one is the giving of alcohol in the guise of medicine to boys.

SOLID PETROLEUM.

Movement on Foot to Convert Canadian Crude Oil.

Little attention has been directed to the recent discoveries of petroleum in New Brunswick.

In fact, the London, Eng., journals contain the first detailed accounts to reach us of what are apparently real wells of considerable importance.

It appears that in the Stoney Creek field in New Brunswick, there is a district were a number of wells have recently been brought in, each with a daily capacity of 50 barrels, while the total flow of gas from all the wells on that field is estimated at 40,000,000 cubic feet per day. Contracts have been entered into with the city of Moncton to supply power for the lighting of the city, for fuel gas, and for the proposed new tramway. The distance to Moncton is only ten miles. In Albert County the once extensive but now exhausted deposit of albertite, which looks like coal, but is really congealed oil, produced one of the first yields of kerosene. There are other important minerals in the district, but attention is now centred on the oil, which has been located after 40 years of boring. The gas accumulated is the first product procured, and after it is let off, for use or otherwise, the oil can come in to fill its place. There are seven wells pumped for oil in this area, the power of the pumping station being transmitted from well to well for over two miles.

In 1910 the total production of the Canadian fields amounted to only 107,533 barrels, compared with 573,639 barrels in 1909.

Within 24 hours, 60 new oil companies, each holding one section of oil lands in the Morinville field, applied for incorporation at the offices of the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies at Edmonton recently. This was the outcome of a strike of oil just previously made in the Morinville district, 22 miles north of Edmonton. There are already ten other companies holding claims in the district.

There is in England a propoganda, pushing a new method of converting petroleum into a solid for fuel purposes, from which great things are expected.

The process is cheap, and the blocks cast in convenient shape can be easily stored. It lasts longer than coal, furnishes a third more heat for the price, is non-explosive, and burns without smoke.

On board ship, boilers and fire places would not require to be changed. Less storage would be required, and stoking would be a simple affair.

Even for household purposes it would be made available, and would enable competition with the coal mines to be established.

It sounds favorable enough, but why not bring it right along? Plenty of householders would be glad to give a smokeless, cinderless and "asheless" fuel a chance in their furnaces.

A Contractor's Lament.

Mr. George Ham, publicity expert of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., recalled, in connection with the remarkable era of railway construction now in progress, particularly in Ontario, and the west, a lamentation made to him twenty-five years ago by a railway contractor. It was at the conclusion of the building of the C.P.R. to the coast, and this contractor wailed: "Well, I'll have to sell all my plant now. And who'll want to buy it? Nobody in this country. And if I ship it over to the States the duty will be more than I'll get for it But there's no use keeping it. There'll never be any more railway work in Canada. I'll sell the whole outfit for ten cents on the dollar."

A Duchess' Palace.

It was to the Duchess of Sutherland, the hostess of Stafford House, that Queen Victoria is reported to have said: "I have come from my house to see you in your palace." And Stafford House the magnificent is to be closely associated with the coronation festivities. On the night of the 23rd of June, that is to say the night after the coronation, the Duchess will give a ball to be attended by the German Crown Prince and Princess and all the royal and distinguished guests in London at the time. The ball is in honor of the debut of Lady Rosemary Leveson Gower, the only daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland.

AN EARLIER POET.

Nameless Toronto Bard Dealt in Homely Themes.

Toronto was not always devoid of a great poet. Evidence has recently come to light, which proves that some time presumably between 1860 and 1875, there lived in that city a poet of marked ability. A paper recently found in a Toronto archive of a size equal to this page contains no less than twenty poems of worth that should make latter-day muses sit up and take notice. There is no author's name attached to the poems, and he refers to himself continually as the "Great Orator of the West." Across the top of the page in large type are the words, "The Babyloniad." Continuing, the heading reads: "Being a counterpart to the Queen of the West, an epic poem on Toronto, by the Great Orator of the West, which was published under the patronage of the Deputy Governor-General, the Lord Bishop of Toronto, the Hon. the Chief Justice, the President and Head of the University, the Principals and all the Professors of Upper Canada and Queen's Colleges, the Resident Judges, Legislative Councillors, Members of Parliament, Attorneys, Solicitors-General for Canada East and West, all the members of the late and present Ministry, the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor of Western Canada, the Head Printer to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, all the public officers residing at Toronto, the Mayor and inhabitants thereof."

The orator was apparently at all times thorough, as the above is, to say the least, comprehensive in its limitations. One of his opening orations has to deal with a visit he was "forced" to take to Hamilton. One would almost suspect that something of the same feeling was cherished by Toronto for the Ambitious City in those good old days that is said to be still in vogue. Something of the Orator's style comes out in a poem, of which this is an extract:

There I put up at Davidson's Hotel,
They seeing, perhaps, that I was mild and free,
Charged two and sixpence for a cup of tea.
I am not stingy, let the truth be told,
And sixpence for a glass of whisky
 (cold),
Croesus, the fifth and last of Lydian
 kings,
I thought could scarcely bear such monstrous things.
Then "Davis" came next within my range;
I entered, paid some cash; they had
 "no change."

The Orator orates on the greatest variety of subjects. One long poem is dedicated to the merchants of Toronto, and one might almost think the Orator was of a bibulous temperament. An extract reads:

Now, sacred muse, arise and pour
Your light on Mr. Chettle's store.
He keeps a house of high renown
And the best liquor in the town.
Sweet muse, arise; entrance the passing gale,
And celebrate McKay superior ale.
Why need I praise him with a hasty pen?
For he supplies our bishop and the best of men!
The purest, clearest, strongest, and the best
To be found in any city of the West.

That a popular restaurant even of to-day was already known in the "Queen of the West," would appear from the following lines in the same poem:

A favor now I surely must confer
On Mr. McConkey, prime confectioner,
Fine oysters, fresh, and everything to eat,
Or salt, or sour, or mild, or sweet;
All things nice from field and flood,
All very cheap and very good.

The Orator goes on to address line after line of the same language to his shoemaker, his dry goods dealer, and his barber. To the latter he says:

A fine old boy, and he will be Very glad yourselves to see,
Thither all gentlemen repair
That he may shave and cut their hair.
Papers from all the country round,
And classic works can there be found.
Artisans and gentlemen together stop
To patronize his ornamental shaving shop.

He Was Lucky.

It isn't lucky to lose your money, but you are fortunate if you should happen to lose it on an Intercolonial Railway train, for then some chance will still remain of your recovering it. An Englishman who recently journeyed from Halifax to Montreal on the I.C.R. special, found when he arrived in Montreal that his pocket-book containing a sum over £20 sterling, was missing. This was not a pleasant prospect for a stranger on his way to carve out his fortune in the far west, and needless to say the traveler was very anxious. However, he reported the matter to the I.C.R. agent at Bonaventure station, who at once started to investigate. The pocket-book was quickly found, for it had been picked up in one of the cars by the sleeping-car conductor, who had it in safe keeping. Its prompt recovery greatly delighted the Englishman and gave him some cheerful impressions regarding the honesty of Canadian railway men.

Old and Rich, But Not Idle.

Mr. John R. Booth, the millionaire lumberman of Ottawa, started on his eighty-sixth year a few days ago. And he celebrated the event by going out for a hard day's work at an hour when most younger men were still in bed.

Friends who sought to congratulate him found him employed and attired like any of his workmen.

Mr. Booth was born at Waterloo, Que., on April 5, 1826. He went to Ottawa fifty years ago, and started out with a small shingle mill at the Chaudiere.

RAINBOW'S ACTIVITIES.

A Capture and a Presentation Up to the Present.

Canada's three-boat navy, although not large, is decidedly active. If the public could look behind the scenes or stand in the wings they would recognize that a navy is just a little more than it seems. The activities of this arm of the public service are much like those of a diplomatic corps, or the duties of a Governor-General. When the navy performs a piece of work it does not hunt up the first newspaper correspondent available and hand out a glowing account of it for the public press. The ethics of the British navy forbid such action, and the ethics of the Canadian navy will probably be an inheritance, not a creation. The little cruiser Canada has been active in many ways for several years, yet one hears little of the duties which she performs. Because of the size of the Niobe and Rainbow, and the larger part which they will play in the eye of the general public, probably more will be heard.

The first official exploit of the Rainbow since it arrived at Esquimault last fall occurred in February, when it captured the fishing schooner Edric from the United States. This schooner was found poaching within the three-mile limits of Cape Scott. It was overhauled by the Rainbow and ordered to heave to. A boat was lowered, official possession was taken, and the Edric was towed to Vancouver.

It is said that twenty-five hundred pounds of halibut, illegally taken, was found on board. However, the facts of the case are not yet proven, and more accurate information will be available when the trial occurs. This will happen shortly.

Another incident in connection with the Rainbow occurred on March 31, at Esquimault. The British Columbia Government had decided to present a set of plate to the boat, to commemorate the arrival of the first Canadian warship off the coast of that province. For some time British Columbia has been without the presence of a war vessel of any kind. Under the revised plans of the British navy the North Pacific squadron was recalled to England several years ago. It was, therefore, natural that the people of that province should be pleased to have a naval station near Victoria opened up once more. This pleasure seems to have been heightened by the fact that the new vessel bore the magic letters "H.M.C.S."

On March 13th the presentation of the plate took place in the presence of a large number of citizens from Victoria. The presentation was made by Lieutenant-Governor Patterson, and the ceremony was both picturesque and interesting.—Canadian Courier.

Canadian Winter Ports.

The two winter ports, Halifax and St. John, have begun the serious work of the season, fetching in loads of immigrants that manage to get in by a few thousands before the St. Lawrence breaks up. Already this year several thousands of immigrants have arrived at these ports. This is the first season for the two ships of the new Canadian Northern line to carry in immigrants to Halifax, which is their regular winter port, just as St. John is the winter port of the Canadian Pacific. Though not originally built for immigrant traffic these vessels have been adapted to the business, and carry third-class passengers much more comfortably than the average ocean liner with regular "steerage" accomodation. But of course the usual third-class passenger bound for Canada is not over particular as to niceties of accommodation provided he gets three square meals a day, a bunk at night, and plenty of fresh air. From all present indications the immigration this year will be considerably ahead of 1910. Halifax has good reason to be glad of being the terminus of a new line. There is no reason why both Halifax and St. John should not continue to become more rapidly than ever the great east gate to Canada; and it is the great hope of both provinces that future immigration of the right sort will be less likely to pass by the fertile fields along the Atlantic for further but not greener fields in the prairie provinces.

He Had Not Changed.

Sir James Whitney has always enjoyed a reputation for being a militant politician. In Opposition he thundered across the House like a bombardment of heavy guns, and even as leader of a strong Government he occasionally feels called upon to rush a position. The Premier of Ontario looks the part, and his gruff bearing and determined walk betoken a fighter. All this combined to cause an amusing little scrap of conversation which was overheard in the ladies' gallery during the last session.

The House was sitting, and two women, who apparently possessed political friends, had wandered in to look upon the scene. They passed a number of comments on the various well-known members who happened to be moving in and out or occupying seats in the House. At last Sir James entered, and one of them turned to the other with the remark, "Being in power does not calm the Premier. Why, I positively believe he looks more bellicose than ever."

"Oh, I don't know," replied her friend, "I do not think he is any stouter than he was last year."

A Misdeal.

A Halifax minister had just engaged the services of a new coachman. It was New Year's Day, and he was anxious to complete the rounds of his calls with despatch and return to the warm shelter of his home. He started in haste and forgot his calling cards. Sending the coachman back, he said, "I want you to get my cards off my desk. At every house where I tell you to stop, leave one card; and where I tell you leave two."

The rounds were about completed when the parson said: "Now, at this house leave one card, and at the next two."

"I can't do it, sir," said the coachman. "I only have the Jack of Diamonds and the Ace of Spades left."—Courier.

COOK'S SUCCESSORS.

His Lieutenants Were Early Explorers on West Coast.

Several of the officers who served under Captain Cook continued the exploration of the Pacific Coast after that great navigator laid down his quadrant, and in the early history of British Columbia are preserved the names of many of them, such as Vancouver, Broughton, Bligh, Burney, and Dixon. After Cook's voyages became known knowledge of the profit to be made in the fur trade of the North Pacific Coast spread rapidly, and a spirit of adventure and commerce was created. In 1786 four expeditions were organized in different parts of the globe, to engage in this new trade, without any knowledge of each other's designs. The pioneer in connection with this new enterprise was Captain James Hanna. His vessel of only seventy-two tons burden, with a crew of thirty men, was fitted out in China in 1784 by an English merchant. In August of the following year he arrived at Nootka, where Cook had been before him. In comparison with Cook's ships, Hanna's little vessel looked to the natives small and weak. Encouraged by appearances they attacked Hanna and his small crew, but they were speedily repulsed. Hanna then purchased a cargo of sea-otter skins which he disposed of in China at a profit of $26,000. He returned in the following year, but two British ships having arrived before him, he did not find trade so good as it was on his first visit. And so the trade grew, every season finding British ships on the Coast buying furs from the natives.

Among the many ship captains who contributed to the foundation of British Columbia's trade, one of the most remarkable was Captain John Meares of the Felice, a vessel of two hundred and thirty tons burden, a mere yacht in comparison with the vessels of today. Meares did a number of things worthy of note, and some of historical importance. One was to bring Chinese to the Pacific Coast. That was in 1788. The question of Oriental immigration is, therefore, more than one hundred years old.

The Felice had a companion ship, the Iphigenia, commanded by Captain Douglas, and the crews of both vessels comprised mechanics, Chinese smiths and carpenters, as well as European artisans. "The Chinese," writes Meares, "were shipped as an experiment; they have been generally esteemed a hardy and industrious as well as ingenious race of people. They live on rice and fish, and, requiring but low wages, it was a matter of economical consideration to employ them, and during the whole voyage there was every reason to be satisfied with their services." That voyage from China to Nootka occupied almost four months.

The natives in canoes came out to inspect Meares' ship in much the same manner as when Captain Cook was there. Two of their chiefs went on board, one of whom, wrote Meares in his rather quaint style, "had a fine open arrangement of features. The inferior people were very proper and personable men. A sealskin filled with oil was immediately handed on board, of which the chiefs took a small quantity, and they ordered it to be returned to the people in the canoes who soon emptied the vessel of this luxuriant liquor."

Meares promptly set his artisans, both Chinese and European, to work constructing a house to be used by those whom he would leave at Nootka, and to form a headquarters for his trading operations. The house was surrounded by a breastwork on which was mounted a small cannon.

The next undertaking was the building of a vessel!—the first built on our Pacific Coast—and christened the "North-West America." It was of forty tons burden, and in its constuction the Chinese carpenters were employed.

TOO SMART FOR AGENT.

George Lynch-Staunton Was Acquainted With All the Tricks.

By coincidence, or design, George Lynch-Staunton, K. C., who is prosecuting attorney in the present Assize Court in which the Farmers Bank cases were to be tried, occupied a similar position when Charles McGill of the Ontario Bank was up. Mr. Staunton has been in the public eye a good deal, and is fair game for the book canvasser, who is, however, liable to disappointment. Mr. Staunton tells with some enjoyment of a man who once called upon him for a short sketch of his life, saying he wanted to use it in a book which was to give a short account of the prominent men in this country. Mr. Staunton listened to his visitor for some time, when he asked the scribe if he would give him a written agreement that he would not want to collect an account for having his life's history written up, and being answered in the affirmative, Mr. Staunton went further, and asked him if he would also put in writing that after this book was published he would not send an agent around to sell him one of them. This was too much for the man of the pencil, and he replied in an assumed haughty manner: "Very well, Mr. Staunton, if you treat the subject with so much levity, I will take my departure." Mr. Staunton has never seen that promised book of notables. Mr. Staunton is a native of Southampton, County Bruce, where he was born in 1858. He went to school in Southampton, in St. Mary's College, Montreal, and at Upper Canada College, where he graduated head of the class and won the gold medal. He was called to the Bar in 1882. His pet case, or the one in which he claims he took the greatest interest, is referred to by him as the "scrap iron case," which arose out of the assessment of the Bell Telephone Co.'s equipment on the streets, and which he carried to the Court of Appeal and won. Mr. Staunton has been three times elected as Bencher in the Law Society, and if he receives that honor at the next session he will hold the position for life, an honor that falls to the lot of few men.

As prosecuting attorney Mr. Staunton plays no favorites, and when he gets a witness in the box he forgets the individuality of the man.

ROYAL SALUTES.

The Much-Esteemed Greetings Given to Royalty.

Of the various salutations that pass between sovereign and people, the most popular is undoubtedly the handshake. It is pleasant to have felt the grip of a king—an experience to remember and make much of.

A North country miner, whom the King had decorated and shaken hands with for some deed of heroism, was welcomed on returning home by a crowd of friends. They were surprised, however, when he persistently ignored their hands, proffered in congratulation, and kept his own at the bottom of his trouser-pocket.

"How's this, mate?" said a friend. "Hast turned proud?"

The miner cautiously drew his right hand from his pocket, regarded it a moment in admiration, and then returned it decisively to the depths it came from.

"Na, na, lads!" he exclaimed, with a sly twinkle in his eye. "Ye canna expect it; I've shaken hands with the King!"

The value of the "big man's handshake" is thoroughly understood in America. A political "captain" will stand for hours shaking hands with the endless file of his supporters. The President himself is not exempt. On the occasion of the Inauguration Ball at Washington, Mr. Taft went through the ceremony, it was calculated, just 4,500 times.

To those unversed in court etiquette, another form of salutation, that of kissing the royal hand, sometimes proves a veritable trap. The poet Longfellow, describing his presentation to Queen Victoria, tells how he unwittingly grasped the hand which the Queen held out to him. He noticed a look of surprise on her face, but did not realize till afterwards that Her Majesty intended her hand to be kissed.

This rather formal mode of salutation, though it enters into many court ceremonies, is not carried to such an extreme in England as at Madrid, one of the most conservative courts in Europe. When the second of the young Spanish princes was born, the little Prince of the Asturias was just twelve months old. But already he seems to have been instructed in court etiquette, for on his baby brother being shown to him, he immediately held out his hand for the infant to kiss!

When king meets king, the usual greeting is a kiss on both cheeks. The two monarchs embrace by lightly holding each others shoulders, and saluting first on one cheek and then immediately afterwards the other.

The raising of the hat and bowing, which are the only forms of salutation that the ordinary mortal can expect to receive from royalty, are most fatiguing operations, if long continued.

Queen Victoria never spared herself in this respect. Even in the Diamond Jubilee procession, when seventy-eight years of age, she bowed almost continuously for by far the greater part of the route.

That the youngest members of the royal family are brought up in the same tradition is shown by an incident which occurred later on that very day. At the moment when the crowd round Buckingham Palace was thickest, the two eldest children of the present King appeared at the open nursery window. Prince Eddy, the elder, who was three years old within a day, in response to the cheers of the spectators, gravely raised his hand to his forehead and saluted.

This action wrought the enthusiasm of the crowd to a high pitch, and the acclamations were so long continued that the little prince concluded that something more was expected of him. Straightening himself, therefore, he again saluted, but this time with both hands at once!

A Bishop in a Donkey Cart.

It was some years ago, when he was Suffragen Bishop of West and Northwest London, that the Bishop of Marlborough was one day seen riding in a costermonger's barrow through a London district. He was due to hold a confirmation, but on arriving at the railway station he found that no conveyance to the church could be obtained. To walk the distance was impossible. The perplexed bishop was about to abandon the appointment, when the humble costermonger's cart appeared. With sudden decision the matter was arranged, the bishop scrambled on to the cart, the costermonger whipped up his donkey, and the episcopal chariot rattled through the High street to its destination.

Campbellton's Recovery.

Campbellton, N.B., the town which was nearly wiped off the map by fire, is rapidly growing up again. Building operations on a very large scale are being undertaken, and as the new fire laws prohibit the erection of frame buildings in the centre of the town, the terrible conflagration of several months ago is not likely to be repeated. Among improvements planned is the construction of a modern electric power plant to replace the present temporary structure.

GOWN FOR MUSICALE.

The New Modish Stripe For Gowns of Every Type.

GOWN FOR MUSICALE.

The girl who sings and whose means are limited is often compelled to make the same gown do for both her afternoon and evening engagements. To find a gown that will be both simple enough for the one use, yet dressy enough for the other, is not so easy as it may seem. The gown pictured here combines these qualities. It shows the new striped effect, here achieved by bands of satin on the bodice and tunic. Ball fringe edges the tunic, which falls over a band of the fashionable venise lace. A striking appearance is given to the costume by means of the use of horizontal stripes in the side panels.

Black and white stripes will naturally have first place in the early season's gowns, because we are under the seductive thrall of this combination. Several of the important dressmakers have already turned out gowns of black and white striped satin draped with black chiffon cloth or marquisette, with a touch of handsome heavy lace on the shoulders.

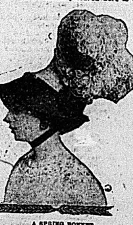
With these gowns go turbans or large hats of black net, with white aigrets and green scarfs or Alsatian bows of black and white striped ribbon.

The whole idea is a good one for spring, for attractive as black is its universal usage the past winter rather depressed one. If it had not been for the freedom of wearing vivid colors as a contrast we would have been a somber assemblage indeed.

MY LADY'S BONNET.

Recalls the Headgear of Her Great-grandmother.

Man has never been able to disassociate woman's millinery from the name of bonnet, and now he may literally speak of his wife, sister or daughter's bonnet since the most modish things in the shops are the coquettish little affairs that tie under the neck with ribbons. The bonnet pictured here is an almost exact copy of the headgear of the French directoire period and recalls the old fashioned poke bonnet.



A SPRING BONNET.

Bonnets are far more becoming to young girls than older women, for whom, presumably, they are intended, and some of the quaint bonnet effects of this season make charming frames for girlish faces. On young girls these captivating bonnets are babyish and picturesque, and the fresh, pretty face is all the more lovely because of the quaint bonnet that surrounds it.

Cerise and the American Beauty shades play a prominent part in the present millinery bouquet. Every year artificial flowers grow more like their natural prototypes until there seems nothing more for the artist to accomplish.

HANDMADE BLOUSES.

They Are Lace Trimmed and Deftly Embroidered.

IMPORTED BLOUSES.

Handmade decorations are a feature of many of the new imported blouses. Those pictured here represent the latest and most artistic efforts of a great Parisian modiste. One of the blouses is of linen in drawn thread work, the entire surface of the blouse having the threads drawn. It is heavily braided both on revers and cuffs. The vest and collar are of embroidered lawn.

The other blouse, which is for dinner or theater wear, is of blue and black printed material. It is adorned with circular braided ornaments appliqued upon the fabric. The neck and elbow sleeves are finished with point d'esprit.

Waists intended for wear with the tailor made are elegant in their simplicity. They are made of the flimsiest gauzes and so deftly embroidered that they resemble more a fine work of art than merely a blouse to be crushed and hidden by the coat.

One of the fads of the moment is to wear the transparent blouse over a handsome Irish crochet blouse, but when this idea is successfully carried out the sheerest of marquisette or chiffon must be used in the overwaist. The real chic of the tout ensemble is the effect of the heavy lace through the fine mesh of the top waist.

Puritan simplicity and Puritan styles are very fashionable at this hour. Simple lines are invariably becoming. The slim figure is given a graceful line and the stout one is improved.

LOUISA ALCOTT MEMORIAL.

The Concord Woman's Club Heads the Movement.

Orchard House, formerly the home of Louisa M. Alcott, stands today unoccupied and in bad condition.

The Concord Woman's club, through the interest and generosity of one of its members, has been given an opportunity to purchase this house at a reasonable figure for the purpose of opening it to visitors and maintaining it as a permanent memorial to Miss Alcott.

In this house "Little Women" was written, and little paintings and sketches by Amy may still be seen upon the woodwork in some of the rooms. The house is almost unchanged in its general features, but now so desolate it is a pathetic sight to every one who has loved Louisa Alcott's stories and the characters she created.

Miss Alcott's stories and characters have given pleasure and had a great and wholesome influence on almost every girl who has lived in the last forty years, and it is believed that many people the country over will be interested to contribute toward the preservation of this Alcott home. The house and sufficient land about it can be bought and put in order for $8,000.

If this sum can be raised the house will be repaired and placed in the charge of a permanent organization, which will maintain it as an Alcott memorial. The Concord Woman's club appeals to all lovers of Miss Alcott to help by contributions, large or small. Contributions may be sent to Henry F. Smith, Jr., Middlesex Institution For Savings, Concord, Mass.

Handsome Hand Bags.

Hand bags—we used to call them reticules—grow in size and beauty, and the embroidery on some of them is lovely. Very beautiful are the bead ones worked in a frame in a sort of weaving design, which makes them extra strong. The fashion for these has developed a new industry for women, whose delicate fingers make it a very appropriate work. Japanese embroideries, old brocades and other stuffs are all pressed into the service, and every woman wants many to go with her different dresses and suited to the several requirements of her life. Shopping, visiting and theater bags all have their uses. Some are studded with jade.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of

Good Form

Servants' References.

The utmost formality should be observed when writing references for servants. The employers are judged by the writing quite as much as the woman who is the subject of the communication.

As a servant's written reference is likely to go into the hands of persons who are total strangers to the writer, it is best to employ the third person in the note. The communication should always begin with the name of the former employer.

Care should be taken to put into the reference the reason of a maid's leaving, for it is the first question asked of the woman when she is seeking a new place. Another important point in the communication is that the servant's honesty should be vouched for if the former employer believes in it. It is also wise to include in the written character the fact that the woman is a good worker if she has so proved herself.

For her own protection a person writing a reference should date it not only with the month, but with the year. Otherwise if the woman's character should change as time passes the person who vouched for her formerly will find herself indorsing an individual as she would not do later perhaps. Such a communication should always be written in ink.

Lady and Gentleman.

There are some persons who seem to imagine it impolite to allude to a woman as a woman and are bent on calling her a lady, while others allude to a man as a gentleman. It is always more correct to say "a nice girl" where the word girl is admissible (and nowadays an unmarried woman of forty may pose as a girl provided she looks like one) or where it is not to allude to a woman as a pleasant or a charming or an attractive woman.

You talk of a sweet or a delightful woman, not of a sweet or a delightful "lady," but in the case of an elderly dame you occasionally say "a dear old lady" and "such a kind old lady," "lady" being used as a mark of reverence for age. But, however old a man may be, he is always a man, never a "gentleman," in conversational language. "A clever man" or "a charming man" is often alluded to, but never "a clever gentleman" and "a charming gentleman."

At a Luncheon.

Six or eight persons make a good number for an informal luncheon.

In the arrangement of luncheons as well as dinners there is a decided tendency to simplicity of effect. Not only is the menu shorter than in former years, but the dishes are lighter and not so rich, the equipment of silver, glass and china not so elaborate and the display of flowers more simple.

At a luncheon guests remove wraps in a dressing room on arrival, but hats are kept on. Gloves are removed when taking one's seat at table.

The hostess may lead the way in going in to luncheon, walking beside a guest, or she may ask her friends to precede her. At an informal party the hostess tells the guests where to sit instead of having name cards.

Guests are not expected to remain more than half an hour after a luncheon.

A Man's Devotion.

Womanly dignity will always receive respect. Yet how many wives are there who do not demand respect of their husbands. They ask for admiration, devotion, yet know that a man's nature will not cling, will not be constant, when be cannot look up to the woman he loves.

The mother who permits rudeness from her sons, the wife who permits it from her husband, the sweetheart who does not resent it in her lover, will all find themselves some day wondering why they are not treated with deference and consideration, and the real reason will be that they have permitted in themselves some lack of manners or of morals which has lowered them in the eyes of the men they love.

Using Christian Names.

A vulgar habit is prevalent among young girls, that of too freely using the Christian names of their young male acquaintances. Girls when grown up do not use the Christian names or nicknames of young men unless they have some special reason for so doing.

An intimacy of years may be an excuse for retaining the use of the Christian name, for when Angelina in a pigtail has played hide and seek or blind man's buff with Edwin in knickerbockers it is difficult to become suddenly ceremonious. But acquaintances of a few months' standing—unless a love affair has changed the position of the parties toward each other—is no excuse for excessive familiarity.

Telephone Etiquette.

Correct though it is to employ a telephone for social purposes, there have been established certain rules in regard to it, and to offend against them is to show ignorance of etiquette.

It is not good form to reply to a written invitation with a telephone message, both because the manner of invitations should always be duplicated and also that it is by no means certain that a hostess will receive a verbal message if it is sent through a maid.

A Japanese Fable.

One day the monkey saw the ant climbing up a tall tree and thought that he would amuse himself at his expense.

"Look here, Mr. Ant," said he, "how quickly you are ascending the tree! Won't you have a race with me to the top of the tree? I am certain that you can beat me."

"All right," replied the ant, and both started to run up the tree from the bottom. In a minute the monkey had reached the middle branch of the tree, while the little ant had scarcely traveled an inch.

The monkey looked down haughtily upon the ant and then began to perform his favorite acrobatic feats upon one of the outstretching branches. Suddenly the wood snapped under his weight, and he fell to the ground. He was so badly hurt that it took some time before he could pick himself up. In the meantime the ant had reached the top of the tree and won the race.

The Waltzing Egg.

Place a plate on the table so that it is near enough to the edge to be easily taken in hand. Then place the egg in the middle and with the help of the thumb and the index finger of the right hand, placed respectively at either end, give the egg a lively rotary movement. It will soon stand upright on its points and turn. Now seize the plate and all you have to do to make the egg waltz is to move your hand in a waltzing motion. The egg should be a hard boiled one and should while boiling be kept in a perpendicular position in the saucepan. Try it and see the egg spin around the plate.—Magical Experiments.

The Engineer Mouse.

Several years ago workmen were digging holes for some telegraph poles in New York, and into one of them a poor little mouse fell. The tiny prisoner at first raced around the hole frantically; then be seemed to set his wits to work. The hole was several feet deep, but he began to dig a spiral groove around it from the bottom, working night and day. When he got tired he built little landings to his staircase where he could rest. The workmen had become interested in him and gave him food, and when on the third day mousie reached the top all the men cheered him.

An Elephant Rope Walker.

The elephant was trained in the olden time to perform many feats. Mention is made of one that walked the tight rope, and not only near the ground. If we may believe what the old writers say it also walked a rope stretched above the heads of the spectators and carried a man on his back.

The Friendly Sunbeam.

There's a certain little sunbeam who is very fond of me,
And every single morning, bright and early as can be (Because he knows my nursery is on the shady side),
He leaves his brothers frolicking o'er dewy meadows wide,
And he climbs into a window at the east end of our hall,
And he creeps across the carpet, and he feels along the wall,
And he slips between some curtains and through an open door,
And he makes a golden bee line across my bedroom floor
Until, without a tiny sound to tell he's near the place,
He has jumped upon my pillow and is shining in my face!
Then up I start and out of bed, for who would wish to stay
When such a friend has come so far to call one out to play?

QUEBEC HAS BIG FIRE

Ancient Capital Suffers Loss of a Quarter Million.

Conflagration Begins In a Roller Rink and Lasts From Noon Saturday Until Sunday Morning, On One Occasion Threatening Business Centre of City With Destruction—Factories Burned.

Quebec, May 29.—It was nine o'clock Sunday morning when the "All out" was sounded for a fire which broke out in St. Roch shortly after noon Saturday, and which for a time threatened a large section of that portion of the city and looked possible to develop into a general conflagration. About a quarter of a million of damage was wrought by the fire, among the buildings destroyed being a couple of large and a number of smaller factories.

The fire was one of the fiercest which the local fire-fighters have been called upon to face for a long time. breaking out in a roller rink on Notre Dame des Agnes street, the blaze worked itself into the Carelbe carriage factory on Dorchester street, just around the corner. Here the full force of the fire raged, the flames being fierce and the whole building speedily becoming a mass of flame.

The firemen of No. 3 and 5 stations almost opposite the roller rink, had just returned from a run to a chimney fire in their section, and were cleaning up their wagons, when the new fire was discovered. Captain Louis Talbot at once sounded a double alarm and the firemen were quickly on the spot. There was, however, some trouble with the water pressure, and for a time the firemen could not get sufficient force to cope with the flames.

A general alarm was then sent in and the whole brigade assembled. The proposition which confronted them was a serious one. The fire had gained such headway and was raging so fiercely that it looked as if another disastrous conflagration was in sight. The firemen did everything possible to confine the flames to the building in which the blaze had declared itself, but this was impossible, and the fire leaped across the street and caught the Dominion Corset Co., through which the fire swept with a force that could not be stopped.

At this juncture, it looked as if the whole section of the city was fated to burn.

A desperate attempt was made to save the great corset and box factory of the Dominion Company, but it was too late and the flames swept through the upper storeys and wrecked the whole interior of the building.

The firemen, however, managed to check the fire here and prevented the flames from spreading further.

Eight families were burned out, in addition to the two factories and the roller rink.

Among the houses burned was one occupied by the chief of the fire brigade, Fitzback, who is now seriously ill, and whose house was totally destroyed. He had to be carried out of his house on a stretcher.

There were many exciting scenes during the progress of the fire, there being a hurried shift among the residents in the immediate vicinity, and whose houses seemed at one time doomed to destruction.

FRENCH AT FEZ.

Gen. Moinier Completes Easiest Stage of the March.

Paris, May 29.—(N. Y. Tribune Cable.)—The first and easiest portion of the French task in Morocco is accomplished by the arrival at Fez of Gen. Moinier. The Government is fully alive to the absolute necessity of completing in a thorough and permanent manner the triple work of establishing in Morocco the military supremacy of the Sultan, the integrity of his territory and the open door for the commerce of all nations.

The measures decided on to accomplish these three results are to give carte blanche to Col. Mangin, the French instructer of the Sultan's army with the aid of a corps of French officers and to maintain in security two military and trade routes of communication with Fez, one between Fez and the Atlantic and the other between Fez and Algeria, via Taza. Three efficient Moroccan armies, under French officer instructors, are to be centered at Fez, at Taza and at Meknes for the first time in history to really govern his country and keep it in order.

The French Government is determined not to withdraw its present armies of occupation until this is accomplished.

Springhill Strike Ends.

Halifax, May 28.—The long and bitterly fought strike at the Springhill coal mines was ended Saturday afternoon when the men adopted the report of the system committee. The points of the agreement under which the strike is brought to an end, as adopted at the meeting of the miners in Springhill Saturday, are as follows:

1. The men to be taken back as soon as places can be found for them, the company saying it hopes to find employment in 45 days for a majority of the men.

2. The schedule for mechanics is to remain with no reductions of the rates before the strike.

3. The Longley Board's fine, that is the docking system, is to govern.

4. Coal cutters are to get ten per cent. less than the rate paid before the strike, fair consideration to be allowed to enable a man to earn an average wage where changing conditions in coal make that necessary.

Trial In September.

Los Angeles, May 29.—Motion of attorneys for J. J. McNamara and his brother, J.B. McNamara, charged with murder by the use of dynamite for a continuance of the time to enter pleas to the charges from June 1 to July 5, was granted Saturday.

The defence declared there was no possibility of a trial before September.

CONEY ISLAND BURNED.

Dreamland Park Is Wiped Out—Lion Got Loose.

New York, May 29.—Coney Island, the playground of New York, suffered the worst fire disaster of its history early yesterday. Dreamland, the largest of the amusement parks, was wiped out, and four blocks adjoining, covered with booths, restaurants, hotels, moving picture theatres and resorts of various types, were destroyed.

The fire broke out at 2 o'clock in the morning and was not under control until three hours and a half later. The loss will amount to between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

In all about two hundred buildings were burned down and perhaps two thousand persons—concessionists and employes—were turned into the streets homeless and penniless. No lives were lost.

Close to the spot where the fire started, was the Bostock animal show and nearer yet the infant incubator, a charity nursery, in which were six wee infants and their attendants. The children were taken out in their little glass houses and rushed out of danger by the police. Then came the work of taking out the animals, a costly collection, including several dangerous man-eaters. The trainers lost no time. While policemen with drawn revolvers stood at the entrance, to guard the crowd in the streets against any beasts that might escape, the attendants drove their charges from the cages, down the runways into the emergency vans, which are always ready.

All went well until the transfer was nearly concluded. Then the biggest of the lions, in a panic, broke from his bonds, smashed his way through the barriers and leaped into the street, already packed by a throng of spectators. He dived straight into the middle of the throng. Consternation seized the multitude and the crowd pushed pell-mell in all directions, in panic.

A mounted policeman came at the crouching beast in the centre of the wide avenue, with drawn revolver. Twice he shot and twice missed, the lion backing away from the glare and noise of the explosions. Then six more mounted policemen lined up in front of the crowd and opened a fusilade.

As soon as the crowd was assured that the lion was no more, they rushed in and literally tore the carcase to bits for souvenirs. The first man on the scene took the tasseled tail, the next three divided the long mane, and 50 men fought among themselves for the honor of possessing one of his teeth.

WAYLAID TRAIN.

Insurrectos Made a Futile Attack on Ex-President Diaz.

Vera Cruz, May 29.—While escorting ex-President Diaz from the Mexican capital to Vera Cruz on Friday the federal troops engaged a large force of rebels.

The troops were successful in beating off the insurrectos, who retreated, leaving behind thirty dead. General Diaz left the train and gave orders to his soldiers during the battle.

General Diaz and his party, consisting of Madame Diaz, Col. Porfirio Diaz and the latter's family, left Mexico City on a special train, composed of three sections.

The first section carried the Eleventh Regiment of Infantry. The Presidential party was in the second section, which was followed closely by the third, also carrying troops.

When approaching Tepeyahualo they encountered a body of some 700 rebels. The leading section of the train pulled up and the federal troops dismounted. After a sharp engagement the federals succeeded in defeating the insurgents, who retired, leaving on the field thirty dead, their standards and a box containing 1,000 pesos.

The federal troops, which were 300 strong, registered three men wounded, one probably fatally.

General Diaz and his son, Col. Porfirio Diaz, on arriving at the scene of the engagement, descended from their car and took part in the fray. The ex-President experienced some difficulty in preventing his troops from pursuing the revolutionists.

The general was received here with the greatest respect. He plans to leave Vera Cruz for Europe on May 31. No definite arrangements have been decided on as yet regarding his future course of action.

Charged With Murder.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., May 29.—William Molyneaux, Milltown Crossing, was arrested Saturday by Officer McCarron, charged with the murder of his wife, nee Ada Jenkins, formerly of Charlottetown. Since the inquest the coroner had the eight-year-old son of the deceased examined, and it is understood that the boy gave very important evidence regarding sounds he heard the time his father came out of the pantry and left the house, and other statements which at this stage cannot be made public. The lad was excited at first, but eventually calmed down and told his story. The prisoner was put in jail at Georgetown to await trial.

It will be remembered that Mrs. Molyneaux was found hanging to the pantry door with evidence of suicide, but detectives afterwards discovered marks on her neck which led to an investigation and to the arrest of the husband.

Destroyed by Fire.

Cornwall, May 29.—While most of the family were in church yesterday morning the new residence of Alex. Gadbois, jr., Glen Water, was destroyed by fire along with most of the contents. Mr. Gadbois lighted a fire in the summer kitchen and a spark set fire to the roof of the main building. The neighbors gathered, but the fire spread so rapidly that little could be saved. It is understood that the building was insured for $6,000. Mr. Gadbois was burned out a dozen years or so ago.

Snow In Month of May.

Winnipeg, May 29.—There was a heavy fall of wet snow all over the Regina district Saturday morning; six inches fell in many places.

ELECTION IN PORTUGAL

First Republican Polling Goes Off Very Quietly.

No Disorder Accompanies the Appeal to the People of the New Government—Monarchists Put Forward No Candidates, But Circulated Rumors of a Revolution—Opposition Is Independent and Socialist.

Lisbon, May 29.—Perfect order prevailed yesterday at the elections for the constituent assembly, which were held throughout the country. In thirty out of fifty-one constituencies, the seats were disputed by candidates of the directory of the Republican party, the Independent Republican and the Socialist parties. In the other constituencies the regular Republicans were unopposed.

The Monarchists refrained from putting forward candidates, declaring that the elections presented no guarantees of liberty or sincerity. Instead they circulated all sorts of rumors of a counter revolution, an armed invasion by way of the Galician frontier and similar attempts against the Government.

The authorities took extraordinary precautions, not only to preserve order, but to anticipate any revolutionary movement. Almost the entire fleet was concentrated in the north, but the intervention of armed force has not been necessary up to the present in any part of the republic.

The polling throughout was very heavy and the first results indicate a majority of 231 deputies will be regular Republicans.

A few Independents and Socialists are likely to win their elections, but the general opinion is that, while the Government may have to meet certain divergencies of opinion in the assembly, there will be nothing like systematic opposition.

In Lisbon, police patrolled the streets all night, but there were no disturbances. The balloting continued throughout the day and will continue to-day. The regulars carried the day in this city. One woman, Dr. Beatrix Angelo, recorded her vote, amid thunders of applause.

At Oporto all was peaceful, the Republicans keeping close watch on the Socialists.

It is announced that the discussions of the constituent assembly will be confided, first to a law defining the political powers of the republic; second, to organic laws relating to each of these powers, including an electoral law; third, to acts of dictatorship on the part of the Provisional Government, and fourth, to the budget.

Several of the civil governors have made representations, urging the necessity of modification of the law, and it is understood that a special bill will be introduced with this object.

TO BEAT RECIPROCITY.

Enemies of Bill In U. S. Will Use the Democrats.

Washington, May 29.—The plot to defeat reciprocity developed another phase Saturday. The Democrats are to be used to encompass the downfall of the bill.

A plan is being framed by the opponents of the measure to co-operate with those Democrats who are insisting upon the farmer's free list being attached to reciprocity as a rider.

There is a group of Democrats who believe that they will get into trouble with their constituents if they vote against the farmers' free list when it is offered as an amendment to the reciprocity agreement. These votes are needed to insure the success of the pact.

On the other hand, there is a group of Republicans who will not vote for reciprocity if the farmers' free list is attached to it. These votes also are needed to insure the success of the bill.

The plan of the opposition is to co-operate with the Democrats in having the free list made a part of reciprocity and then leave it to the protectionist Republicans to defeat the bill on the final passage.

The only way out is for the Democrats, who want to attack the free list, to realize that reciprocity can be passed with a measure of tariff reform, if they will consent to consider it apart from the farmers' list; whereas, both reciprocity and the free list will be defeated at this session if they fail in the plot that is being arranged by the enemies of the pact. It is the choice that is offered of half a loaf or no bread at all.

In the meantime, the Root amendment, which will enable the paper trust to keep up the price of paper, a direct tax upon everyone who reads newspapers, magazines, book or handbill, is making progress.

War Clouds In East.

Cettinje, Montenegro, May 29.—It is reported that Turkey has made an unsatisfactory reply to the Russian note warning Turkey that the concentration of Turkish troops along the Montenegrin frontier, since the Albanian outbreak, constitutes a serious menace to peace.

This reply is said to be in effect that there is no intention on the part of Turkey to attack Montenegro, provided that country abstains from assisting the Albanian insurgents, closes her frontiers to refugees and removes the refugees who already have crossed the frontiers to the interior of Montenegro.

Died on Train.

Montreal, May 29.—When the Intercolonial train pulled into Montreal yesterday it brought the body of a young man named Chapman, who had died on the train shortly after leaving Quebec. Chapman had been employed on the Intercolonial at Moncton, N.B., and six months ago suffered a fall which resulted in injuries to his brain. After a long illness it was decided to send him to the Royal Victoria Hospital here to undergo an operation. He had almost reached its goal when he suffered a relapse and passed away.

PARIS TO TURIN RACE

Twelve Competitors in Great Aeroplane Contest Start.

Roland Garros, Who Was the Runner-Up In the Paris-Madrid Event, Gets Away First and Completes Initial Stage of His Journey—Vedrine and Eight Others Start To-day or To-morrow—Prizes Amount to $100,000

Paris, May 29.—Profiting by the lessons of last week's catastrophe, when, at the start of the Paris to Madrid race, M. Berteaux, the Minister of War, was killed and Premier Monis badly wounded, the organizers of the second great air contest, from Paris to Turin, sent the competitors away with record speed and precision yesterday.

Not the slightest mishap marred the occasion. The new Minister of War, Gen. Coirrion, Antone Monis, son of the Premier, who was slightly injured in the accident of a week ago; the Italian ambassador, Signor Tittoni, and several high officials, were allowed on the field, but were kept well behind the starting line. A large assemblage of people were kept out of the danger zone by imposing lines of troops.

The weather was perfect. Twelve out of 21 competitors were on the start when the signal bomb was fired at six o'clock in the morning. The machines were sent off in rapid succession, ten leaving within a few minutes, and the entire number being away by seven o'clock. The remaining nine entrants, including Pierre Vedrine, the Frenchman who won the Paris to Madrid race, will start to-day or to-morrow. Vedrine is now on his way back to Paris, leaving Madrid for this city last night.

The first to cross the line yesterday was Roland Garros, who, after making many plucky efforts to finish in the Paris to Madrid flight, was forced by a series of mishaps to abandon the race. Garros drove a monoplane. He was followed by Andre Beaumont, who rapidly overtook Garros and arrived first at Dijon, the initial recording station of the long journey.

The two next followed in the same order, reporting at Lyons and finally landing at Avignon. They covered the 401 miles from the aerodrome at Buc, a short distance outside the French capital, to Avignon in 12 hours and 45 minutes, and 13 hours and 35 minutes respectively, and decided to spend the night there. They will finish the remaining 220 kilometres of the first stage of the flight to Nice this morning, a total distance of 865 kilometres, or 538 miles.

The other competitors early in the journey were the victims of mishaps, but nothing more serious than "the breaking of wood," and only two of them, Henri Molla, representing France, and the German aviator Frey, had got as far as Dijon up to seven o'clock in the evening.

The race was organized by The Paris Petit Parisien, and the prizes aggregate more than $100,000. The second stage of the journey is from Nice to Rome, the recording stations being Genoa and Pisa, and the third stage is from Rome to Turin, the official stopping places being Florence and Bologna. The total distance is a little more than 1,300 miles, and the competitors have until June 15 to accomplish the distance.

Fisher at Farnham.

Farnham, Que., May 29.—The first of the Liberal rallies to be held in this province during the recess of Parliament took place here yesterday. A large audience heard speeches delivered by Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and Messrs. Demers, Meigs and Allen, M.P.'s. The audience was more interested than enthusiastic, but Mr. Fisher gradually woke it up in a forceful presentation of the reciprocity issue. Mr. Fisher prefaced his remarks by referring to the talk of a general election in the near future, and explained that it lay in the power of the Opposition to prevent a vote being taken on the reciprocity question, as the Government required money to carry on the business of the country, and by useless debate the Opposition could prevent it being granted.

Thrown Into Carriage Gear.

Woodstock, May 29.—Robert Danby of Muir received painful injuries while driving in the city yesterday morning. The king bolt of his buggy broke and he was thrown into the carriage gear, and when the horse took fright and ran away, he was dragged a considerable distance. GARDEN SHRUBS.

They Should Be Arranged For Artistic Effect.

Never plant shrubs or flowers or anything else in the center of the lawn. It dwarfs the place and spoils all artistic effect.

Where the house foundation meets the lawn is a harsh line. Plant shrubs around the house close to the foundation to hide it. The view under the front porch is not pleasing, so plant something to hide that. The weekly wash and other things occasionally seen in the back yard are not beautiful, so plant a screen of tall shrubs from the back of the house to the fence on either side. The division fences are not handsome, so shrubs may be planted to hide them, at least partly. Square corners are not pleasing, so plant shrubs in the corners to round them off.

If there is anything unsightly about which can be hidden by plantations of shrubbery plant it out. Use shrubbery for all these purposes, because, while flower plants are dead seven months in the year, shrubbery partly conceals and has pleasing forms even in winter.

Do not make a circle in the lawn around every shrub you plant. Plant the shrubs in borders and plant them fairly thick, since if you get them too far apart they will suffer from drought and winter winds.

The Editors Fought.

Charleville, Queensland, has been inaugurating its new gymnasium in a decidedly novel fashion—a boxing contest between the editors of the local Liberal Times and Labor Guardian. There was a crowded attendance, and much bitter partisanship was displayed. Both men "fought fiercely," and there was a great deal of clinching and wild hitting. The contest ended in the triumph of the Liberal editor, his Labor opponent at the end of the final round "hanging over the ropes in a dazed condition."

SONS OF ENGLAND HAD A CHURCH PARADE

Local Lodges Attended Morning Service at Christ Church—The Juvenile Lodge Also Attended—A Very Large Turn-out of the Brethren—Rev Mr. Blagrave Preached an Able and Appropriate Sermon—Fine Music and Inspiring Services

The members of Oxford and Lydford lodges, Sons of England, and also the members of the juvenile lodge, attended divine service on Sunday morning at Christ church. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, officiated, and his discourse was an able effort, and in keeping with the occasion. The procession was headed by the I. O. O. F. band which played appropriate sacred music. The turnout was one of the largest seen in the city for some time.

After the usual morning prayers had been said and hymns sung, including the National Anthem, the Rector preached. His text was from Joshua iv:21-22-24.:—

"And he spake unto the children of Israel, saying, when your children shall ask your fathers in time to come saying, what mean these stones, then shall ye let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land, that all the people of the earth might know the hand of the Lord that it is mighty, that ye might fear the Lord your God forever."

In his opening remarks the divine referred to the pleasure it was to have the Sons of England worship with them. The society was doing a magnificent work, and it was a patriotic society. There was in this country work of necessity for them to do, and it was important that they should understand it and do it. Referring especially to the text the Rector said that after the children of Israel had crossed the Jordan into the promised land Joshua had them gather twelve stones and planted them as a memorial for what the Lord had done for them. They were the monuments of the guiding hand of God which had brought the children of Israel out of a land of bondage into a land flowing with milk and honey. The English people are a wonderful people, called of God for a special purpose, and these wonderful people should reflect grandeur and nobility. The Greeks were known as a wonderful people for art and literature and great men have immortalized that nation. Whilst this is true, has not England been great in art and literature? Whilst Greece had her Homer has not England had her Shakespeare? Rome was at one time a great Empire and her systems showed genius. She gave to the world great lessons. There is however to-day a greater Empire than Rome ever was—the British Empire. Her Empire is around the world, as it were a band of love. Whilst Rome had her heroes st'l greater have been the heroes of England.. The Imperial conference which the Rector referred to as the peace tribunal, now in session, and attended by the representatives from all parts of the Empire, was fittingly referred to. There in England is the mother of Parliaments, a parliament of grandeur and majesty. We have there blended together democracy and constitutional government. France was another nation that had been and was great. She had a Napoleon, whilst England had a Wellington. At present Germany had caught the ear of the educational world, but in England there were as great scholars as in Germany. England's scholars continue in the same balance., They have been tried and found to be true in stability. All that was meritorious in character had been blended by the English nation, and it was well for the Sons of England to ponder this well. What was the secret of England's greatness? It was religion and religious freedom. Take England's history and ponder over it. She has had strifes and wars, but the backbone of all was her religion. Her righteousness and justice had been weighed in the balance and never found wanting. As Sons of England we had inherited something to be proud of. If we want to uphold the honor of that country we must see to it that we are living upright and righteous lives. Be true to that which has made Britain what she is to-day. Let us emulate the character of our ancestry and by our lives reflect credit on ourselves and the lives they lived.

After the sermon, and a hymn had been sung the members formed in procession and marched to the lodge room and disbanded.

"TWO MARKS"— Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at Griffin's Opera House, Tuesday, May 30. Plan at Doyle's to-day.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

"The survival of the fittest," is amply illustrated in the long life of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which has been before the public for more years than most of this paper's readers care to remember. This truly American stage classic's present day popularity has long furnished food for thought among producing stage managers, playwrights and the public generally. That it will never die, but live on forever, seems an assured fact in so far as the Stetson company is concerned. This famous dramatic organization is due to-morrow at Griffin's Opera House in an entirely new and up-to-the-minute dress. For this season, Manager Washburn secured a cast of all stage favorites, each member having been selected for his or her special fitness for the respective parts. The vaudeville numbers introduced throughout the action of the play are features to be seen only with the Stetson company. Plan at Doyle's to-day.

THE BOY SCOUTS' FIRST PARADE TO CHURCH

A Good Turnout, a Hearty Welcome to Emmanuel and A Pertinent Discourse

The Boy Scouts made a very creditable appearance at their first church parade on Sunday. They attended service at Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal church. The Rev. A. M. Hubly on behalf of the officers and members of the church, gave them hearty welcome, and thanked them for the honor they had conferred upon him in electing him their chaplain. He hoped he would always merit their confidence by faithfully serving them when occasion called for it.

The sermon was from the Word.—"Arise, anoint him, for this is he." 1 Sam. xvi:12.

Boys are the stuff men are made of. When God wanted a great leader for His people He made choice of a baby boy floating in the waters of the Nile, in danger of being eaten up by the reptiles in the river, and so we have the story of Moses. When God wanted a great and faithful religious leader for his people, to save them from the vile priests he called a little boy who had been dedicated to religious service by a praying mother, and we have the story of Samuel.

When the King whose throne is in the Heavens, and whose kingdom ruleth over all, wanted a King who would do his bidding, and govern and rule his people on earth, he made choice of a red-header, freckle-faced boy watching his father's sheep on the plains of Bethlehem, and we have the great king, David.

When God saw that we were great sinners, and that we needed a great Saviour, he began giving him to us in a little baby boy; and so we have the story of Bethlehem's manger and Calvary's Cross.

The boys were exhorted to remember that God always looked upon the heart, which had a great deal to do with making a countenance beautiful with open honesty and goodly to look to.

They were reminded of the last law added to the Scout code: "A Scout must be pure in thought, in word, and in deed." They were exhorted to be kind, to be reverent, to be worshipful. Many interesting illustrations were given to contrast shortcomings with faithfulness, and sinfulness with righteousness.

BEFORE THE BEAK THIS MORNING

DRUNKS.

No less than four drunks were before His Worship this morning, all having been arrested on Saturday night.

Robert Shaw, Henry Brown and James Quinn, all of whom are strangers, were fined $5 each or 15 days in jail.

James Curry, also a stranger, was allowed to go and work upon a farm where he has been employed for some time.

Wilfred Turcott and Robt. O'Brien, the two young Kingstonians who were arrested for trespassing on G. T. R. property, were remanded until four o'clock this afternoon.

WOULD-BE SUICIDE SENT TO CENTRAL

Edward Carr, a young man who was arrested here on Saturday, the 20th inst., on a charge of threatening to shoot his brother-in-law, Barton Heppert, and who, after being placed in the cells, attempted to commit suicide by hanging, was brought up before the Magistrate this morning. To the charges of attempting to shoot and attempt at self destruction Carr pleaded guilty. Carr, less than a month ago, was in trouble here charged with theft from his employer and he was then allowed to go under suspended sentence and making restitution. The Magistrate, after commenting upon the enormity of the offences, sentenced Carr to the Central Prison for 22 months.

A Settlement Worker.

Lady Davies, wife of Sir Louis Davies, is one of Canada's most active philanthropic workers and takes a deep interest in various societies, and especially has she done a great deal towards placing the Settlement House work in Ottawa on a firm financial basis. The proceeds of a concert given recently in a drawing-room has enabled them to open a day nursery, and a great deal of her time is still devoted to assisting this very necessary and useful organization. Though Lady Davies has been obliged to drop out of the Women's Historical Society and the Council of Women, with both of which she was formerly connected, she is still an active member of the Humane Society, of the Morning Musical Club, and of the women's associations of Christ Church Cathedral, to which she belongs.

When Sir Louis Davies was one of the Cabinet Ministers, Lady Davies was one of the most popular hostesses of the political set, and her dinners and receptions are still looked back upon with pleasure. She does not entertain quite as much now-a-days, but when she does people are always delighted to be invited to her hospitable home. Her daughter, Miss Gertrude Davies, is of great assistance to her mother in her settlement work, as she takes classes there during the week in elocution and drawing. Miss Mary, the youngest daughter, is very fond of fancy skating, and is a member of the Minto Skating Club. Both the young ladies assist their mother constantly in her many social duties.

Coal Output of Nova Scotia.

Coal production in Nova Scotia for the year 1910 amounted to a total of 5,477,146 tons, being an increase over 1909 production of 281,183 tons. Colliery consumption accounted for 515,-720 tons. The protracted strike at the plant of Cumberland Railway & Coal Co. was responsible last year for a decreased output in Cumberland county. 277,862 tons were mined as against 542,040 for the year before. The Maritime Coal, Railway & Power Co. was the chief producer, having raised 161,-843 tons. Pictou county produced 829,509 tons, the greatest producer being the Acadia Coal Co. and the Intercolonial Coal Co. Inverness county 364,104 tons were raised, of which the Inverness Railway & Coal Co. contributed 277,257 tons and the Port Hood-Richmond Railway & Coal Co. the balance. The output of Cape Breton county was 4,205,131 tons, which is a considerable increase over that of 1909, when 3,634,392 tons were raised. The great bulk of this tonnage was raised by the Dominion Coal Co., with 3,244,751 tons, and the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co. with 836,348 tons. Over eleven thousand persons were employed in the industry during the year.

BOXING

Sam Langford, the colored cyclone of Boston, has been matched to meet Tony Caponi, the Italian middleweight, of Chicago, for ten rounds at a show to be held at Kenosha, Wis., on the night of May 29. Langford should have no trouble whatever in defeating Caponi, for the latter does not class with him in any way and will be lucky to last five rounds. The fight may not come off for this reason, as Kenosha devotees of the game are raising a holler.

Freddie Walsh, the clever English lightweight, says his hand, which he injured in his bout with Pal Moore, is well again, and he is ready to take on any of the top notchers. "I would very much like to meet Mat Wells," said Walsh, "as I want to get revenge on him for the decision secured over me in England which took away from me the title of English champion."

Cyclone Johnny Thompson is at his old trick again of demanding a big guarantee before fighting. Jim Coffroth offered Thompson a bout with Frank Klaus, the Pittsburg middleweight, to be decided in San Francisco, but Thompson put an end to the negotiations by demanding $3,000 for his end, which Coffroth would not think of giving him.

Matchmaker Clarke, of the Metropolitan Athletic Club, of San Francisco, is trying to arrange a twenty-round bout between Al Kaufman and Jim Flynn, the big heavyweights, to take place on the night of June 16. Kaufman has already accepted the offer, and it is likely that Flynn will do likewise, as he probably knows that a bout with Kaufman would draw a big crowd on the coast.

Rye, Justice and Pool.

To the uninitiated, the Supreme Court of Edmonton is difficult to find, says The Edmonton Journal. It is also uniquely situated. By day or night the illuminating intelligence is flaunted from the roof of the Supreme Court building that a certain rye is the best on the market. During the day, the sign is easily read and at night it is illuminated together with a cluster of lights that portray a glass of rye in highball form.

But this is not all. While a popular brand of whisky is advertised from the roof of the building, a billiard room is in full operation on the ground floor, and often the music of the piano in this resort is mingled with the litigating voices of the legal fraternity.

The second floor is devoted to that part of our jurisprudence coming under the jurisdiction of the Supreme and District Courts. When classified with the above-mentioned features of the building the second floor is known as the department of sweets and bitters; the sweets for those who win their cases and the bitters for those who lose them. One of the enterprising attendants at the court suggested recently that a directory board be put on the wall in the hallway coming upstairs reading, "Come in and have a drink of rye, attend a session of the Supreme Court, and play a game of pool before you go home."

In the meantime, there is no progress—at least none visible to the naked eye, being made on the new court house.

The Worthy Scout.

The Boy Scout movement has been taken up with much enthusiasm in Ontario, and is receiving the approval of many good citizens. One of the excellent features of the Boy Scout's program is that he shall perform at least one kind act during the day. A lady, whose small son, Harold, has lately been enrolled as a Scout, was surprised when he appeared at the breakfast table with a piece of white string tied around one of his coat buttons.

"What's that for, Harold?" she asked.

"To remind me to do a kind act to-day," he replied briefly.

Harold returned at noon without the white string adornment. He was somewhat reserved during the early moments of the meal. But when dessert appeared he became communicative.

"Well, I've done my kind act—helped an old man across the street," he informed the family. "And I've kept from vulgar slang all morning. But after four I'm going to knock the tar out of Billy Gordon for calling me 'goody.'"—Courier.

UNITED STATES LEGISLATION IS WORRYING CANADIANS

Bills Presented in Washington Believed to be Aimed at Canada's Transportation Interests—Gunboats on Great Lakes Being Removed—Duelling in Vogue in Canada—Gems of Value Underlie Montreal

(From our own Correspondent.

Montreal, May—Officials of the large transportation interests here are questioning one another as to the meaning of certain clauses which appear in bills presented to the United States House of Representatives recently. They fear that they are aimed against them and are worded with a view to seeing to it that Canadian transportation interests do not benefit as a result of any increased traffic between Canada and the United States. Bill 4660 which was introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Rucker, Colorado, contains the following clause:

"Every vessel not of the United States that shall arrive direct from her own country, its colony, or possession in ballast or with merchandise produced there, or with passengers in less proportion than one third of her burden of capacity, for freight or passengers as aforesaid, shall pay a duty on the gross measurement in addition to the regular duty imposed by the law as follows: on all vessels not exceeding 2,000 tons, 10 cents per ton; not exceeding 2,400 tons, 25 cents per ton; between 4,000 and 8,000 tons, 50 cents a ton between 8,000 and 12,000 tons, 75 cents a ton; between 12,000 and 16,000 tons, $1. a ton; between 16,000 and 20,-000 tons, $1.25 a ton; exceeding 20,000 tons, $1.25 a ton."

This is taken as direct slap at Canadian coastwise shipping, and particularly at the boats of the Canadian Pacific, now doing so much profitable trade between Vancouver, Seattle and Alaska. It also hits at the very ocean service, present and prospective which may be run between Halifax Boston and the West Indies, and at British bottoms, plying along the Atlantic coast from Yarmouth or Halifax or St. John to Boston, Portland, or other American ports.

Gunboats Being Removed.

"The gunboat Nashville, which has been used by the Illinois naval reserves on the Great Lakes for the past year, has been ordered to the Charleston navy yard, where it will arrive in June."

This brief announcement by the U. S. Naval authorities was at first taken to mean that America had, on her own initiative, decided to alleviate Canada's oft expressed complaints in regard to gunboats on the Great Lakes.

Further inquiry proved disappointing however, for it was found that the Nashville will be relieved by the Dubuque, a gunboat even more modern than the Nashville. This question has been thrashed out, although the Minister of Justice, a year or so ago, admitted that it was a direct violation of the Ashburton treaty.

A Thrilling Duel.

For the first time in many years a man has been killed here in a regulation duel with pistols. Moreover no action has been taken in the matter by the authorities. This apparent indifference should not be taken, however as another indication of the much talked crime wave, for the victim was only "killed" in a technical sense. True the duel was fought with real weapons which were loaded, not with blank cartridges but with bullets. The bullets, however were made of wax which was a feature of this duelling competition which included meetings with every sort of weapon, ancient and modern, is by no means a childish matter. The contestants are armored with heavily padded canvas suits and have their heads protected with helmets resembling those worn by divers. The necessity for such precautions was illustrated by the fencing instructor who fired a wax bullet at a catalogue from a distance of ten yards, the missile penetrating 130 pages. Contestants were stationed 30 yards apart, but even at this distance the impact was severe. A new death record was established by one man who succeeded in being "killed" four times, sabre and pistol in succession. Society has taken to the new duelling and in this form and numerous "deaths" may soon be expected among the "four hundred."

Wealth of Minerals.

While Montreal may never rival South Africa and Brazil as a natural producer of precious stones, nor its skyscrapers give way way to mining activities, the fact has just been brought to light as a result of borings for subways and gigantic building foundations that it is under lain with rocks which contains all sorts of valuable gems. Throughout the island of Montreal garnets, beryls, tourmalines and other jewels equally valuable lie under foot, it now appears. Owing to their peculiar formation the rocks on which the city rests provide one of the most interesting mineral deposits in the world. According to a local mineralogist who has studied the question, the tide of building northward within the last year has brought to light many new specimens of its gem-producing ability. There is plenty of fool's gold—iron pyrites and the real yellow metal, it is said by mineralogists was reported once in bits of quartz brought up from the excavation of a building near St. Phillips square.

Always On His Job.

Mr. Allan Studholme, the Labor member for East Hamilton, is one of the most faithful representatives in the local Legislature. He apparently feels that he is not doing his duty by his constituents unless he remains in his place like a watch dog, ready to bark whenever he gets an opportunity. Nothing will tempt him to leave. It is said that during the recent session he was invited to a dinner, but it was after the Legislature had started to sit at night, so he could not go.

"I cannot very well be away," he said, "one can never tell when they might rush in some unexpected legislation and put it through, so I do not want to be absent."

The man to whom the remark was made mentioned it to another member and added, "But as a matter of fact, I have never known of his presence in the House stopping a bill from going through."

"Well, you see," replied the M.P.P. "Studholme thinks he has benefited posterity if he keeps the bill back for half an hour."

Beat Nellie Blythe.

Lorenzo Prince, managing editor of La Presse, Montreal, has had a unique experience as a globe-trotter. In May, 1901, a number of papers endeavored to have the record of Nellie Blythe lowered by one of their staff. Three American papers, The London Times, The Berliner Tageblatt and Le Matin, Paris, were soon in the field against Mr. Prince, who won hands down, establishing a record of circling the globe in 62 days and three hours.

The Royal Box.

The Grand Duchess Elizabeth, a sister of the Russian empress, has become an abbess of the Russian Order of White Nuns.

Instead of wearing the imperial mantle made for King Edward VII., King George V. will wear the mantle of one of the Georges at the coronation.

Emperor Francis Joseph ascended the throne at the age of eighteen and has reigned for sixty-two years. He recently celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his birthday and despite his age is strong and vigorous.

A TWO YEARS' STRIKE ENDED

Cost the Unions Half a Million, Much Rioting and Bloodshed

The long strike, extending over two years in Cape Breton, has at last, come to an end, after a cost to the unions of about half a million dollars rioting and bloodshed, and that, too, without any advantage to the strikers.

A telegram from Halifax of the 28th of May, says:—

Halifax, N. S. May 28.—The long and bitterly fought strike at the Springfield coal mines was ended yesterday afternoon, when the men adopted the report of the settlement committee. The points of the agreement under which the strike is brought to an end, as adopted at the meeting of the miners at Springfield are as follows:—

1. The men are to be taken back as soon as places are found for them. the company saying it hopes to find employment in 45 days for a majority of the men.

2. The schedule of mechanics is to remain with no reductions of the rates before the strike.

3. The Longley Board's fine, the docking system, is to govern.

4. Coal cutters are to get 10% less than the rate paid before the strike, fair consideration to be allowed to enable a man to earn an average wage where changing conditions in coal make that necessary; (when the men went out J. R. Cowans, the former manager, announced a reduction of 15 per cent.

5. The usual chances are that any employe may appeal to his superior against an alleged grievance, with an ultimate appeal to Prisident Plummer

The result is that there is to be no recognition of the United Mine Workers, that the docking system will continue, and the coal cutters go back at 10 per cent. less wages than they received before the strike.

The Longley Board had refused to say the United Mine Workers ought to be recognized it refused to recommend an increase in wages or to compel the company to adopt a fixed schedule of prices.

The men rejected the report of the Longley Board of Conciliation and struck to enforce their demands for an increase in pay and for the removal of what they said were grievances They now return without the removal of any of the grievances, without recognition of the Mine Workers, and at 10 per cent. less wages for coal cutters.

Some 1,200 men have been idle for 22 months, and the loss to the miners is estmated at $500,000. The strike has been costly to the United Mine Workers. It is known that, while President White did not force a settlement, his sentiment, and that of the present United Mine Workers, Executive was strongly in its favor.

The tallest woman in the world has heart trouble. She came to Chicago on Friday for treatment.

CURRENT COMMENT

The latest discovery in the Toronto waterworks intake was a skull, not that of the Shakespeare who is alleged to have been murdered by Bacon.

Burglars stole $1,000 worth of jewelry in New York state and afterward returned it: refined gentlemen, you know, wear very little jewelry.

Three men were shot in Denver in a quarrel "over the merits of wine," and the merits appear to have been established in a very familiar way.

A farmer's chickens have formed the habit of going on a stage at Niagara Falls, and have proved a most popular troupe of broilers.

Coronation day will doubtless be observed here as a public holiday. Anybody got a suggestion for a programme for the occasion?

The biggest "sucker" at or about Toronto—and their name is legion—was the waterworks intake, which was recently resurrected from Lake Ontario.

The most beautiful woman in the world has been divorced in New York but there are so many of her that the happiness of the guild has not been affected.

Andrew Carnegie sent $100 to entertain some little school girls who danced a Highland fling for him—the first money Andy ever paid for dancing girls.

Surely literature or fiction has more dramatic passages that that sermon at Masham, Quebec, where just as the priest had exclaimed. "This is the End," the lightning bolt struck home, destroying the church, and injuring fifteen of its inmates.

An effort is to be made to unite the different branches of the Methodist church in the United States. The leading branches are the M. E. church north and the M. E. Church south. If these two can be united it is likely the others will follow the example.

The strict enforcement of the immigration regulations with regard to keeping undesirables out of Canada is shown by the fact that during the past fiscal year 784 immigrants were deported because of physical unfitness criminality or other causes, while 17,614 were rejected at ports of entry. Of the deportations 340 were English 160 were Americans, 90 were Scotch 23 Irish, and 13 were Italian. Of those debarred entry 15,404 were citizens of the United States, and 2,210 were rejected at ocean ports.

Ontario has still a large lead in the postal business of the Dominion. At the end of the fiscal year, Ontario had 3,748 postoffices, Quebec being the nearest rival with 2,341. Then follow in order: Nova Scotia, 1,935; New Brunswick, 1,410; Saskatchewan, 983; Manitoba, 700; Alberta 695; British Columbia, 570; Prince Edward Island 467; Yukon 20; a total of 12,887. Ontario has, therefore, a little over one-third of the total number of offices in in operation. Of the total number of letters posted, 426,085,000, Ontario supplied nearly one-half, or 203,448,000; Quebec following with 85,334,000 Manitoba was next in order with 43,068,000.

"A NAUTICAL KNOT" A GRAND SUCCESS

"A Nautical Knot," presented last evening by the Christ Church, Choral Club, was indeed a grand success. The "operetta," wihch is a pretty love story, and told in two acts, contains a great deal of variety, and is brimming with life. The music and words have a charm and the lines are truly entertaining, which kept the audience in good humor from beginning to end. Too much praise cannot be given to Mrs. (Dr.) MacColl, musical director, for her untiring efforts in making the operetta so satisfactory, also to Mr. Albert Johnstone, dramatic director, for his valuable assistance in bringing the characters and chorus into shape. Following is the personnel:—

Julia, the Belle of Barnstapoole Miss Florence Newton.

Nance, her friend, a gentle damsel, Miss Daisy Tenny.

Baranbas Lee, a wandering artist, Mr. Charles Symons.

Joe Stout, the stalwart mate of the "Bounding Billow," Mr. H. C. MacKay.

Bill Salt, an ancient mariner Boatswain of the "Bounding Billow," Mr Arthur Henthorn.

Jim Spray, Ned Bluff, Jack Brace—Sailors aboard the 'Bounding Billow," Mr. W. Yates, Mr. James Booth, Mr Taylor.

Delia, Daisy, Dora— Barnstapoole Girls,—Miss Kathleen Diamond, Miss Lucy Mills, Miss Florence Henthorn

Chorus—Miss Minnie Kane, Miss Sarah McPherson, Miss Aletha Young Miss Diamond, Miss Jessie Cobb Miss Mabel Doxsee, Miss Mae Williams, Mr. D. Batchelor, Mr. Burke, Mr. A. Ostrom, Mr. H. Rogers, Mr. P Henthorn.

Orchestra—Violins—Mr. F. W. Robinson, Miss Olive Cooper; Miss Annie Tenny; 'Cello.—Mr. Percy Robbins; Bass—Mr. T. Dando; Flute—Mr D. Brown; Cornet—Mr. J. Burgess; Trombone—Mr. Jack Cookson; Musical Director—Mrs. MacColl; Dramatic Director—Mr. Albert Johnstone.

THE DANDRUFF GERM

AND THE GUINEA PIG.

When Drs. Lasser and Bishop made a pomade by mixing scales of dandruff and vaseline, which they afterwards rubbed on a guinea pig, they were contributing to science more than they knew. The application of the salve caused the guinea pig to lose its hair and become bald.

This was merely one of the preliminary steps which made possible the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide. After establishing beyond question the existence of the dandruff germ, a remedy was needed to kill this parasite.

There was nothing which would do this until Newbro's Herpicide was placed upon the market. Being the first recognized remedy for dandruff it has long been called the "original remedy."

Herpicide kills the germ, prevents falling hair and stops itching of the scalp. Don't take a substitute; you can always get the genuine article.

Herpicide is for sale at drug stores Applications may be obtained at good barber shops.

One dollar size bottles are guaranteed.

Send 10c. in postage or silver for sample and booklet to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. J. S McKeown, special agent.

DEATH LIST

MRS. W. ATKIN.

Our Wellington correspondent writes:—

On the evening of Victoria Day, Rebecca, beloved wife of Mr. W. Atkin passed away at her home on Station street. She was born 74 years ago at Roslin, county of Hastings, and was the daughter of the late Mr. John Wilson. She was loved by all who knew her. Death found her ready but her husband will miss her. She leaves two daughters to mourn the loss of a loving mother. One daughter was unable to attend the obsequies being in the North-West. The funeral was held at Christ Church, Hillier and was largely attended. The interment took place at Christ church cemetery. She was a devout member of the English church. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to those who are left to mourn their loss.

MRS. BLAKE WAY.

That death is no respecter of persons is plainly seen in the way he entered the home of Blake Way, of Corbyville, on Saturday, May 20th and claimed for its victim his beloved wife, the sunshine of the home. By the death of Mrs. Way, not only is the husband greatly bereaved, but also her other relatives and friends. She was not only a loving and devoted wife, but a Christian woman, and a model of what a wife should be. After but a few hours' illness, in spite of all that loving hands and medical aid could do, deep sleep crept peacefully upon her, and she passed to the loving arms of her Saviour. It seems hard to see such a sweet life cut off in the prime of life, but let us say in our deep sorrow—"Thy will be done." We sorrow not for her, but for those who are left behind:—her heart-broken husband, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McKnight, of Tamworth, one sister, Mrs. J. Richmond, of Marlbank, and two brothers, John, at home, and OKel, of Marlbank, and also her infant daughter. We think as Dickens did when he wrote—

"It is not on earth that Heaven's justice ends; think what earth is compared to the world to which her young spirit has winged its flight."

THOS. H. B. PURDY.

In the death of Mr. Thomas H. B. Purdy, which occurred last night at the family residence, Avondale, Front of Sidney, a well known and highly respected resident has passed away. Deceased had been in failing health for the past year, and his demise was by no means unexpected. In the year 1834 Mr. Purdy was born in Kingston and for the past 40 years he had resided in this vicinity. For 10 years he lived in the city, conducting successfully a piano wareroom. For the past 30 years the deceased had lived a retired life on the Front of Sidney. Mr. Purdy, although not personally identified with municipal matters, always took an active part in everything that pertained to the community's welfare. He was in politics a staunch supporter of the Conservative party. In religion he was an Anglican, being a member of Christ church. Deceased was an honorary member of the A. O. F. society. In addition to the widow, one son, Frank of Rochester, N. Y., and one daughter Miss Florence M., at home, survive. To the bereaved will be extended the heartfel sympathy of a host of friends.

British Tariff Commission—How It Views Reciprocity

A pamphlet has been issued by the British Tariff Commission which has been considering the effect which the adoption of the tariff compact entered into by the Canadian Commission and the United States will have upon the trade of the Empire, and upon Canada in particular. After reviewing the attempts of the Dominion Government to render non-effective the British preference by commercial conventions with France, Germany, Italy, Holland and Belgium, the Commission refers to the pending reciprocity arrangement with the United States, and says:—

> "(a) It would remove the preference on British goods, of which Canada imported £668,000 worth in 1909-10. (b) It would reduce the margin of British preference on other British goods, of which Canada imported £439,000 worth in 1909-10. (c) It would extend to favored-nation countries the reduced Canadian rates on United States products. (d) It would give to Canadian products a preference over the United Kingdom in the United States market. Imports of this class from the United Kingdom in amounted in 1908-9 to £2,990,000.
> "While the trade interests immediately involved are substantial, and considerable danger is threatened to the food supplies of the United Kingdom, if the reciprocity agreement is enacted, by far the most important question raised by the agreement affects the Imperial system of treaties, and through them the unity of the Empire.
>
> "There are three ways in which the treaty question arises in a manner inimical to Imperial unity. In the first place, the agreement makes Canada a party to a differentiation by a foreign country in favor of one part of the Empire against all the rest of the Emipre. The disintegrating tendency of any such discrimination has been generally recognized by both British and Colonial statesmen. In the second place, judging by President Taft's declarations of the real aims of the United States policy, the reciprocity agreement is intended by the more powerful partner to lead up to complete reciprocity and the establishment of free trade across the frontier. The result would give the United States so much influence in Canada that Canadian policy would perforce be directed to suit the United States rather than Imperial aims.
> "In the third place, it would not be possible for Canada to pursue the policy so intended unless she repudiated the British interpretation of most-favored nation treaties, inasmuch as she would have to extend to all other foreign countries any concessions granted to the United States."

The Commission, after pointing out that reciprocity will give the United States a preponderating influence in the councils of Canada, thus making Canadian policy continental instead of imperial, says:

> "The reciprocity agreement, for the first time in our history, would establish a discrimination in a foreign country in favor of one State of the Empire against the United Kingdom and the rest of the Empire. Such discrimination has always been declared to be incompatible with Imperial unity."

A Significant Omission

> The measure for guaranteeng $35,000,000 of Canadian Northern bonds was announced on May 8th, and received its third reading on May 17th. This marvellous celerity and smoothness in legislation contrasts strongly with the slow and arduous path travelled by reciprocity. There is no protest from dissentient Liberals; Mr. Borden and the Opposition use no obstructive tactics, and there is hardly any discussion. It is when a proposal is made to remove taxation and enlarge the liberties of the people that the fighting spirit of the Opposition is aroused. Nine days for Canadian Northern legislation, indefinite obstruction for legislation for the farmer.—Toronto Star.

The Star omits to say what farmers. This omission is significant in view of what was said by President Taft, and which statement is confirmed by the market reports and by the Buffalo News, namely, that prices of farm products are slightly higher in Canada than in the United States, and that the American farmer would, under reciprocity, sell in Canada more than the Canadian farmer would sell in the United States. Our contemporary evidently, in the above extract, refers to American farmers.

While on this subject, will the Star oblige the Canadian public by naming even one article which Canadian farmers could sell more profitably in the United States than they can at home?

AFTER GRIP -

LOOK OUT FOR TROUBLE.

The after-effects of Grip are apt to be serious but a normal healthy condition may be restored in a surprisingly short time by Vinol.

Watertown, Wis.—"After a severe attack of the Grippe my system was in a very weakened, nervous and run-down condiitno. I began taking Vinol with the very best results and in a short time I began to feel like an entirely different person and I am better and stronger than I have been for years." Adelaide Gamm. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We have never sold in our store such a valuable strength creator and health restorer for the convalescent, the weak and run-down as Vinol, and we ask people in this vicinity to try a bottle of vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim for it. THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Violent upward leaps of May wheat prices to-day resulted from the timidity of smaller shorts. A group of such traders trying to escape a possible squeeze at the end of the month became so alarmed that they bid as high as 103 1-8 before they could obtain property which sold Saturday night at 99 3-4c. New crop months, however, were weak owing to general rains, and closed at a net loss of 3-4c to 7-8c to 1c. Corn finished wit ha decline of 1-2c to 2 1-8c. Oats were off 1-4c to 3-8c, and provisions unchanged to 7 1-2c down.

The Liverpool market closed 1d to 1¼d lower than on Saturday on wheat, and ⅜d lower on corn. Antwerp closed ⅝c lower on wheat, Buda Pest 3c lower, Paris unchanged to ½c lower.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 29.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 27 were 3040 cattle, 310 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 975 calves. The supply for sale on the market this morning amounted to 800 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 350 calves. There had been few new developments in the cattle trade since this day week. According to all the private and public cable advices received from the leading foreign markets trade has been slow, owing to the continued warm weather, but as supplies have not been excessive the tone of the markets has ruled steady and prices show no change as compared with those of a week ago.

The local market was steady today, owing to the fact that offerings were not much in excess of the requirements, but on account of the exceedingly warm weather prevailing the demand from butchers was only for small lots to fill actual wants, and in consequence the trade was rather slow. There was no demand for export account, as shippers claim that the present prices being realized in the English markets are doing them no good.

Choice steers sold at 6¼c; good, at 6c to 6⅛c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5¼c, and common, at 4¼c to 4¾c per lb. There were a number of cows among the offerings, of which some of the very choice lots brought as high as 5½c to 5¾c, and the lower grades sold at from 4c to 5c per lb. Some good heavy bulls were sold at 5¼c to 5½c per lb.

A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for hogs and prices showed an advance of 10c to 15c per cwt. The demand from packers was good at the higher range of prices and an active trade was done at $6.85 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

There was no change in the condition of the market for small meats, supplies being small, as usual in the early part of the week, and the demand quiet, as butchers generally do not buy this class of stock until the middle of the week. What stock was offered met with a fair sale and prices ruled steady. Old sheep sold at $4 to $5; spring lambs at $3 to $5, and calves at from $2 to $6 each.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 11,000 head; market, fairly active and steady; choice lambs, $7.25 to $7.35; cull to fair, $5 to $7; yearlings, $5.50 to $5.75; sheep, $2 to $4.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 16,150; market, active and steady. Yorkers, $6.50 to $6.55; stags, $4.50 to $5; pigs, $6.45 to $6.50; mixed, $6.45 to $6.50; heavy, $6.35 to $6.40; roughs, $5 to $5.50.

ROMANTIC RUSSIAN TRAGEDY

A young lieutenant of the Yalta garrison (Russia) became engaged some months ago to a very pretty and accomplished girl, the adopted daughter of a Crimean family in affluent circumstances. The marriage was to have taken place in the Yalta military chapel. Almost at the last moment it was discovered that the bride was a foundling when adopted by her foster-parents, and further search showed that she was the half-sister on her mother's side of the bridegroom. The lieutenant shot himself when he learned the news, and the unfortunate girl, who knew nothing of her real parentage, has lost her reason.

GREENLEAF & SON

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"I had not observed that. Does it mean anything?" she demanded quickly.

"It is the symbol of a brotherhood of crime. This is the second time I have seen it since arriving in your city. There are members here. I shall find them and then—You wll let me take these signorina?"

"Certainly. Myself, I knew not that they were of any value in our quest, but you,—"

"I can make them speak. I will force them to tell the name of my friend's murderer. They may strive to remain silent but I will wring the truth from them. Ah, signorina, you have made a great discovery."

"Wait a moment. I have something else you must see which may speak to you when it will not to me. I must tell you that Mr. Vipan left me everything by his will, and in consequence all his papers, notes, manuscripts, journals and the correspondence he had preserved came into my hands. These had evidently been ran sackd by his murdrers, and were found by the police, the following morning in a state of the greatest confusion. When they came into my possession I went through them and endeavored to bring them to some state of order, and while doing so I came across this scrap of paper," handing Balbi an irregularly torn piece of yellow tinted paper which appeared to have been ripped off the margin of some forign journal, as it containd in one corner a few coarse words in printing. "You will see," continued Pauline, "that a rough plan has been drawn on one side; this I have since ascertained, represents the back of the premises in which Mr. Vipan had his chambers in Ducie Street. There is also what I think is a date upon it. It certainly does not appear to afford much information, yet crime has often been brought home on slighter evidence than this."

The Italian turned the paper over, examining it with the greatest attention.

"Ah, signorina, you have made an interesting discovery. This scrap of paper I am almost sure was torn from the margin of a paper published daily in Mollendo. The few words of printing are part of an advertisement of a tobacconist who has a shop there. I remember the wording of it, though neither his name nor address appear. Of the plan I can say nothing, as I have not seen the Signor Vipan's chambers."

"But I have, and when I discovered this I took an early opportunity of visiting them again and I am quite sure this small space here," pointing it out, "indicates the window on the stairs, close to the doors of his rooms through which acess was gained from the roof of an outbuilding, and the evidence at the inquest failed to prove whether the window was fastened on that night or no. Besides, if it had been, the catch was of so simple a description that anyone could have forced it with a pocket-knife."

"Just so, but this date which appears to have been written at an earlier time, and with a pen and pencil, is, if my memory serves me right, the date on which I wrote that letter to the Signor Vipan. It seems to me that someone must have followed my doings in Peru closely and gained a knowledge of my discovery. Then, having ascertained that I had written to the signore, followed, or even travelled by the same boat as my letter, determined to gain possession of the information."

"But this would have been impossible."

"Oh, yes, quite possible. There are many very desperate men in Peru, signorina—men who stop at nothing when gold is the prize. It is the curse of the country, from the Government, riddled and rotten with bribery and corruption, down to the wild and lawless gauchos, the dregs of the population."

"It sounds extraordinary," said Pauline, doubtfully.

"Yet it is true. You dwellers in the more civilized and honest land have no idea of what takes place when the Spanish nature has the upper hand."

"But we have rogues in England, in London," said Pauline. "I fear the city is thickly infested with them as even Peru."

"Ah, it is the same in every large place where the battle for life is fierce That there are rogues in your city I do not deny; otherwise how could this man Guelfo have obtained information intended only for my friend?"

"Guelfo! Do you know him?" exclaimed Pauline in surprise.

"Diavolo! Know him? May the curse of—pardon me signorina, I forgot my self. Indeed I know him to the cost of me and mine. Has he not cast a blot on lives which, but for him might have been pure and bright? Did he not come to me in Peru and represent himself to me as the friend of my friend, and with the signor's letter and the vichaya leaf endeavor to hoodwink me. But I knew him even then, and the fooling and deceiving was on the other side I met his guile with guile. I got what I wanted from him, and with the gold he has supplied I shall now fight him to the death. Guelfo and I have a long score to settle, and it shall be paid to the last soldo."

"I had no idea Mr. Guelfo had been out to Peru to see you, but I was aware that Mr. Vipan had consulted with him about your letter. Can he have handed your letter to him?"

"No, signorina, no. Remember what was in that last letter you have."

"True. I had forgotten."

"Besides why did Guelfo lie to me as to my friend, not being able to accompany him and Ellis."

"Ellis was with him?"

"Certainly, they came together as representing the Signor Vipan."

"Ah, this is terrible. There is more here than the world knows of. I never trusted either of them. but now I am convinced that they know what we are ignorant of concerning the death of poor Wallace. They both gave evidence at the inquest, but their evidence was such that I doubt its being true. Here is a full report Read it quietly some time and then let me know if you are of my opinion."

"I will, signorina. I have time before me and this will be the object of my life now."

"But about that mine?"

"It is already floated."

"I have heard nothing of it. But you are to be robbed of it?"

"I have nothing to do with it. I have sold it to Guelfo. I never want to hear of it again. It has brought me to your great London. That was all I asked of it."

"Then you have not reserved any interest in it?"

"None whatever."

"And your friends—"

"My friends shall shun it like the plague. It is no good. It is a huge fraud. At first when I wrote to the signore I thought I had found an Eldorado. Afterwards, on examining it further, I discovered it was a fantasy —a dream. But—" and the little man bent forward towards Pauline aand whispered something in her ear. She listened intently to his words and her face flushed.

"You are sure of this?" she said.

"Certain. I have told no one but you You take the place of my friend. You shall advise me in this, as he would have done."

A Boy Orator.

Little Lord Donegall, who proposed a toast the other day at the age of seven, is not so precocious an orator as Mr. Gladstone, who, it will be remembered, was set on a chair and addressed the company at his father's house in October, 1812, he being then under three years of age. His remarks do not, however, seem to have extended beyond the exordium, "Ladies and gentlemen." The present little Lord orator is a son of a Canadian, the present Marchioness of Donegall being formerly Miss Twining of Halifax. She was married in 1900 to the late Marquis of Donegall, then in his eighty-second year, and who died four years later. The son bears the name Edward Arthur Donald St. George Hamilton Chichester. He is the sixth marquis. The Machioness before her marriage was prominent in Halifax for her charitable work, which she has continued in Britain. Major P. G. Twining, a well-known graduate, and some time professor of the Royal Military College, who distinguished himself during the operations of the allied troops in China, and was mentioned in despatches, is a brother of the Marchioness. At present he is Assistant Adjutant-General, Royal Engineers, at Simla, India. Mrs. Twining, who was Miss Louise Daly of Napanee, Ont., was some years ago one of the best-known musicians in Canada, and besides appearing on concert programs in Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces, held for some time the appointment of soprano soloist at Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal.—Star Weekly.

Want Our Cider.

In this present year of scarcity, there is a greater demand than usual in England for Canadian cider. The supply from Canada has been limited owing to the small crop of apples and the greater portion retailed for consumption as fruit. Inquiries are therefore being made for fresh sources of supply. In connection with these inquiries it is worth while pointing out that while in the south of England the superiority of local-made cider is strongly asserted, there is in the midlands considerable demand for the imported product. It is claimed that owing to the greater sunshine prevailing during the ripening season, Canadian apples yield a finer article than can be obtained even from the best blends of English varieties.—Canadian Century.

IF YOU HAVE CATARRH

REMEMBER, THE BEST CATARRH MEDICINE THAT MONEY CAN BUY IS CATARRHOZONE; IT CURES QUICKLY AND PERMANENTLY WHEN ALL OTHERS FAIL.

The remedy doesn't exist that will cure Catarrh as quickly as Catarrhozone. It relieves the most stuborn cases in short time, and drives the disease so thoroughly from the system that it never returns.

Druggists boldly recommend Catarrhozone in preference to other remedies because they know it is the best and every progressive doctor prescribes it for the same good reason.

Catarrhozone is a rational, commonsense treatment that finds favor with everybody. It cures by the inhalation of medicated air, which comes into contact with the mucous surface of all the breathing organs. It gets at the source of the trouble, kills the germs and drives every vestige of catarrh right out of the system.

It doesn't matter how deep-seated or chronic your case may be, Catarrhozone can cure it. Even though a thousand other remedies have failed, don't give up hope till you have used Catarrhozone. It has cured other cases, probably worse than yours, and will cure yours it it gets a chance.

Mr. Dutcher Law, a prominet citizen of Italy Cross, N. S., says: "I experimented with hundreds of catarrh remedies and found the majority to be worthless dismal failures. Catarrhozone was the first to give lasting relief; it cured me and I am with pleasure testifying to its merits as a cure for Catarrh of the nose and throat.

(Signed) DUTCHER LAW.

You are sure to derive the most pleasant results from Catarrhozone. It has been tested many times and never found wanting. Every druggist in Canada sells it. Complete two months' treatment, guaranteed to cure costs $1.00; or a trial size 50c.

OUR FOREMOST SCULPTOR.

Mr. Walter Allward Has Had an Interesting Career.

No man of his age in the Dominion has had a more interesting career than Mr. Walter Allward, of Toronto, the foremost sculptor of English-speaking Canada. He was born in that city in June, 1875, and with a public school education began to study architecture at the age of fourteen. But carving and clay modeling came natural to him, and were his chief hobbies. He stayed four years in the architect's office, and then began his work of sculpture in earnest. At that time he could not even study this art in a school, and, as a profession, it seemed to offer small prospects. Mr. Allward, however, went on with his work undiscouraged. He couldn't go away to study—he had to earn a living. So he made busts and sold them and studied assiduously all the time, getting all the light possible on the methods of such French sculptors as Fremiet and Paul Duboir. His first large work of note was the Northwest Rebellion monument in Queen's Park, Toronto. Then he produced the statues of Governor Simcoe and Sir Oliver Mowat. After his marriage, Mr. Allward spent some time in Europe, and since then he has been constantly employed on larger and more important works. Chief among these, probably, is his impressive memorial to the Canadian heroes of the South African war, which stands in University avenue, Toronto. Among his other now famous outside statues are the John Sandfield Macdonald monument in Queen's Park, Toronto; the Nicholas Flood Davin memorial, in Beechwood Cemetery, Ottawa; the Baldwin-Lafontaine group on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, and the memorial to Dr. Bell, inventor of the telephone, at Brantford, Ont.

Mr. Allward's studio is on Walker avenue, Toronto. When he begins a statue he first records his inspiration in a small figure of dark green wax. Then he makes another with more detail, in either wax or clay. If the design is to be submitted for approval still another figure is made—in the case of a single statue—of one-third or one-half life size. If the work is a group a cast in plaster of Paris is arranged in the shape of a complete model. Weeks and months are spent in this preliminary work. Then, if his life models have been satisfactory, the monument is commenced "in large." This is done in wax on a large skeleton of iron and wood. Then it is boxed up and sent to the United States to be cast in bronze. There are no bronze-casting works in Canada able to do such work. He goes down to Providence, R.I., to inspect the casting. Then from Mr. Allward's blue prints the contractor builds the foundation and erects the monument.

All Mr. Allward's work is marked by deep human feeling, as well as remarkable artistic skill. Personally he is one of the most gentle and modest of men, large success in youth having spoiled him in no particular.

A very good story is told of Mr. Allward and an Irishman, who was one of his models a few years ago. The latter was a magnificent specimen of physical manhood, but he suffered from rheumatism and talked about his malady constantly. One day Mr. Allward was taking a cast of the man's neck, but either he or his assistant overlooked putting on the customary coat of grease. On attempting to remove the plaster it was found that it had apparently hardened there to stay. So they fell to with knives and other instruments and hammered and cut it away. The Irishman lost some hair and had quite an experience.

Some time after the model disappeared, and Mr. Allward did not see him for many a day. Then he met him and asked him if he remembered the cast incident.

"Remimber it!" said the Irishman. "Faith, how should I be forgettin' it? An' would ye believe it, Mr. Allward, I've niver had a touch of the rheumatics from that day to this."

It had been cast out, so to speak.

A Mock Parliament.

The page boys of Parliament are features of the institution. Recently they held a "mock" session, and it was highly funny. One diminutive chap occupied the Premier's seat and made a speech about the great and glorious suggestions he was going to make at the coming Imperial Conference. As Canada curtly stated she had no suggestions to offer, the irony of the little fellow with his praise of the "all-red route," the "all-British cable," and the like of that, was clever. In Mr. Borden's seat was another midget who imitated the somewhat ponderous style of the Opposition leader with great fidelity. "I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman," said this little mummer, "if it is the intention of the Government to push the reciprocity proposals. In this particular regard I may say that there is no one on this side of the House who is more anxious to see this pact ratified than I am."

But the climax came when some one who was for the time being, the Minister of Labor, rose and said: "Mr. Speaker, I think a few practical observations on this interesting subject would be timely."

Why Goldwin Smith Came to America.

Mr. Pigou, the Dean of Bristol, writes to The London Sphere in reply to recent inquiries concerning the late Mr. Goldwin Smith:

"Dear Sir,—I notice in last week's Sphere that you, with, as I am aware, many others, are at a loss to understand why my first cousin, the late Goldwin Smith, left England for Canada, and was a voluntary exile. His father, my dear uncle, a medical man of some repute, committed suicide. He had to my knowledge contemplated this for years, and, indeed, used to write to me about it. We all felt sure he would eventually do it. Goldwin took this greatly to heart, and was under the fixed impression that it would in many ways seriously affect his prospects. Cynic as Goldwin was, he was singularly sensitive to criticism.—Faithfully, F. Pigou, Dean of Bristol."

TRAPPERS AT WORK

HOW FUR HUNTERS SET ABOUT THEIR WORK.

Saskatchewan Stood First in 1908 in Its Capture of Valuable Pelts With British Columbia a Close Second—A Single Silver Fox Skin Has Been Known to Bring $1,700 on the London Market.

Describing the work of the Canadian trapper, a correspondent of Canada, in the course of an interesting article, says that the trapper on the warpath sets out with perhaps three days' supplies wrapped in a blanket, sometimes on his back, or if the snow has fallen deep, on a hand sled. In the crook of his arm he carries a rifle, and at his belt hangs a small hatchet and a keen knife. He may be making a 50-mile circuit, during which he will place perhaps 150 snares, according to the signs of animals he may meet. For some, steel traps are used; for other species he makes a snare with a sapling, while for the smaller fur-bearer a noose is fashioned of twine, wire being rendered useless by the severe cold. The snares set and baited, follows the second trip to collect the proceeds of the trapper's ingenuity, and to reset traps or restock them with bait, for often the wily beasts contrive to snatch the fish or meat used to attract them without springing the trap. The Indians are undoubtedly the finest trappers in the world, their natural ability to withstand the climate and the loneliness, combining with their knowledge of the habits of the fur-bearing animals and their cleverness in setting snares and bait to make them successful where the white man fails. During 1909 the Indians of Canada netted $828,221 as the result of their trapping journeys, an increase of $221,387 compared with the amount received for furs in 1908. Of this amount the greatest catch was in Saskatchewan, in which province $192,942 worth of furs was obtained, while British Columbia was a close second with $180,190; Ontario third, $151,160, and Quebec fourth, $121,477.

It must be remembered that trapping is only carried on in these parts of the country as yet unsettled except in the smallest degree. The sound of a settler's axe will clear a district of game quicker than a hundred years of the wary hunter. The principal fur-bearing animals of Canada are fox of the blue, cross, red, silver white and black varieties; wolverine otter, lynx, bear, mink, marten, beaver, and musk-rat. Of these the fox skins are the most valuable, a silver skin having been known to fetch $1,700 on the London market. The white and blue phases of the Arctic fox are the winter dress of different animals, not the winter and summer coats of the same animal. The white fox is found all over Canada from the 50th parallel, or level with the south shore of Hudson Bay, to as far north as animal life is found. The black fox, skins of which have been known to sell for $4,000 in St. Petersburg, is a rarity, and the cross fox is not a hybrid, but a species which bears the mark of a cross upon its shoulders. The beaver, which was for many years threatened with extinction owing to the wholesale methods of slaughter employed by the trappers, is again taking its place in the market. The beaver is, by reason of its winter habits, particularly easy of capture. These animals, at once lumber-jacks, engineers, plasterers, and stonemasons, endowed with an almost supernatural instinct, build their homes in the banks of streams, with the entrance beneath the water-line. They first dam up the stream so that the falling of the water will not leave the entrance to the lodge exposed to the view of and entry by their natural enemies. To make the dams trees are felled and cut into lengths to suit the conditions of the river bed. The ends of the logs are then lodged against any boulders or obstructions in the river bed, which are made to serve as stay piles. When the timbers are of sufficient height the branches of the trees and brush are floated against the timber and then covered with mud, plastered into shape by the heavy hairless tail of the beaver, used as a flail. The dam thus formed, the beaver homes are made.

Green logs are floated to the dam, and these finally sink, and the bark furnishes winter food. When there are no boulders in a part of the river selected for a dam against which to lodge the logs, the beavers drive stakes in the bed of the stream, and against these they place willow and other brush, covering the brush with a thick layer of mud, and then with a layer of stones, which are placed as neatly as an old-fashioned cobblestone pavement. The stones are collected after the mud dam has lowered the water on the down stream side. In narrow shallow streams the method of constructing a dam is simpler than above described. Willow bushes are cut and arranged across the bed and covered with a mixture of mud and grass. Both the willow and grass soon grow and form a most effective dam. The Indians take advantage of these characteristics to catch whole colonies of beavers, driving stakes above and below the beaver house. The little animals are then frightened out of the "lodge" by beating it with a hatchet, and a trap is set at the water entrance to the house so that on returning they are caught. The banks of the stream are carefully watched, and any holes that may exist are noted. The beavers are again frightened out of their refuges and caught through holes in the ice by means of a hook and pole.

BEAVERS AS ARCHITECTS

Villages Built by Them Are Marvels of Perfection.

Beavers arrange their homes in a neighborly way to form villages and towns. It has been pointed out that they are lake dwellers for the same reason that early races of men lived over the water. The chief differences between the two, however, is that men built over natural ponds, whereas the beaver makes a pond where he happens to want it. The labors of no other animal on earth, aside from man, present so many interesting phases as those of the beaver.

According to Macoun, who has made most exhaustive studies of these little animals, whole tribes of beavers unite to build villages. Houses, invariably of two floors, bear witness to the uniform genius of these architects. The pantry occupies the ground floor, but the upper floors of the beaver's domicle are reserved for his hours of sleep and leisure.

The walls and upper part are remarkably thick, sometimes measuring several feet. Then, at the beginning of hard frost, the exterior is coated with a thick layer of mud which immediately freezes and has the double advantage of perfectly shutting out the cold air and of guarding against the attacks of wolverines.

The smartness of the beaver is also seen in the care it takes not only to lay in provisions in advance, but also in arranging creep-holes to insure its retreat in case of surprise, and for its subsistence in a day of need.

The most extraordinary works of the beaver are, of course, the dams that they throw across rivers and along the shores of lakes. In this matter they are qualified to rank with the best of engineers. Two points especially in their work attract attention, the first being the skill and strength displayed in the construction, and the second being their unerring choice of the best materials.

In examining the construction of a beaver dam, one is at once struck with its extreme simplicity. The wonder is how the mud kneaded and applied by the beaver's paws, unassisted by even the trowel-shaped tail, becomes a hydraulic cement that time hardens instead of dissolves.

The extent of the beaver's works is as surprising as their perfection. Some of them are really colossal, and several chains in length. Artificial lakes of considerable size owe their origin to these dams. The extent of the dams is the most striking proof of the social habits of the beaver, for several families must have combined to carry out the plans, and if individual instinct produces the results of a general government among these laborers, they must be influenced by a sense of common interest as highly developed as that of the bees.

Virtues of the Squaw.

The Indian woman will stick to a drink-sodden husband till he drops dead, or she does. The Government is fighting the whisky evil on the reservations with every weapon it possesses, but the Indian brave will drink when he wants it and can get it just as the white man does. A squaw knows nothing of divorce, she would not listen to you if you told her about it. There is but one method to help the Indian woman; that is to educate her from childhood along industrial lines. Until a few years ago there was absolutely no future for the Indian girl except to marry. That was the first thing, provided she could find a decent, energetic, ambitious husband; only—there are so many of the other sort. Hospitals which have trained Indian girls are making one constant effort to enlist others of the race. She has infinite patience forbearance, generally a magnificent physique and no trace of the "nerves" which so often cause breakdown among overcivilized races. An Indian girl can go through the most trying surgical case with a stoical calm that is extraordinary. She never gets flurried, anxious or worried and she obeys the physician as a soldier does his commander. In caring for cases of severe illness she seems to live on some strange reserve force and is a tender as well as a painstaking nurse.

An Arduous Task.

To be Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada entails more actual labor than most positions of honor. It means almost continuous traveling, as a grand master keeps in close touch with the whole body of Masonry by visiting the various lodges. In this way he can criticize and suggest and keep to a high standard the tone of the whole order. But it means labor and often late hours. When he was in Toronto recently His Honor D. F. MacWatt, senior county judge of Lambton, the present head of the Masonic order, quoted with approval the recently reported utterance of King George as to the necessity of "early to bed and early to rise," and commended them to the consideration of everyone who has anything to do with the conducting of lodge meetings.

They say that the most energetic grand master Grand Lodge ever had was Mr. John Ross Robertson. It is said that it was not an uncommon occurrence for him to visit four lodges in a day, delivering an address at each, it being necessary, in some instances, to call a lodge together in the morning, so that he could get through with his program.

Glen Campbell Stung.

One of the best stories recently told in Ottawa centres about Captain Tom Wallace, M.P. The friendship of Tom and the western giant, Glen Campbell, is proverbial. Recently Glen was the guest of Captain Tom at Woodbridge. On Sunday they went to church, and Tom took up the collection as usual. When he came to the seat in which Campbell was sitting Tom politely presented the plate and said:

"Don't you remember promising me fifty dollars for the reduction of our church debt?"

And Glen was so astonished that he peeled a fifty from his bulky Western roll.—The Mace.

Silk Street Costumes.

Silk street costumes have been coming into their own since the warmer weather. The silk coat and skirt or coat and frock furnish a happy medium between wool and muslin or linen, and a costume of this kind is a satisfactory possession throughout the summer.

Black satin of various weaves and surfaces is still favored for the so-called tailored or semi-tailored costume, though to be truly chic nowadays, a black satin suit must be peculiarly well made of beautiful material and must have some original note to set it aside from the ordinary model. These requirements naturally are associated with high prices.

Very dark blue rivals black among the smart silk suits, but it must be the extremely dark tone if it is to be in satin, for any save this 'raven' shade has a tendency to look cheap in a satin tailored suit, no matter how good the material may be.

Surah, or silk serge, for many makers call what is practically the old time surah by the latter name, is making a bid for popularity.

As for taffeta it is receiving recognition once more, but is seen more often in changeable colorings and quaint models reminiscent of 1830 than in more severe and conventional tailor-made costumes.

Short coats are the rule among the silk three-piece and two-piece costumes, and the word short is an elastic term meaning anything from bolero or Eaton, or the little coat ending in a plaiting or frill below an Empire waist line to the hip length coat which is the most generally accepted version of the short coat. Of this last type there are innumerable models, plain, embroidered, braided or trimmed in self cording and usually the collar is the individual note, it being one of the season's most noticeable fashion features.

Long coats in suit with one-piece frocks of silk are shown, though not in such profusion as the short ones.

Coronation Tiaras.

Thanks to the enterprise of Prince Alexander of Teck, many of the crowns to be worn by peeresses at the Coronation were recently placed on view, the proceeds of admission—a guinea each person—to the exhibition going to the Prince Francis of Teck Memorial fund for the endowment of a hospital. Even a brief description gives some idea of the variety and beauty of the ornaments which will add to the splendor of the spectacle

The small circular crown of Princess Christian is unique; it is the only one in the exhibition with a setting of turquoises. These alternate with very fine diamonds on raised points. The Duchess of Albany's tiara is made up of a quadruple row of diamonds surmounted in front by half a sun the rays of which are formed by glittering brilliants. Of unusual design is the tiara of Princess Alexander of Teck. It has slanted wheatears formed of diamonds in a curious old setting, and meeting in front.

The magnificent crown made for the Duchess of Westminster, is valued at £20,000. The design is very quaint. There are looped and interlaced circles and scrolls of very fine diamonds and in the centre of each of the large front arches are set five immense stones treasured among the Grosvenor heirlooms. The famous Nesca stone, a large flat brilliant is mounted loosely, so as to swing with each movement of the wearer and throw out beams of light.

The tiara to be worn by the Duchess of Sutherland should emphasize her graceful and imposing figure. Large pearls intersect the compact lines of diamonds which form a geometric design of semi-circles, lying against a band of diamonds. Pear-shaped pearls are introduced to give height to the tiara. A contrast is formed by the smaller diadem of the Duchess of Newcastle. This consists of a straight band of diamond lace work about one and a half inches in depth The front of the tiara broadens into flat volutes, all formed of dazzling stones, while rising from one side of the central spike is a feather, the drooping fronds of which are cleverly simulated in diamonds.

The Duchess of Norfolk will wear a crown entirely composed of a high garland of diamond oak leaves and acorns, the badge of the Howards since 1463. The acorns in the crown are formed of single stones of great beauty.

Emeralds make a perfect ensemble with diamonds in the crowns of Lady Plymouth, Lady Gerard, Lady Carnarvon, and Lady Newborough. As the wife of the Viceroy of Ireland Lady Aberdeen has fittingly chosen emeralds for her crown. There are eleven pear-shaped emeralds of rare beauty standing up in high spikes across the front of the crown. A rose of flat cut diamonds embedded in gold and cabochon pearls indicates the front of the crown.

Lady Tweeddale's crown is in the form of a wide band of diamonds with a splendid and famous single ruby giving a gleam of color as it swings lightly in the central arch. Lady Antrim has had the family diamonds set in a crown of interlocking wreaths in which are set large pearls.

Rain Gauge Used by the Ancient Koreans.

The first use of the rain gauge has been credited to Benedetto Castelli, an Italian contemporary of Galilei, but recent research shows that rain gauges were used in the fifteenth century, nearly two centuries before, says Popular Mechanics. In the second volume of the historical annals of Korea is found a reference to rain gauges which translates as follows:

"In the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Sejo (1442) the king ordered constructed a bronze instrument to measure the rainfall. It is a vase resting on a stone base and was placed at the observatory. Each time it rained the attendants measured the height of water in the vase and reported to the king. Similar instruments were also placed in all the provinces."

The ancient rain gauge herewith illustrated may still be seen at Taiko, Korea.

A Water Trick.

Fold your napkin into the form of a cravat and request some one of the company to fill up your glass with water and place it on your napkin; cover your glass with a hollow plate; cover again the plate with the two ends of the napkin in such a fashion that the glass will be tightly pressed against the plate, and turn the whole upside down. It is now easy to drink the liquid, which comes down gently into the plate, and hence you can readily wager to drink a glass of water without touching your glass with your hands or mouth.

Cradle Song.

Hush thee, baby, night is near;
One bright star is shining clear;
Now the moon, a silver bow,
Hangs above our cottage low.
Hush thee, baby, close thine eyes;
Darker grow the evening skies.

Hush thee, baby, mother knows
Way to land of sweet repose.
She will guide thee safely there
Over poppy blossoms fair.
Hush thee, baby, sleep and dream
While the stars above thee gleam.

Hush thee, baby; wondrous sweet
Are thy dimpled hands and feet,
Wondrous dear thy sunny face,
Pure and perfect in its grace.
Sleep, oh, sleep, the whole night long;
Shining angels round thee throng.

SIR WM. GILBERT DEAD

Famous Comic Opera Writer Drowned in London.

Aged Librettist Goes Down to Lake in His Grounds to Take His Daily Plunge and Is Stricken While In the Water—Was Sullivan's Collaborator In Producing Britain's Best-Known Operas.

London, May 30.—Sir W. S. Gilbert, the noted dramatic author and librettist, who, in collaboration with Sir Arthur Sullivan, wrote the famous Savoy operas, including "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Patience," "Iolanthe" and the "Mikado," and was Knighted in 1907 by King Edward, met a tragic end yesterday. He spent the morning in London, and returned to his residence at Harrow in the afternoon. As was his custom, he went down to the lake in his grounds to enjoy a half-hour's swim. He dived in, and was a long time in coming to the surface. Women friends who had accompanied him to the lake observed that he was in difficulty and was struggling. They rushed off for help and Sir William sank again.

Servants came as quickly as possible to the scene, but when the body was recovered life was extinct.

The precise cause of death is not known, but it is believed to have been due to syncope. The lake was only a few feet deep, and the bottom was free from stones. Sir William was born in London in 1836.

Sir W. S. Gilbert has amused millions of playgoers since he put his first manuscripts of Dulcamara on the market for $150. After reading it the purchaser, Mr. Emden, took the librettist seriously to task for selling such a good play for such a paltry sum. Since then he has given the world, among others, "Pygmalion and Galatea," "Trial by Jury," "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Pirates of Penzance," "Patience," "Iolanthe," "The Mikado," "The Yeomen of the Guard," "The Gondoliers" and "Utopia, Limited." To these delightful operettas Sir Arthur Sullivan supplied the music, and the partnership between the two continued for many years.

FIELDING GOES ABROAD.

Finance Minister Makes a Sudden Change In Plans.

Ottawa, May 30.—Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, will sail on Thursday next from Montreal by the Royal George for England, on a six weeks' holiday trip. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Fielding and the Misses Fielding, and will spend the time quietly in England and on the continent, going to Antwerp for a few days to visit his son. The Finance Minister, after the strain of an arduous session of Parliament, in which his work as chief sponsor for the reciprocity agreement has been particularly heavy, is seeking a brief rest to recuperate his impaired health. His trip, it is said, has no political significance, and he will probably not detract from the rest cure by participating in any of the coronation festivities.

Farm House Burned.

St. Jacobs, May 30.—The large stone farm house of Daniel Crossman, living two miles northwest of here, was yesterday morning totally destroyed by fire. The building is a total loss. By the strenuous help of the neighbors most of the contents of the house were saved. The cause is supposed to have been from a spark from the chimney.

Ontario Medical Association.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 30.—Prominent medical men from all over Canada and the United States will attend the thirtieth annual convention of the Ontario Medical Association, which opens at the Clifton Hotel to-day. The convention will continue till Thursday.

MAY BE DELAYED.

Amendments to Reciprocity Bill Hold It Up In Senate.

Washington, May 30.—With the announcement that the Senate finance committee, by taking all of Wednesday in which to hear witnesses on Canadian reciprocity, could complete its labors this week, the Senate last evening by a vote of 50 to 17 adjourned until noon Thursday. Chairman Penrose of the committee believes that the hearings can be closed when the committee rises Wednesday, but consideration of amendments to the reciprocity bill may delay its report to the Senate to the first of the coming week. It is Senator Penrose's hope, however, that the reciprocity bill can be reached without change.

A clash between interests opposed to reciprocity occurred at yesterday's hearing. A. E. Chamberlain of South Dakota, while speaking for the agricultural interests against the measure, nevertheless declared in favor of free lumber, because, he declared, the farmer was being compelled to pay entirely too much for his lumber. Representatives of the lumber interests were also present.

"Do you expect the lumber people to support you in your opposition to free wheat?" asked Senator Heyburn.

"I am not here to do any political work," replied Mr. Chamberlain.

"You will be followed by representatives of the lumber interests of the Northwest," said Mr. Heyburn, "and I want them to understand your position regarding their interests, so that they may make up their minds regarding yours."

Mr. Chamberlain said that he had seen in South Dakota "a little book which said from whom a man should buy his lumber. The trust or combination provided for that, and I do not see any excuse for the Government protecting an industry that robs the people in that way."

Forest Fires In Nova Scotia.

Shelburne, N.S., May 30.—Forest fires have been doing much damage in the vicinity of Shelburne. One big fire at the north of the town has burned thousands of dollars' worth of timber land, and several dwellings have had narrow escapes. Another fire on the western side of the harbor was more destructive. It not only burned valuable timber, but worked into the villages of Gunning Cove and Churchover, the former nine miles from town and the latter seven. The latest reports state that 13 buildings have been destroyed, including the rectory, occupied by Rev. S. G. Andrews, with all contents, the residences of Fred Sullivan, Francis Downey and the public hall. Crowds of men from Shelburne and other places have lent valuable assistance in fighting the flames.

A gasoline boat from Shelburne, which was at the scene, sunk on the way home and John Hethrington and Frank Robertson of Shelburne had a narrow escape from drowning.

TWO MEN DROWN.

One Tries In Vain to Save Another at Fordwich, Ont.

Fordwich, Ont., May 30.—Yesterday afternoon about three o'clock, an accident happened which has thrown a dark shadow over the whole community. Peter Eckel and A. D. Kranick, who were drawing gravel with a horse and wagon to the mill dam, were drowned. They had driven on the upper side of the dam, had dumped their load and were turning the horse around, when it suddenly dropped into a deeper part of the river, throwing Mr. Kranick into the water. Mr. Eckel at once jumped in and tried to lend assistance to both man and horse, but on account of neither being able to swim, they both went down.

Census Taker Drowned.

Montreal, May 30.—A man named Dupre lost his life by drowning opposite St. Ross Sunday afternoon. With two companions, Mr. Desau and Mr. Dorcot, he was rowing on the river. They got out into the centre current, where their little boat capsized. All three were washed down by the current, but, while his companions were able to catch hold of a chain stretched across the river, Mr. Dupre was carried farther and his body finally disappeared in the eddies and has not yet been recovered.

Mr. Dupre was one of those appointed as census enumerators in Maisonneuve.

Young Lad Drowned at Perth.

Perth, May 30.—A drowning accident occurred here yesterday afternoon, shortly after five o'clock, when Caleb Strong, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. John Strong of this town, was drowned. The little fellow had been at school, after which he had gone up to the river with some playmates. While playing about the swimming house he slipped on some planks and went down before assistance came. The body was not recovered for about ten minutes, when a man who was fishing at some distance came to the spot, but life was extinct.

WANT TO PARTICIPATE.

Russia and Japan Anxious to Get In on Chinese Loan.

Pekin, May 30.—Though the Chinese currency reform loan of $50,000,000 already has been completed with the American, British, French and German groups of bankers equally participating therein, the Russian and Japanese Governments have signified to China their desire of taking part in the loan.

Russia and Japan argue that the pledging of the Manchurian revenues to secure the loan may conflict with their prior rights in that province. Furthermore, these two Governments are materially interested in both the development of Manchuria and the reform of the currency to which the loan is allocated.

If Russia and Japan follow up their signified wishes to participate in the loan, it may bring about a diplomatic contest, it is believed here, of a more serious aspect than that which surrounded the historical entry of the American syndicate into the Hukwang Railroad loan agreement. It is reported in financial circles that a strong international group of bankers is being formed in opposition to the quadruple banking group. The nucleus of the opposition is said to be the Russo-Belgian syndicate, which is expected to take in British bankers and probably also Japanese financiers.

FEUD ENDS IN MURDER

Toronto Man Waylays Victim and Shoots Him Down.

Joseph Jessiman, an Elevator Operator In the Postoffice, Holds a Grudge Against James Lougheed and Fires Four Shots Into His Body—Slayer Had Been Brooding Over Fancied Wrongs—May Plead Insanity.

Toronto, May 30.—A murder which, for cold-blooded deliberation rivals that of the notorious Thaw-White episode, and in which the defence is likely to be the same, that of insanity, was committed in the streets of "the Ward" yesterday.

The victim was James Lougheed, 62 years, 63 Laplante avenue. His slayer was Joseph Jessiman, 45 years, 69 Marlboro avenue, an elevator man at the general postoffice. According to the word of the murderer and the ante-mortem statement of the dead man, the motive for the crime was revenge for a grievance, real or fancied, a grudge of long standing. The weapon was a revolver, four shots being fired into Lougheed's body.

Shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning, Jessiman rode into Laplante avenue from College street on a bicycle. At the corner of Hayter street he stopped and dismounted. There he waited and rode up and down the street several times. At last Lougheed left his dwelling and walked south on Laplante avenue. As he drew near to Jessiman, the latter whipped out a 32-calibre revolver from the side pocket of his coat and fired two shots into his breast. The stricken man turned to run, but as he did so, his slayer fired three more shots, two of which took effect in his victim's back.

He staggered a few steps and then fell to the ground. There he lay until assistance came. Meanwhile Jessiman had calmly replaced the revolver in his pocket, mounted his wheel and was riding off, when he was seized by William O'Brien, engineer on the new hospital building, and Samuel Safer of 27 Laplante avenue, a milkman. These held him until the police arrived, called by a nurse from the house in rear of the Hospital for Sick Children.

The police patrol wagon and ambulance responded and the wounded man was hurried to St. Michael's Hospital, where he died shortly afterwards. Jessiman was taken to police headquarters in the City Hall. While awaiting the arrival of the police, Jessiman told his captors that he had shot Lougheed because "the scoundrel had ruined his life."

To Inspector of Detective Duncan he declared that Lougheed, whose neighbor he had been formerly, had been circulating evil stories about him. He said when he lived beside him, Lougheed had kept liquor for sale, and when he had refused to aid in hiding it, Lougheed had begun telling the stories about him, accusing him of unnatural practices and also saying other highly slanderous things of him.

Labor Candidates Needed.

Ottawa, May 30.—"There is a feeling in labor circles throughout Canada that the time has come when labor should be well represented, not only in the Federal House, but in the different Provincial Legislatures," said W. Glockling, Toronto, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, yesterday. He said that an organized effort was about to be made to bring out labor candidates in all the provinces, and that the various labor bodies were determined to make the movement a success. It was felt that it was far better to have representatives in the various Houses than to send delegations from time to time.

At the meeting of the congress details of the meeting to be held at Calgary between Sept. 11 and 16 were arranged. It was decided to extend an invitation to Hon. Mr. Fisher, Premier of the Australian Commonwealth, to address the gathering.

May Eject Mother-in-Law.

Chatham, May 30.—A man may not throw his mother-in-law from his premises in a rough manner that is calculated to do her bodily harm. This was the decision reached by Magistrate Houston yesterday morning, when he fined Bert Avery $1 and costs for ejecting his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lyda Turner, from his house. Dr. McRitchie, the physician called, gave evidence as to the injuries which the woman sustained. There were bruises on her arms which seemed to indicate that she had been used rather roughly. The magistrate held that, while Avery had a right to order her off the premises and use reasonable force to put her off, he was bound by law not to do her bodily harm in removing her. The therefore imposed the fine.

Don't Want the Job.

Winnipeg, May 30.—Dr. Douglas, medical health officer, declares that he cannot induce any doctor in this city to take a position as house surgeon or interne in the new tuberculosis hospital which is being erected at Fort Rouge. He may bring in a man from the east. He declares that medical men look upon the treatment of tuberculosis, and especially of advanced cases, as uninteresting and disagreeable.

Deported the Second Time.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 30.—For the second time within a month a man giving his name as Geo. Charles was deported last night, following a conviction in the Police Court yesterday for illegally entering Canada. He was fined $25 besides. Papers found in his pocket were more evidence of his former deportation.

Bandits Capture Professor.

Jena, Germany, May 30.—Professor Richter, an American engineer, has been captured by bandits on Mount Olympus while pursuing his topographical studies for the geographical societies of Berlin and Jena. Mount Olympus is on the borders Macedonia and Thessaly and reaches to a height of about 9,794 feet.

Promoters Go to Prison.

New York, May 30.—Christopher Columbus Wilson, president of the United Wireless Telegraph Co., and four of his associates were convicted by a jury in the criminal branch of the U. S. Circuit Court late yesterday of fraudulent use of the U. S. mails to solicit subscriptions to wireless stock. In some parts of the Western States and British Columbia people have used the finely engraved stock for wall paper.

The sentences which Judge Martin imposed were: Wilson, three years; George H. Parker and F. X. Butler, two years each in the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta.

W. I. Diboll and W. W. Tompkins, one year each in some New York penitentiary.

May Sell Church.

Winnipeg, May 30.—The authorities of Grace Church in this city are considering the advisability of selling the property, situated at the intersection of Notre Dame and Ellice avenue. It is understood that an offer of $400,000 for it was refused some weeks ago and it is now expected to realize $600,000 or $750,000. It is proposed to erect a seven-storey structure and conduct it on an industrial basis. Grace Church is the leading downtown Methodist church here.

Foy For the Bench.

Ottawa, May 30.—The vacancy on the High Court Bench of Ontario consequent upon the death of Judge McMahon will not likely be filled till after the long vacation of the courts, as meanwhile there is no urgency. W. H. Tilley of Toronto, and Daniel O'Connell, K.C. of Peterboro, are more prominently mentioned. It is said also that Attorney-General Foy has been sounded with reference to accepting it.

Veto Bill Shelved.

London, May 30.—With the passing of the second reading of the veto bill in the House of Lords last night that measure is shelved until after the coronation, when the Lords will amend it in committee. The bill was passed without division.

Lord Morley, in the closing speech, intimated that the Government would accept no amendments, and he added that it would not be to the credit of the House of Lords after accepting the principle of the bill, for Lord Lansdowne and his party to raise difficulties and obstacles at a later stage.

The House of Commons last night passed the second reading of the bill introduced by the Government to prevent possible disasters through aviators manoeuvring over the crowds at the coronation.

The House of Commons also passed the second reading of Chancellor Lloyd-George's state insurance bill.

Infantile Mortality In Montreal.

SCHOOL BOARD TO GET $35,000 FOR NEW SCHOOL

The Council Was Unanimous on the Subject—Committee's Recommendations Passed—Marsh & Henthorn Company Propose to Amend Agreement—Mr. Allard Also Asks More—Arrangement With Griffin Co. Adopted—Pool and Billiard Licenses—Street Oiling Reported on Favorably by Engineer—Council to Meet Again Tonight

At a regular session of the City Council, held last night, considerable business was transacted, including the endorsing of a recommendation of the Executive Committee for a grant of $35,000 to the Board of Education to build a second school.

The members present were: Mayor Ackerman, Ald. Woodley, Canning, Bogle, Riggs, Adams, Chown, St. Charles, Parks, Bleecker, McGie, Caldwell, Vermilyea, Panter, Anderson, Lott, Gibson, Clarke and Flagler.

IN COMMITTEE.

Council went into Committee of the Whole on Reports, etc., Ald. St. Charles in the chair.

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, being called upon, said a few members of the Board of Education were present to see what action the Council would take in regard to the recommendation of the Executive Committee for a grant of $35,000 for a second school building.

Mr. Wm. Carnew addressed the Council in reference to the Griffin Amusement Company. He said that Mr. Griffin deisred to be on friendly terms with the Council and the citizens of Belleville. The speaker said he considered the offer of his client, Mr. Griffin, in this matter was a fair one, namely, to allow the opera house to be used for any purpose for three nights during the year at $25 per night, seven evenings for $35 and 10 or 15 afternoons at $15. This proposition, Mr. Carnew thought, was a fair one, and he hoped the Council would, and he had no doubt they would consider well the question of the license tax.

The matter was left in abeyance for further consideration by the Council.

The committees 'reports were next taken up and disposed of without much discussion. The following recommendations were unanimously adopted:

The Executive Committee recommended that Jas. G. Lindsay's request for two weeks' holidays, to be taken in winter, be granted, but that the request for an increase of salary be not entertained.

That the request of the Board of Education for $35,000 for a new public school be granted; that the application of B. S. Smith for the privilege of substituting billiard tables for his bowling alley be not entertained.

It was recommended that the Police Commissioners be requested to have the police make more thorough inspection of the billiard rooms of the city, especially with a view of excluding youths under the prohibited age. And that the license fee be $50 for the first table and $25 for each subsequent table.

It was recommended that $50 be granted the Dominion of Canada Trapshooters' Association for their meet this summer.

That 50 copies of the Building By Law be printed.

The Water Works Committee recommended that 200 feet of 1-inch, four-ply water hose at 25 cents per foot, with couplings at 35 cents, be purchased from the Gutta Percha Mfg. Co., and that the manager be authorized to procure a hydrant coupler and nozzle.

The matter of laying mains on certain streets was considered and it was decided that when sufficiently signed petitions were presented the work would be taken in hand at the earliest possible time.

The Fire Committee recommended that a manhole be put in the floor of No. 2 fire hall.

The Public Works Committee recommended that the Engineer be instructed to notify the Electric Co. and the Bell Telephone Co. to exercise more care in the erection of poles and wires when the same are in close proximity to buildings.

The recommendation that the necessary property for the widening of Burnham Street be purchased at option secured was allowed to stand over for further consideration.

The Parks Committee recommended that the usual grant of $50 be granted to the Belleville Horticultural Society to provide for flowers for parks, to be placed under supervision of the Chairman of Parks.

The Market and City Property Committee recommended that awnings be placed on the south side of the new police station quarters.—Referred back to committee after the chairman had stated that it was proposed to place a porch on the south side of the building.

The chairman was authorized to look after the placing of an iron girder under the Council Chamber.

It was recommended that a linoleum be purchased for the Treasurer's office at an approximate cost of $18.

The Gas Committee's recommendation that a larger gas main be placed on Charles Street caused some discussion.

Ald. Panter, Woodley and Caldwell spoke against tearing up Charles Street, which was one of the best streets in the city.

Ald. Adams said it was necessary to have a larger gas main to supply the needs of contemplated consumers on Pine and other streets.

A motion prevailed to lay a six inch main on the northern part of Charles Street and that the surface of the street be replaced to the satisfaction of the chairman of Public Works.

MARSH & HENTHORN.

The Marsh & Henthorn matter was brought up, a letter from the firm being read and a draft of an agreement being partially considered.

As the terms of the agreement were not known to the Council, Ald. Clarke moved that when the Council adjourn it stand adjourned until Tuesday evening, May 30, and that each and every alderman be furnished with a copy of the proposed agreement.—Carried.

ALLARD CO.

Mr. O'Flynn, solicitor for Mr. Allard, said his client desired railway connection. He asked for the city land near the Holton mill, with railway facilities, dockage and right to the bay bridge road. He wanted one year in which to start after the C. N. O. R. freight was being regularly carried on the road, because of the possibility of trouble from strikes. Seventy per cent. of the ore brought in is refuse, and can be used to fill up the low land. The proposed site is south of the C.N.O.R. and between the Holton land and the bay bridge road.

Ald. Woodley moved that the Mayor, the Engineer, the chairman of Industries and City Property meet Mr. O'Flynn and Mr. Mikel on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock to consider the property suitable to the city and to the company.—Carried.

The consideration of the Allard agreement was accordingly left over until Tuesday evening, (to-night).

OTHER MATTERS.

The Griffin matter re license fees was taken up. The recommendation of the Executive that the fee be $100 with concessions agreed upon, carried.

A petition for a sewer on part of Forin Street was referred to the Engineer and the chairman of Public Works.

A petition of the residents of Queen and John Streets for watering was referred to the Assessor, Solicitor and chairman of Public Works.

A petition for a cement walk on the south side of Catherine Street from Octavia to Sinclair was referred to the Assessor and Solicitor.

A letter from Mr. Flint was read, asking that Turnbull Street be opened up. A petition in that connection was also read.

Mayor Ackerman was not in favor of opening streets at a great cost all in one year. The residents have bought cheap property, knowing that the streets were closed. They wanted the city to open these to benefit their land.

Ald. Panter said the man who was about to put up a rink had offered to subscribe a fair sum. The petition should be given consideration.

The matter was referred to the representatives of Samson Ward.

POOL AND BILLIARDS.

The license holders for pool and billiard rooms wrote asking that no further licenses be granted, it being felt that undue competition would lower the standard of the business.

Ald. Panter thought one man had as much right to go into the business as any other person.

Ald. McGie spoke against the increase in the number of pool rooms. Competition will injure the business and it may be necessary to resort to illegitimate methods.

Ald. Clarke agreed with the former speaker. The Council has a right to curtail the number of billiard room licenses and increase their cost, as the Legislature has to do with liquor licenses. He would be in favor of withholding the granting of all licenses until the fees are raised, in order to protect the young.

Mr. Mikel said the Treasurer was compelled to issue licenses if the conditions were complied with.

Ald. Panter did not want anyone to think he favored pool and billiard rooms. It was his opinion that a few more would not cause any more trouble than those already licensed.

The communication was referred to the Executive.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Lindsay asked for twelve days' leave of absence.—Granted.

Mr. P. McL. Forin wrote asking reasonable compensation for injuries to Miss Alford in April by an explosion in the City Hall.—Referred to the Claims Committee.

Mr. C. W. Cook wrote withdrawing his tender for watering Station St.—Filed.

Quotations on rubber hose were filed.

Porter & Carnew wrote on behalf of W. H. Geary, stating that the condition of the walk on the north end of Coleman Street was dangerous.—Referred to the Engineer and chairman of Public Works.

A communication re advertising was referred to the Industrial Committee.

The Canadian Underwriters wrote, stating that the recent fire inspection revealed that fire conditions were anything but satisfactory as regards waterworks and fire extinguishers. Attention was drawn to the collection of straw in the rear of buildings.

Ald. Vermilyea said he did not think the waterworks department was in good order at the time. At the start of the inspection the steam pumps were not working.

The report was referred to the Fire Department.

The Treasurer has sold three tax lots, two on Great St. James Street and one on north Charlotte Street.

A communication was read that the dredging of the harbor would be done this year and that the cost of the wharf would appear in next year's estimates.

Mr. Lindsay wrote that he had prepared a plan of the scheme of sewerage for Coleman Ward.—Referred to Public Works.

Mr. J. G. Lindsay wrote, saying that the test oiling of Bridge Street was most successful, especially as regards the preservation of the road.—Laid on table for two weeks.

Ald. Clarke said that on account of the large amount of dust on the street the oil had not had a fair test.

Ald. Riggs said the people of Peterborough were disgusted with the oiling of their streets.

The Railway Commission served notice on the Council that the rolling mills were applying for a spur line from the C.N.O.R. to cross Wharf Street.—Filed.

Two letters from the Ministerial Association were referred to the Executive.

During the last two weeks the Tax Collector collected the following taxes:—

On 1909 roll	$579.088
On 1910 roll	310.90
Bal. 1909	500.00
Bal. 1910	18,680.00

The committee rose and reported. The report wase received and adopted.

INQUIRIES.

Inquiries were made as to the sweeping of the lower bridge, the repairing of walks in front of the Post Office and the Kyle House and on Boswell Street.

Ald. St. Charles—I want to know when the city is going to get a rake to rake the stones off Front Street from the lower bridge to Victoria Ave.

Mayor Ackerman—A very pertinent question, Ald. St. Charles.

Ald. Panter said that Mr. Maniey was willing to have the city make repairs and he would stand the cost.

Ald. Clarke—Let the contractor finish his own work.

Ald. Clarke—Has the broken walk on John Street been repaired yet?

Mr. Lindsay said not, but it would be looked after at once.

Ald. Canning asked when Catherine Street road was to be finished.

Ald. Panter said on Tuesday morning the work would begin.

BY-LAWS.

A by-law to confirm the assessment of the City of Belleville for 1911 was introduced by Ald. Vermilyea. It was passed through its various stages and number 1636.

A by-law to amend by-law 1092 was given its first reading by title by Ald. Clarke.

The amendment will do away with the privilege of the waterworks of granting connections with outsiders at less than 50 per cent. increase on the rates to residents of the city.

MOTIONS.

Ald. Clarke moved, seconded by Ald. Gibson, that it is not considered desirable that the City Solicitor act in behalf of the C. N. R. in its action against any citizen of the city for the expropriation of land.

Mr. Mikel said it is understood that the duty of all solicitors of all municipalities is to the corporation not to individual citizens' interests. There is nothing unusual in this right and unfortunately his salary is the lowest of any solicitor of any municipality in Ontario.

As it was about 11.30, the motion was allowed to stand over until next meeting.

Ald. Bogle moved, seconded by Ald. Clarke, that the Industrial Committee draft a memorial to be presented to the proper officials expressing the loyalty of the city of Belleville on the occasion of the coronation of King Gerge.

Ald. Bogle moved, seconded by Ald. Chown, that Mayor Ackerman be given two months' leave of absence to enable him to visit London during the coronation, and that Ald. Vermilyea be acting mayor.—Carried.

Ald. Flagler gave notice of a motion to have the Engineer draft a sewer scheme for Bleecker Ward.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Ald. Panter said that $3,100 had already been put in concrete walks and walks to the extent of another $3,000 were under construction. Public Works has expended already $2,700 of the appropriation.

The Council then adjourned until to-night.

DUKE'S HORSE RAN AWAY

LONDON, May 29.—The King and Queen, nearly all the royal family, and several gorgeously uniformed Indian princes were present at the Horse Guards' parade on Saturday, when the colors of the Scots Guards were trooped in honor of the Queen's birthday, and saluted by all the regiments taking part in the brilliant spectacle, which was witnessed by noted members of the peerage and a great throng which heartily cheered their majesties.

The Duke of Connaught's horse, startled by the booming of the cannon dashed away, and it looked at first as if the Duke would be unable to control his charger. Displaying splendid horsemanship, however, he mastered the animal and took his place beside the King, whose own mettlesome horse also was restless.

Queen Alexandra, who has gone to Sandringham, has King Manuel as her guest. Owing to reports of a Royalist rising in Portugal he will be guarded by detectives during his stay.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

That old, old story, so new to present day theatregoers, "slavery days" will be realistically interpreted at Griffins Opera House to-night by Stetson's spectular "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company. For this season the members of the Stetson company were selected especially for his or her adapability to the roles essayed. The result has been a rarely harmonious whole, it is claimed, which has much to add to the effectivenes of the production. The scenery, painted especially for this revival, includes a number of handsome scenes reproduced from pictures of the localities mentioned in the book as they were at the when the great authoress first wrote the story more than fifty years ago. The play has long since been public property and has been played by many poor companies until the public has come to recognize the fact that none but Manager Washburn has the great, unequalled organization, and that is why his Stetson production always brings out the theatergoing crowd.

BASEBALL.

Star Players Easy.

The life of an umpire is a tough one. For many years he may not be called to make a close decision and he and the players get along like brothers. But for weeks he officiates in battles where for inning after inning he has to decide eyelash plays. The players of both teams continually pounce on him and argue with him, the home fans roast him to a brown. It is then that the job gets on his nerves and makes him long for home and the farm.

The umpire is practically exiled, too. He cannot mix with the players after the game and go out and have a good time. If hewants to go to a theatre he must travel by his lonesome.

There are certain players who make all kind of trouble for umpires, and others who never cause a rumpus, no matter if they believe the official has given them the worst of it in a close decision. And it is the stars who nearly always abide by the umpire's decisions without a murmur.

"Hal Chase never made a kick in his life" said Umpire Egan. "One day I was working on the bases in New York and called Chase out on a close decision. "That was hair line decision, Hal" I remarked. 'Well I thought I had it beaten, Mr. Egan," replied Chase, "but you could tell better than I could."

"That's all he had to say. Why, I know of fifty players who would have been ready to scalp me had they been in Chase's place.

"While I don't believe there is an umpire in the American league who would give a wrong decision with intention; it's the cinch fellow of the Chase type that is not going to get the worst of it from an official.

"Christy Matthewson is another player to work behind. An umpire often makes a mistake on balls and strikes, but Matty never makes a beef.

"Ira Thomas, the Athletics' backstop, is always pleading with the umpire and is really funny at times as he begs for a strike. Charley Street of Washington is just the opposite and he is continually crabbing when his pitcher isn't given a shade on close ones. But both are grand fellows and their heart is in their work.

"Willie Keeler was an ideal fellow," broke in umpire Connelly. "Whenever he made a kick you could bet he was pretty nearly right. But Keeler realized he had nothing to gain by 'baiting.'

"Ty Cobb is another good man for the umpires. While he may look to be a scrappy player, he seldom kicks at a decision. Cy Young, Nap Lajoie and many others of the great performers are the same."

THE TURF.

Mutuels Best.

Toront's best race meeting closed Saturday under ideal conditions. The seven events were run off promptly, and the quick manner the machines were operated and the winning bettors paid off proved that the delay in opening was due totally to the nattural greenness of the operators. The racing was up to the standard of the other six days, the fields being fair except in one and what that, the cup fixture, lacked in numbers, was made by Zeus. Most turf followers, viz., those who have another means of livelihood than the horses, being the public that supports the racing game, are thoroughly satisfied with the new method of betting. They sure get better returns during these seven days' diversion, so why should the hoard care for the opoinon of the hustlers and opponents of the mutuels, who speak not according to the facts when they say their dethroned idols, the former bookmakers, gave better.

BOXING.

Another Hope.

New York, May 27—Al Palzer was uncovered as one of the most promising of the "white hopes" at the tournament last night at Tom O'Rourke's club here. O'Rourke has been touting Palzer as the likeliest new heavy- in sight and he made the best showng of eleven good men who contested last night. He was a bit slow, but showed a dangerous wallop and plenty of gameness.

Jack Johnson sat at the ringside and cheered along the efforts to find somebody to whip him. He did not look greatly worried when the last bout had been staged, and said anybody that wanted to fight him, barring no one at all could be accommadated with a forfeit of any amount at any time.

POPE CONDEMNS PORTUGUESE LAW

ROME, May 29.—An encyclical, addressed by Pope Pius to the Roman Catholic Bishops throughout the world, strongly deploring the anti-religious attitude of the Government of the Portuguese republic, was officially published at the Vatican to-day.

The encyclical deals with the violent expulsion of religious orders from Portugal; the suppression of church holidays, religious oaths and religious teachings; the introduction of divorce laws; the arbitrary deposition of the bishops of Oporto and Beja, and, finally, with the law separating church and state.

The Holy See, the encyclical says, has been patient up to now, but cannot longer keep silent, as the law of separation denies to Catholic citizens even common liberties. Such a law is a spoliation of material goods and a tyrannical oppression in spiritual affairs. Man is deprived forever of a fixed church in which to maintain worship. The law even violates the will of testators.

Ecclesiastics, the encyclical declares are excluded by the law from organizations of cult. It prohibits the publication of ecclesiastical acts. It encourages rebellion and the corruption of the clergy, pensioning those who have been punished by bishops, or those living with women.

The law aims to detach the Portuguese church from Rome, the encyclical says in conclusion, and, therefore, the Pope condemns it, as null, it having no value against the inviolable rights of the church.

ORDERED TO DISSOLVE

Tobacco Trust Is Given Six Months by Court.

Supreme Court of the United States Repeats the Standard Oil Decision —Justice Harlan Dissents, Declaring That Trust Will Form Again In Another Form—Attorney-General Wickersham's Comments.

Washington, May 30.—Another of the big trusts was smashed yesterday, when the Supreme Court of the United States ordered the dissolution of the combination known as the American Tobacco Co., with its associates, the Imperial, and the British-American Tobacco Co., so far as they do business between the various states of the American Union. The decision was rendered by Chief Justice White, and called forth a dissent from Justice Harlan, who took the same ground as he did in the Standard Oil case, when he objected to the use of the "rule of reason" in determining whether the combination was a monopoly in the eyes of the law, or a "combination in restraint of trade" under the statute. His reasoning is that so long as there is restraint of trade in any degree the statute is violated, while the majority hold that only unreasonable restraint is meant by the statute.

The decision is thus summarized in a statement last evening by Attorney-General Wickersham, commending the judgment of the court, as follows:

"The decision in the tobacco case, in the most comprehensive and sweeping manner, sustains the position taken by the Government with respect to the decree below. It reverses the action of the Circuit Court in dismissing from the bill the individual defendants, the British-American Tobacco Co., Ltd., the Imperial Tobacco Co., Ltd., and the United Cigar Stores Co., holding that they are all parties to the unlawful combination which is condemned by the decree.

"The court gives an interpretation of its decision in the Standard Oil case, saying that it was there held that in view of the general language of the statute and the public policy which it manifested, there was no possibility of frustrating that policy by resorting to any disguise or subterfuge of form, since resort to reason rendered it impossible to escape by any indirection the prohibitions of the statute.

"It then holds that the history of the tobacco combination 'is so replete with the doing of acts which it was the obvious purpose of the statute to forbid, so demonstrative of the existence from the beginning of a purpose to acquire dominion and control of the tobacco trade, but by methods devised in order to monopolize the trade by driving competitors out of business, which were ruthlessly carried out upon the assumption that to work upon the fears or to play upon cupidity of competitors would make success possible.'

"Holding, therefore, that the combination as a whole and all its cooperating and associative parts, in whatever form clothed, constitutes a restraint of the trade within the first section of the Sherman Act and an attempt ot monopolize and a monopolization within the second section, the court recommends the cause to the circuit in New York for the purpose of working out some plan of disintregation of the combination which will recreate 'a new condition which shall be honestly in harmony with and not repugnant to the law'."

$50,000 Fire at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 30.—In a serious fire at the coke ovens of the Lake Superior Corporation yesterday morning, damage to the extent of $50,000 was done, covered by insurance. The coke ovens themselves, were not damaged, but the storehouse, office and sub-electric station supplying power to the ovens, was destroyed. All that remains of three buildings is a pile of fire brick. Some $500 damage was done to stock in the interior of the proxide plant, due to water. The building itself is not damaged to any great extent. The coke ovens will close operations for about 12 hours till temporary wiring can be placed. This is now impossible owing to the heat over the ruins, where a number of live wires are embedded.

Comfort and Convenience

If you have never experienced the pleasures of living in a "Sunshine" heated house, let us tell you that it is a comfort and convenience which is fully appreciated.

For an average of seven tons of coal to an eight-roomed house, an even temperature of sixty-five to seventy can be kept up from October to April. Once a is started there is no work attached to its operation beyond placing in coal twice a day, and drawing out ashes and filling water pan every other day. Chains on a pulley fixed in the hall, or room above the cellar, answer the respective requirements for:—Burning Up, or Closing Off.

No caretaker is necessary, no engineer has to be called in. No precautions, beyond following directions, are necessary.

If you can run a stove (and who cannot) you can run a Sunshine Furnace.

PEOPLE TO VOTE ON TWO IMPORTANT BYLAWS

Marsh & Henthorn and Allard Company Agreements to be Submitted to the People—Council Spent Several Hours Discussing Their Provisions—Several Amendments Made After Long Discussion—A Lengthy but But Business-like Session

Although the City Council was in session until after the midnight hour last night, only two matters were disposed of, but these were of an important nature. They were the ratifying of agreements between the city and the Marsh & Henthorn Co. and the city and the Allard company. Two by-laws were also given their first reading and will be voted upon by the ratepayers on Monday, the 26th day of June.

The members present at opening of Council were: Mayor Ackerman, Ald. Adams, Bogle, Lott, Clarke, Anderson St. Charles, Parks, McGie, Chown, Vermilyea and Panter.

COMMUNICATION.

An anonymous communication was read asking the Council if the west side park, known as Panter's Park, was in reality a park or a pasture field for horses. The writer, whoever it was, intimated that horses make a rendezvous of the park.

Ald. Vermilyea stated that the writer was correct in the matter, and something should be done.

A motion prevailed to send the communication to Mr. Arnott, the cow inspector.

On motion, the Council went into Committee of the Whole on consideration of the Marsh & Henthorn and the Allard agreements, Ald. Adams in the chair.

In brief, the Marsh & Henthorn agreement is that the city give to the concern $1,500 in lieu of a site to enable firm to purchase same, to guarantee bonds to the extent of $25,000 at a rate of not more than 5 per cent. per annum, the fixed assessment to be $6,000 for a period of ten years, except for school purposes; the company to expend at least $40,000 on building and plant and to employ at least 60 workmen, and that the company insure a member of the firm for the sum of $10,000 for a period of 20 years, payable to the city as their interest may appear.

The agreement was discussed clause by clause, at considerable length.

Ald. Panter moved that the blank in the agreement be filled in with $1,500 in lieu of a site, the same to be applied towards securing a site.

Ald. Lott moved in amendment that the sum be $2,000.

Ald. St. Charles spoke in favor of the amendment. The speaker said that ex-Mayor Marsh had stated that the property desired would cost $2,000. The Council, he contended, should not be knockers and stand in the way of $500 extra.

Ald. Clarke stated that at a previous meeting of the Council a motion prevailed fixing the amount for a site at $1,500.

Ald. Panter thought that $1,500 was sufficient to procure the property, it being reported that it could have been procured for $1,350, and the extra $150 could be used for transfer deeds, etc.

Ald. Anderson—How much land does it cover?

Ald. Adams—Nine and three-quarters lots, including a house and lot. The owners will not sell for any less, he understood.

Ald. Lott's amendment was amended to read $2,000, thus rescinding the former motion of the Council, making a grant of $1,500.

Upon a vote being taken, the amendment was defeated, but four voting for it, namely Ald. Bogle, Lott, St. Charles and Chown.

The original motion was then adopted, making the amount $1,500.

Ald. Flagler came in at this juncture.

Ald. Clarke moved that the clause in the agreement to guarantee the bonds be struck out, and he made a lengthy speech to support same. He said if bonds be granted to any company it is equivalent to the city granting a bonus, which he was opposed to. The city should not be a guarantor. Should the industry be a success nad prove profitable the city would be guaranteed, but in the event of the industry getting into difficulty, the city would of necessity have to redeem the bonds. This difficulty might come through financial depression in the country which might occur. We were taking upon ourselves a risk we are not sanctioned to do. He was not prepared to do this. Are we assured that other industries will not ask for a similar favor of the Council? If we granted this request, could we refuse them? A manufacturing concern in the city some time ago asked for similar assistance from the city, but the ratepayers did not endorse it. What right have we to recommend to the people the granting of the concessions asked by this concern? He saw no reason why it should be done in this case.

Ald. Bogle said no doubt Ald. Clarke was sincere and the principles might be right, but in some case we must discriminate, and this was one. Ex-Mayor Marsh had surrounded about him business men, and it will not be a weak concern. The city would, in the speaker's opinion, lose nothing by the guaranteeing of the bonds for the Marsh & Henthorn industry. Guarantee their bonds to help them. He would favor the clause guaranteeing the bonds.

Ald. Panter said that at a previous meeting of the Council, it had been decided to guarantee bonds to the extent of $20,000.

Upon a vote being taken, Ald. Clarke's motion to strike out that clause was lost, he alone voting for it.

Ald. Panter moved that the guarantee bond be $20,000.

Ex-Mayor Marsh said the Marsh & Henthorn concern had asked for nothing and did not propose to ask for any consideration. It was simply a business proposition. The question was, do the Council or citizens desire to have the concern remain in the city or does it wish it to move out of the city? The firm was able to take care of the notes and pay them off when due. The guaranteeing of the bond was simply the endorsing of a note. It was purely a business proposition. If the Council was prepared to guarantee $20,000, why not make it $25,000? If it is less than $25,000 he could not accept it. The buildings proposed to be erected would cost about $50,000, and the city would be amply protected in the guaranteeing of the bonds. The City Council could insure his (the speaker's life) and the company would pay same. This can be done.

Ald. McGie agreed in principle with Ald. Clarke, and if he (the speaker) had his way he would have no bonuses, no exemption, no guaranteeing of bonds or anything else, but such is not the law and other places are doing this. The Marsh & Henthorn industry was a prosperous one and the city was taking small, if any, chances in guaranteeing the bonds.

Ald. Panter—Will ex-Mayor Marsh say the buildings shall cost $40,000 instead of $35,000; if so I will withdraw my motion to make the guarantee $20,000.

Ex-Mayor Marsh—The buildings will cost at least $40,000.

Ald. Panter—I will withdraw my motion.

Ald. St. Charles moved that the sum of $25,000 be guaranteed and that $10,000 life insurance be placed on ex-Mayor Marsh.

The motion prevailed.

A motion was unanimously adopted to fix the interest on the guarantee bonds at 4 1-2 per cent. per annum, and to provide a sinking fund annually to be computed at 3 per cent per annum, same to be paid over to the City Treasurer each year.

The assessment was fixed at $6,000 per annum for ten years, excepting for school purposes.

The company agreed to employ in their plant 60 workmen.

The sum of $40,000 is to be expended on buildings to be erected.

A clause in the agreement was inserted that the company procure life insurance upon a member of the company to the extent of $10,000 for a period of 20 years, payable to the city, as its interest may appear.

The agreement as a whole was then adopted.

ALLARD AGREEMENT.

The agreement between the city and G. Allard for the establishment of an industry here for smelting and reducing platinum, gold, and other metals was considered.

The city agrees to provide a site in the vicinity of the Holton mills and near the approach to the bay bridge; to fix the assessment at $1,000 for all purposes excepting for schools, for ten years; the company to erect buildings of the value of at least $10,000 within one year from the commencement of the operation of regular freight trains on the Canadian Northern Railway to Belleville, or will pay the costs of and incidental to the submission of the by-law to the electors to confirm the agreement.

The company will deposit the sum of $250 with the Treasurer of the city as security for carrying out the terms of the agreement and if the said by-law is carried and the said party of the first part does not carry out this agreement, the said sum is to be applied pro tanto in payment of the costs of and incidental to the submission of the by-law to confirm this agreement to the electors, and upon erection of buildings and the installing of the plant to the value of $500, the said deposit is to be repaid to the party of the first part.

All buildings erected and all plants installed upon such land shall not be removed without the consent of the city during the period of ten years. The company has to employ at least 20 men for a period of at least nine months of every year during the term of ten years.

The agreement was adopted by the Council.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received, and on motion to adopt it, Ald. Clarke called for the yeas and nays in reference to adopting that part of the Marsh & Henthorn agreement relative to guaranteeing the bond.

The yeas and nays were as follows:

For adoption—Mayor Ackerman, Ald. Adams, Anderson, Bogle, Flagler, Lott, McGie, Panter, Parks, St. Charles and Vermilyea.—11.

Against adoption—Ald. Clarke.

The report was then adopted.

FIRST TRAIN ON C. N. R. R.

It Was from Port Hope West—Expect to Open for Traffic By July 1st

The Port Hope Guide says:—

A double header pulled out from the C N R Station here last Monday evening at 5 sharp, the first through train from here to the west over the new line. It consisted of regular C. N. R. engine, a work engine, dump cars, the small steam shovel, flat cars with the household effects of the "habitants" who have been working on the job caboose. The destination is Scarborough where the outfit will work on the widening of the cut.

The two shovels rubbed noses through the big cut east of the station on Saturday night. The big "50 Marion" shovel will remain here widening the cut and the rails joined on the grade to the east section today. This has been hard digging through heavy clay and hard pan. The station grounds are being graded and the approaches to the overhead bridge filled in where the settling occured.

W. R. Chislett and men are at work putting in the finishing on station buildings.

Three riveting gangs (about 60 men) are working under bridge foreman, P. C. Joyce, and it is expected that part of the work will be completed in about three weeks. Possibly more men will be added as the air compressor is ample, and no doubt every effort will be made to complete the job in record time now that the strike is settled.

It is predicted that passenger trains may run by July 1st., as nearly all the road from here to Toronto is ballasted.

FARMER INJURED BY UPSETTING RIG

John M. Derkin, a highly respected farmer of the 8th concession of Hungerford, was the victim of a painful accident on Monday morning as he was driving into Tweed by the Bogart road. When nearly opposite the residence of Nelson Lajoie, about a mile east of Tweed, he met an auto driven by W. H. DeBlois, superintendent of the Nicholls Chemical Co., of Sulphide. His horse, a spirited one, was badly frightened and, although the machine was brought to a standstill, the animal bolted and carried the buggy to the side of the road, upsetting Mr. Durkin on a pile of rocks, and dragging him for a short distance. His injuries, on examination by a doctor, happily proved to be mostly abrasions and bruises. Mr. Durkin, who is upwards of sixty years of age, is considered to have escaped fortunately, considering the predicament he was in.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Two residents of Tweed were rescued from drowning last Friday night about 8 o'clock by O. M. Alger and party, who were out with their launch. It appears that Edward Thompson, a printer by trade, and "Paddy" Simmons, a local character, were crossing the lake in a skiff, and when about midway across their boat capsized. They managed to cling to the boat, and their cries for help were heard by David Trudeaux, a farmer on the east side of the lake. He mounted a horse and rushed to Stoco, whence a 'phone message was despatched to Tweed for assistance. The information, of course, was meagre, and as a great many were on the water at that time of day, considerable excitement was caused. All the available launches were soon out and a search begun, with the above result. Simmons seemed none the worse for his experience, but Thompson was about to give up when Mr. Alger reached him.

CURRENT COMMENT

It has been suggested that every George in Canada wear a new hat on coronation day, in honor of King George V. Why not extend the suggestion to every male in the Domonion?

City Engineer Lindsay reports that the small experiment made in oiling the streets has been a success so far. Why not give it a further trial?

The Board of Education have been given generous consideration by the Council, with the general approval of the people, in their plans for providing public school accommodation for all the children in the city, and for all who are likely to require accommodation for some years to come. The Board might very well, under these circumstances, take the public into their confidence by publishing a statement of their programme for the future, and of the expenditure, which it will involve.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier boasted that Canada and the United States could show to the world two nations with the longest boundary line, living in peace without a fortress, a soldier or a gun on either side of that line, he evidently overlooked that fleet of a dozen American warships on the upper lakes, says a contemporary. It is really too bad that the United States should have marred the peace picture.

Cobourg's tax rate has been fixed at 25 mills. Which seems high; but in reality it is not so high as it appears, since property in Cobourg is not assesd so near its actual value as some other places, Kingston included.—Standard.

Such is the case with Belleville, which has been assessed at about the lowest rate of any place of similar importance in Ontario.

The United States now ranks third among the naval powers of the world, England comes first, Germany second France fourth, and Japan fifth. The tonnage of the various navies, built and now under construction, is as follows: England 2,173,838; Germany 963,845; United States, 824,152; France 725,231; Japan, 493,671; Russia, 401,463; Italy, 327,059; Austria, 204,890. England has 8 Dreadnoughts and 40 first-class battleships at present, with 10 additional Dreadnoughts building. Germany has four Dreadnoughts, and 22 first-class battleships, with 9 Dreadnoughts in course of construction. The United States has six Dreadnoughts and 25 first-class battleships with six building. France has 17 first-class battleships, with two Dreadnoughts and five battleships under construction, while Japan has 12 first-class battleships, with three Dreadnoughts and one additional battleship authorized or under construction.

MASONIC LODGE OF INSTRUCTION

A number of the members of the Masonic fraternity were last evening at Wellington, Prince Edward county, where a district lodge of instruction was held. M. W. Bro. Daniel F. PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMON

BOSTON, May 28.—Pastor Russell preached here twice to-day. He had large and intellectual audiences, as usual. We report one of his discourses from the text: "I go to prepare a place for you;  and I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that, Where I am there ye may be also." John xiv:2-3. The speaker said:

Doubtless we will have in mind the fact that we have just passed the anniversary of our Redeemer's ascension to the right hand of the Father—to the highest place in all the universe, next to the Almighty Father. He ascended up to where He was before—to the spirit plan of being, with added excellence of glory and honor, the reward of his faithfulness and obedience to the Father's will, even to the sacrificing of His life on Calvary.

The work for which the Logos left the heavenly glory has not yet been fully accomplished. He has suffered the just for the unjust, giving His life a ransom-price for all; but this was merely a means toward an end, and that end has not yet been accomplished—the blessing of Adam and his fallen race. Thank God, however that the great, broad foundation has been laid. Thanks be to God, also that a great preliminary work has been in progress during more than eighteen centuries since the ascension. That preliminary work is the preparation of the Church of Christ to follow Him in faithfulness and self-sacrifice and exaltation to the divine nature, glory, honor, and immortality which was His reward. 2 Peter 1:4.

If in times past we have too carelessly studied our Bibles and confused God's special blessing for the church, as the Bride of Christ, with His subsequent blessing for the world through Messiah and His bride, let us do so no longer. Let us note that as the divine plan for the salvation of the world could not begin before the coming of Jesus, neither can it begin to operate until the complete selection of the church—until her perfecting as the "Bride" the "Lamb's wife," in the first or chief resurrection.

As the Redeemer was the first to ascend to the glorious station of the divine nature, far above angels, principalities and powers, and as the church is to be His associate in that glory, it was necessary that He should precede her to prepare the way. Our Lord's worthiness of exaltation to the divine nature was witnessed by the Father, in that he raised Him from the dead, a quickening spirit, to glory, honor and immortality.

But before the church could, in any sense of the word, be made acceptable in the heavenly courts, it was necessary that the Redeemer "appear in the presence of God," on her behalf. Hebrews ix:24.

How precious to every child of God are the words of the Apostle, "If we sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." Let us, therefore come with courage to the throne of heavenly grace that we may find mercy and obtain grace to help in every time of need, for we have a high priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities having been tempted in all points like as we are. John ii:1-2; Hebrews iv: 15-16.

There appears to be a disposition on the part of many to deny that there will be a second advent of the Redeemer. They reason that what has not occurred in more than eighteen centuries should cease to be expected. They endeavor to find the fulfilment of the promised second coming of the Saviour in the Pentecostal blessing. But this cannot sanctify those who have implicit trust in the Lord, and who believe that the Apostles were His specially appointed mouthpieces for did not the Apostles long after Pentecost tell of the second coming of the Lord, and did not Jesus Himself, in the last book of the Bible reiterate His coming and His marriage to the church, His acceptance of her and the giving to her a share in His glory?

The angels who appeared to the Apostles when the Master vanished from their sight declared that He would come in like manner as He went away. Did he go in a blaze of glory witnessed by the whole world of mankind? No! neither will He so come. Did He go amidst great convulsions and the blast of trumpets? No! Neither will He so come? Was His departure seen and known throughout the whole world? No. Neither will His arrival be seen and known; as He declared: He will come as a thief in the night, and will be present, unknown to the world. Only a few knew of His departure, and could tell it to others. In like manner His second coming will be known only to a few, who will declare it to such as have the hearing ear.

Concerning the secret arrival of the Lord, "as a thief in the night," the apostle declares, "Ye brethren are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." I Thess. v:4.

The great Heavenly King and His bride will rule man's affairs with a rod of iron, which will break in pieces and destroy institutions contrary to the Golden Rule. This power over the nations belongs to the Redeemer, and will be shared, as promised, with His church. But first, before that manifestation of the Kingdom in power and glory, and with flaming fire will come the Master's parousia, or secret presence, unknown to the world—known only to the "watchers"—to the saints, through their understanding of the divine prophecies, to which their eyes of understanding will be opened.

In the harvest time He will be present to gather the wheat into His garner, through the change of the chief resurrection which will take place in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye because "flesh and blood" cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. During this outward manifestation to the world, the Heavenly Lord, invisible to men, will judge amongst those who have professed to be His servants—determining which may enter into the kingdom and share its glories and which have been unprofitable servants.

This judging of the church is particularly indicated in two of our Lord's parables relating to the pounds and the talents given to His servants when He took His departure. In His parousia He will reckon with His servants, rewarding the faithful with a share with Him in the kingdom, saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord"—have dominion over two cities, over five cities, etc., of the earth. Matt. xxv:31; Luke xix: 16-18.

Sour Stomach, Bowel Trouble, Dizziness

Letters like the one recently received from Mr. Rader are convincing proof that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the world's greatest tonic stimulant and medicine, and that it does all and more than is claimed

"For the past two years I suffered indescribable misery from a complication of troubles, especially in my stomach and bowels, and I had spells of dizziness, which frequently caused me to fall from my chair or off my feet.

"Two months ago I started using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and I owe my life to its use. It has built up my weakened system and prevents sour or sick stomach. It gives me the most natural appetite I have had in my life, and since I began using it I have gained 12 pounds, over one pound a week. I shall always praise it and do all I can to advance its use by suffering humanity."—C. B. Rader, Lewisburg, W. Va.

PRESIDENT TAFT AND THE BRITISH FLAG

The Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Globe, who is now in Scotland, is repeating his tactics when in Washington playing the flunky to President Taft.

The securing of a telegram from President Taft to be read at the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, now meeting in Edinburgh, is about as transparent an act of chicanery as was ever indulged in by a ruler of the people, equalling, if not excelling, the most astute heathen Chinee.

Let us place the President's utterances in juxtaposition, and the reader will be the better able to judge of the sincerity of the man, and of the part played by the Rev. J. A. Macdonald, which would lead many to exclaim he must have fallen from grace.

TAFT'S TELEGRAM.

Mr. Taft's telegram to the Assembly, as read by the Rev. editor of The Globe, was as follows:

> "Say to the Assembly that it is my one desire that Canada shall continue to prosper, flying the British flag and sharing with us the responsibility for North American civilization."

TAFT'S, UTTERANCES.

President Taft at the joint banquet of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association held in New York on April 27th, 1911, gave utterance to the following language:

> I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because unless it is NOW DECIDED FAVORABLY TO RECIPROCITY, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to SEPARATE HER BY A CHINESE WALL FROM THE UNITED STATES, and to make her part of an imperial commercial band reaching from England around the world to England again by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity, with all the advantages that I have described, and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now, or give it up forever.

Again:

> "We have on the north of us a country. . . . with natural resources. . . . which have not been drawn upon as ours have been. Ought we not then to arrange a commercial agreement with Canada, if we can, by which we shall have direct access to her great supply of natural products without an obstructing or prohibitory tariff?"

Next he declared, speaking of Canada, that the "BOND UNITING THE DOMINION WITH THE MOTHER COUNTRY" was "LIGHT AND ALMOST IMPERCEPTIBLE."

Winding up with the declaration, speaking of Canada and the Canadians, that "they are coming to the parting of the ways."

After reading the above one can judge of the President's sincerity when he declared: "It is MY one desire that Canada shall continue to prosper, flying the British flag."

The Prince of Humbugs could go no further.

LOCAL OPTION TALK BY MOCK COUNCIL

The Bridge St. League had an unusual and attractive programme on Monday evening, when some of the young men of the League organized themselves into a mock City Council and discussed a petition and by-law for Local Option in the City of Belleville. The young councillors displayed considerable ability as speakers, and the arguments and facts brought out would have done credit to a real city council. They followed the example of the Belleville city fathers in that many of them exceeded the time limit, and the meeting itself was protracted to an unusual length, but this was, perhaps, pardonable, considering the importance of the subject, and the great mass of facts and figures accumulated by the speakers on both sides of the question.

The Mayor's chair was occupied by Mr. J. A. Marsh, the President of the Epworth League, and Mr. F. H. Henry presided over the main discussion, which took place in the Committee of the Whole. Both these gentlemen spoke against the by-law. The Aldermen supporting the by-law were: Joseph Bishop, Ralph Morden, Garvin Berkley, Milton Woodger, and Harry Dickens.

The speeches on both sides were followed with interest by the audience, who vigorously applauded when the Council finally decided to allow the electors of Belleville to vote on Local Option at the Municipal election next January.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Exchange Closed—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 30.—One more day remains for the shorts in May wheat, and it is expected that they will have come in, as the bull leaders show no disposition to change their attitude. Their position has thrown the Chicago market out of line, and drawn an immense quantity of wheat here from the interior and from other terminal markets, for which there is no demand at present. That prices of May are fictitious as compared with cash wheat was shown by the number 2 and number 2 hard selling 10c to 11c under May. It is a technical, but not a legitimate, situation; the shorts has to do his buying in the pit, being unable to take the cash grain on track and get it into store in time to make his delivery on May wheat. A sale of June wheat was made here Monday at 93c, or ½c over July, and 14c under the May. This was in line with the cash wheat in the sample market. To have 14c difference between May and June at this time of the year is something strikingly unusual and was generally commented on. The board of trade was closed to-day, Decoration Day.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 30.—There was some enquiry for Manitoba spring wheat from foreign buyers, but as the prices bid were 2c per bushel out of line, no sales were made. The demand for oats from European sources was quieter, and, as the prices bid were just flat with the market here, exporters would not accept them. A fair local trade is passing in oats at firm prices. There was an improved demand for foreign buyers for spring wheat flour, but, owing to the strength in wheat, millers are asking an advance of 6d per sack on the prices bid. The local market is fairly active.

When Measles Comes.

Measles does not come on for seven to twelve days after a child has been exposed to infection. The first symptoms resemble a cold in the head, running at the nose, a good deal of sneezing, redness of the eyes, etc., and this is followed in twenty-four hours by a slight cough. On the second or third day the temperature begins to rise noticeably. On the fourth day the familiar red rash appears on the face, giving it a blotchy, swollen look. In a few hours this spreads to the trunk and neck.

Measles is the third most fatal disease of children. If the proper precautions are taken the other little ones in the house may escape entirely. The younger the child the greater the danger. When measles breaks out in the family see that the youngest children, at any rate, are carefully protected from catching it.

The only treatment necessary is rest in bed in a well lighted and well ventilated room, a light milk diet and complete isolation from other children. As the child recovers great care must be taken against exposure to drafts, damp, etc., for colds caught during convalescence from measles are very apt to turn to bronchitis and pneumonia. It is these diseases, coming on after the measles attack proper has almost passed off, that make this ailment one of the most dangerous of childhood.

SINS OF THE ...CITY...

"I am afraid I cannot do that. I have not the experience he had. But I could find you honest, trustworthy advisers. I am sure—men whose word you could take, who know the true meaning of 'honesty' and act up to it."

For some time longer these two continued to converse together, and as they talked the stronger grew the bond between them. They were naturally attracted to each other. At legth Balbi said,—

"I think I have said all that is needful at present and that we quite understand each other. My first object is to find the signore's murderer and bring him to justice; that I will accomplish this I am firmly convinced, though the quest may be a long and difficult one. In this I think you might help, signorina, for you are acquainted with Guelfo."

"I know him slightly, for he has had business relations with my father, Lord Oxendale, and I have seen him here on two or three occasions."

"And Ellis?"

"I know him far better. He rendered me a great service some months since."

"But if I might suggest, I would not mention my presence in England or that I have the honor of your acquaintance."

"Certainly not, and I will instruct the footman not to mention the fact that you called to-day."

"It would be just as well. You will permit me to see you from time to time?"

"Of course, and if you would send me a line when to expect you I would be in to see you. In the meantime I should like to give you this as a memento of my betrothed who has been taken from me." And Pauline placed in the hand of the Italian the valuable gold chronometer which had accompanied the dead explorer which had accompanied the dead explorer on all his travels. "I am sure I am doing what he would have wished in asking you to accept it."

"But signorina!" gasped the little man, whose eyes were filled with sudden tears that overflowed and ran down his bronzed and furrowed cheeks in a rapid stream. For a time he could not speak, but he raised the watch to his lips and kissed it passionately, and then with a great effort he regained sufficient command over his voice to murmur, "I thank you! I thank you! I can say no more now," and he left the room and hurried down the stairs and out of the house before Pauline had time to ring the bell for him to be shown out.

CHAPTER XII.

The Cabman and the Lady.

So full of tears were Balbi's eyes when he left Lord Oxendale's house that he failed to notice the step and nearly fell headlong on the pavement of Mount Street.

He had just reached the turning leading into Hill street, and was about to return his handkerchief to his pocket when a further and even more urgent use for the handkerchief was found. Hurrying rapidly towards him with all the signs of nervous agitation marked on his ashy-hued countenance, was the man he had last seen on the deck of the steamer in the roadstead of Mollendo—Guiseppe Guelfo. He was evidently suffering from some terrible mental shock. His eyes were wide open, staring straight in front of him but comprehending nothing, his steps were rapid but uncertain, and the walking stick he carried shook in his palsied grasp and was of little use to him as a means of support. As he walked hurriedly along he frequently glanced back over his shoulder, as though to see if he were being followed.

Balbi was quick to take all this in, and in an instant had raised his handkerchief and covered the lower part of his face with it as a man might who was suffering the agonies of toothache, and thus they passed each other without a sign of recognition on either side. Two fellow countrymen: Guelfo, whose avarice, wrongdoing, and heartless cruelty had hitherto cast a blight on the life of Balbi; and Balbi, who, emerging from the shadow of that blight, had already commenced his scheme of revenge, which would end how none could tell. They passed each other, neither knowing that only a few score yards away Fate had at that moment welded a further link in the chain which thenceforth would bind their lives, heretofore lived so far asunder, inexplicably close together.

"Where can he be making for? Shall I follow him and see?" muttered Balbi to himself. He stopped a moment or two, uncertain what to do and then deciding nothing would be gained by such a proceeding he resumed his walk.

In Hill Street there was a small crowd of errand boys and tradesmen collected around a hansom and a piano which were drawn up beside the pavement. The cabby, from his lofty seat, was waging a wordy warfare with an indignant butcher boy, who was loudly proclaiming that something was the cabby's fault.

"Why, I see'd you with my own eyes. You wasn't looking where you was a-driving to, not one blessed bit. Your 'ead was stuck up that 'igh in the air you couldn't see anything lower than the chimney pots."

"G'wan with yer, and mind yer own business," replied the cab driver, not to be out done. "Yer people'll be waiting for that cat's meat y've got there!"

"Yah!" was the only answer the boy was capable of at the moment, for the laugh that had greeted the cabby's sally had unnerved him as far as a London errand-boy is capable of being unnerved, and he separated himself from the throng, and, whistling defiantly, lounged along the street just as Balbi approached.

Stretching himself up and gazing over the heads of the fringe of people the little Italian saw that something tragic had occurred. One of the two women to whom the piano-organ belonged was resting on the handles by which it was pushed along leaning against the instrument itself in a semi-unconsciaus condition. Her face was deadly pale, and she was evidently in great pain. Her companion was bending over her, fanning her, and muttering in Italian words of encouragement and endearment in her ear.

One moment's glance at the white face was sufficient for Balbi. With a roughness quite unusual to him he had parted the staring ring of gaping loungers, and springing across the empty space was bending over his countrywoman.

"Lucia! Why, Lucia!" he cried, regardless of the angry remonstrances of those he had jostled. "Madre di dio! she is not dead. Lucia! Lucia! Answer me—speak to me! It is I, your Piero." And seizing her hand he raised it to his lips, kissing it passionately. Lucia, you know Piero? You know me?" And then turning to the woman, standing struck silent with astonishment, he said rapidly in Italian, "Go and get brandy, water, anything. She shall not die. Here is money," and he placed some loose silver in her hand.

The Penalty of Overwork is Kidney Trouble—Here's Your Remedy:—

It has been man's lot since the creation to toil. The modern tendency is to overwork, to turn night into day and thus tear down faster than nature can rebuild. An unnatural strain is thrown upon the vital organs and more especially upon the kidneys which have the work of filtering the blood free of waste and poison.

The present day rush is too great. If it is to continue nature must be assisted with a good kidney tonic. When the kidneys begin to fail in their work Booth's Kidney Pills are needed. They quickly disperse the poisonous matter collected in the system.

Pain in the back is only a timely warning of trouble in the kidneys. An inflammation has set in and a disordered condition of the urine soon becomes apparent.

Too much, or too little urine, with a constant desire to urinate, any noticeable deviation from the normal color; the appearance of sandy sediment, proves a disordered condition of the kidneys that needs quick attention.

If your work seems hard for you; if you have a lame, weak or aching back; if you are tired and listless and seem to be running down without apparent cause, begin at once with Booth's Kidney Pills, the great kidney remedy that has cured so many of your neighbors. It has given thousands of working men and women strong, sound backs for their daily work.

Charles Reid, of Main St., Markdale, Ont., says—"My back had been sore and tender, a heavy, dull pain had settled in the small of my back in the region of my kidneys. My limbs would puff up with a dropsical swelling and leave me in a miserable and painful condition. The urine was highly colored and odorous, and contained a quantity of brick dust sediment. Nothing had relieved my condition in any way, and I began to think nothing would. I read of Booth's Kidney Pills and I procured a box and commenced their use. I had not finished the first box when the urine cleared and the dropsical swellings had gone down. I found more relief in Booth's Kidney Pills than in all else I had used and I am stronger and better in every way and can thank Booth's Kidney Pills for it."

A FREE BOX.

will be sent to all sufferers wishing to try this wonderful remedy. They are guaranteed to do all that is claimed for them or refund your money. All druggists sell Booth's Kidney Pills at 50c. a box, or postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont to whom all applications for free box should be addressed

KEEPING YOUNG

Oatmeal is Said to Ward Off Age—Often 20 Years

Two noted scientists, by experiments on animals, have proved that youthfulness depends on the thyroid gland. And that something in oats seems to feed that gland.

It appears that old age can be deferred many years by caring for this gland. The main care is to feed it, and the proper food is oats.

Oats contain more energy food, more food for the brain, more food for the nerves, than any other grain that grows. And now it seems that they also serve to keep one young.

But common oatmeal isn't good enough for such an important diet. The rich, plump grains alone are used in the making of Quaker Oats. They are selected by 62 siftings, and only ten pounds are obtained from a bushel.

Quaker Oats means just the cream of the oats made delicious. It costs but one-half cent per dish.

Mrs. E. H. Anderson, who has been visiting friends in Uncle Sam's domains, since last June, returned last week, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Florence Anderson, who has since gone back to New York.

Since reorganization at the first of the month the League has had three interesting meetings. Miss Grace Brenton presented a volunteer meeting on missionary night. The Literary Department, under Miss Bessie Dunning, followed with "Canadian Heroines" the next week. Last Thursday night temperance was the theme, taking the form of a medal contest under the direction of the "Y's" of the city.

Mr. Joel Brenton was elected superintendent of the Sunday School for 1911 with the old staff of teachers and officers. In committee it was decided to make the last Sunday in each month a missionary Sunday. At the inauguration of the new step Miss Craig, of Belleville, home from China, gave a delightful address on her work abroad, which was much appreciated.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

AMONG THE MICMACS

MARITIME TRIBE DWINDLING FROM FORMER GLORY.

Reservation on Bay Chaleur, With Its Little Mission, is the Home of Remnant of Tribe That Dominated New Brunswick — The Children Knew No English a Few Months Ago, But Are Progressing Rapidly.

Extending from the mouth of the Grand Cascapedia River westward, along the shore of Bay Chaleur for a distance of two miles, is the Indian Reservation of Maria, known as La Pointe Sauvage or Indian Point. This tract of land was granted to the Indians in the year 1800, and comprises three hundred and fifty acres of good arable land beautifully situated on the Baie des Chaleurs, says G. M. MacWhirter in The Canadian Century.

The inhabitants are a remnant of the old Micmac tribe which once roamed over the Province of New Brunswick. The first chief of this Mission was Gilbert Martin, who lived to the great age of one hundred and ten years. His wife was equally tenacious of life, attaining the age of one hundred and eleven years. The present chief is Abraham Martin. Elections for the office are held every three years. It is the duty of the chief to preserve order and settle disputes.

The people of Indian Point are Roman Catholic in religion. Their first settled priest was Rev. Father Bosse, and their church was built in 1838, being erected by the Indians themselves at a cost of nine hundred dollars. Mass is celebrated once a month by the priest of St. Jules.

Educational matters are not neglected in this settlement of the red men. The present teacher instructs them in English and French at a salary of three hundred and fifty dollars per annum. Visiting this interesting school lately, the writer found a snug and comfortable building; the walls adorned with prints of King George and Queen Mary. The teacher, Miss Josephine Audet, is most energetic and much interested in the progress of her pupils, who are docile and quick to learn. There is an enrolment of twenty-nine scholars, and an average attendance of twenty. She told me that when she took charge of them six months before, they were entirely ignorant of English. She was compelled to point to an article and pronounce the English word: thus little by little they acquired words; and as the teacher knew no Micmac we can imagine how trying those first days must have been. A class in the Third Reader read in English and spelled for me. The little girl at the head of the class knew her multiplication table perfectly, replying so readily that one marvelled at the rapidity of question and answer. I was much struck with the musical voices of the children as they sang an Ave Maria. The desire of the teacher's heart is to obtain an organ for use in the school. She spoke gratefully of the interest taken in her school by Hon. Charles Marcil. With great good-will she marshalled her pupils into position while I endeavored to get a photograph of them.

At present there are one hundred and fifty persons on the reservation: the oldest being Etienne Dedam. The wigwams of the aborigines have been displaced by houses similar to those of their white neighbors, and in many instances comfortable houses and barns testify to the energy and ambition of the owners. The occupations of the Indians are various: during the winter many work in the lumber camps, while others hunt, fish or make mocassins, snow-shoes and baskets, and in the summer they act as guides to the sportsmen and as ship laborers, while between times they do a little farming and berry-picking.

The Indians are very hospitable. The story is related of an Irishman's experience along this line. Although fifty years have passed since the incident occurred the tale has lost none of its interest. The man had occasion to visit the Mission and was invited to dinner. In order to induce him to remain his host remarked with evident satisfaction:

"Duck for dinner, not fly-away duck; bow-wow duck!"

When the savoury dish appeared and proved to be young dog the visitor suddenly discovered that his business was too pressing to permit him to remain, and hastily withdrew. Another visitor, no longer than twenty years ago, ate heartily of porcupine, and pronounced it excellent, "Just like other meat."

The Indians are full of resource when times are hard. Dressing himself in his most dilapidated garments, old Louis Jerome presents himself at the stores of the neighboring village, where his story and appearance are sure of reward, although all are up to his dodge to secure charity. One year he tried a more ambitious plan. During Lord Lansdowne's term of office in Canada he received from Louis, who had been one of his canoe-men on the Grand Cascapedia, a letter which read something like this:

"Mister Governor-General, Writin' you to let you know very hard times here, no breakfast last night no supper this morning, if you'll be good enough send me ten dollars will pay you polin nex summer if you do so will be very much surprised Louis Jerome."

Lord Lansdowne, greatly amused at this characteristic epistle, responded to the Chief's "surprise" and satisfaction.

In the early days the Government had supplied seed-grain to the Indians; each man was allowed as much land as he could clear.

The number of people on the reservation has decreased greatly since his young days. A large picture of the ex-chief and other photographs adorn the walls.

The heads of all Chinese babies are shaved when they are a month old.

Lake Superior, the Victoria Nyanza, and Ireland, are about the same size.

HOME WEDDING IN THURLOW

The home of Mr. Adam Easton in the 3rd concession of Thurlow was the scene of a very pleasing event on Wednesday, May 24th, when his daughter, Ethel, became the bride of Rev. R. J. Merriam, of Harwood, Ont. The ceremony was performed at high noon by the Rev. S. A. Kemp, of Cannifton, while the couple stood in front of a bank of evergreens, which were tastefully arranged.

Immediately after the ceremony about forty guests sat down to a table heavily laden with good things, while several young ladies of the neighborhood served in a manner that reflected credit to themselves and gave tone and color to the occasion.

The bride is very highly respected in the community and her gifts were of an unusually high class, many of them being sent from neighbors who were not present at the wedding.

The happy couple took the 5.30 train west to the home of the groom, where some time will be spent in visiting among friends.

Mr. Merriam will be ordained at the Bay of Quinte Conference in Port Hope on Sunday next after which they will bid farewell to eastern friends and take up their abode in the Alberta Conference, of which the groom is a member. A host of friends will join in wishing them a safe journey and a long and happy life together.

Remarkable Fish.

The curiously named trigger fish are plentiful in Japanese waters. They are of the balistes genus, and their popular name is derived from the trigger-like peculiarity of the second spine of the dorsal fin. When the fin is erected the first ray, or spine, which is very thick and strong, maintains its elevated position so firmly that it cannot be pressed down by any degree of force, but if the second spine is pressed the first immediately falls down with a spring, like the hammer of a gunlock when the trigger is pulled. These fish are marked in a striking manner, some of them being very richly colored—ashen gray, blue and gold.

A WESTERN VIOLINIST.

Winnipeg Girl Appears as Soloist at Big German Concert.

There is a city in Germany called Naumberg that is considered to be both very musical and very critical, and it was in this city not long ago that Professor Hans Windterstein presented his famous Philharmonic Orchestra of Leipzig. All of which is very interesting, but the really important fact to Canadians is that the name of Miss Rhoda W. Simpson of Winnipeg, appeared upon the program, and that her playing of the violin on this particular occasion, which, by the way, was her initial concert performance at Naumberg, was greeted with great enthusiasm by the citizens of this critical German city. Miss Simpson is a daughter of Mr. Fred Simpson, of Maryland street, Winnipeg. After a course of violin instruction in New York, Miss Simpson went to Germany about two years ago, since which time she has been studying under some of the most celebrated masters, latterly Prof. Hans Sitt, of Leipzig.

At the recent concert in Naumberg he was assigned to play Beethoven's violin concerto and the Chaconne of Bach, the latter without accompaniment, both of which numbers are admittedly among the most difficult that could be set before even an artist of wide experience. That she delighted her audience is proven by the following eulogy of her playing, which appeared in the Naumberg Kreizblatt. It says:

"As soloist (violinist) appeared before us Miss Rhoda Simpson, from Winnipeg, now in Leipzig, a young artist of whom we had not as yet heard. She played for the first time, and began with nothing less than the violin concerto of Beethoven and the Chaconne of Bach, pieces which demand the highest capability of expression and power. Miss Simpson achieved a triumph. The artistic ripeness which she revealed by her playing is as good as perfect."

When Foster Wept.

There is a very human side to George Eulas Foster. Some say he has no soul, that the dust of many years of political warfare has choked the springs of kindliness in his nature, and that he is a hard, cold creature. That verdict comes generally from men who have tilted with him in the Parliamentary lists, and have had to be drydocked for repairs. With all his fighting ability, his lust of battle, his love of the clash of arms and the thick of the fray, there is a gentler side to the Fosterian make-up. It may be a little hard to get at, but it is there, nevertheless. No one who witnessed the little incident in the House four years ago, when Dr. Stockton died practically in harness, will ever forget it. Dr. Stockton, a close friend for many years of Mr. Foster, passed out after a few days' illness in Ottawa. Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the formal announcement to the House, added a few words of appreciation of Dr. Stockton's career, and Mr. Borden spoke briefly in a similar vein. While this was going on, Mr. Foster sat crouched in his seat—he was probably the closest friend Stockton had—with bowed head. When the formalities ended, he rose, and in a broken voice said, "Mr. Speaker, I feel I should say something"; then he burst into tears and stole sobbing from the chamber, mourning his dead friend.—The Mace in Saturday Night.

The Pineapple as a Digestive Aid.

The partaking of a slice of pineapple after a meal is quite in accordance with the physiologic indications, since, although it may not be generally known, fresh pineapple juice contains a remarkably active digestive principle, similar to pepsin. This principle has been termed "bromelin" and so powerful is its action upon proteids that it will digest as much as 1,000 times it weight within a few hours. Its digestive activity varies in accordance with the kind of proteid to which it is subjected. Fibrin disappears entirely after a time. With the coagulated albumen of eggs the digestive process is slow, while with the albumen of meat its action seems first to produce a pulpy, gelatinous mass, which, however, completely dissolves after a short time. When a slice of pineapple is placed upon a piece of beefsteak, the surface of the steak becomes gradually gelatinous owing to the digestive action of the enzym of the juice. Of course, it is well known that digestive agents exist also in other fruits, but when it is considered that an average sized pineapple will yield nearly two pints of juice, it will be seen that the digestive action of the whole fruit must be enormous. The activity of this peculiar digestive agent is destroyed in the cooked pineapple, but unless the pineapple is preserved by heat, there is no reason why the tinned fruit should not retain the digestive power. The active digestive principle may be obtained from the juice by dissolving a large quantity of common salt in it, when a precipitate is obtained possessing remarkable digestive powers just described. Unlike pepsin, the digestive principle of the pineapple will operate in an acid neutral, or even alkaline medium, according to the kind of proteid to which it is presented.

Substitute for Casserole.

If one has not a casserole, or perchance, it is too small to cook the dinner you plan, use a crock jar. This is really an excellent substitute for the casserole. See that the jar has a snug fitting top, either the one that matches the jar or a plate that will cover it well.

To avoid trouble in sorting stockings after they come out of the wash, sew tapes to the top of each and tie the pairs together when they are put in the clothes basket. Keep them tied together when washed and darned and you will have no trouble in seeing "which is which" when it putting them away.

Celluloid Toilet Articles.

The pink and blue toilet articles of celluloid have never been in great demand for the shades of the two colors have not been especially pleasing. Now the shops are showing the articles in a lavender that is really charming, and it is likely that the new color will vie with white in popularity.

Speaking of celluloid, one can find the most attractive boudoir clocks mounted in celluloid now. Another departure in these articles is having some of the toilet boxes with mirror-mounted tops.

Household Hints.

When beating eggs observe that there is no grease on the whisk, as it will prevent the eggs from frothing.

Try a little lemon and salt mixed the next time a price mark sticks to the bottom of china dishes or bric-a-brac.

If you want to turn screws or drive nails in soft or hard wood rub vaseline on them, and see how easily they will move. They will not rust or work loose, as the vaseline swells the wood Hemstitched table-cloths and napkins can be nicely mended when the hem-stitching breaks by fagoting the edges together with strong thread This will wear as long as the article.

If the windows are wiped off on the inside with a clean cloth every day they will not require washing nearly so often, as it is the inside, more than the outside, that catches the dirt.

If you will keep a "piece bag" full of scraps of silk, lace, velvet, beading etc, you will never be at a loss for material for bows for the evening slippers.

When the spring painting is finished soak the brushes in kerosene and work the paint well out, then wash in warm water, using plenty of soap rinse in clear water and let dry in a warm place. Brushes treated in this way can be put away as soft and pliable as when new.

To make a cleaning compound, says an exchange, take two and one-half bars of white soap, one-half pound of borax, one-quarter pint of aqua ammonia, three ounces of soap bark. Shave soap fine, boil until dissolved in one and one-half quarts of water, Borax added, boil ten minutes. Steep soap bar in one quart of water for half an hour. Add ammonia and one quart cold water. Mix together and add water to make six gallons.

Fashion Notes.

The feather hat trimmings are all small, the mercury wings predominating.

The hanging panel at the back of the skirt is being exploited on cloth suits and on linen frocks. It is becoming, easily applied and covers the fastening of the skirt.

Many of the Eaton jackets have large revers. They are either the supple, folded satin shapes or the straight flat ones. They can be of contrasting color, embroidered and beaded.

Except in tailored costumes, one scarcely ever sees a single skirt. Nearly every one hangs over a second one, which is in turn often split to reveal still another skirt simulated by a panel of lace, silk, or embroidery.

Cluny, Irish, Venice, or the heavier laces are used on hats and can form brims, crowns, or entire shapes. Generally the white or ecru laces are used, but dyed laces are making themselves a place in the modiste scheme

The fichu drapery is quite evident on the majority of gowns. It can be snowy net or colored linen or batiste It is frequently tied in a butterfly bow at the back and a bolero effect is given in the draping of the folds at the front.

CATTLE PLENTIFUL.

Alberta Still Retains Her Ranching Features.

Alberta is a greater cattle country now than it ever was in the old ranching days. Surprising though it may seem, this statement is borne out by statistics which show that the province last year exported more beef than in any previous year in its history.

Once upon a time all that Alberta had in the way of industries was the fur trade. Then the country became the mecca of cattle and horse ranchers, finally the ranchers were crowded out in most parts and the cry was raised that the ranching industry was killed.

In 1906 the ranchers of the province sold off their surplus stock and a general clean-up was observed throughout the cattle country. Men with great herds of cattle sold almost every hoof; other men with just as big ranches cut down the number of their herds so as to be able to run them on their restricted ranges.

The homesteader had come in and taken up the ranch country, he had broken the ground and planted wheat, he had brought a few cows. The big ranchers declared the cattle industry was dead, the range was gone, the herds were gone, and the cattle could not be raised. In 1906 the ranchers made their big sale, 114,000 head in all. The ranches were swept clean of almost everything saleable.

The two following years the cattle shipments were low, 98,000 in 1906 and 80,000 head in 1907. Then came 1909 when the homesteaders began to have something to turn off themselves. The total of the cattle shipments of that year was 127,000 head, more than the big year when the ranges were cleaned up to 1906. But the increase did not stop in 1909. The small farmers' output was increasing and in 1910 the total number of beef cattle sold in the province of Alberta was 154,000 head.

It is declared by those who thoroughly understand the cattle business that it is but now in its infancy. There will come a time not far distant when Alberta will be supplying hundreds of thousands of head of beef to the markets of the world, an even better grade than those that were fattened on the ranges by the big ranchers. In the old days a beef steer was allowed to range until fat. In the fall he was in good shape and was turned off for sale. There was no grain feeding. Even the spring cattle that were sold were fattened simply on hay. But Alberta beef, with its simple method of improvement, was good beef and was desired on the markets.

Now a great deal of the cattle that are sold are from small farmers, men with five or ten or fifteen head to sell in a year. These animals are fed the winter around, they are taken up and grain fed for market, the grade of Alberta beef is going up. It has been proven that the small farmers are bringing more wealth to Alberta than the big cattle ranches, and the cattle industry, at one time four or five years ago pessimistically declared to be dead, has proven to be simply in an infant state of development with every prospect of becoming one of the greatest industries of the province, second only to the raising of grain.

The official figures for the live stock shipments and sales of Alberta since 1905 are:—

1905—Cattle, 83,000; horses, 12,000; sheep, 40,000; hogs, 24,000; export beef, 49,000.

1906—Cattle, 127,000; horses, 20,000; sheep, 40,000; hogs, 30,000; export beef, 74,000.

1907—Cattle, 80,000; horses, 13,000; sheep, 23,000; hogs, 29,000; export beef, 42,000.

1908—Cattle, 93,000; horses, 13,000; sheep, 37,000; hogs, 48,000; export beef, 61,000.

1909—Cattle, 127,990; horses, 20,000; sheep, 37,000; hogs, 60,000; export beef, 67,000.

1910—Cattle, 154,000; horses, 25,000; sheep, 80,000; hogs, 50,000; export beef, 52,000.

A Boy's Queer Tumble.

Lloyd Skinner climbed up the stone face of the dam at Electric lake, in New Jersey, and when he had reached the top he fell down to the bottom. This is a bad habit that some boys can never break themselves of. Lloyd did more than fall. As he passed a jagged rock his coat caught, and it was taken off his back as neatly as if somebody had tried to hold him up by the ends of the sleeves. By the time he reached the end of his fall he had lost a shoe as well. In return for these losses he received a large black and blue bruise on his back, but otherwise his thirty foot tumble did not do him much harm.

MAY PLEAD INSANITY

The Inquest Seems to Indicate Jessiman's Defence.

Coroner's Jury In Toronto Brings In a Verdict of Murder In Connection With the Shooting of James Lougheed on Monday—Prisoner Declines to Go on the Witness Stand During Investigation.

Toronto, May 31.—Chief Coroner Johnson's jury yesterday afternoon returned a verdict finding that James Lougheed came to his death Monday by being shot by Joseph Jessiman and that Jessiman murdered him.

The prisoner was in the court room at the morgue, but although called to the witness stand did not utter a single word during the entire session. Advised by W. A. Henderson of Robinette, Godfrey and Phelan, he kept his lips sealed even when asked if he would take the oath.

Several eye-witnesses told of the shooting. Their stories were the same as previously rehearsed, save that those who described the shooting most particularly declared that Jessiman did not start to shoot until Lougheed had begun to run away from him.

The ante-mortem statement was read. In it the dead man, who had been warned by Chief Surgeon Uren of St. Michael's Hospital, that he was in imminent peril of death, described his killing as told by the others.

From the questions put by Mr. Henderson, his counsel, it was evident that Jessiman's hope of life is to be placed on the defence of insanity. The questions of one of the jurors showed that he was considering that phase of the matter, but, before they retired to find their verdict, Chief Coroner Johnson told the jurors that this was a question to be dealt with at the trial and not by them.

Contraband Brandy Seized.

Montreal, May 31.—Three hundred bottles of the best brandy, which, unknown to the officers of the ship, were being smuggled over on the Gothland of the Canada Line, which recently arrived in port, were Monday seized by the officials of the custom department and the whole consignment now awaits confiscation.

The liquor, in two-pint bottles, was sewed up in bags of bran, while other bottles were concealed in the bales and bundles of settlers' effects, down among the general cargo.

The shipment, it is alleged, was the result of an endeavor on the part of a Rotterdam merchant to send some of his goods to Canada to be disposed of at retail.

School Means Schoolhouse.

Woodstock, Ont., May 31.—Ex-Public School Inspector William Carlyle lost his suit against Oxford County for $7,000 claimed as arrears of salary. Judge Britton gave judgment dismissing the action, but without costs in consideration of the fact of long service for the public schools of Mr. Carylye, and in consideration of the fact that he had not been superannuated. His lordship held that the word "school" in the School Act meant a school house, and he did not consider because the Government had decided to pay $5 for each department per annum inspected, the county were bound to pay the same proportion.

Laurier to Meet Taft.

Port Huron, Mich., May 31.—The Young Men's Business Association of Port Huron has received the acceptance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, to visit Port Huron in September, the same day that President Taft will be here. In view of the general interest in the pending reciprocity agreement the fact that President Taft and Premier Laurier are to be here on the same day has received extraordinary attention.

Not About to Withdraw.

Montreal, May 31.—W. G. Annable passenger agent of the C.P.R., when asked yesterday concerning the reports that the line was about to withdraw from the North Atlantic Conference, replied that the story was incorrect. As a matter of fact, he said there are always such rumors going around just before the conference sits.

WILL COMPLY WITH LAW.

Tobacco Trust Promises to Rearrange Its Affairs.

New York, May 31.—The American Tobacco Co. will undertake, in all good faith, a readjustment of its affairs, as directed by the United States Supreme Court, according to an official statement carefully prepared by officers of the company, and given out yesterday afternoon by W. W. Fuller, the trust's chief counsel.

"The Supreme Court in this case," reads the statement, "has said that the Sherman anti-trust law should be given an application more extensive than has been given in any other case. It has said that the American Tobacco Co. is embraced within its terms. My clients, of course, will obey the law as now interpreted, and will, in good faith, undertake the readjustment of their affairs under the direction of the Circuit Court of the southern district of New York, to which the court, the Supreme Court, has remitted the matter for direction."

Said De Lancey Nicoll, who assisted in presenting the trust's case to the Supreme Court:

"It is probable that a general plan will be agreed upon for the conducting of the business as directed by the court. We shall prepare a plan which we shall consider undeniably agreeable to the court.

"This will require long planning and attention to detail, and it will be long before the full proposition will have been worked out. However, I feel sure that we shall be able to present a plan which will meet with the approval and enable the bringing about of a new condition, fully in accord with the legal requirements."

A FATAL COLLISION.

Two Tragedies Result From Trolley Smash at New Haven.

New Haven, Conn., May 31.—On a level stretch of track and in the middle of a straightaway run of nearly a mile, two trolley cars going from this city to Derby, were in a rear-end collision near Race Brook station, in Orange, late yesterday afternoon. Jas. Malone of Orange was killed, and an unknown young man is dying, and several were seriously injured. The dying man is about 20 years old. His skull is fractured.

George Damison of Ansonia had both hips dislocated and his right leg broken, and eight others were seriously injured.

The cars were running close together owing to heavy traffic all day between the two cities. The forward car had stopped to let off a passenger, when the following car, with only two passengers, crashed into it. The ends of both cars crumpled up, pinning the passengers in the forward car under the debris. James Malone was with his wife on the rear seat of the leading car. He was fearfully crushed, but, singularly, Mrs. Malone was scarcely injured. Robert Grannis, the motorman of the second car was placed under arrest and brought to this city. He refused to make a statement.

A pathetic incident in connection with the death of Mr. Malone, was the fact that four of a family of five children have recently died, and the fifth is just recovering from scarlet fever.

Trial by Gramaphone.

Montreal, May 31.—A novel experiment was tried for the first time in Canada at the court house—that of a trial's report by gramaphone.

The experiment was attended by Chief Justice Sir Melbourne Tait, Sheriff Lemieux, Messrs. N. K. Laflamme, K.C., Rosario Genest, advocate, and A. St. Martin, official court stenographer.

A show trial was started, Sir Melbourne acting as judge, Mr. Laflamme as attorney for the plaintiff, Mr. Genest as attorney for the defendant, and Sheriff Lemieux as the inevitable witness. After a prolonged sitting the gramaphone recited what had taken place.

The object was to ascertain if it would be possible to conduct the business of courts without court stenographers.

Trampled on by Colt.

Chatham, May 31.—A serious accident occurred in Thamesville Monday, when David Sherman took his colt to J. J. Reardon's blacksmith shop to be shod. When Mr. Sherman was bringing it out of the shop it slipped and fell. Mr. Sherman also fell, the colt getting up first and tramping on the man. He was rendered unconscious and was immediately removed to Dr. Stewart's office, where the wounds were dressed. It is thought that he is injured internally, besides having severe cuts on his head. He may not recover.

Dr. Clifford to Lay Cornerstone.

Peterboro, May 31.—Dr. John Clifford, of London, England, the foremost minister of the Baptist denomination, has consented to lay the corner-stone of the new $50,000 Murray street Baptist Church, on June 29. He speaks at the special convocation at McMaster University, Toronto, and is coming to Canada to attend the World Baptist Convention at Philadelphia.

Caught Redhanded.

Brockville, May 31.—The plants of the light and power department, as well as private citizens, have been depleted of valuable tools at intervals for several months past. William Mallett, a local inebriate and a member of the prohibited list, was at last caught redhanded and turned over to the police. Much of the booty has been recovered in junk shops.

Cashed Check, But No Funds.

Peterboro, May 31.—William T. Collins, a local fraternal society organizer, was sentenced yesterday morning to the Central Prison for six months. He went to the hotel and had a check for $15 cashed without having funds in the bank. He was about to leave the city when arrested.

Nose Broken at Baseball Match.

HOTELS BURNED DOWN

Four Persons Are Dead in Fire at Silverton B.C.

Disastrous Conflagration Which Destroys Several Blocks In British Columbia Town Is Responsible For Death of Robt. McTaggart, Robt. Fairgrieve, F. L. Fairgrieve and an Unknown Man.

Vancouver, B.C., May 31.—A special from Nelson, B.C., says:

A disastrous fire occurred at Silverton early yesterday morning, totally destroying a number of blocks of the town, including the Victoria Hotel, Windsor Hotel, Mrs. Carey's grocery, and W. B. Brandon's store building, occupied by K. Patriquin and family.

Robert McTaggart of Sandon; Robt. Fairgrieve, F. L. Fairgrieve, bartender at the Windsor, and a resident of Phoenix, whose name is unknown, were burned to death in the Windsor.

The hotel register being burned, other names are not yet obtainable and possibly others are also in the ruins. Several persons stopping at the Windsor, were badly burned, and others injured have been brought to the hospital here. The hotels were all crowded with guests, and the Selkirk House was saved, only by the heroic work of guests and townspeople.

The fire originated in the Windsor Hotel, cause unknown, and spread so rapidly that few of the guests secured even clothing to cover them. The property loss will exceed $25,000; insurance $6,800.

Kingsville Hotel Burned.

Kingsvile, Ont., May 31.—The Exchange Hotel here, for the last year a temperance house, was razed to the ground yesterday. Fire was first discovered at 5 in the morning, and was extinguished by the firemen. But at 11 o'clock the fire broke out again and this time gutted the building. The loss is $15,000; partly covered by insurance. The proprietor, William Wilson, is at present in Calgary for his health, and Mrs. Wilson left Monday night for Detroit.

Germany to Enter Pact.

Berlin, May 31.—The Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zietung leads off its issue of yesterday with an announcement of the steps Germany has taken toward arbitration.

"After the U. S. indicated to Germany her readiness to negotiate a broader arbitration treaty with the other powers as well as England," the newspaper says, "Germany expressed a wish to see the draft of the arbitration proposal and also indicated her readiness to take up the study of the proposition. The draft of the treaty will arrive here within a short time."

To the above statement can be added the semi-official expression of opinion that Germany, like Great Britain and France, is most sympathetic towards President Tafts arbitration proposal. Leading newspapers like The Frankfort Zietung welcome the news of the suggested arbitration treaty, though finding that the project is open to improvement on some important points.

Hebert Marriage Case.

Montreal, May 31.—Another step in the now famous Hebert-Clouatre marriage case was taken yesterday morning when attorneys for Madame Clouatre filed an inscription asking that the appeal from the judgment annulling her marriage with Emile Hebert, be heard June 12.

The marriage was annulled by Judge Laurendeau because of a decree that had been issued by Archbishop Bruchesi against the marriage of Roman Catholics by Protestant ministers. Emile Hebert and Marie Emma Clouatre are both Roman Catholics, but their marriage was celebrated by a Protestant minister, Rev. Mr. Timberlake.

It is likely that the case will be fought through the courts, as a test case, to ascertain just what are the powers of the Roman Catholic Church with regard to marriage in this province.

McGill Honor List.

Montreal, May 31.—The fourth year graduating medical list at McGill shows that 31 students passed out of a class of 35.

W. C. Gliddon, Ottawa, won the Holmes' gold medal for highest aggregate in all subjects forming the medical curriculum.

H. J. G. Geggie of Beauport, Que., won the Wood gold medal and the McGill Medical Society senior prize.

Other students from Ontario and Quebec to qualify for the M.D. degree are: A. D. Campbell, Glencoe, Ont.; H. R. Clouston, Huntingdon, Que.; J. H. Gillespie, Morrisburg, Ont.; C. D. Hamilton, Cornwall, Ont.; J. H. Legault, Ottawa, Ont.; C. H. Kearney, Renfrew, Ont.

Grasped Live Wire.

Toronto, May 31.—Falling from the branch of a tree he was trimming on Howard Park avenue, yesterday afternoon, Bert Williams, a civic employe, was badly burned when he hit an uninsulated electric wire. He grasped the wire, and then receiving the full voltage, by a supreme effort unclasped his hands, falling in a heap to the ground. His fellow workmen picked him up and called Dr. Alexander Hamilton. He was conveyed to the Western Hospital in Miles' motor ambulance.

Although suffering from shock and severe burns to his hands, the hospitahl authorities declared last night that he had a good chance of recovery.

A Remarkable Operation.

Philadelphia, May 31.—Delegates to the convention of the American Laryngological Association witnessed a remarkable surgical operation here yesterday, when Dr. C. Jackson of Pittsburg, without the use of a knife, removed a brass paper clip that had been embedded in a young woman's bronchiel tube for eight years. The instrument used was bronchoscope, to which was attached a tiny electric light, a reflector and minute forceps. The tube was lowered down the patient's throat and the clip was removed after about an hour's work.

LOOKED UP HIS CHUM

Prince Leopold of Battenberg Visits Montreal Youth.

First Cousin of King George While Touring the World Incognite Keeps Promise Made In Egypt Five Years Ago and Calls on C. G. Greenshields of Montreal — Says He Is Coming Back Again.

Montreal, May 31.—The visit of His Royal Highness Prince Leopold of Battenburg, first cousin of King George, to Montreal has revealed the romance of a royal friendship for a citizen of this city in the person of C. G. Greenshields, son of J. M. Greenshields, K.C. The story began five years ago in an Egyptian hotel, when Prince Leopold, then a lad of seventeen, was attracted by the young Canadian of his own age, who was traveling with his parents. They met at dinner together, went pilgrimages together to the pyramids, and when the parting came, in boyish fashion the royal prince and young Greenshields swore fealty to each other, and promised to meet some day in the Canadian metropolis. A bond was made in which young Greenshields wrote his address and sealed it in a letter.

Last November the prince planned a round the world tour, and in his baggage was the letter he had received from young Greenshields in Egypt. Yesterday morning he arrived in Montreal and prepared to make himself known to Mr. Greenshields. But the first person to arrive at the apartments of the prince in the Place Viger Hotel was his Canadian chum, and the friendship of old days was immediately renewed.

The prince has been charmed with Canada and has been heard to remark that his uncle, the Duke of Connaught, was lucky to live here. He intends to return here next year.

Prince In Canada Incog.

Toronto, May 31.—Prince Leopold of Battenburg, first cousin of King George V., left on Monday night for Quebec, and will sail for England on Thursday on the Empress of Ireland.

Prince Leopold arrived in Toronto on Saturday last and registered at the King Edward under an assumed name.

MURPHY AS APOLOGIST.

He Says Reciprocity Is Not a Radical Change.

Rockland, Ont., May 31.—Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, addressed a meeting of his supporters here last night. The chair was occupied by Dr. Desrosiers, mayor of Rockland. He explained briefly that the audience would have an opportunity to hear the questions of the day discussed in an intelligent manner by two members of the Government and one or two others. He then introduced Hon. Charles Murphy.

Mr. Murphy on rising was greeted with cheers. He declared that the meeting was called particularly to hear Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and Mr. Joe Demers speak. He was, however, loth to leave the floor without making reference to the reciprocity treaty. In spite of assertions to the contrary, made by the Opposition, the proposed agreement did not make a radical change in the trade policy of the country. He referred to a similar treaty with the United States, in force 50 years ago, namely, the Elgin treaty, which lasted from 1854 to 1866. This treaty had been of measurable benefit to the people of the County of Russell by fostering and encouraging its industries. He declared also that the present agreement was identical with one which the Conservatives had endeavored to bring about with the United States in the early '90's, but which they had ignominously failed to negotiate. He felt that the four chief industries of the country, namely, cheese, hay, cattle and lumber, would be immensely benefited by the passage of the present agreement, and he appealed to the electors of the county to support the efforts of the Government in obtaining it.

Mr. Murphy was followed by Mr. Demers, who devoted much of his speech to an eulogy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his work in the upbuilding of Canada and the unification of the races. He touched upon the opposition which he is now meeting in certain quarters of the Province of Quebec and uttered a warning to his audience that the movement was merely the result of jealousy, was ill-advised and if carried into effect must surely end in eventual and inevitable confusion and disaster.

Refused a Reward.

Chatham, May 31.—The infanticide mystery which stirred Chatham a few weeks ago still remains a mystery. At the meeting of the City Council Monday evening the police authorities asked the city to offer a reward for information which would lead to the conviction of the person or persons who strangled and drowned the newly-born infant in the River Thames. The council refused and have intimated that the authorities will have to probe the mystery without financial aid, which the police claim it is impossible to do.

Indicted For Dynamiting.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 31.—Three men were indicted Monday on the charge of having placed dynamite in the county hall of records on Sept. 8, 1910, with intent to destroy it. They are: Bert Connors, member of Structural Iron Workers' Union; A. B. Maple, Union Iron Workers; F. I. Bender, president of Local Blacksmiths' Union.

Bail was fixed in each case at $25,000. Connors has been under arrest on suspicion for two weeks. Bender and Maple were arrested Monday.

Brakeman Seriously Injured.

Kingston, May 31.—Victor Davidson, a brakeman on the Kingston & Pembroke Railway, was jammed between a freight car and an engine yesterday afternoon, and seriously injured. His collar bone was dislocated and his chest crushed.

HORROR OF PRISON

A Youth Writes of the Weeks that Seem as if they Would Never End

After being arrested for stealing overcoats from boarding-houses in Shepherd's Bush and Hammersmith, Thomas William Graham, aged twenty-one, a neatly-dressed clerk, wrote a statement pleading the misery of his life. In this statement he said:

"I am sick of this hopeless existence, and the hopelessness of this life. During the last five years my life has been misery. I am ruined physically and morally, and the longer I stay in this world the more misery I shall have to endure.

"On my release from prison I came out with the intention of leading a better life, but having nowhere to go and no work led to sleeplessness and starvation, which weakened what little self-control I had left, and I fell.

"The world is a hard place to live in. What chance have we who have lost our characters when the men who have cannot get work? Prison has done me no good. It has hardened me and made me an atheist and a misanthrope.

"Just look at my record. Do you think I will ever get on? No, I do not, and so I intend to put an end to this misery. You little know the misery we undergo in prison, when the days seem weeks, and the weeks infinity. For five years I have been hardly out of prison.

"I have a good pater and mater, but I have disgraced them by my conduct, and for three years I have not seen them. They gave me a good education, and this is the result of it.

"There are two things I think, will pull me up. That is, work and marriage."

Nine previous convictions were proved, and sentence of fifteen months' imprisonment was passed.

MAY WIPE OUT LOW NECKS

Queen Mary Has Started a Crusade Against Them, and "High Necks" Will be Good Etiquette

Queen Mary, whose habits and ideas are very puritanical in every way, has decided upon a crusade against the low-necked evening dress, and in this she has the full support of King George. During the reign of King Edward, and even under Queen Victoria, the court dresses of ladies were cut as low as possible, but Queen Mary has a great dislike for this fashion, and she has made it clear to the ladies of her household that if a dress is cut away at the neck at all it should be as little as possible. At the present time the edicts of the Court make it compulsory for low-necked dress to be worn on all "full-dress" occasions, but this will be greatly modified during the next few years. She prefers to introduce the innovation gradually, but she has already made it clear that elderly ladies and others, who desire to wear high-necked dresses at next season's courts may do so without infringing any detail of court etiquette.

What About Cheap

WALL PAPER?

THAT WORD CHEAP

will not apply to our goods. The word cheap applies only to our prices. We carry no trash stock or patterns, and thereby we display a line of

UP-TO-DATE PATTERNS

and colorings at prices so inexpensive that all other lines are high priced as compared with ours. We are showing today papers for which you would pay 10c. for elsewhere, and again we are showing papers for which you would require to pay 20c. elsewhere, and all these with most liberal assortment to select from in the highest grades of hangings made, controlling as we do the makes from the first factories.

5c. PER ROLL

AT 10c. PER ROLL

Our Decorating, Painting and Paper Hanging System

Perfected by years of experience, is at your service, and the service we give you will be excellent, while the prices will be moderate.

ANOTHER PLEA FOR PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Mr. Ritchie Argues Strongly on the Subject—The Community Ought to Educate Physically as the State Does Mentally—Pertinent Thoughts for Educationists

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—The need of providing supervised playgrounds for young children to supplement home influence and teaching of the school is coming to be universally recognized in enlightened communities. Wherever these are established, a most decided change for the better takes place in the development of child life When associated together in play under wise direction, all the activities of body and mind are set in a right direction. The child, always active and observant, must be doing something during all its waking hours, and if left idly to itself will be more than likely to form some bad habits or acquire wrong tendencies which will show their evil effects in all its after life. However anxious parents may be to guide their children aright, the great majority of them are so engaged—father at work, mother at household duties, that they have to leave their little ones very much alone to go their own way, unattended, and without proper supervision and guidance. The kind of education needed in these earliest years of childhood is not less, but in some respects, even more important that that which it will receive in after years at School and College. We acknowledge it to be the duty of the State to provide the latter; it is equally the duty of the community to provide the former. A young child's character is moulded by its environment far more than by oral instruction or teaching in the school. Its mind is plastic to every influence. It is impressed by the behavior, by the attitude, and the looks of those around it, and quickly absorbs into its whole nature the coloring of the surrounding moral atmosphere. The home, of course, is naturally the centre of culture, but the home needs the aid and co-operation of the community in bringing up the children to a high standard of citizenship.

We are now sufficiently civilized to admit that it is the duty of the State to aid parents in the education of their young children by providing public schools for their mental training. It is equally imperative for the community to aid parents in rightly directing the physical, social and ethical side of the child's nature in its earlier stages of life. This is as important and necessary as the other and the parents have a right to demand it. Sooner or later, all will yet come to see this. While the children belong to parents, who are their natural guardians, they also belong, in a very real sense, to the State. They are indeed the most important and valuable asset of the State, whose well being the State is under the deepest obligation to conserve. The foundation of our national life depends upon what the children become and none of us, whether we have children of our own or not, can evade the obligation we are under to aid in this matter of promoting the best culture of the child. To speak thus may appear at present to some, but as a voice crying in the wilderness, but a time will come when it will be heard.

Very slight observation of the general behavior and bearing of many of our boys and girls in Belleville as elsewhere ought to convince any one that during their tender and most impressive years they had not received that attention and help which was their due. Our Governor General, Earl Grey, recently made some very plain and pointed remarks in this connection about what he termed the bad manners of so many young people in Canada. He did not mean by bad manners merely a want of observing conventional forms of polite society, which would of itself be of comparatively trifling importance, not that but exhibiting a want of courtesy, respect for authority and consideration for others, showing a wrong disposition even in their games and sports, wrangling, an offensive air when victors in a competition, or an ungracious manner when worsted in a contest, and such like unmanly traits.

Every city, town and village ought to be supplied with play grounds—our educational system is quite incomplete without them. Toronto, Hamilton and Winnipeg are now moving in this direction. It would be wise economy to secure plots of ground before all the vacant land in central places is built on. Extensive grounds are not needed for the little children for whom we are specially pleading; but several spaces are required in different parts of the city, each provided with suitable equipment to engage the minds of the children while following healthy amusements and recreation, supervised by a competent person. Older boys need athletic grounds for sports and games. These boys ought to spend all their spare hours when not at their books in the open air both summer and winter, not shut up in a building to be coddled there.

THOS. RITCHIE.

NEW REGULATIONS MODEL SCHOOLS

The Department of Education has just issued a circular in reference to Model Schools.

The course is very similar to that pursued in the County Model schools of former times, and the certificate issued to successful students will be known as a Limited Third Class Certificate and will be valid for five years This grade of certificate is not valid in any school until endorsed by the Minister of Education for some particular school, on the recommendation of the Inspector, given after the Board of Trustees have failed to secure a teacher with a first or second class certificate.

The following may attend a Model School on the presentation of certificates as to character, health and age. (At least 18 by December 31.) viz:—holders of one of the following certificates:—

ELOCUTION CONTEST FOR A SILVER MEDAL

Master Winston R. Wensley was the Winner—A Very Satisfactory Programme

Another Elocution Contest for a silver medal was held in the Bridge St church last evening. Mr. Wm. Johnson acted as chairman. Messrs. Corrigal, of the Q. V. School, M. Mott, of Grier St., Mrs. Locke, of Station school, Miss Craig and Mrs. P. J. Smith acted as judges. They all agreed that Master Winston R. Wensley deserved the medal, with Arthur Barragar, and Gardie Delong, who received the same marks, close seconds.

Miss Keith Sheffield, one of the 'Y' girls, presented the medal and the pins.

Temperance Song was mixed in the following numbers:—

"His First Cigar"—Dawn C. Smith.

"Nothing but Leaves"—Harry McCullough.

"The Momentous Question,"—Milton Kerr.

Chorus—"The Maple Leaf"—Eight boy contestants.

"Why I am a Prohibitionist"—J Gardie Delong.

"He Never Blamed the Booze"—Winston R. Wensley.

"I'm a Temperance Boy"—Robert A. Colling.

"Papa Does"—Arthur Barragar.

"A Boy and Prohibition"—Delbert Zufelt.

Chorus "When the Drink is Swept Away"—by the contestants.

The audience all joined in the chorus with gusto, also in a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Queena Smith, who so capably accompanied the singing. The 'Y's' very much regret the fact that they will be soon be called upon to part with one of their best workers. Miss Smith has done such efficient work along different lines, that it will be difficult, if not impossible, to fill the vacancy she will leave.

The ability shown by the boys was all of a high order, and their selections were well chosen.

At present there are 1000 head of bison roaming the great park with one hundred calves, and an expected batch of another hundred babies. $4 Worth of Father Morriscy's "No. 7" Cured Her of Inflammatory Rheumatism.

Mrs. Agnes Edgar, of Grand Falls, N.B., had a terrible time with Inflammatory Rheumatism. Anyone who has had this most painful disease will understand her suffering—and her joy when she found Father Morriscy's "No. 7" had cured her. She says:

"I took Father Morriscy's Prescription for Inflammatory Rheumatism. I had suffered everything with it, but in three weeks after starting Father Morriscy's Prescription I was able to do my work, and after taking four dollars worth of medicine I was well. I highly recommend it any sufferer with Rheumatism."

Rheumatism comes from bad kidneys. The poisonous Uric Acid which they should remove stays in the blood, accumulates in joints and muscles, and causes agony. Father Morriscy's "No. 7" puts the kidneys right, removes the Uric Acid from the blood and the whole system, and cures the Rheumatism. 50c. a box at your dealer's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co. WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IS IN SESSION HERE

Important Gathering Opened at Christ Church—Many Delegates from Various Parts of the Diocese—A Pleasant and Profitable Session in Prospect

A large number of ladies from various places are at present in the city and will be here for at least three days. They are members of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada, and are attending the twenty fifth annual meeting of the Diocese of Ontario Branch. The ladies are apparently very enthusiastic in their mission, which is a noble one.

The sessions, of which there will be three a day, will be held in the Parish Hall, of Christ church. There are upwards of 100 delegates in attendance. Last evening although not nearly all the delegates had arrived, a reception was held in the Parish Hall. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, in a brief but felicitous manner, extended hearty greetings to the delegates and bid them a hearty welcome to the city. Mrs. Tett, of Westport, replied in a most graceful and appropriate manner, after which vocal and instrumental selections were given. The evening was given up entirely to that of a social gathering.

At ten o'clock this morning, Holy Communion was celebrated. Previous to the partaking of the sacrament, Rev. Canon Gould, who has been engaged in Missionary work, preached a sermon which was in keeping with the occasion. The Lord Bishop of Kingston Diocese, Rt. Rev. Wm. Mills, D. D., L.L. D., D. C. L., was present and took part in this most sacred serservice the delegates assembled in the Parish Hall and comenced the first regular session of the convention. Miss Macauley, of Kingston, President of the Branch, presided over the gathering.

At the conclusion of the communion vice. There were about 150 communicants.

THE MOUSE WON AN EASY VICTORY

New York, May 30—A humble mouse won a battle for the New York Telephone Company late last night against a squad of twenty women property-owners, who for twenty hours had successfully prevented the company from planting poles along a residence street in suburban Brooklyn. The women had been out in force from early morning, repeatedly routing the workmen with hatpins, hot flatirons, brooms, and rollingpins and several times the police were called out in ineffectual attempts to quiet things down.

Finally one of the workmen decided to try strategy. He sneaked around a house and returned with something behind his back. Right in front of the belligerent women he held up a wee grey mouse, and in the confusion which followed the poles were planted without dificulty.
